PREFACE.

THE uſe of an Univerſal Gazetteer, to thoſe who feel any intereſt at all in what is going on in the world at large, is too obvious to need pointing out. It's name ſeems to imply, that it is the companion, or accompaniment of the newſpaper, or gazette, which latter name was derived from the gazetta, a ſmall coin of Venice, the original price of theſe periodical chronicles in that commercial republic.

A work of this kind, neceſſarily formed of materials brought from every quarter of the world, at uncertain and different periods, and, generally, by we know not whom, is peculiarly liable to errors, and the compiler muſt confine himſelf within very narrow bounds, indeed, if he do not ſubmit to theſe imperfections.

In the compilation of this work, the lateſt and moſt authentic accounts have been conſulted; from travelling, the author has been enabled to correct ſeveral errors, and from correſpondents he has received deſcriptions of ſome places, which are certainly the beſt and moſt accurate that have been yet offered to the public in this way.

Towns and places of note are deſcribed at length, or form diſtinct paragraphs; the names of theſe are given in capitals. Thoſe to which an aſteriſk, or ſtar, is prefixed, are the poſt-towns of Great Britain and Ireland. Even villages, hamlets, and ſingle houſes, in theſe iſlands, have been mentioned, and, in ſome inſtances, their ſituations pretty preciſely told; but theſe, as inferior articles, are given in a different character, or letter, and do not form different paragraphs, but are carried on in continuity, generally forming only diſtinct periods. The expreſſions of inferior and conſiderable, or of note, are meant not in reference to wealth but to population. If errors occur in the places of leſs note, which they probably may, or, indeed, neceſſarily muſt, (for, in attempting to make this the completeſt geographical index extant, works of more dubious authority have alſo been conſulted) it may be well enough to caution the reader to ſuſpend his analogical concluſions, "that if a place, which he knows, be inaccurately deſcribed, he may reaſonably ſuppoſe that others are alſo incorrect, and that places more remote, or diſtant, muſt neceſſarily be more falſe." It will only, in ſuch caſe, be the part of candour to conſider, that ſuch places are, perhaps, but little viſited by travellers, and ſcarcely known beyond their own vicinity; and that if he, or ſome of his liberal-minded neighbours, do not communicate better information to the compiler, the error is likely to be continued.

And here the author hopes it will not be thought improper, if he takes the liberty to ſuggeſt to men of leiſure and information, whether they may not well apply a few moments of their time, in a way ſatisfactory to themſelves, and uſeful to the public, in communicating to the gazetteer-makers topographical information. If ſuch will have the kindneſs to contribute to this work, their communications will be gratefully received; here alſo he may acknowledge to have received from ſeveral of his friends, and even from ſtrangers, of this deſcription, both of the eſtabliſhed religion and diſſenters, very liberal encouragement in the proſecution of this work. But the preſent is a production which it does not require erudition to find fault with or amend. There is ſcarcely any individual but may ſuggeſt improvements, or give uſeful information, on ſome place which he knows: and every reader, from the ſchool-boy to the man in years, who ſhall communicate amendments, will confer an obligation on the author.

All who may have the liberality thus to yield aſſiſtance to the work, are requeſted particularly to give information on ſuch ſubjects as the following, or as an anſwer to any of theſe queries:—What is the place?—What it's name?—In what diſtrict ſituated?—How many houſes or people?—What the ſoil?—What the appearance of the ſurrounding country?—By what production or manufacture are they enabled to ſupport themſelves, pay taxes, &c.?—What curioſities have they or had they, natural or artificial?—What particular cuſtoms?—What public eſtabliſhments of Infirmaries, Hoſpitals, Schools, Libraries, &c.?—What the ſituation of the place?—On hill or in vale; on what road or highway; or on what river, bay, creek, or ſea?—And what are it's diſtance and bearings from other places &c.?—What places already mentioned in this work are ſo inſignificant, that they ought to be omitted?—And which are ſo important that they ought to form diſtinct paragraphs?

It may be neceſſary here to notice the improvements introduced into all parts of the preſent edition, as the proprietors, encouraged by the flattering reception with which the firſt edition was favoured, have ſpared no exertion or expence to render this extenſive Gazetteer ſtill more worthy of the public patronage.

In the execution of this taſk, and in order to render the following ſheets as complete as the nature of the work will admit, the attention of the publiſhers has been particularly directed to the inſerting ſuch omiſſions, and correcting ſuch errors, as muſt have unavoidably eſcaped the author, in compiling ſo laborious a work.

In the firſt edition, no notice was taken of a ſubject affording much uſeful and neceſſary information, although a heavy national calamity, viz.

viz. War; nor of the facts and circumſtances relating to it; military and naval eſtabliſhments, fortifications, battles, ſieges, and other remarkable operations and events, by which the moſt important changes are produced in the political ſtate of nations.

In the deſcription of a conſiderable number of the principal empires and countries, the uſual diviſion of the regions (in common with all our competitors) was erroneous; the geographical poſition, bearings, diſtances, &c. of places, were not laid down with uniform accuracy; nor was the leaſt attention paid to the markets and principal fairs in the ſeveral counties of England and Wales. Many miſtakes have alſo ariſen from the ſame words occurring frequently in various parts, with different ſpellings, &c. &c. all which deficiencies and inaccuracies have, in this edition, been duly attended to and remedied; the whole of this Gazetteer having been lately reviſed and corrected at a very great expence, and with unremitting attention and aſſiduity.

Some conſiderable improvements have likewiſe been introduced, by adding to the compoſition of this work, a number of remarkable and important places omitted in the late edition. The reader may alſo find much new and intereſting information in the numerous additions occaſionally made to places already noticed, ſeveral of which will be found to be conſiderably improved, if not written entirely new; notwithſtanding which, the work, although conſiderably enlarged in valuable and authentic nomenclature, is yet not enlarged in ſize and price.

The inſertions made, include different topics of deſignation and deſcription, but chiefly relate to the curioſities of nature and art, natural productions, forms of government, military and naval affairs, inland navigations, manufactures, magnificent public buildings, and the remains of remarkable antiquities; with ſeveral original communications addreſſed to the editor, pointing out ſources of information and improvement, not often to be met with.

Theſe additions the editor has been enabled to make, by omitting the latitudes and longitudes of places apparently inſignificant, or whoſe ſituations may be eaſily aſcertained by a reference to other places generally known; by reducing and narrowing ſome accounts rather too circumſtantial and minute, for an abridgment; and by expunging ſeveral articles of leſs eſſential importance, which, though not unworthy of attention, leave little room for others that, on further conſideration, appear to be more uſeful and intereſting.

The editor, however, in ſtating the comparative improvements by which he has added to the ſtock of knowledge contained in our Geographical Dictionaries, does not thereby mean to aſſert, that he has ſo fully executed his plan, but that he himſelf can diſcover ſome faults and imperfections, both in the work and it's execution. Much has been done, yet much remains undone, to improve and bring to perfection the arduous task of compiling Gazetteers and Dictionaries. It is only by slow degrees, and long and persevering exertions, continued through a succession of several centuries, that this comprehensive subject can be expected to arrive at extensive usefulness; but, from the mutability of things, it can never be brought to a state of full perfection.

The publishers, however, not presuming to suggest that they have completely succeeded in the execution of this undertaking, yet relying on the candid decision of a discerning public, hope with some confidence, that the performance, now respectfully submitted to their notice, will be found amusing and entertaining, as well as useful and instructive to the GENERALITY OF READERS; and they trust it may claim the peculiar attention of the YOUNG, and SUCH AS ARE NOT ABLE TO PROCURE LARGER WORKS; for the use, indeed, of whom it is principally designed and calculated. The reader, whether scientific or less informed, will be candid enough, it is presumed, to excuse small mistakes, for the sake of the pleasure, satisfaction, and information, which it is natural to suppose, the highly interesting objects contained in the science here treated of, will afford to his mind.

THE compiler of this work is unwilling to dismiss it, without mentioning a practice which he used to adopt, as a geographical exercise for his scholars, when engaged in that pleasing task, the tuition of youth, hoping that, if parents and teachers will but try it, the scholars and children may derive from it a pleasing and useful amusement. The method was, to propose an imaginary journey; suppose from Dublin to Paris, to Rome, to Constantinople, to Jerusalem, to Delhi, to Pekin, or to any other place; or an imaginary voyage, direct or circuitous, or round the world, or long or short. In the first instance, from Dublin to Paris, it was proposed to the lower classes to describe the easiest course: these chose, perhaps, that by water, from the mouth of the Liffey, southward through the Irish Channel, round the Land's End, by the Isles of Scilly, and eastward through the English Channel, to Havre-de-Grace, at the mouth of the Seine; and thence, up the river, to the capital. Others adopted a western circuitous course, through the south of Ireland, and across the sea to Nantz, or Bourdeaux, on their way to Paris. Some took the post road, or a devious way, through Wales and England, to Dover and Calais; and others, perhaps, chose a route through the north of Ireland, Scotland, across the German Ocean, and through some of the continental countries of Europe, in a SW. direction, to Paris. In all these instances, they planned out their route by the maps, and related, in form of a letter, what they thought the most entertaining in the descriptions of the places along the way, which they found in the Gazetteer.

Though Geography be one of the most plain and simple sciences, being much easier learnt than reading and writing, there are some parents who declare they know very little of the subject; to these the following remark may be acceptable, as it may enable them to lead their children on, as above-mentioned, in imaginary journeys, or tours, round the earth, till they obtain, in this familiar way, a tolerable acquaintance with the different parts of our globe.

To conceive aright of the world, being represented in two circles on the map, they are to observe, that each of them represents a hemisphere, or opposite half of the globe: if these circles were put back to back, fastened at the edges all round, and swelled up like a blown bladder, into a spherical form, it would give a representation of our earth; when, therefore, in marking any line on either of these circles, we get off at one edge, we are immediately on the corresponding part of the other, and so, on it, may pursue, or continue our track or way. Hence it will appear, that in describing a track round the whole earth, or globe, on the map, we must necessarily cross both the circles.

INTRODUCTORY

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

Land and Water.

A CONTINENT is a large tract of land not separated by the sea; as Europe, Asia, &c. An ocean is a vast collection of water not separated by land; as the Atlantic, Pacific, &c. A sea is a smaller collection of water communicating with the ocean; as the Mediterranean, the Baltic.

An island is a tract of land surrounded by water; as Great Britain, Ireland, &c. A lake is water surrounded by land; as the Lake of Geneva.

A cape, or promontory, is a projection or point of land running far into the sea; as the Cape of Good Hope.

A peninsula is land almost surrounded with water; as the Morea. A gulf is a part of the sea almost surrounded with land; as the Gulf of Persia.

An isthmus is the narrow part of land which joins a peninsula to a continent, or larger country; as the Isthmus of Suez. A strait is a narrow channel which affords a passage from one sea to another; as the Straits of Gibraltar.

Definitions of Circles, &c.

Astronomers have considered the starry heavens as a sphere, with our earth in the centre: this is the appearance they make to our senses. They have divided the celestial and terrestrial spheres, by great and less circles: great circles are those which divide the sphere equally; less circles are those which divide it unequally.

Great Circles.	Less Circles.
The Equator.	Tropics.
Circles of Longitude and Meridian.	Polar Circles.
The Horizons.	Almicanters, or Parallels of Altitudes.
Azimuths.

To imagine that the earth stands still, and that the sun rises and falls, is a false idea, however consonant to the perception of our senses, and as romantic as the notion that houses, trees, &c. upon land are moving past us, when we sail in a vessel along the shore.

While our earth annually performs an orbit round the sun, the latter appears to describe a circle, in the heavens, and we seem to stand still; this circle is called the ecliptic. The zodiac is the same imaginary kind of circle, but extended to a considerable breadth on each side of the ecliptic, including the paths of all the planets.

The ancients divide the Zodiac into 12 parts, and imagined or contrived certain signs in each division. Their names and characters are, as follow:

Northern Signs.	Southern Signs.
♈ Aries.	♎ Libra.
♉ Taurus.	♏ Scorpio.
♊ Gemini.	♐ Sagittarius.
♋ Cancer.	♑ Capricornus.
♌ Leo.	♒ Aquarius.
♍ Virgo.	♓ Pisces.

The equator divides the sphere into the northern and southern hemispheres. The latitude of a place upon earth, and the declination of a heavenly object, as a star or planet, are their distances from the equator. The tropics are parallels of latitude or declination, near $23\frac{1}{2}$ degrees from the equator: the tropics bound the ecliptic in the heavens, and on earth, the torrid zone. The polar polar circles are the same distance from the poles, as the tropics are from the equator. On earth, the temperate zones lie between the polar circles and tropics, the frigid zones lie within the polar circles.

Meridians are indefinite in number; their planes intersect that of the equator at right angles.

The longitude of a place upon earth, and the right ascension of a heavenly object, are their distances from a certain meridian. Circles of longitude in the heavens are indefinite in number; their planes intersect that of the ecliptic at right angles. The latitude of any heavenly object is it's distance from the ecliptic; the longitude it's distance from that circle of longitude, which passes through the first point of Aries.

The horizon is that circle which bounds our sight, or it is the termination of what is visible to us of the sky, when on the sea, or an extensive level plane.

Solar System.

The names and characters by which astronomers express the planets are as follow, in order from the sun:

☿	♀	⊕	♂	♃	♄	♅
Mercury.	Venus.	Earth.	Mars.	Jupiter.	Saturn.	Herschel.

The planets are attracted by the sun, and would be drawn into it, and consumed, were it not from an impulse they have received, which tends to throw them off in a right line; by the combination of these two forces, (the centripetal, or centre-seeking, and the centrifugal, or centre-fleeing) they are preserved in their orbits.

The three outer planets have each of them several satellites, or moons, accompanying them. The comets of our system are supposed to be 21 in number, they are found to be under the same laws with the planets, but their orbits are very eccentric.

☞ An idea of a place, or it's situation, may sometimes be formed from it's name. In England, borough, bury, berry, burgh, or brough, as also caster, chester, ceaster, and chaster, at the end of the name of a place, shew it to have been a town or fortified place. Chip, cheap, chipping, in the names of places, implies a market; combe, a valley between two hills; and comb in the end, or comp in the beginning of names, a low situation. Minster, is a contraction of monastery. Mouth expresses the situation where a river falls into the sea, or other water; and ness, a promontory which runs into the water in a form resembling a nose. Thorp, throp, threp, trep, and trop, all signify a village; and wold, whether singly or jointly, signifies a plain open country, or hills without a wood.

In Ireland, ard signifies high; ath, water; bally, a town, and clon, a retirement. Dun and rath imply a fort. Innis signifies an island; kil, a church; knock, a hill; lis, an inclosure; lough, a lake; and magh, a field.

UNIVERSAL GAZETTEER.

AA, rivers of Courland, Germany, Switſerland, Flanders, and France. ☞ Aa in the Daniſh language, Ea in the Saxon, and Eau, in the French ſignify water.

AACH, a ſmall town of Nellenburgh in Suabia, near a river of the ſame name which falls into the Lake of Zell. It is ſubject to Auſtria, and ſeated on an eminence between the Danube and the Lake of Conſtance. Lat 47. 45. N. lon. 9. 0. E.

AAGGII DOGGII, a mountain of Amaſia, over which the caravans paſs, in their journey between Conſtantinople and Iſpahan.

AAG-HOLM, a ſmall iſland of Norway.

AAHUS, a ſmall town, in a county of the ſame name, in Weſtphalia, is ſituated near the ſource of the Aa. Lat. 48. 13. N. lon. 7. 22. E.

AAIN CHARIN, a village near Jeruſalem, ſaid to be the place where Zacharias lived: it is yet frequented by pilgrims, and near it there is a convent, a large elegant building, with a handſome cupola, under which is a remarkably fine moſaic pavement: the altar, which is a very ſplendid one, encompaſſed with marble ſteps, is ſaid to be built on the very ſpot where John the Baptiſt was born.

AAKIAR, a diſtrict of N. Jutland, in Denmark.

AAKIRKE, a town in the iſland of Bornholm, the ſeat of the civil court and ſynod.

AALBERG, or AALBURG, a biſhoprick in Jutland, Denmark; has for it's capital

AALBORG, (that is, eel-town, from the number of eels taken there) an old, large and populous city, and, next to Copenhagen, the richeſt and beſt in Denmark. It has an exchange, and a harbour deep and ſecure, but rather dangerous in the entrance. It carries on a conſiderable trade in herrings and corn, and a manufactory of ſaddles and gloves. Lat. 57. 18. N. lon. 10. 16. E.

AALAST, or AELST. See ALOST.

AALEN. See AULEN.

AALHEIDE, a large heath in Jutland.

AAMA, a province of Barbary, 15 days journey from Tunis. The entrance to it is very dangerous, being very long and narrow, among quickſands and rivers, ſo covered with duſt, that they appear like one continued plain.

AAN SIRE, a ſmall iſland of Norway.

AAR, rivers in Germany and Switſerland, and an iſland in the Baltic, containing ſeveral villages but no town.

AARACK, a city of Hira, in Perſia.

AARASSO, an ancient city of Aſia Minor, mentioned by Strabo, but at preſent only a village.

AARAW, a town and bailiwick in Bern, where the diets of the proteſtant cantons are held. In theſe aſſemblies, the deputies and their ſervants, being all citizens, dine in the ſame hall. Their townhouſe is built of the ruins of the caſtle, which the inhabitants of Aaraw entirely demoliſhed, when the Swiſs ſhook off the yoke of Auſtria. Lat. 47. 29. N. lon. 8. 10. E.

AARBERG, or AARBURG. See ARBERG.

AARDALSWERK, or SEMDALSWERK, a copper-work, now diſuſed, in the pariſh of Leyrdal, in Norway.

AARHUUS, a dioceſe of N. Jutland, Denmark; has for it's capital

AARHUUS, an open, large, and populous city, with two market-places, an hofpital, univerſity, cathedral, and other public buildings. It lies low, on a beautiful plain, between the ſea and an inland lake; from which laſt the water is conveyed, by means of a pretty broad canal, through the town. The harbour at the mouth of this canal or river, is very ſafe and commodious, but hardly of ſufficient depth and extent for the trade of the place. Lat. 55. 6. N. lon. 10. 0. E.

AARSEO, or ARZEO, a town of Algiers, near the mouth of the river Mina, which trades to Guinea, Numidia, and other places. Lat. 36. 50. N. lon. 2. 10. E.

AAR's HERRED, a diſtrict of N. Jutland in Denmark, containing 14 pariſhes.

AASTRUP, a diſtrict of Aalberg and N. Jutland, to which belong the Herreds of Wenneborg, with 12 pariſhes, and Jerlef, with the like number.

AASUM HERRED, a diſtrict of Nyborg in Funen, containing 11 pariſhes.

AATTIC, a village in Aatter, a diſtrict of Arabia Felix.

ABA, a lofty mountain of Great Armenia, part of Mount Taurus; the rivers Euphrates and Araxes have their riſe here; alſo a city of the ancient kingdom of Phocis in Greece, whoſe inhabitants were named Abantes.

ABABA, the modern name of the Peneus, a river of Theſſaly, in Greece.

ABACA, one of the Philippine Iſlands.

ABACENA, the ancient name of a city and country of Sicily.

ABACH, or WELTENBURG, a town of Bavaria, ſituated on the Danube, having excellent ſprings of mineral waters, which are much frequented. Lat. 48. 53. N. lon. 11. 59. E.

ABACOA, one of the Lucaya or Bahama Iſlands. See PROVIDENCE.

ABACOORE, a mountain of Arabia Felix.

ABADAN, a town at the mouth of the Tigris.

ABAFEDE, a mountain in Egypt, the reſidence, in antiquity, of the Egyptian Magi; it was much revered by the Romans on their obtaining it, and was afterwards inhabited by chriſtian devotees, who lived in caves dug out of the rock.

ABAKAN, a river falling into the Jeneſei, near it's ſource in Aſiatic Ruſſia, near which ſtands the town of Abakanſkoi. Lat. 53. 5. N. lon. 94. 5. E.

ABALASKOI, a town of Siberia, near Tobolſk, frequented by pilgrims, on account of a ſtatue, called the image of the Virgin Mary. Lat. 58. 11. N. lon. 68. 20. E.

ABALA, a city of the tribe of Judah; alſo a town of the Troglodytes in Africa, near the Red Sea.

ABALLO. See AVALLON.

ABANO, a town of Padua in Italy, much frequented on account of it's warm baths. Lat. 45. 30. N. lon. 10. 47. E.

ABARANER, a city of Turcomania, in Aſia, ſaid to contain about 300 Chriſtian families. Lat. 39. 0. N. lon. 63. 59. E.

ABARGALE, a country of Abyſſinia.

ABARIM, or ABARAIM, a chain of mountains encompaſſing Paleſtine.

ABASA, a ſmall town of Romania, in which are an elegant moſque and a ſpacious kane or inn. It is 12 miles from Adrianople, on the road to Conſtantinople. Lat. 42. 8. N. lon. 26. 35. E.

ABASSIA, the modern name of a kingdom in Upper Ethiopia; it comprehends the provinces of Bagemeder, Gojam, Waleka, Shewa, &c. and is very mountainous; in ſome parts the rocks are ſo ſteep, that men and cattle are craned up by help of ropes and ladders, yet on the tops of theſe there are woods, meadows, and fiſh-ponds.

ABATOS, an iſland of Egypt, in the Lake Moeris. It was famous for being the Sepulchre of Oſiris, and for producing the papyrus, of which the ancients made their paper.

ABAWIWAR, a country in Upper Hungary.

ABASKAJA, a town on the river Iſchim in Siberia. Lat. 50. 10. N. lon. 69. 5. E.

Abbas Comb, a pariſh in Somerſetſhire. Abbaſton, or Abberſton, Hampſhire.

ABBEFIORD, a ſea-port of Norway.

Abberlough, a lake in Argyleſhire.

Abberton, near Lexden, Eſſex. Abberton, near Perſhore, 7 miles from Worceſter, noted for it's mineral water. Abberwick, near Alnwick, Northumberland. Abbenhall, 12 miles from Glouceſter, and 3 from Newnham. It is noted for a ſpring of water very efficacious in the cure of cutaneous eruptions.

ABBEVILLE, a town in the department of Somme in France, about 15 miles from the Engliſh Channel, ſeated in a pleaſant valley. It is famous for its manufacture of ſoaps, woollen and linen cloths, and carries on an extenſive trade by means of the river Somme, which runs through it, and in which the tide riſes 6 feet. It is 52 miles S. of Calais, and 80 N. by W. of Paris. Lat. 50. 7. N. lon. 1. 55. E.

* ABBEY-BOYLE, a town in Roſcommon, Connaught, is ſituated on the river Bugile, Buelle, over which there are 2 ſtone bridges. It is 20 miles N. of Roſcommon, 32 NW. of Athlone, and 84 from Dublin. Lat. 53. 56 N. lon. 8. 32. W.

Abbey Feale, a ſmall town in Limerick.

ABBEY-HOLME, a town in Cumberland, ſo called from an abbey built there by David king of Scots. It is 16 miles S.W. of Carliſle. Lat. 54. 53. N. lon. 3. 29. W.

Abbey-Manor, Berkſ. 3 miles from Wantage.

ABBEY-MILTON, or MIDDLETON, an ancient little town in Dorſetſhire, 12 miles NE. of Dorcheſter. Lat. 50. 51. N. lon. 2. 24. W.

Abbey-Knockmoy, a town in Galway, Connaught. Abbey Mahon, in Cork, Munſter. Abbey-Odorney, in Kerry, Munſter; near the river Brick, 141 miles from Dublin. Abbey-Shrule, in Longford, Leinſter.

ABBIANY, a town on the coaſt of Guinea.

Abbington, near Northampton. Abbington, near Royſton, Cambridgeſhire. Abbington, Magna and Parva, near Linton and Bournbridge, Cambridgeſhire. Abborn, or Awburn-Chapel, on the E. coaſt of Yorkſhire, 10 miles from Flamborough. Abbots, or Apewood-Caſtle, in Staffordſhire, ſituated on a lofty round promontory, and a ſteep ridge of hills, extending a mile in length, ſuppoſed to have been one continued fortification of the ancient Britons. It is in the pariſh of Seiſdon, and 7 miles from Wolverhampton. Abbots-Anne, near Andover, Hampſhire.

Abbots-Beckington, on the river Towridge, Devonſhire.

ABBOTS-BROMLEY, PAGETS-BROMLEY, or BROMLEY-ABBEY, a town in Staffordſhire, 6 miles E. of Stafford, and 129 NW. of London. Lat. 52. 50. N. lon. 1. 53. W. Market on Tueſday.

ABBOTSBURY, a town of Dorſetſhire, where there is a very large ſwannery. The town conſiſts of 3 ſtreets in the form of the letter Y. It's chief trade is fiſhing. It is 10 miles SW. of Dorcheſter, and 127 W. by S. of London. Lat. 50. 38. N. lon. 2. 42. W. Market on Thurſ.

Abbotſbury, near Barley, Hertf. Abbot's-Careſwell, Devon. Abbot's-Crome, Worc. Abbot's Fee-Tything, near Shirborn, Dorſet. Abbotſham, near Biddeford, Devon. Abbot's-Langley, near Barkway, Hertf. Abbot's-Leigh, or Iſle, near Ilminſter, Somerſetſ. Abbotſley, near St. Neot's, Huntſ. Abbot's Moreton, Worceſt. Abbotſlock, Devon. Abbotſloke, near Beminſter, Dorſet. Abbotſton, or Abſton, near Kingſwood, Glou. called alſo Wyke, from a winding brook that runs by it. Abbotſton, near Syſton, Glou. Abbotſton, Wilts. Abbotſton, Hampſhire, near Alresford. Abbotſroot, Dorſet. near Winborn Minſter. Abbotſwood, Worceſt. 4 miles NW. of Perſhore. Abbotſworthy, Hamp. near Alresford. Abb's-court, in Walton, Surry.

AFRICA, one of the four grand diviſions of the globe, is bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean, which ſeparates it from Europe; on the NE. by the Red Sea, which ſeparates it from Aſia, ſave where they are connected together by the iſthmus of Suez; it's other ſhores are waſhed by the Ocean. The greateſt part of this largeſt of all peninſulas, lies within the torrid zone, hence the inhabitants are all of dark complexions; and in the centre and ſouthwards they are quite black. The mountains and rivers of Africa are very large; the country is extremely fertile, except in thoſe extenſive tracts that are unſupplied with moiſture; there the country is parched up, and the heat becomes inſupportable. In croſſing theſe arid deſerts, the ſands are ſometimes ſo raiſed by the winds, that whole caravans are buried under them: on the other hand, nothing can be more beautiful than the fertile parts of Africa; the luxuriancy of the landſcape, continually clothed with all the beauties of ſpring, ſummer, and harveſt, ſurpaſſes all deſcription; and the variety of animals, ſeems greater here than in the other parts of the globe. Africa lies between the parallels of 37. 0. N. and 35. 0. S. latitude, and between 17. 0. W. and 51. 0. E. longitude, and may be divided as follows: Morocco, Algiers, Tunis, Tripoli, Barca, Egypt, Biledulgerid, Zaara, Negroland, Guinea; Upper Ethiopia, including Nubia, Abyſſinia, and Ahex; Lower Ethiopia, Loango, Congo, Angola, Benguela, Matamam, Ajan, Zanguebar, Monomotapa, Monoemugi, Sofala, Terra de Natal, and Caffraria. The length of Africa, from the Cape of Good Hope to the moſt northern part, is 4600 miles; and it's greateſt breadth, from Cape Verd to Cape Guardafui, is 3500.

ALEPPO, called by the natives Haleb, and anciently Berœa, is the metropolis of Syria, and only yields to Conſtantinople and Cairo in extent, population, and riches; in buildings, however, it is inferior to none of the Turkiſh cities. The inhabitants are computed to be 235,000, of whom 200,000 are Turks, 30,000 Chriſtians, and 5000 Jews. The language generally ſpoken is vulgar Arabic: but the Turks, Armenians, Syrians, and Jews, in converſing with thoſe of their own nation, uſe their reſpective languages. The Chriſtians have their houſes in the ſuburbs, and carry on a conſiderable trade in ſilks, camlets, Turkey leather, &c. Several European nations have factories and conſuls, which are much reſpected here. Here are a caſtle, a great many ſtately moſques and caravanſeras, with fountains and reſervoirs of water, and vineyards and gardens well planted with moſt kinds of fruit. The ſtreets are narrow, but well paved with large ſquare ſtones, and kept very clean. The water in all the wells in the city is brackiſh; but good water is brought from ſome ſprings about five miles off, by an aqueduct, ſaid to have been built by the empreſs Helena. Aleppo is ſeated on a ſmall brook, 170 miles N. by E. of Damaſcus, and 60 miles from the ſea. Lat. 35. 45. N. lon. 37. 20. E.

ALEXANDRETTA, or SCANDEROON, a town of Syria, the ſea-port of Aleppo, from which it is diſtant about 70 miles. The climate here is very unwholeſome in ſummer, ſome ſhips having loſt even their whole crews in a ſhort time; while the heats are ſo exceſſive, many of the inhabitants retire to the neighbouring villages among the mountains, where they have excellent water, and delicious fruits. Lat. 36. 35. N. lon. 36. 23.

ALEXANDRIA, or SCANDERIA, once a handſome, rich, and celebrated city of Egypt, built by Alexander the Great, on the moſt weſterly branch of the Nile, ſoon after the overthrow of Tyre, about 333 years before the Chriſtian era. It was long eſteemed the fineſt city in the world after Rome; we may form ſome idea of it's inhabitants from the account of Diodorus Siculus, who relates that it had on it's rolls in his time (44 years before the Chriſtian era) 300,000 freemen. The celebrated library, which was founded here by Ptolemy Soter, and placed in the temple of Serapis, containing, in his time, 400,000 volumes, and by addition of his ſucceſſors 700,000, was, in 642, deſtroyed by order of the Saracen khalif, who became maſter of the city. The Saracen general who took it, ſaid, in his letter to the khalif, that he found in it 4000 palaces, 4000 baths, 40,000 Jews, who paid tribute, 400 royal circi, and 12,000 gardeners, who ſupplied the city with all kinds of herbs in great plenty. At preſent it does not contain above 12,000, or 14,000 inhabitants: a mixture from different nations, as well as from various parts of the Turkiſh empire. The Chriſtian Copti, Greeks, and Armenians, are very numerous here; the Europeans all paſs under the name of Franks. Although Alexandria is now ſo much decayed, that the rubbiſh in ſome places over-tops the houſes, yet there are ſtill ſome remains of it's ancient ſplendor, particularly Pompey's Pillar, and two obeliſks of hieroglyphicks. The ancient Pharos, a watch-tower, ſo famous in antiquity, that it was numbered among the ſeven wonders of the world, is now turned into a caſtle, called Pharillon, and is ſtill uſed to direct veſſels into the harbour. This city was a place of great trade, before the Portugueſe diſcovered the paſſage to India by the Cape of Good Hope, the commodities of the Eaſt Indies being depoſited here on their way to Europe by the Red Sea. ALGIERS, a country of Africa, extending 600 miles from E. to W. along the Barbary coaſt, has Mt. Atlas on the S. Tunis on the E. and Morocco on the W. The Turks, who are not above 7000 in number, have the government in their hands, and the Moors or natives have no ſhare in it. It is a kind of republic under the protection of the grand ſignior, and is governed by a ſovereign, or dey, who who ſeldom undertakes any thing of importance without the council of the Janizaries. The Arabs, who live in tents, are a diſtinct people, governed by their own laws, though the Turks interfere when they think fit. The dey is abſolute in ſome reſpects, although he is elected by the Turkiſh ſoldiers, and frequently depoſed and put to death by them. The revenues of the government ariſe from the tribute paid by the Moors and Arabs; and the prizes they take, or the piracies they commit at ſea, ſometimes equal the taxes they lay upon the natives. The ſtems of the vines here are ſo large, that a man can hardly graſp them with his arms, and the bunches of grapes are a foot and a half long. The natives are ſtrong and of a tawny complexion; their religion is Mahometaniſm, and their language a dialect of the Arabic: they alſo uſe that jargon, compoſed of the French, Italian, and Spaniſh languages, called Lingua-Franca, which prevails along the ſhores of the Mediterranean.

ALGIERS, a large town of Barbary, and capital of the country of Algiers. It is built on the declivity of a hill, and is of the form of an amphitheatre next the harbour, ſo that the houſes, appearing one above another, make a very fine appearance from the ſea. The tops of the houſes are all flat, and the people walk on them in the evenings to take the air: they are alſo covered with earth, and are uſed as gardens. The ſtreets are very narrow; the adjoining country, however, is adorned with gardens and fine villas, watered with fountains. The mole of the harbour is 500 paces in length, extending from the main land to a ſmall iſland. The number of inhabitants is ſaid to conſiſt of 100,000 Mahometans, 15,000 Jews, and 4000 Chriſtian ſlaves. Algiers is ſituated oppoſite Minorca, 380 miles W. of Tunis. Lat. 36. 49. N. lon. 2. 18. ALLEGANY, or APPALACHIAN MOUNTAINS, a chain, or range of mountains, in N. America, which extend north-eaſterly and ſouth-weſterly nearly parallel with the coaſt of the ſouthern ſtates, through which they run. They occupy a ſpace of about 900 miles in length, and from 60 to 200 in breadth, eaſtward of the Miſſiſſippi and the five lakes. The different ridges which compoſe this.

immenſe range have different names in different ſtates, as the Kittatiny, the Blue, the North, and South Mountains. They are not confuſedly ſcattered and broken, riſing here and there into high peaks overtopping each other, but ſtretch along in uniform ridges, ſcarcely half a mile high, ſpreading towards the ſouth. Some of them terminate in high perpendicular bluffs; others gradually ſubſide into a level country, giving riſe to the rivers which run ſoutherly into the Gulf of Mexico. In the back parts of Pennſylvania, ſcarce one acre in ten of this range is capable of culture; in other parts, extenſive tracts of fine arable and paſture-land intervene between the ridges, having generally a rich black ſoil, and ſome of the mountains will admit of cultivation almoſt to their tops.

ALPS, the higheſt mountains in Europe, being about 2 miles in perpendicular height, dividing Italy from France, Swiſſerland, and Germany. They have ſeveral names. The Maritime Alps extend from Vado as far as the ſource of the river of the ſame name, or even the Po; the Cottian Alps, from the ſource of the Vado to the city of Suſa; the Grecian Alps, from the city of Suſa to the mountain of St. Bernard, the Pennian Alps, Mount St. Bernard, to Mount St. Gothard; by the latter are bounded the Rhetian Alps, which extend to the ſource of the river Piave: and, laſtly, the Norician, or Carnician Alps, extend themſelves from the Piave as far as Iſtria, and the ſource of the Sau or Saave. The Alps have but few paſſes, and thoſe difficult of acceſs; Hannibal, the Carthaginian general, attempting thoſe on the ſide of Piedmont, when he invaded Italy, loſt moſt of his elephants; he accompliſhed his purpoſe, however, by making his way with acets; not with vinegar (as it has been erroneouſly tranſlated) for diſſolving the ſnow, but with hatchets for cutting it away. The proſpect from many parts of this enormous range of mountains is extremely romantic. One of the moſt celebrated is the Grande Chartreuſe, where a monaſtery was founded in 1084. From Echelles, a little village in the mountains of the department of Mont Blanc, to the top of the Chartreuſe, the diſtance is ſix miles. Along this courſe the road runs winding up, for the moſt part not ſix feet broad. On one hand is the rock, with woods of pine-trees hanging overhead, and on the other a prodigious precipice, almoſt perpendicular, at the bottom of which rolls a deep torrent. On the top of the mountain is the convent. The Glaciers of the Alps are immenſe maſſes of ice, lodged upon the gentler declivities of the mountains, and exhibiting the moſt groteſque and fantaſtic repreſentations. From the valley of Chamouni there is a view of a vaſt chain of mountains inacceſſible, and covered with ice, and of Mount Blanc above the reſt, whoſe top ſeems to reach and even pierce the higheſt region of the clouds. The chain, upon which this mountain ſeems to look down, like a giant, is compoſed of maſſes of rocks, which terminate in pikes or ſpires, called the Needles, and which ſeem ranged like tents in a camp. Their ſides are covered with fretted ſtreaks of ice and ſnow.

AMAZONS, a ſuppoſed race of warring women, in antiquity, living in Amaſia, on the banks of the Euxine, and maintaining themſelves as a nation of women, on their own ſeparate territory, diſtinctly from the men. Perhaps, in the ruder ages of antiquity, companies of women following their huſbands to battle, and ſometimes fighting their enemies, may have given riſe to the romantic deſcriptions of the Amazons, by the ancients; as in later times, the Amazons of S. America ſeem to have had a ſimilar origin, with the wonder-ſtricken Spaniards.

AMAZONIA, a country in S. America, bounded on the N. by Terra Firma and Guiana; on the E. by the Atlantic and Brazil; on the S. by Paraguay and Peru; and on the W. by Peru. It was firſt traverſed in 1580, by Franciſco Orellana, who coming from Peru, ſailed down the great river, to the Atlantic Ocean. Obſerving companies of women (or perhaps of men, for the Indians have a cuſtom of plucking out the beard by the roots) in arms on it's banks, he called the country Amazonia, or the Land of the Amazons, and gave the name of Amazon to the river, which had formerly been called Maragnon. Condamine, who afterwards went into thoſe parts, to meaſure a degree on the meridian, could perceive no ſuch appearance of hoſtile women. The ſoil is very rich and fertile; the trees, fields, and plants, are verdant all the year round. The rivers and lakes are infeſted with crocodiles, alligators, and ſerpents. Their banks are inhabited by different tribes of Indians, governed by petty ſovereigns, diſtinguiſhed from their ſubjects, by coronets of beautiful feathers. The Spaniards have made many attempts to ſettle in this country; but difficulties and diſaſters have hitherto rendered their deſigns abortive. On a part of the coaſt, between Cape North, and the mouth of the Amazon, the Portuguese indeed have made ſome ſettlements.

AMBAMARJAM, or AMBARA, the capital of Abyſſinia. Lat. 13. 12. N. lon. 35. 14. E.

AMBOULE, a fertile vale of Madagascar.

AMBOYNA, the chief of the Molucca Islands, remarkable for the quantity of cloves and nutmegs it produces. The natives wear large whiskers, and their dress is only a piece of slight stuff, wrapped round their middle. The English and Dutch had factories here, at the beginning of the seventeenth century; but the Dutch expelled the English by force, and tortured and put to death many of them, pretending that they had entered into a conspiracy with the Chinese, against them. Since that time, the Dutch have possessed the entire dominion of the Spice Islands, and excluded the rest of the world from trading there. Lat. 4. 0. S. lon. 127. 20. E.

AMBRACIA, a village, once a city of Epirus; the residence of king Pyrrhus.

AMBRAS, AMRAS, or OMBRA, a town and fortress of Austria, 2 miles SE. of Inspruck, which was, as its name (shade) rather imports, a summer retreat for the arch-dukes. The statues, medals, treasures of gold, precious stones and rarities, in the museum here, are immense. There is also the trunk of an oak, inclosing the whole body of a deer, supposed to have perished in the snow, and to have been covered with the mud and wreck of the trees, &c. washed from the mountains by the thaw. The tree, thus deposited, and taking root, inclosed with it's roots the body of the animal, and, in it's further growth, raised the body up with it. Here is also a good library, and a gallery of busts and admirable paintings.

*AMBRESBURY, or AMESBURY, an ancient town in Wiltshire, on the Avon, consisting of two streets, that intersect each other. It is 80 miles from London, and 1 from Stonehenge. Market on Friday.

AMEDABAD. See AMADABAT.

AMEDNAGUR, a city of Hindoostan, in the Decan, once the capital of the soubah of the same name, which is now better known by that of Dowlatabad. This place was the residence of the emperor Aurengzebe, during his conquest of the Deccan, and the Carnatic. It is 181 miles by Poonah, from Bombay. Lat. 18. 6. N. lon. 74. 0. E.

AMEL, a kingdom of Negroland.

AMELAND, an island of Friesland.

AMELIA, formerly AMERIA, or ÆMILIA, a small city in the pope's territories, seated on a mountain between the Tiber and Nira, in a fertile country, 20 miles SW. of Spoleto, and 45 N. of Rome. Lat. 42. 33. N. lon. 12. 30. E.

Amerden-Hall, Essex, near Audley-End.

AMERICA, the largest of the four grand divisions of the globe, is bounded on all sides by the ocean, and stretches, in it's extensive range, through every inhabited latitude or climate in the world; and the waters on it's northern extremity seem to be bound up in everlasting frost. The parts that have a vertical sun, are so near the sea, or the lofty Andes, constantly covered with snow, that they experience not the excessive heats of Africa; and the complexion of the natives, or aborigines, is by no means very dark; it is generally of a reddish or copper colour, from the Straits of Magellan to the borders of Hudson's Bay. This immense continent is divided into N. and S. America, which are joined by the Isthmus of Darien. It's mountains, rivers, and lakes, are the largest in the world. America took it's name from Americus Vesputius, a Florentine, who having accompanied Ojeda, a Spanish adventurer thither, and drawing up an amusing history of his voyage, insinuated therein, that he had first discovered that continent. The discovery of America, was made so lately as 1491, by Christopher Columbus, a Genoese, a bold adventurer, a patriot, and a man of humanity. At that time, the authority of the pope, over the whole world, was generally acknowledged throughout Europe. He had granted, to the Portuguese, all the lands, islands, &c. they had discovered, or might discover, to the eastward of the Azores; hence the other Europeans were deprived of the advantages of the trade to the East Indies, by the Cape of Good Hope, which the Portuguese had but lately discovered. The costly articles of the east, which had heretofore come through the Red Sea and Mediterranean, and afforded to the Genoese a lucrative trade, were now brought by the Cape of Good Hope. Columbus saw, saw, with concern, the loſs his country had ſuſtained, and concluding the earth to be round, propoſed to evade the force of the pope's bull, by ſailing to India by a weſtern courſe. His countrymen were not better geographers than the biſhop of Rome. They treated his ſchemes as the reveries of a mad man; he tried other courts of Europe, with ſimilar ſucceſs, till at length Iſabella, queen of Spain, ſold even her jewels to fit him out for the expedition. America furniſhes moſt of the vegetable and mineral productions, to be found in the other parts of the world, together with a variety of valuable drugs and other commodities, which were unknown here before it's diſcovery. The animals on the north are much the ſame all round the pole, but, in the ſouthern parts of America, they are generally more diminutive and feeble; and ſome tribes there are, which, if ever they exiſted in the old world (as Europe, Aſia, and Africa are called) have there become extinct, while the moſt ſtrong and ſavage quadrupeds ſeem not to have ever arrived here. Nearly the ſame variety of birds is found in the new world as in other parts, and ſome there are, that are peculiar to the climate. America may be divided into Indian Nations, United States, and European Colonies. The countries poſſeſſed by Great Britain, are Labrador, or New Britain, Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunſwick. The thirteen United States comprehend New Hampſhire, including the province of Main, Maſſachuſetts, Rhode-Iſland, and Connecticut in New England, New York, New Jerſey, Pennſylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Georgia. Vermont, in New England, and Kentucky, have been lately added to the union; and all the country to the N. of Ohio, extending from Pennſylvania to the E. the lakes on the N. and Miſſiſſippi on the W. is intended by congreſs to be divided into ten new ſtates, to be called Waſhington, Metropotamia, Peſilippi, Michigania, Illinoia, Cherſoneſus, Saratoga, Sylvania, Aſſenipi, and Polopotamia. In North America, Spain poſſeſſes E. and W. Florida, part of Louiſiana, New Mexico, California, and Old Mexico, or New Spain. In South America, they hold Terra Firma, or Caſtile del Oro, Peru, Chili and Paraguay, or La Plata. The French have Cayenne, and the Dutch, Surinam; and the Portugueſe have Brazil. America extends a diſtance of 9000 miles, from lat. 56. o. S. to the impenetrable depths of the northern frigid zone, where it nearly extends through every degree of weſtern longitude from London; and varies in it's breadth, from it's narroweſt part, 60 miles at the Iſthmus of Darien, to 3690, it's greateſt breadth, acroſs the northern part of N. America.

Amersfort, a conſiderable town of the Netherlands, in the province of Utrecht. It carries on a manufacture of dimity and bombazine, and is ſeated in a fertile country, on the river Ems, 12 miles NE. of Utrecht. Lat. 52. 14. N. lon. 5. 22. E.

AMSTERDAM, a large, rich, populous, trading, and handſome city of Holland, the capital of the United Provinces. The walls are high and ſtrongly fortified, and the bridge, which joins the rampart, is built over the Amſtel, and is an extraordinary piece of architecture. The public buildings are fine and numerous. Here are many handſome churches and hoſpitals, for perſons of different ages, ſexes, religious profeſſions, and countries. To the good ſenſe and candour of the Dutch, in tolerating all profeſſions of religion, when perſecution prevailed in other parts, we may, in a great meaſure, attribute their proſperity, and the populouſneſs of their capital. This city is computed to be about half the ſize of London; the foundation is laid upon piles, driven into the moraſs whereon it ſtands, and under the ſtadthouſe alone, there are 13,000. The exchange is one of the principal ornaments of the city; and the harbour, though difficult of acceſs, becauſe of the ſhoals, is one of the largeſt and fineſt in Europe, where a vaſt number of ſhips may be ſeen conſtantly; the ſtreets are ſpacious and well paved, and moſt of them have canals with rows of trees on each ſide. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Amſtel and Wye, 65 miles N. of Antwerp, 175 E. by N. of London, 240 N. by E. of Paris, and 560 NW. of Vienna. Lat. 52. 23. N. lon. 4. 50. E.

AMU, AMUR, rivers in Aſiatic Ruſſia.

AMUL, a large inland town of Perſia.

Amwell, a village in Hertfordſhire, a little to the S. of Ware, and 21 miles from London. One part is called Amwell-Magna, and the other Amwell-Parva; the head or ſource of the New River, which ſupplies London with water, is at the latter place. This canal was projected by Sir H. Middleton; he began it in 1606, and finiſhed it in 1612, by aſſiſtance of the city of London, and by aid of parliament; but with a conſiderable loſs of his own property, he perfected the work. The extent of the canal is near 39 miles; it has 43 ſluices, and there are 215 bridges over it.

Amwick, Lincolnſhire, between Sleaford and Tatterſhall.

ANCONA, anciently ANCON, a district, and considerable sea-port in the pope's territories, on the Adriatic Sea. Commerce has rapidly increased here of late years, through the patronage of Clement XII. who made it a free port, and built a mole to render the harbour safe. It is erected on the ruins of the ancient mole, raised by the emperor Trajan, and is above 2000 feet in length, 100 in breadth, and about 60 in depth, from the surface of the sea. Near this stands the Triumphal Arch of Trajan, which, next to the Maison Quarrée, at Nismes, is the most beautiful and entire monument of Roman magnificence existing. Here, likewise, Clement erected a lazaretto, which advances a little way into the sea, in the form of a pentagon, and is an elegant, as well as useful edifice. The Jews have a synagogue here, and are established in great numbers. Ancona is 116 miles N. by E. of Rome. Lat. 43. 38. N. lon. 13. 35. E.

Ancraft, Northumb. near Belford.

ANCYRA. See ANGORA.

ANDAJA, a river of Old Castile.

ANDALUSIA, the most rich and fertile province of Spain. It is 250 miles in length, and 150 in breadth. The river Guadalquiver runs through it's whole extent, and Seville is it's capital. It was resorted to in antiquity by the Tyrians, Rhodians, Phœnicians, Grecians, Carthaginians, and Romans, on account of it's gold and silver mines. It is still a place of great trade, having many commodious harbours which open to the Western Ocean, near the entrance to the Mediterranean, as Cadiz, &c. and abounding in fruits, corn, wine, oil, honey, sugar, herds of cattle, &c. The Andalusian breed of horses have long been celebrated for their beauty and fleetness.

ANDERLECHT, a fortress of Brabant, 2 miles N. of Brussels.

ANDERNACHT, a town of Cologne, on the Rhine, near which are excellent mineral waters. They trade here in large timber, which is floated down to this place, and hence to Holland. It is 10 miles NW. of Coblentz. Lat. 50. 29. N. lon. 7. 22. E.

ANDERSKOW, a town of Zeeland, Denmark.

Anderston, Dorset. near Bere. Anderton, Chesh. near Bucklow. Anderton-Ford, Lanc. near Ormskirk. Anderton, Lanc. between Eccleston and Wigan.

ANDES, or CORDILLERAS, a huge chain of mountains, or rather two ridges, or cordilleras, running almost the whole length of South America, from the Isthmus of Darien to the Straits of Magellan, through Peru and Chili, a distance of 4300 miles; and in a line parallel to, and but a little distance from, the Pacific Ocean. They are also the loftiest, as well as the most extensive range of hills in the whole world. Even the plain of Quito, which may be considered as a base of the Andes, is elevated farther above the sea, than the top of the Pyrenees; and, in different places, places, they rise more than one third higher than the Pike of Teneriffe, heretofore accounted the highest part of the whole earth. The Andes may literally be said, to hide their heads in the clouds: the storms often roll, and the thunders burst below their summits; which, though exposed to the rays of the sun, in the centre of the torrid zone, are covered with everlasting snows. From experiments made with a barometer, on the mountain of Cotopaxi, it appeared, that it's summit was elevated 6252 yards, which is something more than 3 geographical miles, above the surface of the sea. These mountains give rise to the largest rivers in the world; and, when the volcanos, which are numerous here, break out among the snows, the sudden thaws, produce such torrents of water, as to deluge the plains, and carry off the inhabitants, both man and beast.

ANDES, a hamlet of Mantua.

Andiffer, near Lancaster.

ANDORA, a large village of Genoa, producing excellent wine.

ANDORNO, a town of Piedmont.

*ANDOVER, a large, well-built, populous town in Hampshire, pleasantly situated on the river Ande, on the edge of the Downs. It is a great thoroughfare on the western road, as well from Newbury to Salisbury, as from London down into the west, 10 miles N. by W. of Winchester, and 65 W. by S. of London. Lat. 51. 14. N. lon. 1. 20. W. Market on Saturday.

ANDRAGHIRA, a river of Sumatra, on which the Dutch have a factory.

ANDRAIG, a harbour and fort of Majorca.

ANDRARUM, or ANDERUM, a town of S. Gothland, 14 miles S. of Christianstadt; here are the greatest alum works in Sweden.

Andre, St Northumb. 6 miles E. of Hexham. Andrew's, St. Suff. near Beccles. Andrew's-Castle, St. Hampshire, between Southampton and Petersfield.

ANDREW'S, ST. a town of Fifeshire, formerly the metropolis of Scotland, or of the Pictish kingdom. It is seated on a bay, on the level top of a small hill, commanding a view of the German Ocean. The cathedral, once a large Gothic structure, founded in 1161, and 157 years in building, was so completely demolished in a single day, by John Knox and his adherents, that little of it now remains. The university, founded by the bishop Wardlaw, in 1411, consists of 3 colleges, the Old College, the St. Leonard's, and the New College, and has produced many learned men. The houses, though built of stone, are gone to decay, there being no manufactures here to support the numerous inhabitants; and the harbour has suffered greatly by the encroachments of the sea. It is 30 miles NE. of Edinburgh. Lat. 56. 18. N. lon. 2. 45. W.

ANGOLA, a fertile kingdom of Lower Guinea, or Congo, ſituated between the rivers Dande and Coanza. It is bounded on the N. by Congo Proper, on the E. by Matamba, on the S. by Benguela, and on the W. by the ocean. It produces Indian corn, beans, oranges, lemons, and ſeveral other fruits. The country is divided among ſeveral petty princes; the Portugueſe have ſeveral ſettlements on the coaſt, and the Engliſh and Dutch yet carry on that infamous traffic, the ſlave-trade. Polygamy is allowed in this country, and they practiſe the initiatory rite of the Hebrews. They ſeem to be an amiable and peaceful people; they are tall, and are reckoned to be elegant figures, and very handſome; and from the fertility of the ſoil, and the ſimplicity of their manners, they live very much at their eaſe; it is perhaps from this circumſtance, that theſe injured poor people, when carried into ſlavery, ſhew an impatience of fatigue, and an independency of ſpirit ſuperior to thoſe from the Gold-Coaſt, where the ſoil is barren, and where they have been accuſtomed to hardſhip and labour. Angola is ſituated between 9 and nearly 12 degrees S. lat. and between 10 and 20 E. lon.

ANGORA, or ANGOURA, anciently ANCYRA, a town of Natolia in Aſiatic Turkey, remarkable for it's remains of antiquity, as inſcriptions, pillars, ruins of temples, &c. of porphyry and old marble. The caſtle, which is as large as a ſmall town, and well inhabited, both by the Chriſtians and Turks, is built of white marble, and ſtone reſembling porphyry; and throughout the walls of the town, which are low, and thoſe of the houſes which are generally built of unburnt brick, antique fragments are interſperſed. The city of Angora is computed to have 100,000 inhabitants in it, 90,000 of whom are Turks; and about 1000 of these are janizaries: Greeks, Armenians, &c. compose the remaining 10,000. The country produces very good red wine, and they have excellent rice on some of the rivers. They have the finest breed of goats here in the world; their hair or wool is quite white, and almost as fine as silk; a great trade is carried on in this article, and the finest stuffs, especially camlets, are made of it. The exports of Angora to Holland, France, and England, are about 1600 camel loads yearly. It is 212 miles SE. of Constantinople. Lat. 39. 30. N. lon. 32. 5. E.

Antrobus, Chesh. near Bucklow. Antron, Cornw. near Helston-Downs.

ANTWERP, a large handsome city of Brabant, with a strong citadel, seated on the Scheldt. About 200 years ago it was the greatest place for trade in Europe; but the civil wars, that were the consequence of the tyranny of Philip II. diminished that commerce, which was almost annihilated in 1648, when, by the treaty of Munster, between Spain and the United Provinces, the navigation of the Scheldt, to large ships, was shut. Upon the Seven United States of Holland being thus declared a free state, and the navigation of the Scheldt yielded to them, the Dutch built forts upon the river, to hinder all ships from coming up, except such as paid them custom, and after that time the trade was principally removed from Antwerp to Amsterdam, till then an inconsiderable town; but, by the late revolutions, all these restrictions are done away. The streets of Antwerp are large and regular, in number 212, besides which are 22 public squares: the harbour is very commodious, the river being 400 yards wide, and, at the time of high water, 22 feet deep; so that large vessels may come up to the quay; and, by the canals from the river, to the doors of the houses. The public buildings are very handsome, and, at least, 200 in number. The exchange cost 300,000 crowns. From this building Sir Thomas Gresham took the model of the Royal Exchange, in London, as did the burghers of Amsterdam that of theirs. The townhouse is a grand piece of architecture, and stands in the great market-place. The house of the Hanse-Towns, built for the accommodation of the oosterlingen, or eastern merchants from the Baltic, is a square building of stone. In the middle story, which has a gallery quite round the square, there are 300 lodging rooms: the cellars serve for stables. It is 22 miles N. of Brussels, 22 NE. of Ghent, and 65 S. of Amsterdam.

ARABIA, a country of Aſia, on the SW. It may be accounted a peninſula, being joined on the N. to Syria; bounded on the NE. by the river Euphrates, which divides it from Diarbeck, or Diarbekar, the ancient Meſopotamia; on the E. by the Gulfs of Perſia and Ormus: on the S. by the Indian Ocean; and on the W. by the Red Sea, which ſeparates it from Africa. It lies between 12 and 32 degrees N. latitude, and between 35 and nearly 60 E. lon. extending 1430 miles in length, and 1200 in breadth. It is divided into Petrea, Deſerta, and Felix; or, the Stony, the Deſert, and the Happy. Arabia Petrea is the ſmalleſt of the three, and towards the N. very mountainous, having few inhabitants becauſe of it's barrenneſs. This is the wilderneſs through which the children of Iſrael paſſed, in their journeying from Egypt to Canaan. In Arabia Deſerta, the plains of ſand are ſo immenſe, that travellers, in croſſing them, are obliged to make uſe of the mariner's compaſs, as if at ſea; and the tempeſts are not leſs terrible here than on the ocean. The air is exceſſively hot; ſprings or ſtreams are ſcarcely to be met with: a peſtilential vapour ſometimes paſſes along, which inſtantly kills thoſe who happen to inhale it; and when the wind riſes high, the deſert aſſumes the appearance of the moſt rough and tempeſtuous ſea. The ſand is lifted from its bed by the force of the winds, and driven along like waves, clouds, and rain; every thing that falls in it's way is overwhelmed, and whole caravans of travellers, with their horſes and camels, find one common grave in the deluge of ſand. Along the banks of the Euphrates, where the land is fertilized, there are great flocks of ſheep, and large herds of cattle and camels. Oſtriches, alſo, are found in great numbers. The produce of Arabia Felix is myrrh, aloes, caſſia, frankincenſe, ſpikenard, manna, and other coſtly gums; cinnamon, dates, oranges, lemons, pomegranates, figs, and other fruits; honey and wax in plenty; and immenſe quantities of coffee. In a country ſo various, and of ſuch extent, we may expect the manners of the inhabitants to vary. Thoſe in the fertile parts have long been domeſticated; to them we are indebted for many valuable diſcoveries; they have been our preceptors in chemiſtry and mathematical ſcience; they firſt introduced into Europe the invention of the ten arithmetical figures, and taught us their uſe. On the other hand, the Arabs in the Deſert have no houſes, but tents; they lead wandering lives, removing from place to place, partly for the ſake of paſture, and partly to lie in wait for the caravans, which they often rob, as they travel over the Deſert from Buſſarah to Aleppo, and from Egypt to Mecca, the place of Mahomet's nativity.

ARACAN, or RECCAN, a fertile, but not a populous, country of Aſia, ſeated on the NE. coaſt of the Bay of Bengal. It is governed by 12 princes, ſubject to the chief king, who reſides in his capital, called alſo Aracan, a city about as large as Amſterdam; through which the large and beautiful river, Chaberis, glides in many ſtreams. His palace is very large, and contains, it is ſaid, 7 idols of caſt gold, two inches thick, each of a man's height and covered with diamonds, rubies, and other precious ſtones; and, in his ſtables, he has horſes, elephants, lions, tigers, &c. They have only two ſeaſons, the rainy and the fair; the rainy ſeaſon is, while the ſun is on the N. ſide of the line, or during our ſpring and ſummer months; the reſt of the year is their ſummer. Elephants, buffaloes, and tigers are numerous here. The articles of commerce are, timber, lead, tin, and elephants' teeth; and ſometimes traders meet with diamonds, rubies, and other precious ſtones. The inhabitants are idolatrous; polygamy is permitted among them: admiring broad and flat foreheads, they bind leaden plates on their children's foreheads, as ſoon as they are born; and accounting long ears a beauty, they ſo load them with rings, as to make them at laſt hang down to their ſhoulders.

ARCHANGEL, a ſea-port of Ruſſia, ſeated on the Dwina, 4 miles from the White Sea, which is frozen up for three months in the winter, but the reſt of the year is open. The paſſage to it, through the N. Sea, was firſt diſcovered by Richard Lane, an Engliſhman, in 1553, his ſhip being ſeparated from the fleet of Sir Hugh Willoughby, then on an expedition to diſcover a NE. paſſage to China. Sir Hugh, with 70 men, periſhed in Lapland; Lane wintered here. On the Engliſh firſt entering the White Sea, they found a fiſhing boat, the people in which, having never ſeen a ſhip before, fled before them; but on their coming up with them, they fell fell at their feet, and though they could hardly be perſuaded to ſell them any thing without their prince's leave, they gave them plenty of victuals for nothing. The Engliſh, from Elizabeth's time, had the excluſive privilege of trading here, and in the other northern ports of Ruſſia, from Wardhus to the river Oby, till the death of Charles I. when the czar was ſo exaſperated at their conduct, that he wholly deprived them of it; and ſince that time it has been open to all nations. ASIA, one of the four grand diviſions of the globe, is ſituated between 25 and 180 degrees E. lon. and extends nearly from the equator to the impenetrable regions of the Arctic Pole. It is 4740 miles in length, from the Dardanelles to the eaſtern ſhore of Tartary, and 4380 in breadth, from the moſt ſouthern part of Malacca, to the northern parts of Nova Zembla. Aſia is bounded on the W. by the Red Sea, the Mediterranean, the Black Sea, the Don, the Wolga, and an imaginary line extending from 54 to nearly 80 degrees N. latitude; on the N. by the Frozen Ocean; on the E. by the Pacific, and on the S. by the Indian Ocean. From the richneſs of it's ſoil, the deliciouſneſs of it's fruits, the fragrancy and balſamic quality of it's plants, ſpices, gums, &c. the quantity, variety, beauty, and value of it's gems, the fineneſs of it's ſilks and cottons, and the richneſs of it's metals, it has been conſidered as the fineſt quarter of the globe. It exhibits nearly every variety of animals. Aſia contains, Siberia, Eaſtern and Weſtern Tartary, China, India within and without the Ganges, Thibet, Perſia, and the Turkiſh empire in Aſia, which comprehends Georgia, Turcomania, Diarbeck, or Meſopotamia, Natolia, Paleſtine, Syria, and part of Arabia.

ASSAM, a country of Aſia, bounded on the W. by Bengal and Bootan, on the N. by the mountains of Thibet, and on the SE. and S. by Meckley. The river Burampooter flows through the whole length of it. It's capital is Gerghon. The natives are fond of the fleſh of dogs. Almoſt every houſekeeper has an elephant: they live comfortably, and as the king is the ſole proprietor of all the gold, ſilver, and other metals found in this kingdom, they pay no taxes. The invention of gunpowder is aſcribed to the Aſſameſe. It was known in China and Hindooſtan in very remote antiquity; and in the code of Gentoo laws, there is a prohibition of the uſe of fire-arms; but, perhaps, theſe fire-arms were only ſome ſort of miſſive torches, and the powder very ſhort in it's effect of that which is made in later times. Aſſam lies between 91 and 96 degrees of E. lon. and between 25 and 28 N. lat.

ASTRACAN, a territory in Aſiatic Ruſſia, or Tartary, including the N. and part of the W. ſide of the Caſpian Sea.

ASTRACAN, the capital of the above-mentioned province, a large and populous city, is ſeated on an iſland formed by the river Wolga, 50 miles NW. of the Caſpian Sea. It is ſurrounded by ſtrong walls, and has an excellent harbour, where the Europeans embark for Perſia. It is noted for having excellent fiſh. It ſeldom rains here, but the river, on which it ſtands overflows, like the Nile; and when the water is run off, the graſs grows in leſs than a month. From Aſtracan to Terki, on the ſide of the Caſpian Sea, there are long marſhes, which produce a vaſt quantity of ſalt, with which the Ruſſians carry on a great trade. This city is ſuppoſed to have been, in very early times, the general ſtaple for the productions of Perſia, India, and Arabia. In the 14th century, when the Venetians were in poſſeſſion of the trade of the Black Sea, they drew from this port, to their ſtaple at Tanais, the Aſiatic productions, with which they ſupplied the ſouthern parts of Europe, while the articles deſigned for the north, were conveyed partly along the Wolga, and partly by land-carriage, to Ladoga, on the Volkhouc, whence they were tranſported to Wiſby, on the Iſle of Gothland. The deſtructive expeditions of Tamerlane drove, for ſome time, the trade of Aſia from this channel to that of Smyrna and Aleppo; and the diſcovery of the paſſage to India by the Cape of Good-Hope, gave, to a great part of it, quite a different route. Aſtracan is ſtill reſorted to by many nations, and it's trade with India, Perſia, &c. is yet conſiderable. It lies 800 miles SE. of Moſcow. Lat. 46. 22. N. lon. 47. 40. E.

* ATHLONE, a town of Ireland, moſt pleaſantly ſituated on the large and beautiful river Shannon. Part of the town ſtands in W. Meath, on the Leinſter ſide of the river; the other part in Roſcommon, on the Connaught ſide; theſe are joined by a long bridge of many arches, which is a grand paſs between the two provinces. Though Athlone is ſo advantageouſly ſituated for trade and improvement, it yet remains, in many parts, a poor, ruinous, neglected, dirty-looking place. On the bridge there are ſome badly executed figures and inſcriptions, celebrating the ſucceſs of the arbitrary Elizabeth of England, and relating how the rebels in her reign were executed, quartered, and their ſculls, &c. ſtuck upon poles about the country, and at Dublin Caſtle, and every thing 'with a bleſſing,' &c. brought into a ſtate of the greateſt proſperity. How much of allegiance they owed her may be judged, when it is conſidered that it was a law in her reign, that if any one killed 'a mere Iriſhman,' he ſhould be mulcted, or fined; and what were the fruits of ſuch oppreſſive laws, we find in the reigns of the unhappy Stuarts. It is 59 miles W. of Dublin. Lat. 53. 22. N. lon. 8. 41. W.

ATHOL, a mountainous diſtrict of Perthſhire, containing ſome fine lakes.

BASIL, BASLE, or BALE, the capital of the canton of Baſil, in Swiſſerland, is ſurrounded by thick walls, flanked with towers and baſtions. It is divided into two parts by the Rhine; the larger of which is on the ſide of Swiſſerland, the leſs on that of Germany; but they are joined by a handſome bridge. The larger has 5 gates, 6 ſuburbs, 200 ſtreets, 6 large ſquares, and 46 fountains, and is partly ſeated on a hill. The other ſtands on a plain, and has but two gates, with ſeveral ſtreets and fountains. The town-houſe and paintings are much admired, and the univerſity has had many very celebrated ſcholars, as Oecolampadius, Buxtorf, Wenſtein, Euler, the Bernouillis, &c. The library contains a prodigious number of books and manuſcripts, and there is a rich collection of medals, among which are ſeveral exceedingly ſcarce. Baſil is the largeſt, and ſeems to have been once one of the moſt populous towns in Swiſſerland: it is capable of containing 100,000 inhabitants, whereas the number at preſent is ſcarcely more than 14,000. The art of making paper is ſaid to have been invented here. They have ſeveral manufactories, particularly of ribands and cottons, and carry on an extenſive trade. The ſumptuary laws are very ſtrict at Baſil, and no perſon is allowed to have a ſervant behind his carriage. In general the burghers' ſons receive an excellent education; and it is not uncommon for even the poorer ſort of tradeſmen, to employ their leiſure hours in reading Virgil, Horace, and Plutarch. It is 175 miles N. by E. of Geneva, and 250 E. by S. of Paris. Lat. 47. 45. N. lon. 7. 34. E.

*BIRMINGHAM, a large town in Warwickſhire, long noted for its hardware manufactures. It is no corporation, and therefore free for any perſon to ſettle there, which has greatly contributed to the increaſe, not only of the buildings, but of the trade, which is now no longer confined to ſmall wares, but includes the more maſſive works of the founders, and alſo the improved ſteam engines, by means of which, indeed, they carry on their heavier works, as they have not here any conſiderable ſtream of water. The houſes have been computed at 7000, and the inhabitants at 60,000, but their number is continually increaſing, and the ſurrounding country to a conſiderable diſtance, eſpecially towards Wolverhampton, ſeems like a continued town peopled with induſtrious inhabitants. Birmingham, from the appearance of the houſes, the buſtle in the ſtreets, and particularly from the continual paſſing of the ſtage-coaches, has much the reſemblance of the metropolis. It's manufactures are ſent to every quarter of the globe, and in cheapneſs and beauty are unrivalled. It ſtands on the ſide of a hill, 17 miles NW. of Conventry, and 116 of London. Lat. 52. 30. BOLOGNA, an ancient, large, and rich town of Italy, capital of the Bolognese. It's palaces, churches, and other public buildings, are very numerous, and finished in a superior style of architecture; and, perhaps, no town in the world, Rome excepted, is so rich in paintings. The private houses are well-built, and the city contains about 80,000 inhabitants. They carry on a considerable trade in silks and velvets, which are manufactured here in great perfection. The river Remo, which runs near the city, turns 400 mills for the silk-works; and there is a canal hence to the Po. Bologna is seated at the foot of the Apennines, 22 miles SE. of Modena, and 175 NW. of Rome. Lat. 44. 30. N. lon. 11. 26. E.

BOLOGNESE, a province of Italy, in the Pope's territories, bounded on the W. by Modena, Modena; on the N. by the Ferrarese; on the E. by Romagna; and on the S. by Tuscany. It is watered by many small rivers, and it's soil is extremely fertile, producing all sorts of grain and fruits, particularly muskadine grapes, which are in high esteem, and oil in immense quantities; hence it's capital is called Bologna the Fat. The country round it, for several miles, seems one continued garden. The vineyards are not divided by hedges, but by rows of elms and mulberry-trees, the vines hanging in festoons from one tree to another, in a very picturesque and beautiful manner. Here are mines of alum and iron. The people seem to be industrious, and to enjoy, under the mild government of the Pope, the fruits of their labour.

BORRODALE, in the SE. part of Cumberland, bordering on Weſtmorland, a romantic valley among Derwent-water fells. Theſe fells or hills are ſome of the loftieſt in England, and it is in one of them that the black-lead, or wad, is found, wherewith almoſt all the world is ſupplied: the mines are opened only once in ſeven years, and when a ſufficient quantity of this valuable and ſingular mineral is taken out, they are carefully cloſed again. In travelling among theſe mountains the idea that preſents itſelf to the aſtoniſhed ſpectator, is that of the earth having been in an uproar, like the ocean in a ſtorm; the hills appear like waves riſing one behind another, and were it not for the abrupt and ſudden ſcarps, the immenſe maſſes of rugged rocks that give the idea of fixedneſs and ſtability, the bewildered fancy might be ſo loſt as to imagine they were in a ſtate of undulation, and ready to mingle with each other. The beautiful vale of Borrodale is watered by the cleareſt brooks, which precipitated from the hills, and, forming many beautiful waterfalls, meet together in the dale, and, forming one large ſtream, paſs out of the dale under the name of Borrodale-Beck, when it's waters ſpread out into an expanſive lake, containing ſeveral beautiful iſlands. This lake is called Derwentwater, or Keſwick-Lake. Borrodale is 4 miles from Keſwick, in paſſing from which, the traveller has the Lake on his right hand, and ſtupendous rocky precipices on his left; huge ſtones, or rugged maſſes of rock, which have tumbled from above, lie ſcattered along his way. As he approaches the dale, he ſees the ledges of the rocks covered with herbage, ſhrubs, and trees; villages and farms ariſe upon his view, the larger cattle are ſeen feeding in the lower grounds, and the ſheep, in large flocks, upon the mountains.

BRASIL, a large country of S. America, on the E. between the equinoctial and 35. 0. S. lat. and between 35 and 60 degrees W. lon. extending from the river of Amazons, to that of La Plata, a length of coaſt, through all it's windings, of above 3000 miles. It is bounded on the W. by Paraguay and Amazonia; it's other boundaries are formed by the great Atlantic Ocean. The air of this country is temperate and wholeſome; the ſoil is fertile, producing immenſe quantities of ſugar, alſo tobacco, brazil-wood, Indian corn, and ſeveral ſorts of fruits and drugs; their beasts, birds, and fishes are various, and within the country there are gold, and several sorts of precious stones. The Portuguese chiefly inhabit the coast. The residence of the viceroy, till of late years, was at St. Salvador, but is now at St. Sebastian. The natives, or aborigines, are divided into several nations or tribes, as the Tupinambocs, Tobajaras, Petiguaras, Tapayos, &c. and speak different languages. They are of a copper colour, and have black hair like the other Americans. They are strong, lively, and gay, and subject to few diseases. They love to adorn themselves with feathers, and are fond of feasts, at which they dance immoderately. They have huts made of the branches of trees, and covered with the palm-tree leaves, of which they also make baskets. Their furniture consists chiefly of their hammocks, and dishes or cups made of calibashes. They have also knives made of a sort of stone and split canes. They who live near the coast copy the European manner of dress; those in the interior, content themselves with a covering round their middle.

*BRISTOL, a city and ſea-port, partly in Glouceſterſhire, and partly in Somerſetſhire, to which laſt it was accounted to belong, before it formed a ſeparate juriſdiction. In wealth, trade, and population, it is juſtly reckoned the ſecond in England; the cuſtom-houſe receipts for Liverpool, however, have lately exceeded thoſe of Briſtol. It is ſeated at the confluence of the Avon and Frome, about 10 miles from the place where the Avon diſcharges itſelf into the Severn. Ships of conſiderable burden come up to the quays, and their trade is extenſive; ſending 2000 ſhips yearly to different parts of the world. The ſtreets are moſtly narrow, but here are ſome elegant ſquares, and the new parts of the town are magnificent, they are built of ſtone, and much in the ſame ſtyle as Bath. Like it, they alſo extend, range above range, till they have nearly reached the ſummit of the hill, againſt which the Glouceſter ſide of the city ſtands. The Hot Wells are much reſorted to; they are of great purity, and have obtained a high reputation in conſumptive caſes. They are about a mile below the town on the ſide of the Avon; here is alſo a cold ſpring, which guſhes out of a rock, and ſupplies the cold bath. In St. Vincent's Rock, above the Wells, are found native cryſtals, well known under the name of Briſtol-ſtones. The proſpects in the vicinity of Briſtol are delightful, and the banks of the Avon, the lofty rocks, through which it finds a paſſage to the ſea, covered with herbage and trees, and preſenting the moſt awful precipices, are highly romantic. They have plenty of coal from King's Wood and Mendip-Hills, and the glaſs-houſes, founderies, ſugar-works, &c. are numerous. They make uſe of ſledges inſtead of carts, which, from their weight and friction, ſeem a heavy load in themſelves; neither do the horſes pull together, the hind horſe being perpetually raiſing the forepart of the ſledge, and the fore horſes perpetually pulling or preſſing him to the ground. It ought to be obſerved, however, that a part of the town having been built upon a moraſs, carts and waggons are not allowed to ply there, from the apprehenſion of their ſhaking and endangering the buildings. Briſtol is 40 miles nearly S. of Hereford, 60 NE. of Exeter, 34 SW. by S. of Glouceſter, 50 SSW. of Worceſter, 12 WNW. of Bath, and 124 W. of London. Lat. 51. 28. N. lon. 2. 36. W. BRUGES, a large city of the ci-devant Austrian Flanders, formerly the English staple for wool, and the centre of communication between the Lombards and the Hanseatic merchants. Hither the Lombards brought the products of India, and the manufactures of Italy, and exchanged them for the commodities of the north. It was then the greatest trading town in Europe, every commercial nation of which had a consul here. But, in the 16th century, the civil wars, occasioned by the tyranny of Philip II. drove the trade first to Antwerp, and then to Amsterdam. Bruges is not therefore populous now in proportion to it's extent: but it's situation still commands some trade, as it communicates by canals with Ghent, Ostend, Sluys, Nieuport, Furnes, Ypres, and Dunkirk. It is 8 miles nearly E. of Ostend. Lat. 51. 12. N. lon. 3. 17. E.

The former is S. of the tropic of Capricorn, and extends along the Indian Ocean to the mouth of the Great Fish-River, in lat. 30. 30. S. By this river it is divided from the country of the Hottentots; it's other boundaries are uncertain. The Caffres are tall, active, and robust, and evince great courage in attacking lions, and other beasts of prey. Their complexions are black; their clothing consists of hides of oxen, which are as pliant as cloth. Industry is the leading trait in the character of the Caffres. The men employ much of their time in hunting, the women in cultivating the land; they also make earthenware, and curious baskets. The country is fertile, and they have large herds of cattle, which are small, but very docile, coming at a whistle. They have a high opinion of the Supreme Being, and of his power, believe in a future state of rewards and punishments, and think that the world had no beginning, and will be everlasting. They have no priests, yet undergo, at 9 years of age, the initiatory rite of the Hebrews. Their government is a limited monarchy, and their king is allowed a plurality of wives. The interior parts are little known.

CAIRO, GRAND CAIRO, or EL KAHERA, the capital of Egypt, conſiſts of 3 towns, about a mile apart, Old Cairo, or Meſra, New Cairo, and the Port of Bulac. The inhabitants are about 300,000. Old Cairo is a ſmall place, though it be the harbour for boats that come from Upper Egypt. New Cairo is about a mile from the river, and is 7 miles in circumference. It has 3 or 4 grand gates, but the ſtreets are narrow, and the beſt houſes are generally built round a court, having their windows within to the incloſed court, and preſenting only a dead wall to the ſtreet. The caliſh is a canal which conveys the waters of the Nile into the city; it is about 20 feet broad, and has houſes built on each ſide of it. Here are ſeveral public bagnios and caravanſeras, and about 300 moſques, the lofty minarets of which preſent a very picturesque appearance. In the 15th century, this was one of the richeſt and moſt flouriſhing cities in the world; it has ſince declined, but the Europeans have ſtill their conſuls and factors here. It is ſeated near the E. bank of the Nile, 100 miles S. of it's mouth. Lat. 30. 3. N. lon. 31. 23. E.

CAITHNESS, the moſt northerly county of Scotland, bounded on the W. by Sutherlandſhire; on the N. by the Pentland Frith, which divides it from the Orkney Iſlands; and on the SE. by the German Ocean. It's greateſt extent is 35 miles from N. to S. and 20 from E. to W. The SW. part is mountainous, and the abode of wild roes and other animals; the rocky ſummits ſhelter eagles, and other birds of prey, and the lakes are reſorted to by ſwans, and various water-fowl. On the SW. this county ends in the promontory called the Ord of Caithneſs. Along the ſide of this ſteep hill, impending above the ſea, a winding road has been cut, which is the only entrance into this county from the S. The climate is good, and the ſoil round the coaſt very improvable: here the Engliſh is ſpoken; but in the Highlands the Erſe prevails.

CAKET, a town and country of Perſia.

CALABRIA, a country of Naples, divided into Ultra and Citra, or Farther Calabria, of which Reggio is the capital; and Hither Calabria, of which Coſenza is the capital. It is rich in vegetable and mineral productions, but liable to earthquakes. One of the moſt terrible upon record happened here and in Sicily in 1783. Beſides the deſtruction of many towns, villages, and farms, above 40,000 perſons periſhed by this calamity. Mountains were levelled, and valleys formed in an inſtant; new rivers began to flow, and old ſtreams were ſunk into the earth, and deſtroyed; plantations were removed from their ſituations, and hills carried to places far diſtant. At Scilla, a wave, which had ſwept the country for 3 miles, carried off, on it's return, 2473 of the inhabitants.

CALCUTTA, or FORT-WILLIAM, the emporium emporium of Bengal, and ſeat of the governor-general of India, is ſeated on the W. ſide of Hoogly River, at about 100 miles from it's mouth, which is navigable up to the town for large ſhips. It is an extenſive city, being ſuppoſed to contain 500.000 inhabitants. The houſes variouſly built, ſome of brick, others with mud, and a greater number with bamboos and mats, make a motley appearance: and the mixture of European and Aſiatic manners obſerved in Calcutta, is wonderful; coaches, phaetons, hackeries, two-wheeled carriages, drawn by bullocks, palankeens, carried by the natives, the paſſing ceremonies of the Hindoos, and the different appearances of the faquirs, form a diverſified and curious ſcene. Here the governor-general and council of Bengal reſide, who have a control over the preſidencies of Madras, Bengal, and Bencoolen. The houſes have many of them the appearance of palaces, or temples, and their inhabitants are very hoſpitable. The ſituation of this city is not happily choſen; for it has extenſive muddy lakes, and a vaſt foreſt cloſe by it, from which, in ſo hot a climate, unwholeſome vapours muſt ariſe. Here are four judges, who diſpenſe juſtice according to the laws of England. Calcutta is 1030 miles NE. by N. of Madras. Lat. 22. 23. N. lon. 88. 28. E.

CANADA, a large country of N. America, N. of the United States. It is ſubject to Great Britain, and the religious eſtabliſhment is that of the church of Rome. By an act of parliament, in 1791 the country was divided into Upper Canada, of which Montreal is the capital; and Lower Canada, of which Quebec is the chief city; and a conſtitution reſembling that of England was given to each of theſe provinces. The winter here for 6 months is very ſevere: the cleared lands are very fertile, and the vegetables various, and corn ripens in two months time, vegetation being always wonderfully accelerated where the ſeaſon is ſhort. Furs and ſkins are obtained here in great quantities; the rivers, lakes, and bays are numerous, large, and deep, and well ſupplied with fiſh. Here are ſeveral ancient and extenſive foreſts, and the tribes of Indians are numerous.

CANAL, THE DUKE OF BRIDGEWATER'S, a ſtupendous work, begun in 1758, at Worſeley-Mill, 7 miles from Mancheſter, where, at the foot of a mountain, compoſed in a great meaſure of coal, a baſin is cut, capable of containing all the boats and a great body of water, which ſerves as a reſervoir to the navigation. The canal runs through a hill, by a ſubterranean paſſage, nearly three quarters of a mile to the duke's coal-works. In ſome places it is cut through the ſolid rock; in others arched over with brick. Air-funnels, ſome of which are 37 yards perpendicular, are cut at certain diſtances through the rock to the top of the hill. At Barton-Bridge, 3 miles from the baſin, is an aqueduct, which, for upwards of 200 yards, conveys the canal acroſs a valley, and alſo more than 40 feet above the navigable river Irwell. There are 3 arches over this river, the centre one is 63 feet wide, and 38 high, admitting the largeſt barges to paſs underneath with their maſts and ſails ſtanding. At Longford-Bridge, the canal turns to the right, and croſſing the river Merſey, paſſes near Altringham, Dunham, Grapenhall, and Kaulton, into the tide-way of the Merſey, at Runcorn-Gap, whence the barges can paſs to Liverpool at low water. This navigation is 29 miles in length; it falls 95 feet, and was finiſhed in 5 years, under the direction of that excellent engineer, Mr. Brindley. Coals, which, before this canal was finiſhed, were retailed in Mancheſter, at 7d. per hundred weight, is now ſold (ſeven ſcore to the hundred weight) at 3½d.

CANAL, THE GRAND TRUNK, or STAFFORDSHIRE CANAL, was begun in 1766, under the direction of Mr. Brindley, in order to form a communication between the Merſey and the Trent, and of courſe between the Iriſh Channel and the German Ocean. It is 92 miles in length, from the Duke of Bridgewater's canal at Preſton-on-the-Hill, in Cheſh. to Wildon Ferry, in Derbyſhire, where it communicates with the Trent. It is carried over the river Dove in an aqueduct of 23 arches, and the ground is raiſed for more than a mile to a conſiderable height; it is alſo carried over the Trent by an aqueduct of 6 arches: at Harecaſtle-Hill it is conveyed under ground a mile and a half; at Barton, in Cheſhire, a ſubterraneous paſſage is effected of 560 yards in extent, and in the ſame neighbourhood another of 350: and, at Preſton-on-the-Hill, where it joins the duke's canal, it paſſes under ground 1241 yards. From the neighbourhood of Stafford a branch is made from this canal, to near Wolverhampton, and to join the Severn near Kidderminſter: from this again two other branches are carried, one to Birmingham, and the other to Worceſter. Since the eſtabliſhment of theſe canals, many other extenſive ones have been projected and executed, in moſt of the inland, and ſome of the maritime counties.

CANAL, THE GRAND, in Ireland, commences in Dublin, at the weſt-end of the town, and is intended to be carried to the river Shannon. It already communicates with the Barrow, whereby a communication is opened between the metropolis and Athy, Carlow, Roſs, Waterford, Clonmel, &c. There are paſſage-boats daily from the city to Sallans, Monaſtereven, and Athy, and from theſe places to Dublin; and veſſels carrying goods are continually paſſing and repaſſing. The execution of this work was an arduous buſineſs; beſide having to cut through hard and rocky ſtrata, and conſtruct aqueducts over the valleys and rivers, they had to carry it through a long tract of turf-bog, which, for a conſiderable time, baffled their efforts, as, from it's fluid-like conſiſtence, it was preſſed into, or filled up, the cut or channel, whenever they ceaſed digging. Theſedifficulties, however, were ſurmounted, and the canal itſelf has proved ſuch a drain to the bog, as to enable the people to reclaim a great extent of it, and bring it under cultivation. By a branch, which has been carried, at an immenſe expence, by a circuitous courſe round the S. ſide of the city, the Grand Canal now communicates with the harbour of Dublin. There are other canals and modes of inland navigation by the rivers and lakes, both in the N. and W. of Ireland. The Royal Canal, on the N. ſide of Dublin, is not yet completed.

CANAL, THE GREAT, in Scotland, forms the long-wiſhed for junction between the Forth and the Clyde. This bold deſign, conceived above a century ago, is now ſucceſsfully executed upon a ſcale far above the uſual dimenſions of the largeſt canals in England, and admits of veſſels conſtructed for foreign trade, provided the breadth of the beam be ſomewhat leſs than 20 feet, and their draught of water a little under 8. The extreme length of this canal, from the Forth to the Clyde, is 35½ Engliſh miles. In the ſpace of 30 miles it is carried over 36 rivers and rivulets, beſides two great roads, by means of 38 aqueduct bridges. In the courſe of this inland navigation, which may be performed in leſs than 18 hours, many ſtriking ſcenes preſent themſelves to view. But above all others, the ſtupendous aqueduct bridge over the Kelvin, near Glaſgow, 400 feet in length, carrying a great artificial river over a natural one in a deep valley, where large veſſels ſail along at the height of 70 feet above the bed of the river below, is one of the features of this ſtupendous work, which gives it a pre-eminence over any of a ſimilar nature in Europe. Yet, however ſingular and ſtriking this may appear, with reſpect to picturesque beauty, the utility of this communication between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Sea to navigation and commerce, is a more important conſideration, as it ſhortens the nautical diſtance 800, and, in ſome caſes, 1000 miles, and affords a ſafe and ſpeedy navigation, particularly at the end of the ſeaſon, to veſſels bound to Ireland, or the weſtern ports of Great Britain, that are too long detained in the Baltic, and that cannot attempt the voyage round by the N. Sea, without danger of ſhipwreck, or the market being loſt from delay.

CANAL, ci-devant ROYAL, or of LANGUEDOC, was begun in 1666, in order to effect an inland communication between the Atlantic and Mediterranean, and finiſhed in 1682. It is carried over 37 aqueducts, and croſſed by 8 bridges. From the port of Cette, in the Mediterranean, it croſſes the Lake of Thau, and below Thouloufe is conveyed by 3 ſluices into the Garonne. The reſervoirs of water, collected from the hills for the ſupply of this navigation, are immenſe. From one of theſe the water is conveyed by 3 large braſs cocks, with mouths as large as a man's body, yet though theſe remain open for months ſucceſſively, there is no viſible diminution of water in the great reſervoir. Between Beziores and Gapeſtan, is the Mal-Pas, where the canal is conveyed for the length of 720 feet, under a mountain cut cut into a lofty arcade, lined with freeſtone, except where it is rock. At Adge there is a curious round ſluice, lock, or chamber, with three openings, three different depths of the water or levels meeting here; and the gates are ſo contrived, that veſſels may paſs into any one of them by opening the ſluice belonging to it. There are 15 locks upon it in the fall towards the ocean, and 45 on the ſide of the Mediterranean. Regular locks for carrying boats over eminences were firſt erected in France.

CARLOWITZ, a town of Sclavonia.

CARLSCRONA, or CARLSCROON, a town of Blekinge, in S. Gothland, with a harbour large and commodious, but of difficult entrance, on account of the shoals and rocky sands at it's mouth. The town mostly stands upon a small rocky island, which rises gently in a bay of the Baltic; the suburbs extend over another small rock, and along the mole, close to the basons, where the fleet is moored. The way into the town from the main land, is carried over a dyke to an island, and thence along 2 long wooden bridges, joined by a rock. The town is spacious, and contains about 18,000 inhabitants; some of the buildings are brick, but generally they are of wood. Here is a dock hollowed out of the solid rock, capable of receiving the largest vessels, and a covered one, whose bottom and sides are of hewn granite; rows of granite pillars support the roof, and bear rather the appearance of a colonnade to a temple, than of a receptacle for ships. In 1680 the town was founded, in 1724 the former dock, and in 1779 the latter was completed. According to the original plan, 3 basons and 30 docks, communicating by sluices, were intended, but a century will probably elapse before they can be completed. Carlscrona is 220 miles nearly S. of Stockholm. Lat. 56. 20. N. lon. 15. 25. E.

CHINA, an extenſive empire in Aſia, bounded on the W. by mountains and deſerts which divide it from part of Tartary, Thibet, and the kingdom of Ava; on the N. by E. Tartary, from which it is ſeparated by a wall above 2000 miles in length, on which there are about 45,000 towers; on the E. by the Yellow Sea and the Chineſe Ocean; and on the S. by the ſame ocean, Tonquin, Laos, Pegu, and Ava. It lies between 20 and 41 deg. N. lat. and between 96 and 125 deg. E. lon. As this extenſive country lies under a variety of climates, it's air is very different. In the S. they are expoſed to tropical heats and periodical rains, while the rivers in the N. are generally frozen up for ſome months during the winter. It is chiefly a flat open country, but there are ſome mountains, which are generally well cultivated and covered with trees, and there are mines of iron, tin, copper, quickſilver, gold, and ſilver. There is abundance of corn, and pulſe of all ſorts, eſpecially rice; and here are ſeveral trees and fruits, and a great number of ſimples peculiar to the country, particularly a tree that produces peas, differing little from thoſe of Europe; another, bearing a kind of gum, which makes excellent varniſh; a third bearing white berries, of the ſize of a hazel-nut, whoſe pulp is tallow, of which candles are made; and a fourth, called the white-wax tree, producing that article ſuperior to the common bees-wax. The bamboo-cane grows to the height of an ordinary tree; and though it is hollow within, the wood is hard, and proper for many uſes, ſuch as pipes to convey water, boxes, baſkets, and the making of paper, after it is reduced into a ſort of paſte. China is the only country which produces the tea-plant, and ſupplies other nations with that article, when prepared. There is ſcarcely a village of China, eſpecially in the S. but what enjoys the benefit of ſome navigable river, lake, canal, or arm of the ſea, and wherever there is a town on ſhore, there is another of boats upon the water, and many families are born, live, and die there; hogs, poultry, dogs, and other domeſtic animals, being kept on board as on ſhore. Beſides theſe veſſels, there is a prodigious number of floats of timber perpetually paſſing up and down the rivers and canals, which carry vaſt numbers of people on them. Some of theſe floats are a mile in length, and the proprietors build little huts upon them, where they live till they have diſpoſed of their timber, which they ſometimes carry 1000 miles. There is no part of the world where the inhabitants obſerve the forms of politeneſs ſo much as in China; they are perpetually interchanging civilities and ſalutations: the children ſhew the greateſt reſpect for their parents, and theſe ſhew a great veneration for their anceſtors. They are, however, very deceitful and treacherous. The complexion of the Chineſe is rather tawney; thoſe are thought to be the moſt handſome who are the moſt corpulent. The women are modeſt, and remarkable for their little feet. Polygamy, and various forms of idolatry, deform this improved country; here are followers of the Lamas blended with the diſciples of Confucius. The articles exported from China are, tea, China-ware, lackered-ware, paper, and the water-colour, known by the name of Indian ink, raw ſilk, cotton, manufactured ſilks, gold and ſilver ſtuffs.

CIRCARS, NORTHERN, 5 provinces lying NE. of the Carnatic. Of theſe, Cicacole, Rajamundry, Ellore, and Condapilly, are in poſſeſſion of the Engliſh, and Guntoor is ſubject to the nizam of the Deccan. The firſt four occupy the ſea-coaſt from Chilka-Lake, on the confines of Cattach, to the N. bank of the Kiſtna, forming a ſlip of country 350 miles in length, and from 20 to 75 in breadth, having mountains and extenſive foreſts on one ſide, and the ſea on the other, while the extremities only are open. The Circars are 350 miles from Bengal, and 250 from Madras, and produce an annual revenue of 360,000l. that of Guntoor is 70,000l.

CIRCASSIA, one of the ſeven countries which lie between the Black Sea and the Caſpian, and comprehend an extent of territory, including nearly 10 degrees of longitude. They are a nation of mountaineers, who ſubſiſt by raiſing cattle, and fix themſelves on the banks of rivers for the ſake of paſturage and water. The Circaſſians of the Cuban are ſcarcely known, even to the Ruſſians, but by the general appellation of Cuban Tartars, in which they are confounded with their neighbours, the Abkas and Nogays. The Circaſſians are divided into three claſſes; the princes, the nobles, nobles, called uſdens, and the vaſſals, or people. They have never had any written laws, but are governed by a collection of ancient uſages. On great occaſions the whole nation is aſſembled; a meaſure is propoſed by the oldeſt of the princes, it is firſt debated among the uſdens, and afterwards by the deputies of the people, who are old men, and often poſſeſs greater influence than the prince himſelf. They have few manufactures; their agriculture hardly produces ſufficient for their own ſubſiſtence. Sheep and horſes form a principal part of their commerce, and ſlaves, which they take in their predatory excurſions. To ride, uſe their arms, to ſteal, and conceal their thefts, is their education; and the name of thief is only diſgraceful as it implies a detection. Girls are brought up by the mother. They learn to embroider, to make their own dreſs, and that of their future huſbands. The daughters of ſlaves receive the ſame education, and are ſold from 20 to 100l. Theſe are principally Georgians. Their food conſiſts of a little meat, paſte made of millet, and beer made of the ſame grain fermented. They have both the Bible and the Koran; but, not having letters of their own, thoſe who write their language make uſe of Arabic characters. This nation has been, of late years, gradually reduced under the dominion of Ruſſia, to which it is now almoſt wholly ſubject, and is included in the government of Caucaſus.

COMORA ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands in the Indian Ocean, lying oppoſite the coaſt of Zanguebar, in Africa, N. of the Channel of Moſambique, and NW. of Madagaſcar. They are four in number, Johanna or Anjoan, Mayotta, Mohilla, and Comora or Angazija. The mountains are lofty and richly clothed with wood, chiefly fruit-trees; fine ſtreams are numerous, and the graſs and trees are green throughout the year. They produce rice, peas, yams, purſlain, cocoa-nuts, plantains, oranges, oranges, lemons, citrons, limes, pine-apples, cucumbers, tamarinds, sugar-canes, and honey. Their animals are buffaloes, goats, tortoises, cameleons, large bats, hens, and a great variety of birds unknown in Europe. Though Johanna is not the largest island, the Arabs, who have settled here, exact tribute from all the others. They are about 3000 in number, profess the Mahometan religion, and are settled on the sea-coast. The original natives, in number about 7000, occupy the hills, and are frequently at war with them, as are also the natives of the other islands. In the interior part of the island is a lake accounted sacred by the natives; on this there is a number of ducks, which they hold in veneration. Being averse to conduct strangers there, they stipulate that all guns shall be left at a place 5 miles from the lake. The birds being thus kept in safety, become perfectly tame, and fearlessly approach those who go to see them. The Arabian part of the islanders detest this superstition, but dare not forbid the practice of it. The E. India ships often touch here for refreshments. The people on the coast speak English intelligibly. They preserve the language and manners of Arabia, and are not of so dark a complexion as the original natives. The Comora Islands lie between 11 and 13 degrees S. lat. and between 44 and 47 E. lon.

It is bounded on the W. and NW. by the ocean, on the N. by Ulſter, and on the E. and S. by Leinſter and Munſter. It is 130 miles in length, and 84 in breadth. It has no conſiderable rivers, beſide the Shannon; but has ſeveral convenient bays and creeks. It is fertile in many places, but thinly inhabited; but, by the introduction of the linen manufacture, the numbers of the inhabitants are beginning to increaſe.

CONNECTICUT, one of the five ſtates of New England. It is 73 miles long, and about 44 broad, and is bounded on the W. by New-York, on the N. by Maſſachuſets, on E. by Rhode-Iſland, and on the S. and SE. by the Sound, which divides it from Long-Iſland. Though ſubject to the extremes of heat and cold, and to frequent and ſudden changes of weather, the country is healthful, and the moſt populous in proportion to it's extent, of any of the United States: in 1790 the number of the inhabitants was 237,946. It reſembles a well-cultivated garden, producing, with moderate labour, the neceſſaries and conveniences of life in abundance. The inhabitants are of the religious denomination of Independents. It's principal rivers are the Connecticut, the Houſatonik, and the Thames. It contains the counties of Hartford, Newhaven, New-London, Fanfield, field, Windham, Litchfield, Middlesex, and Tolland. The river Connecticut, rises in the N. part of New Hampshire, and running nearly S. falls into the sea, at the NE. end of Long-Island Sound. Between Walpole, on the E. and Westminster on the W. side of the river, are the great falls, over which a bridge, 160 feet in length, was built in 1784, the first ever erected over this noble river, which is navigable above 40 miles for large vessels, and much farther for small ones.

CONSTANCE, the name of two lakes that separate Swisserland from Germany. The Upper Lake, or the Boden See, is 15 leagues long, and 6 where broadest. Through this lake the Rhine flows, and then enters the Lower Lake, or Zeller See, which is 16 miles long, and 10 in it's greatest breadth.

CONSTANCE, a city of Suabia, pleasantly seated on the Rhine, between two lakes of the same name. It has magnificent public buildings, and once flourished in commerce; but is now much reduced: a dead stillness prevails throughout the town; grass grows in the principal streets, and the inhabitants scarcely amount to 3000.

CONSTANTINA, a town of Andalusia.

CONSTANTINA, or COSTHINAH, anciently Cirta, capital of a district of Algiers.

Conſtantine, Cornwall, on a hill, between Helston and Falmouth.

CONSTANTINOPLE, the ancient Byzantium, one of the largest and most celebrated cities of Europe, standing at the SE. extremity of Romania, and capital of the Ottoman Empire. It is pleasantly seated between the Black Sea and the Sea of Marmora, on a neck of land separated from Natolia by a strait a mile in breadth. The grand signior's palace, called the Seraglio, is on the sea side, surrounded by walls flanked with towers, and is 7 miles in circumference, including the gardens. It contains, beside the public offices and the apartments of the sultan and the women, 162 odas, or apartments, for the Janizaries. In the castle of the seven towers, to which an eighth has been added, situated near the Sea of Marmora, state prisoners are confined. The bazars, or markets, are square buildings, covered with domes, and supported by arcades. The number of houses in Constantinople must be prodigious, since 30,000 of them have been destroyed by fire in a day, without greatly changing the aspect of the city. The houses in general are crowded with inhabitants, yet they have a mean appearance on the outside, where there are few or no windows, and the streets are narrow: even the palaces of the grandees have nothing remarkable on their outside, but within they are decorated with splendid and costly ornaments. Here are reckoned 3770 streets and lanes, which are never clean, and the inhabitants are visited by the plague almost every year. The inhabitants have been estimated at 800,000, of which about half are Turks, two-thirds of the other half Greeks, Armenians, and Franks, and the rest Jews. The great square, near the mosque of the Sultan Bajazet, is the place for public diversions, where the jugglers and mountebanks display their tricks. The street called Adrianople, is the longest and broadest in the city. The circumference of the city is by some said to be 15 miles, and by Tournefort 23 miles; to which, if we add the suburbs, it may be 34 miles in compass. The suburb, called Pera, is delightfully situated, and is the place where the ambassadors of England, France, Holland, and Venice reside. Constantinople is built in form of a triangle, and as the ground rises gradually, there is a view of the whole town from the sea, in which the palaces, mosques, bagnios, and caravanseras rising above the other houses, have a grand effect. The harbour is spacious and convenient. Constantinople is situated 112 miles ESE. of Adrianople, 670 SE. of Vienna, and 1500 ESE. of London. Lat. 41. N. lon. 28. 59. E.

CONSTANTINOPLE, THE STRAIT OF, anciently the Thracian Bosphorus, forms the communication between the Euxine or Black Sea, and the Propontis or Sea of Marmora. It is the boundary between Europe and Asia in this part, and is 20 miles long, and where narrowest, a mile and a quarter broad. The adjacent country is remarkably beautiful. On one side of the strait is situated Constantinople, and on the other Scutari, which is considered as a suburb to the city.

CORITA, a town of Leon.

CORK, a county of Munſter, in Ireland, 74 miles in length, and 42 in breadth, being the largeſt in the kingdom. It is bounded on the W. and SW. by Kerry and the ſea; on the N. by Limerick; on the E. by Waterford and a part of Tipperary; and on the S. by the ocean. It abounds with excellent harbours, and has many fine rivers, as the Blackwater, Lee, Bannon, Ilen, &c. The ſoil varies: in many parts it is fertile, and the country is pretty populous.

CORK, city of, the capital of the county, and the ſecond in Ireland for extent, trade, and number of inhabitants. It is a well-built place, and has improved ſurpriſingly of late years. It is ſeated on the river Lee, by which it is nearly ſurrounded, and by means of the different channels, veſſels come up into the different parts of the town. It's principal export is ſalt proviſions. During the ſlaughtering ſeaſon, which holds from Auguſt to the latter end of January, they kill and cure about 100,000 head of black cattle. Their other exports conſiſt of pork, tallow, hides raw and tanned, butter, candles, calves, lambs, and rabbits' ſkins, wool, linen and woollen yarn, and worſted and linen cloth. The country, adjacent to Cork, is hilly and beautiful, affording extenſive and diverſified proſpects. It is 15 miles from the ſea, about 50 nearly S. of Limerick, and 124 SW. of Dublin. Lat. 51. 54. N. lon. 8. 23. W.

CORK HARBOUR, or the COVE OF CORK, is about 7 miles below the town, and ſo ſpacious and deep, as to be capable of containing the largeſt veſſels, and the moſt extenſive fleets. The entrance is eaſy, and it is ſecure from currents and ſtorms. One ſide of Cork harbour is formed by Great Iſland, which is 4 miles long and 2 broad, and very fertile.

CORNWALL, a county of England, which forms the SW. extremity of Great Britain. It is bounded on the E. by Devonſhire; it's other parts are waſhed by the ſea. It's length, from E. to W. is 74 miles; it's breadth next to Devonſhire, is about 46, but it ſoon contracts, and is gradually narrowed into iſthmuſes: on the SW. it terminates in two promontories, the Lizard Point, and the Land's End. It contains 9 hundreds, and 161 pariſhes, between 1200 and 1300 villages, and 27 market towns. From it's vicinity to the ſea, it is expoſed to frequent ſtorms, but exempted from hard froſts and great heats. There is abundance of rainy and foggy weather; but the inhabitants are ſeldom troubled with agues or fevers. The ſpring ſhews itſelf in the buds and bloſſoms ſooner than in the other parts of England; but the harveſt is later, and the fruits have leſs flavour than in the midland counties. Here are ſome uncommon plants, and plenty of ſea herbs, as camphire, eringo, ros ſolis, &c. It is well ſituated for the herring and pilchard fiſheries, and the inhabitants fully avail themſelves of their local advantages. It derives, however, it's chief importance from it's minerals; theſe conſiſt of tin and copper. The copper mines are numerous and rich in ore, ſmall quantities of gold and ſilver have ſometimes been found; but it's tin mines are it's greateſt ſource of wealth; for theſe it has been long famous, and it's coaſts have been viſited by the Phenicians and Greeks in very remote antiquity; they were known ſeveral centuries before the Chriſtian era, and have been worked conſtantly ever ſince. With the metalline ores are found large quantities of mundic and arſenic; many ſorts of ſtones are alſo found here, particularly moorſtone, which is uſed both in buildings and for millſtones, and which, when poliſhed, appears ſplendid and beautiful; and in the cavernous parts of the rocks are found tranſparent cryſtals, called Corniſh diamonds, which are very brilliant when well poliſhed. The principal rivers are the Tamar, Camel, and Fale. As this county was one of the places to which the ancient Britons retreated, the Gaelic or Celtic language was long retained here, and has become extinct but very lately.

*COVENTRY, a large and populous city of Warwickſhire, noted chiefly for it's manufactures of ſilk ribands, as alſo of cloths, ſtuffs, thread, gauzes, camlets, and laſtings. It has communication by canals with the many different inland navigations, and with the Thames. The ſtory of Leofric, earl of Mercia, and lord of this place, heavily taxing the citizens, and only remitting them at the entreaty of Godina, his wife, on condition of her riding naked through the city, which he thought ſhe would never ſubmit to; but which, it is ſaid, ſhe performed with her long hair ſo diſpoſed as almoſt wholly to cover her body, is commemorated till this day, by the figure of a man peeping down into the ſtreet from one of the houſes. On that extraordinary occaſion, all the doors and windows were ſhut, and Camden ſays, that nobody looked after her. The tradition, however, is, that one would needs be peeping, and that he was thereupon ſtruck blind. The inhabitants celebrate this event by the exhibition of a mock proceſſion annually. DAMASCUS, now called SHAM, a very ancient city of Syria, and the capital of a pachalic, is built in the form of an oblong ſquare. Streams of water run acroſs the plain of Damaſcus, which fertilize the gardens, ſupply the public fountains, and run into every houſe. The caravanſaras have long galleries, ſupported by marble pillars, ſurrounding a large court. The private houſes, which are built of wood, have their fronts inwards, incloſing a court, and preſenting a dead wall to the ſtreets, although often richly adorned within. The caſtle is like a little town, having it's own ſtreets and houſes. The moſques are ſuperb and numerous. The ſtraight ſtreet, which runs acroſs the city and ſuburbs in a direct line, has ſhops on each ſide, where all ſorts of merchandiſe are ſold. The gardens and orchards extend ſeveral miles round, and are embelliſhed with ſummer-houſes, turrets, fountains, caſcades, and ſtreams of water. A manufactory of cutlery is carried on here. Damaſcus ſtands on the river Barida, in a very fertile plain, and contains about 80,000 inhabitants, of whom 15,000 are Chriſtians. It is 112 miles NNE. of Jeruſalem. Lat. 33. 45. N. lon. 37. 0. E.

Dargle, a romantic vale, or glen, in the county of Wicklow, about 10 miles from Dublin. The lofty mountains on each ſide are clothed with trees down to the edge of the river, which noiſily tumbles from rock to rock in the bottom, forming many caſcades; and the views from the eminences are grand and beautiful.

DARIEN, an iſthmus, or narrow country which joins N. and S. America, having the Atlantic on the NE. and the Pacific on the SW. It extends about 360 miles in length, and from 48 to 135 in breadth. It is generally conſidered as a province of Terra Firma, though it ſeems to be a part of N. America, and is of great importance to the Spaniards, as the wealth of Peru is brought annually to Panama and Porto Bello, and thence exported to Europe. Here are many high mountains, and the low grounds are frequently overflowed with the heavy rains. The natives build their houſes with hurdles plaiſtered over with earth, and have plantations along the banks of the rivers. They hang rings and plates of ſilver from their noſes, and beads, ſhells, &c. from their necks. The girls pick and ſpin cotton, and the women weave it; and the men fabricate very neat baſkets with canes, reeds, or palmetto-leaves dyed of ſeveral colours. Polygamy is allowed among them: they are fond of dancing to the ſound of a pipe and drum, and reckon their time by moons.

DUBLIN, the capital of Ireland, in the county of the ſame name, is a large, handſome, and populous city, ſeated on the river Liffey, or Anna Liffey. The appearance of this metropolis, the Bay of Dublin, and the ſurrounding country, on approaching them from the ſea, is grand and beautiful; after paſſing the Iſle of Lambay, and that of Ireland's Eye, which is ſmall, being a lofty and groteſque-looking rock, and the craggy mountain of Howth, in coming from the north; or, after paſſing the rocky cliffs of Bray, in approaching from the ſouth, the extenſive Bay of Dublin opens on the view; on the left are ſeen the hills and mountains of Wicklow; on the right, the gently riſing ſhores of Clontarf; the city, on a riſing ground, at the extremity of the bay, and at ſeveral miles diſtance, with domes and ſpires, terminates the view. The Caſſoon, a beautiful pharos, or light-houſe, 4 or 5 miles from the city, ſeems, like another Eddyſtone light-houſe, to riſe out of the ſea; from this, however, there is a broad and firm wall, or pier, nearly completed, reaching to Ringſend, to which the city is now nearly extended. On the N. ſide of the wall is the harbour where veſſels lie ſafe at anchor with an open ſea to the N. On the S. ſide of the wall, near the town, are wharfs principally uſed for bathing; and between theſe and the oppoſite ſhore is an extenſive and ſmooth ſtrand, which is dry at low water; there is a wharf alſo on the N. ſide of the river, for the purpoſe of bathing, and elegant baths on both ſides of the water. From Ringſend upwards, through the whole city, the river is embanked with quays on both ſides; as theſe are open nearly through their whole extent, they form beautiful walks of very extenſive range. The docks laid out on each ſide of the river, are ſufficiently capacious to hold ſeveral thouſands of veſſels. The ſtreets of Dublin are pretty regular, and well paved, the ſquares ſpacious and elegant, and the public buildings ſuperb. The town is ſupplied with water by means of pipes. A circular road, about 10 or 12 miles in length, encompaſſes the city, and the country around it is pleaſant. There is not yet in Ireland, as in England, a parochial proviſion for the poor; but there are, throughout the country, inſtitutions for their relief, ſupported by voluntary contributions. Of this ſort is the Houſe of Induſtry in Dublin. The trade of Dublin is extenſive, and ſince the emancipation of the country from the dominion of Great Britain, it has increaſed ſurpriſingly, and is ſtill improving; but the bar at the entrance of the harbour renders the approach of large veſſels difficult and dangerous. Some improvements, however, are projecting to remedy this great defect. Lat. 53. 23. N. lon. 6. 17. W.

DUKE OF YORK'S ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, WNW. of the Iſles of Danger, E. of New Guinea, and N. of the Friendly Iſles, was diſcovered by Commodore Byron in 1765. It is uninhabited, except by land-crabs and by ſea-fowl, which laſt were ſo unacquainted with man, as not to fear any miſchief from him, permitting the ſeamen to come ſo near them as to knock them down. Lat. 8. 0. S. lon. 172. 30. W.

DUKE OF YORK'S ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, between Lord Howe's Group and the SE. point of New Ireland, is about 10 miles long, of moderate height, and flat, and ſo fertile as to repreſent a perfect garden. The huts of the natives are made of bamboo, with fences before them, within which the ground is well cleared and trodden. In theſe incloſures the plantain, banana, yam, ſugar-cane, &c. are cultivated: beſide theſe the iſland produces beetle-nuts, mangoes, bread-fruit, guavas, and ſome nutmeg-trees. The animals are dogs, hogs, and poultry. The natives are ſtout, of a light copper colour, and go without clothes: none are ſeen with their hair of it's natural colour; they dreſs it with greaſe and powder. They chew the beetle, and uſe it with the chenan, and a leaf, as practiſed in the E. Indies, by which their mouths appear red, and their teeth, in time, become black. The only muſical inſtrument among them is compoſed of ſeveral hollow reeds, of different lengths, faſtened together, like the ſyrinx fyrinx of the ancients. Their canoes are neatly made, and have an outrigger. Lat. 4. 7. S. lon. 152. 42. E.

EDDYSTONE ROCKS, in the Engliſh Channel, ſo called from the great variety of contrary ſets of the tide or current which prevail near them. They are ſituated nearly SSW. from the middle of Plymouth Sound, diſtant from the port about 14 miles, and from Ram-Head, 12 and a half. As they lie nearly in the direction of veſſels coaſting up and down the Channel, they were very dangerous, and ſhips were ſometimes wrecked on them, before the light-houſe was eſtabliſhed here. They are ſo expoſed to the ſwells of the ocean, from all the ſouth weſtern points of the compaſs, that the heavy ſeas break on them with inconceivable fury. Sometimes, after a ſtorm, when the ſea is to all appearance perfectly ſmooth, the under current meeting the ſlope of the rocks, the ſea beats upon them in a terrific and magnificent manner, and even riſes above the light-houſe, overtopping it for the inſtant with a canopy of frothy wave. The preſent light-houſe is nearly 80 feet high, and has withſtood the moſt violent ſtorms, without ſuſtaining the ſmalleſt injury. It was erected in 1774.

*EDINBURGH, the capital of Scotland, ſituated, in the county to which it gives name, on three hills. It may properly be divided into the Old and New Towns. The ſituation of the Old Town is ſingular and ſtriking: it ſtands on the middle ridge or hill, which is narrow and ſteep, and terminated abruptly on the W. by the caſtle, a very ancient building, acceſſible only by a drawbridge, and erected on a lofty precipitous rock. The High-Street, a mile in length, and generally 90 feet broad, extends from the caſtle to Holyrood-Houſe. On each ſide of this ſteep hill the houſes form narrow lanes, which are called cloſes, and extend N. and S. Many of them are lofty, but ſo piled, as it were, upon each other, that they are neither commodious nor elegant. The New Town is ſituated on the north ſide of the Old, on an elevated plain, from which the ground deſcends to the S. and N. with a gentle declivity. It forms an aſſemblage of uniform ſtreets and ſquares, including ſeveral public buildings, the whole built entirely of ſtone, with conſiderable taſte and elegance. The buildings on the S. ſide of the Old Town, though inferior to thoſe on the N. are extenſive and ſtately. The moſt ſtriking object here, is the New College, building by public ſubſcription, on the ſcite of the old one, on a large and magnificent plan. The number of ſtudents in the univerſity, is eſtimated at 1000, of whom 400 ſtudy medicine. The city is governed by a lord provoſt, a guild council, and 25 common council. Here are 14 incorporated trades, each having it's deacon, or warden. The principal public buildings are the palace of Holyrood Houſe, the Royal Exchange, built in 1753, the Regiſter Office, the Phyſicians' Hall, Herriot's Hoſpital, founded in 1628, for the education of 140 poor boys, Watſon's Hoſpital, for the ſons of decayed merchants, an hoſpital for orphans, and a Royal Infirmary, incorporated by charter in 1736. Edinburgh, with it's dependencies, is ſuppoſed to contain 100,000 inhabitants, and is ſupplied with water, conveyed in caſt-iron pipes from Commiſton, 4 miles to the W. It is 2 miles S. of Leith, which is it's port, 54 WNW. of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and 389 N. by W. of London. Lat. 55. 58. N. lon. 3. 7. W.

EGYPT, a country of Africa, about 500 miles in length, and 160 in breadth. It is bounded on the S. by Nubia; on the W. by the deſerts of Barca, Fezzan, &c. on the N. by the Mediterranean; and on the E. by the Red Sea, and the Iſthmus of Suez. This country, ſo famous in hiſtory, ſeems not to have an extent proportionable to the deſcription which the ancients have given of it's having contained 20,000 towns or cities, and ſeveral millions of inhabitants, and of it's ancient kings keeping armies of 300,000 men, and executing thoſe prodigious works, the pyramids, the labyrinth, the immenſe grottos of Thebais; the obeliſks, temples, and pompous palaces; the Lake Mœris, and the vaſt canals, &c. but when we conſider the amazing fertility of the ſoil, enriched, as it has always been, by the overflowing of the Nile, and it's high ſtate of cultivation, theſe accounts ſeem more probable. Egypt has been ever noted for it's plenty of corn: and when the dearth was in all lands, in the days of Jacob, in the land of Egypt there was bread; and all countries came thither to buy corn. Except in our winter months, the heat is oppreſſive to all who are not accuſtomed to it, and they are viſited by the plague about once in ſeven years. The winds are ſometimes of ſuch extreme heat and aridity, that their influence proves mortal. During the time they laſt, the ſtreets are deſerted, and the inhabitants are almoſt blinded by drifts of ſand, which are ſo ſubtile, that they inſinuate themſelves into the cloſets and cabinets. No country in the world is better furniſhed with corn, rice, fleſh, fiſh, ſugar, fruits, and vegetables than Egypt. It is divided into the Upper, Middle, and Lower, which laſt comprehends the Delta, which produces oranges, lemons, figs, dates almonds, caſſia, and plantains, in great plenty. The animals found in Egypt are tigers, hyenas, antelopes, apes with the head like a dog's; camels, black-cattle, fine horſes, and large aſſes, crocodiles, the hippopotamus, or river-horſe, the cameleon, the ichneumon; oſtriches, eagles, hawks, pelicans, water fowl of various kinds, with the ibis, which reſembles a duck, and was deified by the ancient Egyptians, on account of it's deſtroying ſerpents and noxious inſects. They have a ſerpent here, called the ceraſtes, or horned-viper, the bite of which is mortal to thoſe who have not the ſecret of guarding againſt it. The practice of charming alluded to in Pſal. lviii. 4. 5. Eccleſ. x. 11. and Jerem. viii. 7. ſeems to prevail here till this day; for ſome of the natives can play with the ceraſtes, which to them is perfectly harmleſs, but when applied to a hen, or any other animal, it bites and inſtantly kills it. Since Egypt has been under the dominion of the Turks, it has been governed by a baſhaw, who reſides at Cairo. Under him are inferior governors in the ſeveral parts of the country. Thoſe in Upper Egypt are generally Arabs, who pay tribute to the Grand Signior, and make preſents to the baſhaw, governing deſpotically, and making war with each other: beſides theſe there are ſheiks, who preſide over particular places, and are maſters of a few villages. The preſent population of Egypt is computed at 2,300,000. The inhabitants are compoſed of four different races of people; the Turks; the Arabs; the Cophts, who are deſcended from the firſt Egyptians, which became Chriſtians; and the Mamlouks, who were originally Circaſſian and Mingrelian ſlaves, and being the only military force, are the real maſters of the country. The governors of the country are Mahometans, but the Cophts, and Greeks, and Latins, are Chriſtians of different ſects: and in the great towns there are numbers of Jews. A conſiderable trade was carried on here in E. India commodities, till the Portugueſe found the way to Aſia round the Cape of Good Hope. However, the merchants of Europe viſit the harbours in the Mediterranean, and import and export ſeveral ſorts of merchandiſe; and, from other parts, the natives get elephants teeth, gold-duſt, muſk, civet, ambergris, and coffee. The gold-duſt is brought from Negroland to Fez and Morocco, and thence to Cairo in caravans, over immenſe deſerts. The commodities which the merchants purchaſe here, are coffee, ſenna, caſſia, rhubarb, ſal ammoniac, myrrh, ſaffron, ſalt-petre, aloes, opium, indigo, ſugar, ſandal-wood, dates, cotton-cloth, &c. The largeſt of the pyramids takes up ten acres of ground, and is, as well as the others, built upon a rock: the external part is chiefly of large ſquare ſtones, of unequal ſizes, and the height of it about 700 feet: within theſe, and in their vicinity, are catacombs, wherein are mummies, or embalmed dead bodies, which are three or four thouſand years old. The complexion of the Egyptians is tawny, and the farther S. the darker, inſomuch that thoſe on the confines of Nubia are almoſt black. They are moſt of them indolent, eſpecially the richer ſort, who ſpend much of the day in drinking coffee, ſmoking tobacco, and ſleeping; and theſe are ſaid to be ignorant, proud, and ridiculouſly vain. The principal city is Cairo.

ELEPHANTA, or GALI POURI, an iſland on the W. coaſt of Hindooſtan, 5 miles from Bombay. The figure of an elephant of the natural ſize, cut coarſely in ſtone, appears on the landing place, from which an eaſy ſlope leads to a ſtupendous ſubterranean temple hewn out of the ſolid rock, 80 or 90 feet long, and 40 broad. The roof, which is cut flat, is ſupported by regular rows of pillars, about 10 feet high, with capitals reſembling round cuſhions, and at the farther end of it are three gigantic figures, mutilated by the Portugueſe, when this iſland was in their poſſeſſion. This immenſe excavation is accounted a bolder work than that of the pyramids of Egypt; and this, and a ſubterranean temple in the adjacent iſle of Salſette, are thought to be monuments of a ſuperſtition anterior to that of the Hindoos. Elephanta has been ceded to the Engliſh by the Mahrattas.

Engham, Berks, near Swinford.

ENGHIEN, a town of Hainault.

ENGIA, anciently EGINA, a town, iſland, and gulf of Turkey, between Livadia, and the Morea. The iſland is about 30 miles in circumference.

ENGLAND, the ſouthern, and moſt conſiderable part of the iſland of Great Britain, is bounded on the N. by Scotland; on the NE. and E. by the German Ocean; on the S. by the Engliſh Channel; and on the weſt by the principality of Wales, and the Iriſh Channel. It lies between 2 degrees E. and 6 W. longitude, and between 49 and 56 N. latitude. It is of a triangular form. From the Land's-End in Cornwall, to Berwick-upon-Tweed, it is 425 miles; from Berwick to S. Foreland in Kent, it's length is 345 miles, and thence to the Land's-End, it's greateſt breadth is 340. The country exhibits a variety of proſpects, varying from the extenſive plain, and gently riſing uplands, with the intervening vales, and gently flowing rivers, to the lofty mountains, craggy hills, deep dells, and tumbling torrents. Though in ſome parts there are large barren moors, and wide uncultivated heaths; on the whole, few countries have a larger proportion of land capable of culture, and there is none where agriculture is better attended to, or, indeed, where it is more neceſſary for the ſubſiſtence of the inhabitants. All the valuable productions, both animal and vegetable, of this country, have been imported at different periods, from the continent; and have been kept up and improved by conſtant attention. Overrun with woods, like the wilds of America, nuts, acorns, crabs, and a few wild berries, form the only vegetable food, which this country formerly afforded. The bear, the wolf, and the wild boar, now totally extirpated, roamed at large in the foreſts, large herds of ſtags ranged through the woods, roebucks bounded over the hills, and wild bulls ranged in the marſhy paſtures. By degrees, the woods were deſtroyed, in order to make way for cultivation, the marſhes were drained, and, the wild animals, invaded in their retreats, gradually diſappeared, and their places were ſupplied by the domeſtic kinds. England now poſſeſſes no other wild quadrupeds than ſome of the ſmaller kinds, ſuch as the fox, the wild cat, the badger, the martin, and others of the weaſel kind, the otter, the hedge-hog, the hare and rabbit; the ſquirrel, dormouſe, mole, and ſeveral ſpecies of the rat and mouſe. On the other hand, the various kinds of domeſtic animals, imported from abroad, have been reared to the greateſt perfection; and the improvements in the vegetable products of this iſland have been no leſs conſiderable. The rigours of winter, as well as the parching heats of ſummer, are felt here in a much leſs degree than in parallel climates on the continent, as the breezes from the ſea temper the ſeverities of the oppoſite ſeaſons; but the changes of weather are generally more frequent and ſudden, while new countries are clothed with ſo beautiful and laſting a verdure. It's ſituation, however, ſo far north, is leſs favourable to the ripening than to the growth of vegetable productions. The harveſts, eſpecially in the northern parts, often ſuffer from the rains, and the fruits fall ſhort of perfect maturity. The richeſt parts of the land are, in general, the middle and ſouthern: extenſive tracts in the northern parts are rather ſteril, and on the eaſtern coaſts, in many parts the ground is ſandy or marſhy. In the north the country is mountainous, and Cornwall and the adjacent counties contain many rough hilly tracts; but in theſe parts a variety of rich and valuable minerals and metals are found. The moſt conſiderable rivers are the Thames, Severn, Medway, Trent, Ouſe, Tyne, Tees, Wear, Merſey, Dee, Avon, Eden, Derwent, &c. The lakes are chiefly in the NW. counties; and thoſe of Weſtmorland and Cumberland, in particular, exhibit varieties of romantic, pictureſque, and grand ſcenery. The river fiſh, from the populouſneſs of the country, and the number of fiſhers, are in many parts, much diminiſhed; but the ſea is an inexhauſtible ſource, and the coaſts are enlivened by numerous inhabitants, who gain their chief ſubſiſtence from the deep. The manufactures and commerce of this country are prodigious, and abſorb almoſt the whole attention of many claſſes of people. The government is a mixture of monarchy, ariſtocracy, and democracy. The national church eſtabliſhment is epiſcopal; the 39 articles are interpreted by the clergy in general according to the liberal principles of Arminius, although the 17th article ſtrongly favours of the Calviniſtic creed. The diſſenters are numerous, and of different deſcriptions, and moſt of the rigorous penal laws, which were long in force againſt them, have been repealed.

ENGLAND, NEW, a country of North America, bounded on the W. by New-York; on the N. by Canada; on the E. by Nova Scotia and the Atlantic Ocean; and on the S. by the ſame ocean and Long Iſland Sound. It is in many parts hilly; but the country is fertile, well-cultivated and populous. It was firſt ſettled by the Puritans, who were driven from England, at different times, by perſecution. ETNA, MOUNT, or GIBELLO, a celebrated volcano in Sicily, on a mountain, which is 63 miles in circumference at the foot, and 10,954 feet in height. Not only the mountain, but all the neighbouring regions, appear to have been formed of the accumulating matter that has been ejected, from age to age, from this never-ceaſing furnace. The firſt eruption of Etna, recorded in hiſtory, is that mentioned by Diodorus Siculus, without fixing the period when it happened; but the ſecond, recorded by Thucydides, happened in the year 734 before the Chriſtian era. From this period, to the year 1447, there were 18 more eruptions. After this it ceaſed to emit fire near 90 years. The next eruption was in 1536; others followed in 1537, 1567, 1603, (which continued till 1636) 1664 (which continued 14 years) 1682, 1686, 1693, 1755, 1763, 1764, 1766, 1780, and 1787. Of all theſe eruptions, that of 1693 was, by far, the moſt deſtructive. It was attended with an earthquake that, in an inſtant, overturned the town of Catania, (though 10 miles diſtant from the mountain) and buried 18,000 perſons in it's ruins. It is well cultivated all round the foot, and covered with vines on the S. ſide; but on the N. there is nothing but large foreſts. The top is always covered with ſnow, though it never ceaſes to ſmoke, and often emits flames. The cinders, which are thrown out in ſmall quantities, ſerve for manure to the adjacent lands; but a large torrent does miſchief; and the new apertures which are ſuddenly made, from time to time, are alarming and dangerous to the inhabitants.

EUROPE, the least of the four general parts, or quarters of the world, is bounded on the W. by the Atlantic, on the N. by the Frozen Ocean, on the E. by Asia, and on the S. by the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. It is about 3300 miles in length, and about 2700 in breadth, and is situated between 10 deg. W. and 60 E. lon. and between 36 and 72 deg. N. lat. As it nearly all lies within the temperate zone, here is neither the excessive heat, nor the insupportable cold of the other parts of the continent. Though it does not afford the richest productions of the earth, nor abound in costly mines, it is generally much more populous and better cultivated than the other quarters of the globe. The wild animals are but few, except in the woods, rocks, and mountains of the north, and of the Alps, but the domesticated are numerous. The chief mountains are the Alps, Apennines, and Pyrenees. The principal rivers are the Danube, Dniester, Dnieper, Vistula, Volga, Dwina, Bog, Oby, Don, Scheldt, Rhine, Rhone, Seine, Loire, Garonne, Gironne, Tajo, Thames, and Severn. The principal lakes are those of Constance, Geneva, Lausanne, Wenner, Ladoga, and Onega. Europe contains Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Great Britain, Ireland, Russia, France, Germany, Poland, Spain, Italy, Portugal, Hungary, Switzerland, and part of Turkey, beside some islands in the Mediterranean and elsewhere. There are three empires, namely, those of Russia, Turkey, and Germany. The kings are those of Great Britain and Ireland, Spain, Portugal, Prussia, Denmark, Sweden, Sardinia, Bohemia, Hungary, and Naples, or the Two Scilies. There is also an archduke of Austria, and a great duke of Tuscany. The republics are those of France, Holland, Switzerland, Genoa, Geneva, Lucca, San Marino, and Ragusa. The languages are, the Italian, French, Spanish, and Portuguese, which are partly a corruption of the Latin; the German, Flemish, Dutch, Swedish, Danish, and English, which proceed from the Teutonic; the Sclavonian, which predominates in the language of Poland, Russia, Bohemia, and a great part of Turkey in Europe; the Celtic, of which there are dialects in Wales, Scotland, Ireland, the NW. of France, and Lapland; the modern Greek, and several others. The prevailing religious profession is the Christian, divided into the Greek, Romish, and Protestant churches. Mahometanism is the established

It is bounded on the W. by Leitrim and Donegal; on the N. by Donegal and Tyrone; on the E. by Tyrone and Monaghan; and on the S. by Cavan and Leitrim. It is navigable throughout it's whole length, by means of the lakes of Lough Erne; but travelling in it is difficult, in many places, by reaſon of the mountains and boggy grounds. The linen manufacture, and raiſing cattle, form the chief trade of this county. There is only one linen-market in it, but the country abounds with ſpinners and good flax. The ſales are averaged at 4 ool. annually. Enniſkillen is the capital.

FERRARA, a city and diſtrict of Italy, in the pope's territories. The Ferrareſe is now almoſt uncultivated, though formerly one of the fineſt countries in Italy. The air is unwholeſome, on account of the marſhes, and the inhabitants are too few to drain them. The town of Ferrara has a number of fine buildings, which evince it's former opulence; but the inhabitants, who are very few, in proportion to the extent of the place, bear every mark of poverty. Arioſto lies buried here in a Benedictine convent, and Taſſo was confined as an idiot in the hoſpital of St. Anne. It is ſeated on a branch of the Po, 25 miles NE. of Bologna. Lat. 44. 51. N. lon. 11. 50. E.

FERRITER's-ISLANDS. See BLASQUES.

FERRO, or HIERO, the moſt weſterly of the Canary Iſlands, remarkable for affording little water, except what is ſupplied by the fountain-tree, which grows here, and diſtils water from it's leaves, in ſuch plenty as to ſatisfy the wants of the inhabitants. Though not very fertile, the inhabitants raiſe corn, ſugar, fruits, and legumes, and feed a great number of cattle. The weſtern extremity of Ferro, was heretofore, by common conſent, accounted the place of the firſt meridian; but the national partialities having induced the moderns to adopt the capital of their own particular countries, as the place from which to reckon the longitude; the following is it's ſituation according to the Engliſh. Lat. 27. 47. N. lon. 17. 46. W.

FERRO, FARO, FAROL, or FAROER ISLANDS, 25 ſmall iſlands in the Northern Ocean, ſubject to Denmark, of which 17 only are habitable. Each of theſe is a lofty mountain riſing out of the waves, divided from the others by deep and rapid currents. Some are deeply indented with ſecure harbours; all are ſteep, and moſt of them exhibit tremendous precipices. The ſoil is ſhallow, but remarkably fertile; barley, the only corn grown here, yields above 20 for 1; and the graſs affords abundant paſturage for ſheep: but no trees, above the ſize of a juniper or ſtunted willow, are to be ſeen here. Vaſt quantities of ſea-fowl frequent the rocks, the taking of which furniſhes a perilous employ for the inhabitants. Their exports are ſalted mutton, tallow, gooſe-quills, feathers, eider-down, knit woollen waiſtcoats, caps, and ſtockings. Lat. between 61. 15. and 62. 10. N. lon. between 5. and 7. 26. W.

FERROL, a town of Galicia, with one of the beſt harbours in Europe; veſſels lying ſecure here from all winds. It is now a marine arſenal, and the principal ſtation for the Spaniſh navy, although, in 1751, it was a ſmall and dirty fiſhing-town. It is ſeated on a bay of the Atlantic Ocean, 20 miles NE. of Corunna. Lat. 43. 30. N. lon. 8. 4. W.

FEZ, a country of Barbary, in Africa, bounded on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean; on the N. by the Mediterranean Sea; on the E. by Algiers, and a part of Biledulgerid; and on the S. by Biledulgerid, Tafilet, and Morocco. It is near 400 miles in length, and from 70 to 280 in breadth. The air is temperate and wholeſome, and the country is mountainous, particularly to the W. and S. near Mount Mount Atlas. The foreſts abound with wild beaſts, and the lions are the moſt daring and ſavage in Africa. The ſoil is fertile and populous, producing citrons, oranges, dates, almonds, olives, figs, raiſins, ſugar, honey, and corn in abundance. Here are fine breeds of camels, beeves, ſheep, and other cattle; and the horſes are the fineſt in Barbary. It is watered by ſeveral rivers and ſtreams, and the chief town is Fez; but Sallee is the principal port for their cruiſers, or rovers, which are ſmall, but full of men.

FEZ, the capital of Fez, is one of the largeſt cities in Africa. It is compoſed of three towns, Beleyde, Old Fez, and New Fez. Old Fez is the moſt conſiderable, and contains about 80,000 inhabitants. The palaces are magnificent, and there are a great number of moſques, adorned with marble pillars and other ornaments. Here are two colleges for ſtudents, built of marble and adorned with paintings; one of theſe has 100 rooms. Here are alſo above 100 public baths. The houſes are moſtly built of brick or ſtone, and adorned with moſaic work; thoſe of brick are ornamented with glazing and colours, like Dutch tiles; and the wood-work and ceilings are carved, painted, and gilt. There is a court to every houſe, in which are ſquare marble baſins. The roofs are flat, and the inhabitants ſleep on them in the ſummer. The gardens are numerous, and full of fragrant flowers and ſhrubs. The inhabitants are clothed like the Turks. All the trades live in a ſeparate part of the city; and the exchange is as large as a ſmall town. From hence the caravans go to Mecca, carrying with them ready-made garments, Morocco leather, indigo, cochineal, and oſtrich feathers, for which they receive in return ſilks, muſlins, and drugs. Other caravans go to Tombucton, and the river Niger; one of which generally conſiſts of about 20,000 perſons. They travel over ſuch dry barren deſerts, that every other camel carries water. Their commodities are ſalt, cowries, wrought ſilk, Britiſh cloth, and the woollen manufactures of Barbary. Here are great numbers of Jews, but the bulk of the inhabitants are Moors, of a tawney complexion; there are alſo great numbers of negroes and their deſcendants. Fez is 160 miles nearly S. of Gibraltar, and 210 NNE. of Morocco. Lat. 34. 4. N. lon. 5. 35. W.

FEZZAN, a country of Africa, forming, according to the report of Mr. Lucas, (a miſſionary employed by the Aſſociation for exploring the interior of that continent) a circular domain in a vaſt wilderneſs, like an iſland in the ocean, is bounded on the N. by Tripoli; on the E. by the deſerts which divide it from Egypt; on the S. by Bornou, or Bernoa, and Caſhna; and on the W. by the Deſerts of Zaara, lying between 25 and 30 degrees N. latitude. It is an extenſive plain, encompaſſed by mountains, except to the W. Among their tame animals are the ſheep, cow, goat, camel, and a ſpecies of the domeſtic fowl of Europe. The wild animals are the oſtrich and antelopes of various kinds. Adders, ſnakes, ſcorpions, and toads are numerous, and ſometimes crawl into their houſes. The heats of ſummer are intenſe, when the wind is generally from the E. and S.; but if it change, as it ſometimes does, for a few days, to the W. or N. an agreeable and reviving freſhneſs takes place. The diſeaſes to which the inhabitants are moſt ſubject, are thoſe of the inflammatory and putrid kind. The ſmall-pox is common; violent head-aches attack them in the ſummer, and they are troubled with rheumatic pains. The natives are of a deep ſwarthy complexion; inclining in their perſons more to the negro than the Arab caſt. They are tall, but indolent and inactive. Their dreſs is ſimilar to that of the Moors in Barbary. Agriculture and paſturage are the chief occupations. The houſes are built of clay, with a flat roof compoſed of boughs of trees, on which a quantity of earth is laid. There are ſome venerable remains of ancient magnificence, and numerous ſmoking lakes, producing a ſpecies of foſſil alkali, called trona. In their common intercourſe, the ſhereef (or governor) and the pooreſt of the people converſe familiarly, and eat and drink together. In religion they are ſtrict, but not intolerant Mahometans, and ſeem tolerably comfortable under their government, which is monarchical. Gold-duſt conſtitutes their chief medium of payment; and value in that medium is always expreſſed by weight. The ſovereign, who is believed to be deſcended from their prophet, is tributary to the baſhaw of Tripoli. Mourzouk is the capital of this country, which is ſaid to contain 28 towns and 100 villages.

FLORENCE, a celebrated and beautiful city of Italy, the capital of Tuscany, situated in the middle of the Vale of Arno. The prospect here is bounded on every side by an amphitheatre of fertile hills, adorned with villages, country-houses, and gardens. It was first founded by the soldiers of Sylla, destroyed by Totila, and rebuilt by Charlemagne. For curiosities, this city is the principal in Italy, after Rome. The architecture of the houses, in general, is executed in a good taste, the streets are clean, and paved with large broad stones, chisseled so as to prevent the horses from sliding. The squares are spacious, and the palaces, churches, and other public structures, are in a splendid style of architecture, with pillars, statues, pyramids, and fountains, in almost every street. The city is divided into two unequal parts by the river Arno, over which there are four bridges within sight of each other. That called Ponte-del-la-Trinita is built of white marble, and adorned with 4 statues, representing the seasons, and other ornaments. The Florentine merchants were formerly men of vast wealth, and one of them, about the middle of the 15th century, built that grand fabric, which, from the name of it's founder, is still called the Palazzo Pitti. He failed under the prodigious expence of this building, which was immediately purchased by the Medici family, and has continued ever since to be the residence of the grand dukes of Tuscany. Besides the gardens, furniture, antique statues, paintings, &c. which are justly and universally admired; here are various other curiosities, as the cabinets of arts, of astronomy, of natural history, of medals, of porcelain, of antiquities, &c. In 1530, Alexander de Medicis was created Grand Duke of Tuscany, by the Emperor Charles V. and in 1737, the family of Medicis became extinct, when Florence and the dutchy of Tuscany fell to the Duke of Lorrain, afterwards emperor. Florence contains an university, and is 125 miles NNW. of Rome. Lat. 43. 46. N. lon. 11. 20. E.

FLORIDA, a country of N. America, bounded on the W. by Louisiana, on the N. by Louisiana and Georgia, on the E. by the Atlantic, and on the S. by the Gulf of Mexico. It is divided into E. and W. Florida. East Florida extends 350 miles from N. to S. and 160 from E. to W. West Florida is about 200 miles from E. to W. and about 50 from N. to S. St. Augustine is the capital of the former, and Pensacola of the latter. The country about St. Augustine is the least fertile; yet even here two crops of Indian corn are annually produced. The banks of the rivers are of a superior quality, and well adapted to the culture of rice and corn. The interior country, which is high and pleasant, abounds with wood of almost every kind; particularly white and red oak, pine, hiccory, cypress, red and white cedar. The intervals between the hilly parts are extremely rich, and produce spontaneously the fruits common to Georgia and the Carolinas. In many places, vines are successfully cultivated, and the ranges of cattle are immense. The king of Spain holds possession of Florida; but the Indians, or native Americans, are pretty numerous.

FOX ISLANDS, a group of islands in the Northern Archipelago, 16 in number. They are seated between the E. coast of Kamtschatka, and the W. coast of N. America, between 52 and 55 deg. of N. latitude, and are so named, on account of the great number of black, grey, and red foxes with which they abound. The inhabitants dress in furs, and ornament their heads with showy caps. They live together in societies of families united, which form what they call a race, who mutually aid each other. The inhabitants of the same island account themselves of the same race; and each looks upon the island as a possession which is common to all individuals of the same society. They have neither chiefs nor superiors, neither laws nor punishments. They feed upon the flesh of all sorts of sea animals, and generally eat it raw. When they dress their food, they make use of a hollow stone, in which they place the fish or flesh; they then cover it with another, and close the interstices with lime or clay; they then lay it horizontally on two stones, and light a fire under it; and by this mode of cookery the meat retains more of it's succulency. The meat intended for keeping is dried without salt, in the open air. They feed their children, when very young, with the coarsest flesh, and for the most part raw. If an infant cries, the mother immediately carries it to the water, or sea side, and, whether it be summer or winter, plunges it in naked, and holds it there till it is quiet. This inures them to the cold, and accordingly they go barefooted through the winter with no apparent inconvenience. The Russians trade with them, and call their islands the Lysie Ostrova.

From Spain, on the S. to Holland, it's extent is nearly 700 miles; and about 650 from the most easterly part of the department of the Lower Rhine, to the westerly part of that of Finisterre. The air, particularly in the interior terior parts of the country, is, in general, mild and wholesome, and their weather more clear and settled than in England: in the northern departments, however, the winters are intensely cold. The soil is agreeably diversified, and yields corn, wine, and oil: figs, prunes, and various highly-flavoured fruits; tobacco, hemp, flax, nanna, saffron, and many drugs. Silk is also produced in great plenty. The forests are extensive, and the mineral productions various. It's situation is favourable to commerce, and the inhabitants have long availed themselves of many of their natural advantages. The principal rivers of France are the Loire, the Rhone, the Garonne, the Seine, the Scheldt, the Rhine, the Somme, the Var, the Adour, &c. the advantages of which, in commerce and conveniency, are considerably improved by the artificial rivers and canals which have been executed. The most considerable mountains, besides the Alps and Pyrenees, are Mount Jura, the Cevennes, and Mount Dor. Wolves excepted, France contains few animals, wild or tame, that are not to be found in England. The present government of France is a republic, established professedly on the principles of equality; and they have not any political establishment of religion. The French, in their manners appear more affable and easy than their neighbours on the east; less trifling and ceremonious than those on the south; and not so absorbed in the pursuit of gain as the English and Dutch. Their polite, elegant, and easy language is more generally spoken than any other in the world.

FRANCE, ISLE OF, a ci-devant province of France, so called, because it was bounded by the rivers Seine, Marne, Oise, Aisne, and Ourque. Paris was the capital.

FRANCE, ISLE OF, or MAURITIUS, an island in the Indian Ocean, about 45 leagues in circumference. Indigo is the the general object of cultivation, and attempts have been made to rear cochineal, as the island abounds with the plant on which the insects lie, but a small bird destroys them. It's ebony is the most solid, close, and shining of any in the world. Here are numerous groves of oranges and citrons, and the pine-apple grows spontaneously in great perfection. Here is also abundance of black cattle, venison, and wild fowl, with potatoes, and other leguminous roots. There are two fine harbours, one on the E. side, and the other on the W. This island was first discovered by the Dutch, in 1598, who gave it the name of Mauritius, in honour of the prince of Orange. About 40 years after they began to form settlements here, but in the beginning of the present century the colony was withdrawn, and the island was taken possession of by the French, in whose hands it has remained ever since. The inhabitants, black and white, amount to about 20,000. Lat. 20. 10. S. lon. 57. 29. E.

FRANCFORT ON THE MAINE, a free imperial city of Franconia, noted for it's two great annual fairs. The Calvinists and Jews here are numerous, industrious, and rich, but lie under divers sumptuary restrictions. The magistrates are Lutherans. It is seated on the river Maine, which divides it in two, 15 miles NE. of Mentz, and 350 W. by N. of Vienna. Lat. 50. 1. N. lon. 8. 22. E.

FRANCFORT ON THE ODER, a town of the Middle Marche, Brandenburg, formerly imperial, but now subject to the king of Prussia. It is remarkable for it's three great fairs, and it's university. It is 48 miles SE. of Berlin. Lat. 52. 23. N. lon. 14. 39. E.

FRANCHE COMTE, a ci-devant province of France, now included in the three departments of Doubs, Jura, and Upper Saone.

FRANCHIMONT, a town of Liege.

Franchis, Sussex, NW. of Burwash.

Francks, Kent, E. of the Grays.

FRANCOIS, CAPE, a flourishing town, with a fine harbour, in the N. part of St. Domingo. It is the capital of the French part, properly so called, of that island. Lat. 19. 46. N. lon. 72. 18. W.

FRANCONIA, a circle of Germany, nearly in the centre of the empire, extending about 95 miles from E. to W. and 88 from N. to S. The middle parts are fertile in corn, wine, and fruits, but the frontiers are mountainous, woody, and little cultivated.

Franckton, Warwickf. on the Fosse, near Dunsmore-Heath. Franckton, English and Welch, Shropshire, near Ellesmere.

FRANEKER, or FRANKER, a town of W. or Dutch Friesland, with an university. The public buildings are magnificent. It is 7 miles SW. of Lewarden. Lat. 53. 11. N. lon. 5. 33. E.

Frankfield, Sussex. Frankby, Cheshire, between the Dee and the Mersey.

FRANKENDAL, a town of the Lower Palatinate, circle of the Lower Rhine.

FRANKENSTEIN, a town of Musterburg, Silesia; also a town of Darmstadt, circle of the Upper Rhine; and a town of Deux Ponts, circle of the Upper Rhine.

FRIENDLY ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, ſo named by Captain Cook, in 1773, on account of the friendſhip that ſeemed to ſubſiſt among the inhabitants, and their courteous behaviour to ſtrangers. Taſman, the Dutch navigator, firſt touched here in 1643, and gave the names of New Amſterdam, Rotterdam, and Middleburg, to three of the principal iſlands. Cook explored the whole cluſter, conſiſting of more than 60. New Amſterdam is the largeſt, extending 21 miles from E. to W. and 13 from N. to S. It is interſected by ſtraight and pleaſant roads, with fruit-trees on each ſide, which provide ſhade from the ſcorching heat of the ſun. Middleburg is called Eooa by the natives, who have given the names of Annamooka, Tongataboo, Hapaee, and Leefooga, to the other principal iſlands. The general appearance of theſe iſlands conveys an idea of exuberant fertility; the ſurface, at a diſtance, ſeems entirely clothed with trees of various ſizes, ſome of which are uncommonly large, particularly the tall cocoa-palm, and a ſpecies of fig, with narrow-pointed leaves. It is almoſt wholly laid out in plantations, in which are ſome of the richeſt vegetable productions; ſuch as bread-fruit, cocoa-nuts, plantains, yams, ſugar-cane, and a fruit like a nectarine. Here are moſt of the articles which the Society Iſlands produce, and ſome which they have not. Their breed of hogs is as ſcanty as thoſe of the Society Iſlands; but they received from the Engliſh ſome valuable additions to their ſtock, both of vegetables and animals. Their domeſtic fowls are as large as thoſe of Europe. Among the birds are parrots and parroquets, of various ſorts, which furniſh the red feathers, ſo much eſteemed in the Society Iſles. The numerous reefs and ſhoals afford ſhelter to an immenſe variety of ſhell-fiſh. Agriculture, architecture, boat-building, and fiſhing, are the employments of the men; to the women is confined the manufacture of cloth. Theſe iſlands lie between 19. 40. and 21. 30. deg. S. lat. and between 170. and 180. of W. lon. Under the general name of Friendly Iſlands, are ſometimes comprehended Boſcawen's, Keppel's, and Prince William's Iſlands, and the group of the Hapaee Iſlands, amounting altogether to about 150.

Frieraing, Eſſex, near Ingateſtone and Writtle. Friers, Hertfordſ. near King's-Langley. Friers, Herts, E. of Standon. Friers, Kent, NE. of Aylsford. Friery, Somerſetſhire, E. of Bruton.

FRIESACH, a town of the Middle Marche, Brandenburg.

FRIESLAND, EAST, a principality of Germany, bounded on the N. by the German Ocean; on the E. by the county of Oldenburg; on the S. by the biſhoprick of Munſter; and on the W. and SW. by the ſea and Groningen. It conſiſts chiefly of meadow land, and is ſubject to Pruſſia. The counts of Friefland becoming extinct in 1744, Frederick II. king of Pruſſia, ſeized the country in conſequence of the expectancy granted to the houſe of Brandenburg, in 1694, by the Emperor Leopold. George II. however, king of England, as duke of Brunſwick Lunenburg, laid claim to the principality, on account of an hereditary union entered into, in 1691, with Prince Chriſtian Eberhard, making his pretenſions known to the regency of E. Friefland, and the aulic chamber of the empire; but the king of Pruſſia, denying the authority of the emperor or regency, and threatening to ſupport his actions by force of arms, he was ſuffered to remain in poſſeſſion.

FRIESLAND, WEST, one of the United Provinces, bounded on the S. and W. by the Zuyder Zee and Overyſſel; on the N. by the German Ocean; and on the E. by Groningen and Overyſſel. In Ooſtergow there is good paſturage, and ſome arable land; Weſtergow is more fenny, but abounds with fiſh and fowl. There is a dialect uſed here more nearly reſembling the old Engliſh than any other in Europe. A part of North Holland is alſo called Weſt Friefland.

Frikelton, Northumberl. a member of Woller. Frikley, Yorkſ. W. Riding, NE. of Barneſley. Frilford, Berks, near Wantage. Frilſham, Berks, N. of Winchcomb. Frimley, Surry, SW. of Bagſhot. Frin- den, Yorkſh. SW. of Halifax. Fringe, Norf. NE. of Spelſham. Fringford, Oxf. NW. of Biceſter. Frinton, Eſſex, near Gunfleet.

FUEGO, FOGO, or ST. PHILIP, one of the Cape de Verd Iſlands, in the Atlantic Ocean, higher than any of the reſt. There is a volcano at the top of it, which burns continually, vomiting out fire and ſmoke, throwing up huge pieces of rock to a vaſt height, and ſometimes pouring vaſt torrents of brimſtone down the ſides of the hill. The Portugueſe, who firſt inhabited it, brought negroes with them, and a ſtock of cows, horſes, and hogs; but their deſcendants are not now diſtinguiſhable guiſhable in their complexions from the negroes. The iſland is fertile in maize, gourds, water-melons, wild figs, oranges, and apples. A great number of goats run wild upon the mountains. It is about 330 miles W. of Cape de Verd, and 90 W. of St. Jago. Lat. 14. 54. N. lon. 24. 34. W.

GALICIA, a name given to a country in the S. and SW. of Poland, consisting of that part of Little Poland, which is S. of the river Vistula, almost the whole of Red Russia, and a slip of Podolia. It is now incorporated into the Austrian dominions under the appellation of the kingdoms of Galicia and Lodomeria. The mountainous parts produce fine pasture; the plains are mostly sandy, but abound in forests, and are fertile in corn. The principal articles of traffic are cattle, hides, wax, and honey, copper, lead, iron, and salt. It extends from E. to W. 280 miles in length, and from 60 to 100 in breadth. Lemburg or Leopold is the capital.

GALICIA, a province of Spain, bounded on the N. and W. by the sea; on the E. by Asturia and Leon; and on the S. by Portugal. It has more harbours than any other province of Spain, and the forests yield wood for ship-building. The principal produce is wine, flax, and citrons; and here are also good pastures. The population is not numerous. The mineral productions are copper and lead; Corunna and Ferrol are the principal ports, and St. Jago di Compostella is the capital.

GALICIA, NEW, or GUADALAJARA, an audience of Mexico, which contains a province of the same name, and 5 others. The air is temperate, and there is abundance of corn and pulse; here are also mines of silver and copper. The principal towns are Zamora, Leon, Lagos, and Guanamota.

GALISTIO, a town of Spanish Estramadura, 10 miles E. of Coria.

GALL, ST. or ST. GALLEN, a considerable town in the Thurgau, Switzerland. The inhabitants are uncommonly industrious, and carry on an extensive commerce, arising from their manufactures of linen, muslin, and embroidery. Here is a rich and celebrated abbey, whose abbot is chosen by the 72 Benedictines, who compose the chapter. The government of the town, which is entirely Protestant, is aristo-democratical; the subjects of the abbot, whose territory is distinct, are Catholics. To the library belonging to this abbey, we are indebted for the preservation of Petronius Arbiter, Silius Italicus, Valerius Flaccus, and Quintilian, copies of which were found here in 1413. The town is seated in a narrow barren valley, between two mountains, 57 miles NE. of Zurich. Lat. 47. 26. N. lon. 9. 20. E.

GALWAY, a county of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, 75 miles long, and 46 broad. It is bounded on the N. by the counties of Mayo and Roſcommon; on the E. by Roſcommon, King's County, and Tipperary; on the S. by Clare and Galway-Bay; and on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean. A great part of it is fertile, being a warm limeſtone ſoil, which rewards the induſtry of the huſbandman and ſhepherd; but it is very coarſe towards the N. and W. and, in thoſe parts, rather thinly inhabited. The weſtern coaſt contains many well-ſheltered harbours, and is bordered with green iſlands and rugged rocks.

*GALWAY, a town of Ireland, in a county of the ſame name, of which it is the capital. It is advantageouſly ſituated for foreign trade on Galway-Bay, in the Atlantic. The ſalmon and herring fiſheries are carried on here with great ſpirit, and employ ſeveral hundred boats; the quantity of kelp manufactured and exported is conſiderable, and the increaſe of the linen manufacture, though of late introduction, is become very important. It is 49 miles WSW. of Athlone, and 108 W. by S. of Dublin. Lat. 53. 12. N. lon. 9. 12. W.

GALWAY-BAY, a large bay one the coaſt of Galway, Connaught. The N. ſide of it is foul and dangerous for veſſels; but it is more ſafe on the S. ſide. Small ſhips only can ſail up to the town of Galway.

GAMBIA, a large river of Africa, falling into the Atlantic Ocean. The ſource is not known; but it is navigable for ſloops 600 miles up the country. At the mouth of the river the land is low, but, higher up, the country is rocky and mountainous, and covered with woods. Along it's banks are great numbers of towns, inhabited by various nations. The Arabic language and Mahometan religion generally prevail in the country N. of this river: on the S. the inhabitants are Pagans. The Gambia annually overflows it's banks, like the Nile. The mouth is in lat. 13. 28. N. and lon. 16. 20. W.

Ganford, Durham, near Barnard-Caſtle.

GANGES, a large and celebrated river of India, has it's ſource in two ſprings near Mount Kentaiffe, in Thibet; the ſtreams of which, after running 300 miles in a weſtern direction, inclining to the N. turn to the S. unite their waters, and form what is properly called the Ganges, from the Hindoo word Ganga, which ſignifies the river. This great body of water now forces a paſſage through Mount Himmaleh, (a chain or ridge of mountains extending from Cabul along the N. of Hindooſtan, and through Thibet) and ſapping it's very foundation, ruſhes through a cavern, and precipitates itſelf into a vaſt baſin, which it has worn in the rock, at the hither foot of the mountains. From this ſecond ſource (as it may be termed) of the Ganges, it takes a SE. direction through the country of Sirinagur, until, at Hurdwar, it finally eſcapes the mountainous tract in which it has wandered about 800 miles. From Hurdwar, where it enters the plain country, it flows with a ſmooth, navigable ſtream, during the remainder of it's courſe to the Bay of Bengal, which it enters by ſeveral mouths. In it's courſe through theſe delightful plains, it paſſes by Furrackabad, Allahabad, Benares, Patna, &c. and receives 11 rivers, ſome of which are equal to the Rhine, and none ſmaller than the Thames, beſides others of inferior note. In the annual inundation of this immenſe river, the country is overflowed to the extent of more than 100 miles in width: nothing appearing above water but villages and trees, excepting, very rarely, the top of an elevated ſpot, the artificial mound of ſome deſerted village, which appears like an iſland. The riſe of the water is on an average 31 feet. The Ganges is a moſt beneficial river, diffuſing plenty by means of it's living productions, enriching the lands, and affording an eaſy conveyance for the produce of it's borders. The Hindoos holds it's waters in high veneration. It is viſited annually by pilgrims from all parts of Hindooſtan, and happy are thoſe accounted whoſe lot it may be to periſh in it's ſtreams.

GANJAM, a town of Hindooſtan, in Cicacola, one of the northern circars, ſubject to the Engliſh. It lies on the Bay of Bengal, near the SW. end of the Chilka Lake. Lat. 19. 22. N. lon. 85. 20. E.

GENEP, in the ci-devant Auſtrian Brabant.

GENEVA, an ancient, large, and populous city and republic, on the confines of France, Savoy, and Switzerland. It is ſeated at the SW. extremity of the lake of the ſame name, and is divided by the Rhone, which paſſes through the lake, into two unequal parts. Geneva, which lies partly in the plain on the borders of the lake, and partly on a gentle aſcent, is irregularly built. The houſes are lofty; and many that ſtand in the trading parts of the city, have arcades of wood, which are raiſed even to the upper ſtories. Theſe arcades, ſupported by pillars, give a gloomy appearance to the ſtreet, but are uſeful to the inhabitants in protecting them from the ſun and rain. Geneva contains 24,000 people; but the territory or diſtrict is ſmall. They are in alliance with the Swiſs Cantons, and after various revolutions, with which they have been agitated from time to time, for near two centuries, the democrats, in 1789, prevailed over the ariſtocracy, of which the ſenate and ſyndics, or chief magiſtrates, were compoſed. A conſtitution is now eſtabliſhed favourable to the rights of the people, and perhaps judiciouſly modelled between the two extremes. The citizens of both ſexes are remarkably well inſtructed, "and it is not uncommon," ſays Dr. Moore, "to find mechanics, in the intervals of labour, amuſing themſelves with the works of Locke, Monteſquieu, Newton, and other ſimilar productions. GENEVA, LAKE OF, an expanſe of water between Switzerland and Savoy, extending from Geneva to Villeneuve, 54 miles in length, and 12 in breadth, in it's wideſt part. From Geneva to the environs of Lauſanne, the country ſlopes for a conſiderable way, to the margin of the lake, and is enriched with a variety and profuſion of natural beauties. Near Lauſanne, the banks riſe conſiderably, and form a terrace; a few miles beyond the town is a rapid deſcent. The colour of the water is extremely beautiful, clear, and at a diſtance ſeems of a fine blue. The depth is various; the greateſt yet found, by ſounding, is 160 fathoms. It abounds in fiſh, remarkable as well for their excellence as ſize. Like all inland lakes, incloſed within high mountains, it is ſubject to ſudden ſtorms. Among the birds which frequent this lake, are the tippet grebes, which appear only in the winter. They are obliged to build in other places, this lake being almoſt deſtitute of reeds and ruſhes, in which they form their floating neſts.

GENOA, a city of Italy, capital of a republic of the ſame name. It is about 10 miles in circumference, and built like an amphitheatre. The houſes are five or ſix ſtories high and well built, and the palaces and public buildings are numerous. The harbour is large and good, and, to preſerve it, they have built a mole 560 paces in length, 13 in breadth, and 15 feet above the level of the water. It is populous, and one of the moſt commercial places in Italy. They have manufactures in velvet, pluſh, damaſk, and ſilk; and the banking buſineſs is carried on extenſively. The ordinary revenue of this republic is 200,000l. a year. The government is purely ariſtocratic. There is a great council, conſiſting of 80 perſons, choſen out of the old and new nobility, in whom the legiſlative authority reſides, but the adminiſtration of affairs is veſted in a ſenate, conſiſting of a doge, and 12 ſenators. The nobility are often engaged in trade, and generally keep two or three years' proviſion of corn, wine, and oil in their magazines, which they ſell to the people in ſcarce times. The Genoeſe fleet, anciently celebrated for it's victories over the Saracens, Piſaneſe, Venetians, Spaniards, and Turks, and a long time maſters of Sardinia, Malta, Majorca, Minorca, Candia, Cyprus, the Crimea, and other places in the Archipelago, is now reduced to ſix gallies. Genoa was bombarded by the French in 1684, and taken by the Auſtrians in 1746; the oppreſſion of theſe laſt, however, was ſuch, that the inhabitants ſuddenly roſe and expelled their conquerors, who again beſieged the city the next year, but without effect. It is 62 miles SE. of Turin, and 224 NW. of Rome.

GENOA, the republic, extends along the Gulf of Genoa for about 120 miles; but it's breadth is unequal, varying from 8 to nearly 20 miles. On the land ſide it is bounded by Piedmont, Montferrat, Milan, Placentia, Parma, and Modena. It is populous, well cultivated, and fertile near the ſea; but the inner parts are mountainous and barren.

GEORGIA, a fertile country of Aſia, called by the Perſians Gurgiſtan, and by the Turks Gurtſhi, is ſituated between the Black and Caſpian Seas, and comprehends the ancient Iberia, and part of Colchis. It is ſurrounded by the new Ruſſian government of Caucaſus, Circaſſia, Dagheſtan, Schirvan, and Armenia. It is divided into 9 provinces. Of theſe, 5 form the kingdom of Georgia; the other 4 form the principality of Imeritia. The hills are covered with foreſts of beech, oak, aſh, cheſnuts, walnuts, and elms, encircled with vines, growing ſpontaneouſly, and producing vaſt quantities of grapes. Cotton alſo grows ſpontaneouſly, as well as the fineſt fruit-trees. Rice, wheat, millet, hemp, and flax, are raiſed on the plains, almoſt without culture. The valley ſafford fine paſturage; the rivers are full of fiſh, the mountains abound with minerals, and the climate is delicious. The rivers, however, being fed by mountain-torrents, are always too rapid or too ſhallow for the purpoſes of navigation. Georgia was formerly one kingdom, the inhabitants of which were Chriſtians, but ſince 1639, when it was conquered by the Perſians, the country is divided between two native princes, by themſelves called kings, but by the ſophi ſtyled governors. Each of theſe has a guard of Mahometan horſe in their pay. The Georgians are ſkilled in the uſe of the bow, and are thought to be the beſt ſoldiers in Aſia. Their dreſs reſembles that of the Coſſacks; but thoſe that are wealthy affect the habit of the Perſians. They uſually dye their hair, beards, and nails red. The women, who are celebrated for their beauty, ſtain the palms of their hands of the ſame colour, and paint their eyebrows black, in ſuch a manner as to form one entire line, while the reſt of the face is coated with white and red. Being generally educated in convents, they can read and write; qualifications uncommon with the men, even of the higheſt rank. The inhabitants are Chriſtians, partly of the Greek, partly of the Armenian church. Here are alſo Tartars, Oſſi, Armenians, and a conſiderable number of Jews. Of theſe laſt, ſome have villages of their own; others are mixed with the Georgian, Armenian, and Tartarian inhabitants, but never with the Oſſi. They pay a ſmall tribute above that of the natives. There are only four conſiderable towns, Teflis, Gori, Suram, and Ali.

GEORGIA, the moſt ſouthern of the United States of N. America, is bounded on the E. by the Atlantic Ocean; on the S. by E. and W. Florida; on the W. by that part of Louiſiana which lies to the E. of the river Miſſiſſippi; and on the N. by S. Carolina and the Tenaſſee government. It extends about 420 miles from E. to W. and from 140 to 240 from N. to S. It contains nearly 90,000 ſouls, and is divided into 11 counties, namely, Chatham, Effingham, Burke, Richmond, Wilkes, Liberty, Glynn, Camden, Waſhington, Greene, and Franklin. The whole coaſt is bordered with iſlands, which, as well as the continent, being well wooded, the channel between them is extremely pleaſant. The principal towns are Auguſta, Savannah, Brunſwick, Sunbury, Frederica, Waſhington, and Louiſville. The principal rivers are the Savanna, Ogeechee, Alatamaha, St. Mary, &c. The winters in Georgia are mild and pleaſant, ice and ſnow being ſeldom ſeen. The ſoil varies according to ſituation, and different degrees of improvement. By culture are produced rice, indigo, cotton, ſilk, Indian corn, potatoes, oranges, figs, pomegranates, &c. Rice, at preſent, is the ſtaple commodity; but great attention begins to be paid to the raiſing of tobacco. Auguſta is the capital.

GEORGIA, SOUTH, the principal of a cluſter of iſlands in the S. Atlantic Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Cook, in 1775, and ſo named by him. It is 31 leagues long, and it's greateſt breadth is about 10. It abounds in bays and harbours, which the vaſt quantities of ice render inacceſſible the greateſt part of the year. Two rocky iſlands are ſituated at the N. end, one of which was a craggy cliff, nearly perpendicular, containing the neſts of many thouſand ſhags: the other was called Bird Iſland, from the innumerable flocks of birds ſeen near it, from the largeſt albatroſſes down to the leaſt petrels. Several porpoiſes and ſeals were alſo obſerved. Here are perpendicular ice cliffs of conſiderable height, like thoſe at Spitſbergen. From theſe, pieces were continually breaking off, and floating out to ſea: the valleys were covered with ſnow, and the only vegetation obſerved, was a bladed graſs growing in tufts, wild burnet, and a plant like moſs. Not a ſtream of freſh water was to be ſeen on the whole coaſt. A great number of ſea-calves and ſea-bears were found, and flocks of penguins, ſome of which weighed 38 pounds, and meaſured 3 feet 3 inches in length. The only bird ſeen appeared to be a ſpecies of the lark: no quadruped was found. Theſe iſlands lie between 53. 57. and 54. 57. S. lat. and between 38. 13. and 35. 34. W. lon.

GERMANY, a country of Europe, bounded on the W. by Swiſſerland, France, the Belgic Provinces, and the German Ocean; on the N. by Sleſwick and the Baltic Sea; on the E. by Pruſſia, Poland, and Hungary; and on the S. by Hungary, the Adriatic, Italy, and Swiſſerland; being about 640 miles in length, and 550 in breadth. The air is temperate and wholeſome, and the productions various. Germany contains many princes, ſecular and eccleſiaſtic, who are independent of each other; and there are great numbers of free imperial cities, which are ſo many little republics, governed by their own laws, and united by a head, who has the title of emperor. The prerogatives of the imperial dignity were formerly much more extenſive than they are at preſent. At the cloſe of the Saxon race, in 1024, they exerciſed the right of conferring all eccleſiaſtical benefices in Germany, of receiving their revenues during a vacancy; of ſucceeding to the effects of inteſtate eccleſiaſtics; of confirming or annulling the elections of the popes; of aſſembling councils, and of appointing them to decide on the affairs of the church; of conferring the title of king on their vaſſals; of granting vacant fiefs; of receiving the revenues of the empire; of governing Italy as it's proper ſovereigns; of erecting free cities, and eſtabliſhing fairs; of aſſembling the diets of the empire, and fixing the time of their duration; of coining money, and conferring the ſame privilege on the ſtates of the empire; and of adminiſtering juſtice within the territories of the different ſtates. In 1437, the emperors were reduced to the power of conferring all dignities and titles, except the privilege of being a ſtate of the empire; of appointing once, during their reign, a dignitary in each chapter, or religious houſe; of granting diſpenſations with reſpect to the age of majority; of erecting cities, and conferring the privilege of coining money, and of calling the meetings of the diet, and preſiding in them. The electors of the empire are 3 eccleſiaſtical, namely, the archbiſhops of Treves, Cologne, and Mentz; and 5 ſecular, namely, the king of Pruſſia, as elector of Brandenburg; the king of Great Britain, as elector of Hanover; the preſent emperor, as king of Bohemia; the elector of Saxony; and the elector palatine of the Rhine. Each elector bears the title of one of the principal officers of the empire; the elector of Hanover, for inſtance, being "arch-treaſurer and elector of the holy Roman empire." To prevent the calamities of a conteſted election, a king of the Romans has often been choſen in the life-time of the emperor, on whoſe death he ſucceeds to the imperial dignity as a circumſtance of courſe. Although chief of the empire, the ſupreme authority reſides in the diets, which are compoſed of 3 colleges; that of the electors, that of the princes, and that of the imperial towns. When that of the electors and that of the princes diſagree, that of the towns cannot decide the difference; but they are obliged to give their conſent, when they are of the ſame opinion. The diets have the power of making peace or war, of ſettling general impoſitions, and of regulating all the important affairs of the empire. But their deciſions have not the force of law till the emperor give his conſent. All the ſovereigns of Germany have an abſolute authority in their own dominions, and can lay taxes, levy troops, and make alliances, provided they do not prejudice the empire. They determine all cauſes definitively, unleſs in ſome particular caſes, in which an appeal may be made. Theſe appeals are to two courts, called the Imperial Chamber and the Aulic Council. Germany is divided into 9 circles, each of which comprehends ſeveral other ſtates; the princes, prelates, and counts of which, with the deputies of the imperial towns, meet together about their common affairs. Each circle has one or two directors and a colonel; the directors have a power of convoking the aſſembly of the ſtates of their circle, and the colonel commands the army. The 9 circles are thoſe of Auſtria, Bavaria, Suabia, Franconia, Upper and Lower Rhine, Weſtphalia, and Upper and Lower Saxony. The principal rivers are the Danube, Rhine, Elbe, Weſer, Maine, and Oder. The language of Germany is a dialect of the Teutonic, which ſucceeded that called the Celtic. The 3 principal religious profeſſions are the Romiſh, Lutheran, and Calviniſtic. The firſt prevails in the dominions of the emperor, in the eccleſiaſtical electorates, and in Bavaria; the ſecond in the circles of Upper and Lower Saxony, great part of Weſtphalia, Franconia, Suabia, the Upper Rhine, and in moſt of the imperial towns; the third in the dominions of the landgrave of Heſſe Caſſel, and of ſome other princes.

GHERIAH, a town of Hindooſtan, on the W. ſide, or Pirate Coaſt, in the country of Concan. It was the principal port of Angria, a famous piratical prince, whoſe fort here was taken, and his whole fleet deſtroyed, by Admiral Watſon and Colonel Clive, in conjunction with the Mahrattas, in 1756. It is 80 miles NNW. of Goa. Lat. 16. 45. N. lon. 73. 7. E.

GHILAN, a province of Perſia, extending along the SW. coaſt of the Caſpian Sea, and ſuppoſed to be the Hyrcania of the ancients. It has Schirvan to the N. Aderbeitzan and part of Irac-Agemi to the W. and Mezanderan to the SE. The ſea forms it's boundary on one ſide, and on the other are high mountains, covered with various ſorts of fruit-trees. In the higheſt parts of them are deer, bears, wolves, leopards, and tigers, which laſt, the Perſians have, it is ſaid, a method of taming, and hunt with them as with dogs. It is extremely fertile, producing ſilk, oil, wine, rice, tobacco, and excellent fruits in abundance. This province was ceded to Ruſſia in 1723, but not annexed to the Ruſſian dominions till 1780. Reſhd is the capital.

GIBRALTAR, a town of Andaluſia, in Spain, near a mountain of the ſame name, formerly called Calpe, which, with Mount Abyla, on the oppoſite ſhore of Africa, were called the Pillars of Hercules. It has been in the poſſeſſion of the Engliſh ſince the year 1704, who keep a garriſon here; which is cooped up in narrow limits, and receives ſupplies of proviſions from England and Barbary. The town is ſo ſtrong by art and nature, as probably to bid defiance to the utmoſt efforts of an enemy. Here are upwards of 300 pieces of cannon mounted on the works. Gibraltar contains ſeveral ſtreets, one of which is pretty ſpacious and well paved; the others are narrow and dirty. It has 3 gates. It is built at the foot of a barren rock, or craggy hill, which riſes 1400 feet above the level of the ſea, in a peninſula, which can be approached only by a narrow paſſage, between the mountain and the ſea. Acroſs this the Spaniards have drawn a fortified line, to prevent the garriſon from having any communication with the country. The Engliſh here, excluſive of the garriſon, amount to about 2000, and the Spaniards, Portugueſe, Genoeſe, and Jews to about as many. Here is one Engliſh and one Spaniſh church, and a Jews ſynagogue. The road is not ſafe againſt ſtorms, nor convenient for refitting veſſels, though they may be laid on their ſides for careening; the harbour is formed by 2 moles, one of which is 300 feet in length. On the ſummit of the rock is a plain, whence there is a fine proſpect of the ſea, on each ſide the Strait, of Barbary, Fez, and Morocco, and of Seville and Granada, in Spain. The Strait of Gibraltar is 24 miles in length, and 15 in breadth, and a ſtrong current always runs through it from the ocean to the Mediterranean. Gibraltar is 25 miles N. of Ceuta, and 49 SE. of Cadiz. Lat. 36. 6. N. lon. 5. 22. W.

Gibſide, Durham, SW. of Ravenſworth-Caſtle. Gibſmere, Notting. a hamlet of Southwell. Gidding, Magna and Parva, Hunt. N. of Winwick. Gidding-Steeple, Hunt. N. of Winwick. Gidley, Devonſ. near Dartmore-Foreſt.

GLACIERS, a name given to ſome extenſive fields of ice in Switzerland. The Glaciers may be divided into two ſorts; the Lower occupying the deep valleys ſituated in the boſom of the Alps, and termed, by the natives, Valley of Ice; and the Upper, which clothe the ſummits and ſides of the mountains. The Lower Glaciers are the moſt conſiderable in extent and depth, ſome ſtretching ſeveral leagues in length. At the higher extremity, they are bordered by inacceſſible rocks, and on the other extend into cultivated valleys. The thickneſs of the ice varies from 80 to 100 feet, and in ſome parts extends to upwards of 600 feet. Theſe immenſe fields of ice uſually reſt on an inclined plain; being puſhed forward by the preſſure of their own weight, and but weakly ſupported by the rugged rocks beneath, they are interſected by large tranſverſe chaſms, and preſent the appearance of walls, pyramids, and other fantaſtic ſhapes, obſerved at all heights and at all ſituations, wherever the declivity exceeds 30 or 40 degrees. But in thoſe parts, where the plain on which they reſt is horizontal, or only gently inclined, the ſurface of the ice is nearly uniform; the chaſms are few and narrow, and the traveller croſſes on foot without much difficulty. The ſurface of the ice is not so slippery as that of the frozen ponds, or rivers; it is rough and granulated, and is only dangerous in deep descents. The following is a simple and natural theory relative to the formation of the Glaciers: An immense quanity of snow is continually accumulating in the elevated valleys, included within the Alps, as well from that which falls from the clouds, during nine months in the year, as from the masses which are incessantly rolling from the steep sides of the circumjacent mountains. Part of this snow, which is not dissolved during summer, impregnated with rain and snow-water, is frozen during winter, and forms that opaque and porous ice of which the Lower Glaciers are composed. The Upper Glaciers may be subdivided into those which cover the summits, and those which extend along the sides of the Alps. Those which cover the summits owe their origin to the snow that falls at all seasons of the year, and which remains nearly in it's original state, being congealed into a hard substance, and not converted into ice; for, in so cold a region, there cannot be melted a quantity of snow sufficient to impregnate with water the whole mass which remains undissolved. The substance which clothes the sides of the Alps is neither pure snow, like that of the summits, nor ice which forms the Lower Glaciers, but is an assemblage of both. It contains less snow than the summits, because the summer heat has more power to dissolve it, and because the liquified snow descending from above, the mass is penetrated with a larger quantity of water. It contains more snow than the Lower Glaciers, because the dissolution of the snow is comparatively less. Hence the ice is even more porous, opaque, and less compact than the ice of the Lower Glaciers; and is of so doubtful a texture, as renders it, in many parts, difficult to decide whether it may be called ice or frozen snow. Thus there is a regular gradation from the snow on the summits, to the ice of the Lower Glaciers, formed by the intermediate mixture of snow and ice, which becomes more compact, and less porous in proportion as it approaches the Lower Glaciers, until it unites and assimilates with them.

Gladmore, Herts, near Hadley. Glaiston, Rutland, near Bisbrook. Glamford, Norfolk, SW. of Clay.

GLAMORGANSHIRE, a county of South Wales, bounded on the N. by Carmarthenshire and Brecknockshire, on the E. by Monmouthshire, and on the S. and W. by the Bristol Channel. It extends from E. to W. 48 miles, and 26 from N. to S. is divided into 10 hundreds, and contains 1 city, 8 market-towns, and 118 parishes. On the N. side of this county, where it is mountainous, the long continuance of the snow renders the air sharp; but the country, being more level on the S. side, it is there milder, more populous, and bears large crops of corn, with very sweet grass; whence it has been called the Garden of Wales. Cattle abound in all parts, there being fruitful valleys among the mountains, that yield very good pasture. Here are also lead, coal, iron, and limestone. It's principal rivers are the Rumney, which separates it from Monmouthshire, the Teafe, Elwy, Neath, and Tawy. Cardiff is the principal town, and Swansea the most commercial one; but the assizes for the county are held at Cowbridge. See GOWER.

GLARIS, or GLARUS, one of the thirteen cantons in Switzerland, entirely surrounded by the Alps, except toward the N. It has the canton of Schweitz on the W. and the Grisons on the E. It is a mountainous country, producing cattle, cheese, butter, and a variety of uncommon plants, plants, minerals, metals, and large ſlates. The government is democratic; every perſon at the age of ſixteen, has a vote in the landſgemeind, or general aſſembly, which is held annually in the month of May, in an open plain. This aſſembly ratifies new laws, lays contributions, enters into alliances, declares war, and makes peace. The executive power is veſted in a landrath, or council, compoſed of 48 Proteſtant members, and 15 Roman Catholics. The landamman, or chief of the republic, is choſen alternately from among the Proteſtants and Romaniſts, who live together in great harmony, amicably fill together the chief offices of ſtate, and ſucceſſively make uſe of the ſame houſe for their aſſemblies for public worſhip. The population amounts to about 16 or 17,000 ſouls.

GLARIS, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of the canton of the ſame name. It is ſeated on the river Linth, 18 miles E. of Schweitz. Lat. 46. 56. N. lon. 9. 1. E.

* GLASGOW, a city of Scotland, in the county of Lanerk, which, from it's extent, and from the beauty and regularity of it's buildings, may juſtly be eſteemed the ſecond city in the kingdom. It is ſeated on the N. bank of the Clyde, over which it has two bridges, one of them an elegant new one of 7 arches, 500 feet long, and 32 wide; it was completed in 1772. The ſtreets are clean and well paved, and ſeveral of them interſecting each other, at right angles, produce a very agreeable effect. The four principal ſtreets thus divide the city nearly into four equal parts; and the different views of them, from the croſs, or centre of interſection, have an air of magnificence. Here are a few magnificent public buildings, and ſeveral charitable eſtabliſhments, particularly the Merchant's Hoſpital, and that of the town. Here is a celebrated univerſity; the ſingle college belonging to which is an elegant and commodious building. The inhabitants of Glaſgow and it's ſuburbs are computed to be above 50,000. A conſiderable trade was formerly carried on here in tobacco and rum, but it has been lately on the decline. Their cotton manufactures rival thoſe of Mancheſter in cheapneſs and elegance; and, before the late univerſal check to that branch of buſineſs in both kingdoms, it is ſaid, that cotton goods were manufactured in Glaſgow and it's vicinity, to the annual amount of 2,000,000l. ſterling. A pottery is likewiſe carried on here, that emulates, in beauty and elegance, the Staffordſhire ware. Printing-types are well executed here, and the glaſs manufactory has been very ſucceſsful. Glaſgow has the advantage of two canals, beſides the Great Canal, that joins the Clyde to the Forth. It is 10 miles SW. of Dumbarton, and 35 W. of Edinburgh. Lat. 55. 52. N. lon. 4. 2. W.

GLASGOW, PORT, a town on the S. ſide of the Clyde, erected in 1710, in order to ſerve as the ſea-port of the city of Glaſgow. It has an excellent harbour, with a grand pier; but ſtill moſt of the ſhips that trade to the W. Indies, ſail from Greenock, and return to that port. The herring-fiſheries in the Frith of Clyde, form a conſiderable part of it's trade. This port is ſituated 21 miles W. by N. of Glaſgow.

Glaſon, Cumberland, in the pariſh of Boulnets. Glaſon, or Glaſton, Caſtle, Lancaſhire, SE. of Dalton. Glaſſenbury, Kent, in Cranbrook pariſh. Glaſſenbye, Cumberland, near Kirk Oſwald.

Glaſslough, in Monaghan, Ulſter. Glaſsnevin, in Dublin. It is an agreeable village, ſituated on a riſing ground, 2 miles from the city of Dublin.

GLASTONBURY, a pretty large and well-built town of Somerſetſhire, ſeated near a high hill called the Tor. Here was formerly one of the moſt magnificent abbeys in the world, the domains and revenue of which were immenſe. It is nearly encompaſſed with rivers, and was formerly called the Iſle of Avalon, into which no perſon whatever, not even a biſhop, or prince, was allowed to enter, without leave from the abbot, to whom this abſolute power was granted by Canute the Dane. There were 61 abbots, who governed it ſucceſſively for near 600 years. Richard Withing, the laſt, for refuſing to ſurrender his abbey to Henry VIII. and acknowledge his ſupremacy, was condemned at Wells, and carried, with two of his monks, on a hurdle, to the Tor, where he was hanged in his robes. His head was ſtuck up over the gate of his abbey, and his body, quartered, was expoſed, in like manner, at Bath, Wells, Bridgewater, and Ilcheſter. Extenſive ruins of the abbey are ſtill remaining; but they have been much diminiſhed for the ſake of the ſtones; however, the curious ſtructure called the abbot's kitchen, is entire, and is of a very unuſual contrivance. The principal manufacture here is ſtockings. Nearly adjoining, on a high steep hill, is placed a tower, from which there is an extensive prospect, and it serves as a landmark to seamen in the Bristol Channel. It is 6 miles SW. of Wells, and 129 W. by S. of London. Lat. 51. 8. N. lon. 2.40. W. Market on Tuesday.

Glatendon, Northumberland, in the barony of Wark. Glatting, Sussex, NW. of Midhurst. Glatton, Huntingdonshire, NW. of the Saltreys.

GLATZ, a town of Silesia, formerly of Bohemia, seated on the river Neisse. It is capital of a principality of the same name, 45 miles in length, and 25 in breadth, which was ceded to the king of Prussia, in 1742, by the queen of Hungary. It has mines of coal, silver, and iron, good quarries, and plenty of cattle, with several mineral springs. The town is 45 miles SW. of Breslaw, and 82 E. by N. of Prague. Lat. 50. 21. N. lon. 16. 40. E.

* GLOUCESTER, a city of Gloucestershire, seated on the E. side of the Severn, where, by two streams, it forms the Isle of Alney. It is a large and populous place, and has been lately much improved; it's four principal streets are greatly admired for the regularity of their junction in the centre of the town. Here is a good stone bridge over the Severn, the lowest down that river, with a quay, wharf, and custom-house. Great quantities of pins are made here. It is 25 miles NE. by N. of Bristol, and 106 W. by N. of London. Lat. 51. 50. N. lon. 2. 16. W. Market on Wednesday.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the W. by Monmouthshire and Herefordshire; on the N. by Worcestershire; on the E. by Warwickshire and Oxfordshire; and on the S. by Wiltshire and Somersetshire. It extends from NE. to SW. more than 60 miles, but is not more than 26 in breadth. It contains one city, 27 market-towns, and 218 parishes. The soil and appearance of this county vary in different parts, but the air is healthy throughout; sharp in the E. or hilly part, which contains the Cotswold hills, but mild in the rich Vale of Severn, which occupies the centre. The W. part, which is the smallest district, is varied by hill and dale, and chiefly occupied by the Forest of Dean, which was once full of oak-trees; but the iron-works have consumed a great part of them. The staple commodities are woollen cloths and cheese. It's principal rivers are the Severn, the Warwickshire Avon, the Lower Avon, the Wye, Thames, Coln, and Lech.

GLOUCESTER ISLAND, an inhabited island in the S. Pacific Ocean, 6 miles long and 1 wide. The men appeared armed with long pikes or poles. Lat. 19. 15. S. lon. 140. 4. W.

GLOGAW, a town of Oppeln, Silesia.

GLOMME, a river of Aggerhuys, in S. Norway, which passes by Elvedal, Koningstinger, &c. and flows into the North Sea at Frederickstadt. From the outlet of Lake Mioss, to Frederickstadt, it's streams are intercepted by such frequent cataracts and shoals, as, in some places, to render it necessary to drag the trees, which are floated down, over the ground. About 50,000 trees are annually floated down this river to Frederickstadt.

Glowslow, Leic. S. of Hallaton. Glusburne, Yorks. S. of Skipton. Gluvias, Cornwall, near Penryn. Glyford, Cornwall, SE. of Bodmin. Glyman, Cornwall, near Columb-Magna. Glyne, Sussex, S. of Lewes. Glyneburn, Sussex, near Lewes.

Glynn, or Glin, in Limerick, Munster. Glyn of Agerlow, and Glyn-Caum, in Cork, Munster. Glyn of the Downs, a romantic dale in the county of Wicklow, Leinster, so narrow as to admit of little more than the road which passes through it, and the small gurgling river which runs near the side of it. It is 13 miles from Dublin. Glyn Wood, in the parish of Donoghmore, in Down, Ulster.

Gnarmack, Cornwall, NW. of Truro.

GNESEN, or GNESNO, a town late of Kalisch, Poland, but now of West Prussia.

Gnosall, Staff. upon Rowley-Water, between Knightley and Willbrighton.

GOA, a city on the W. coast of Hindoostan, capital of the Portuguese settlements in India, and the seat of a viceroy. It stands on an island about 22 miles in length, and 6 in breadth, near a fine river, capable of receiving ships of the greatest burden, which lie within a mile of the town. That port, as well as the whole island, is defended by many castles and towers, furnished with abundance of cannon. The buildings here are of stone, and splendid, with numerous convents, nunneries, and ecclesiastical houses. The viceroy's palace is a grand building, erected over one of the gates of the city, which leads to a spacious street, terminated by a beautiful church. Here is a stately hospital; and in the shops about the marketplace may be had the produce of Europe, China, Bengal, and other countries. In the houses they generally make use of clear oyster-shells, instead of glass, for windows. The air within the town is unwholesome, but the banks of the river are pleasant, and adorned with many handsome structures. The tract between the town and the sea is thickly planted with villages and fine seats, and abounds with tropical trees and fruits. The inquisition is yet continued in this part of the Portuguese dominions. Though the houses here make a shewy appearance, they are but poorly furnished. The inhabitants lively chiefly on greens, fruit, roots, bread, rice, and fish, though they have hogs and fowl in plenty. Goa has few manufactures, or productions for commerce; their principal trade is in arrack, which they distil from the sap of the cocoa-nut tree. It has been in the hands of the Portuguese since the year 1510, when it was taken by General Albuquerque. Lat. 15. 28. N. lon. 73. 45. E.

The great rains which fall in June, part of July, Auguſt, September, and October, ſwell the rivers to a dangerous degree of depth and rapidity, and render the land exceedingly fertile, eſpecially in fruits. They make white wine of their grapes, and have yearly two crops of rice and other grain. The diamond mines here are the moſt conſiderable in the world. The black merchants buy parcels of ground to ſearch for theſe precious ſtones in. They ſometimes fall in meeting with any; and at others they find immenſe riches. They have alſo mines of ſalt and fine iron; and curious calicoes and chintſes. Hydrabad is the capital, but the city and fortreſs of Golconda was formerly the reſidence of the kings of this country.

GOLDBERG, a town of Lignitz, Sileſia.

Goldbroke, Suffolk, near Eye. Goldcliff, Monmouthſ. on the S. ſide of the county.

GOLD COAST OF GUINEA, a maritime country of Africa, in which are more forts and factories of European nations, than in any other part of the coaſt of Africa. It reaches from the river Suera da Coſta on the W. to the river Volta on the E. and includes ſeveral diſtricts, in which are two or three towns or villages, ſcattered along the ſea-ſhore. The whole Gold Coaſt is about 180 miles in length. The negro merchants are generally very rich, and trade with Europeans in gold. The domeſtic animals are bulls, cows, ſheep, and goats; the laſt of which are innumerable, and their fleſh is excellent. The beef and mutton are not good. The principal countries are Ancobar, Axem, Anta, Commenda, Fetu, Sabo, Adown, Agouna, Acra, Acambore, Labadde, Fantin, Incaſſan, Ningo, and Sabre.

GOMBROON, or GAMBRON, a ſea-port of Lariſtan, Perſia, called alſo Bandar Abaſſi, ſeated on a Bay 9 miles from the iſland iſland of Ormus. The beſt houſes are built with bricks dried in the ſun, and are flat at the top, with a ſquare turret, having holes on each ſide for a free paſſage of the air. Thoſe who ſtay in town during the ſummer ſleep upon theſe roofs. Other houſes, or rather huts, are made with the boughs of palm-trees, and covered with leaves. The ſoil around it is barren, but proviſions, brought from other countries, are plentiful. Through all the laſt century, and at the beginning of the preſent, this town was the port of Schiras, and of the S. of Perſia. At preſent, trade is very low here, nor is there a ſingle European counting-houſe in the city. The Dutch for a while continued to trade here, but ſince they formed a ſettlement in the iſland of Karek, they have entirely deſerted Gombroon. Lat. 27. 20. N. lon. 57. 0. E.

GOMERA, one of the Canary Iſlands, about 20 miles long and 10 wide, 6 leagues SW. from the Iſland of Teneriffe. It's capital, of the ſame name, has a good harbour, better than in any of the other iſlands where the Spaniſh W. India fleets often take in wine, fruits, and other proviſions. It is well cultivated and fertile. Lat. 28. 6. N. lon. 17. 8. W.

GONDAR, the metropolis of Abyſſinia, is ſituated on a hill of conſiderable height, and contains about 10,000 families, in time of peace. The houſes are chiefly of clay, and the roofs thatched in the form of cones, the uſual conſtruction within the tropical rains. The inhabitants are of an olive complexion, and profeſs Chriſtianity. Their patriarch depends upon that of Alexandria; but they appear as jealous of the European Chriſtians as of the Muſſelmans. They have no ſhops; but expoſe their merchandiſe to ſale, upon mats, in a large ſquare: gold and rock-ſalt form their medium of barter. The habit of the better ſort is made of ſilks and cottons, but the common people wear nothing but drawers. It is 180 miles SE. of Sennar, and near 1000 S. of Grand Cairo. Lat. 12. 34. N. lon. 37. 33. E.

GOOD HOPE, CAPE OF, the moſt ſouthern point of the continent of Africa, and very rocky, lies in 34. 29. S. lat. and 18. 23. E. lon. Upwards of 30 miles to the N. of it is the Cape Town, which is neat and well-built, riſing in the midſt of a deſert, encompaſſed by black and dreary mountains. The ſtorehouſes of the Dutch E. India company are ſituated next the water, and the private buildings lie beyond them on a gentle aſcent. The ſtreets are broad and regular, interſecting each other at right angles; and the houſes are moſtly built of ſtone, and white-waſhed. Here are two churches, one for the Calviniſts, the other for the Lutherans. The religion of the ſlaves is as little regarded here as in the colonies of other European ſtates. They are treated, however, with humanity, and are lodged and boarded in a ſpacious houſe, where they are kept at work. Theſe ſlaves, a few Hottentots excepted, were originally brought from the E. Indies, and principally from Malacca. Another great building ſerves as an hoſpital for the ſailors belonging to the Dutch E. India ſhips, which touch here. It is ſituated cloſe to the company's garden, and is an honour and ornament to the town: the convaleſcents have free acceſs to theſe gardens, where they enjoy the benefit of a pure, wholeſome air, perfumed by the fragrance of a great number of rich fruit-trees, aromatic ſhrubs, and odoriferous plants and flowers; they have likewiſe the uſe of every production in it. The inhabitants are fond of gardens, which they keep in excellent order. The heavy draught-work about the Cape is chiefly performed by oxen, which are brought to an uncommon degree of docility and uſefulneſs. The inhabitants, in general, travel in a kind of covered waggon, drawn by oxen, which better ſuit the roughneſs of the country, than more elegant vehicles; but but the governor, and some of the wealthier people, keep coaches, which are much in the English style, and are drawn by six horses. The ground behind the town gradually rises on all sides toward the mountains, called the Table-Mountain, which is the highest; the Sugar-Loaf, so named from it's form; the Lion's-Head; Charles-Mount; and James-Mount, or the Lion's-Rump. The view from the Table-Mountain is extensive and picturesque; and all along the valleys are scattered a number of fine plantations. The cultivated country, beyond the mountains, is of great extent, and forms six different establishments. The soil is uncommonly productive, and the climate favourable. The spring commences here in October. Provisions are very reasonable. A late traveller says, that he saw 13 pounds of mutton sold for about 6d. sterling; a whole ox for 2 guineas and a half, or 3 guineas; and corn and other things in proportion. Fish, and game brought from the country, are abundant. In September, 1795, the town and colony surrendered to an English squadron under Sir G. K. Elphinstone, seconded by about 8000 land forces under Majors General Clarke and Craig, on terms of capitulation. The loss of the English amounted to 4 men killed, and a few officers and men wounded.

GOODWIN SANDS, noted sand-banks off the coast of Kent, lying eastward of the Downs, and about 4 or 5 miles from the S. Foreland. As they run parallel with the coast for 3 leagues together, at the distance of 4 or 5 miles from it, they add much to the security of the Downs, as a road, as they break off the force of the sea on the E. and S. and SW. but when the wind blows hard at SE. or at E. by. N. or ENE. ships are often driven from their anchors, and are either forced on these sands, or obliged to take shelter in Sandwich Bay, or Ramsgate Pier. These sands occupy the space that was formerly a large tract of low marshy ground, belonging to Goodwin, earl of Kent, father of king Harold, and was afterwards given to the St. Augustin monastery at Canterbury; but the abbot, neglecting to keep in repair the wall that defended it from the sea, the whole tract was inundated. Great part is dry at low water.

GUINEA, a country of Africa, of which little is known, except the coaſt, thence called the Coaſt of Guinea. It is divided into the Lower and the Upper. The Lower part is commonly called Congo. The Upper comprehends the diſtricts of Sierra Leone; the Grain Coaſt, or Malagueta; the Tooth Coaſt; the Gold Coaſt; the Slave Coaſt; and Benin. It is unhealthy for Europeans, though the natives live to a conſiderable age. The latter in general go almoſt naked, and are ſaid to be an innocent, inoffenſive, and hoſpitable people, except ſuch as have been corrupted by the Europeans. Theſe have factories on the coaſt, and promote feuds, frauds, and civil wars among the natives, by every means of ſeduction, kidnapping, and coercion, that they may get the priſoners to carry off as ſlaves. Two or three European ſettlements are at length formed in Guinea, under the governments of Great Britain and Denmark, for the purpoſe of carrying on an honeſt and advantageous trade with the natives, and for promoting their civilization. The productions of this country are the variety of rich tropical fruits, gums, hard woods, grain, gold, ivory, wax, &c.

HANS TOWNS, or HANSEATIC UNION, a name given to a confederacy of ſeveral ſea-ports of Europe, which formed, at the time, the principal part of the commerce of Europe. This aſſociation extended from the North Seas and the Baltic, along the whole coaſt of Europe to Meſſina in the Mediterranean, and included in it cities of Poland, Norway, Germany, Holland, England, France, Spain, Portugal, and the different ſtates of Italy. The deſign of this aſſociation was, at firſt, their common defence againſt the pirates, who were numerous in the North Seas and the Baltic; for a time they were much encouraged by the different governments of Europe, and had conſiderable privileges granted them. In the year 1200, there were ſeventy-two cities in the liſt of Hans Towns; and ſo powerful was this alliance, that their ſhips were often hired by different princes to aſſiſt them againſt their enemies; at length they grew ſo formidable, particularly from the 14th to the 16th century, as to give umbrage to ſeveral princes, who commanded all the different cities within their juriſdiction to withdraw from the union. This immediately ſeparated the cities of England, France, Spain, and Italy, from the Hans. Theſe, on the other hand, excluded ſeveral others, and put themſelves under the protection of the empire, making a decree that none ſhould be admitted into their ſociety, but ſuch cities as ſtood within the limits of the German empire. For a while the confederacy was thus continued where it had firſt begun, but was at length reduced to Bremen, Lubeck, Hamburg, and Dantzick, each of which cities now carries on a ſeparate trade for itſelf.

HAVANNAH, a ſea-port of the iſland of Cuba, on the NW. part of it, oppoſite Florida. The harbour is capable of containing commodiouſly 1000 veſſels, without either cable or anchor. The entrance to it is by a narrow channel, ſtrongly fortified with platforms, works, and artillery, for half a mile, the length of the paſſage. On the E. ſide of the mouth of the channel is Moro Fort, mounted with 40 pieces of cannon, almoſt level with the water; and on the oppoſite ſide a ſtrong fort, called the Puntal, adjoining to the town. All the ſhips that come from the Spaniſh American ſettlements, rendezvous here on their return to Spain. In 1700, the town was computed to contain 26,000 inhabitants, Spaniards, mulattoes, and negroes; a number which muſt have been conſiderably increaſed ſince. The houſes are elegant, built of ſtone, and ſome of them ſuperbly finiſhed; and the public buildings are rich and magnificent. Proviſions here are extravagantly dear; neither is their freſh meat of the beſt kinds, excepting their pork. This inconvenience is not owing to any defect in the ſoil of the iſland, but to the indolence of the Spaniards. In 1762, the Havannah was taken by an Engliſh ſquadron and army, under Sir G. Pocock and Lord Albemarle. The Moro Fort was taken by ſtorm, after a ſiege of 29 days. Twelve men of war and three frigates were taken at the ſame time with the town. It was reſtored by the peace of 1763. Lat. 23. 12. N. lon. 82. 13. W.

The principal iſlands are Tierra del Eſpirito Santo and Malicollo, beſides ſeveral others of leſs note, ſome of which are from 18 to 25 leagues in circumference. In general they are high and mountainous, abounding with wood and water, and the uſual productions of the tropical iſlands. The bread-fruit, cocoa-nuts, and plantains, are neither ſo good nor ſo plentiful here as at Otaheite; but the ſugar canes and yams are not only in greater plenty, but of ſuperior quality, and much larger, ſome of the latter weighing 56 pounds. The inhabitants are generally of a ſlender make, and dark colour, and moſt of them have frizzled hair. Their canoes and houſes are but ſmall, and poorly conſtructed: and they have ſcarcely any manufacture, even for clothing. They generally appear civil and hoſpitable.

HELENA, ST. an iſland in the S. Atlantic Ocean, held by the Engliſh Eaſt-India Company. It's circumference is about 20 miles, and it has the appearance, at a diſtance, of a rock, or caſtle, riſing out of the ocean, being only acceſſible at one particular ſpot, where the town is erected, in a valley, at the bottom of a bay, between two ſteep, dreary mountains. The buildings, both public and private, are plain, but neat. It has ſome high mountains, particularly one called Diana's Peak, which is covered with woods to the very top. There are other hills alſo, which bear evident marks of a volcanic origin; and ſome have huge rocks of lava, and a kind of half vitrified flags. The country, however, is far from being barren: the little hills are covered with rich verdure, and interſperſed with fertile valleys, which contain gardens, orchards, and various plantations. The valleys are watered by rivulets, and the mountains, in the centre of the iſland, are covered with wood. The ſoil, which covers the rocks and mountains, is, in general, a rich mould, from ſix to ten inches deep, clothed with a variety of plants and ſhrubs. The walks of peach-trees are loaded with fruit, which have a peculiarly rich flavour; but the other European fruit-trees and vines, which have been planted here, do not ſucceed. Cabbages, and other greens, thrive extremely well, but are devoured by the caterpillars; as are the barley, and other kinds of grain, by the rats, which are very numerous. The ground, for theſe reaſons, is laid out chiefly in paſtures, the verdure of which is ſurpriſing; and the iſland can ſupport 3000 head of their ſmall cattle. They have Engliſh ſheep here, and a ſmall breed of horſes, with goats and rabbits. Their fowls are ring pheaſants, red-legged partridges, rice birds, pigeons, &c. of ſome of which the breed is indigenous, but others have been brought from Europe, Africa, and the E. Indies. The number of inhabitants on the iſland does not exceed 2000, including near 500 ſoldiers, and 600 ſlaves, who are ſupplied with all ſorts of manufactures by the company's ſhips, in return for refreſhments; and many of the ſlaves are employed in catching fiſh, which are very plentiful. This iſland is ſituated between the continents of Africa and S. America, about 1200 miles W. of the former, and 1800 E. of the latter. Lat. 15. 55. S. lon. 5. 49. W.

It is ſeated in St. Aubin's Bay, where it has a harbour, and a ſtone pier; having the ſea on the SW. and hills on the N. Another large hill projects, in a manner, over the town, and has a pleaſant walk, that affords an extenſive proſpect. The little iſland, St. Helier, about a mile in circuit, contains Elizabeth Caſtle, which is wholly occupied by the governor and garriſon; it is a peninſula from half-flood to half-ebb, during which time there is a paſſage, called the Bridge, which is half a mile long, and formed of ſand and ſtones. It leads to the town, which is well-paved, and has wide ſtreets. The inhabitants are computed to be 2000, and in their place of worſhip, the French and and Engliſh languages are uſed alternately. Lat. 49. 11. N. lon. 2. 10. W.

It extends 38 miles from N. to S. and 33 from E. to W. It is divided into 11 hundreds, and contains 1 city, 6 market towns, 176 parishes, and 391 villages. The air is healthy, and the soil very rich, producing excellent corn, fruits, and wool. The Herefordshire cider is sufficiently celebrated, and apples grow here in great abundance, being plentiful even in the hedgerows. The sheep are small, affording a fine silky wool, in quality approaching to the Spanish. The principal rivers are the Wye, Monnow, Lug, and Frome, all of which are well stored with fish, and the salmon, in particular, is sound, fat, and fit for the table in all seasons.

*HERTFORD, the county town of Herts, or Hertfordshire. It is seated on the river Lea, which is navigable for barges, and down which vast quantities of corn and malt are sent to London. These and wool form the principal articles of the market. The situation is healthy, and there are several public schools. In the beginning of the heptarchy, it was considered as one of the principal cities of the East Saxons, and the river was navigable for ships up to the town. In 879, the Danes erected two forts here, for the security of their vessels, but Alfred turned the course of the river, so that their ships were left on dry ground. Hertford is 2 miles W. by S. of Ware, and 21 N. of London. Lat. 51. 50. N. lon. 0. 1. E. Markets on Thursday and Saturday.

HERTFORDSHIRE, or HERTS, a county of England, bounded on the W. by Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire; on the N. by Bedfordshire and Cambridgeshire; on the E. by Essex; and on the S. by Middlesex. It is 27 miles long from N. to S. and 33 broad from E. to W. and is divided into 8 hundreds, which contain 18 market-towns, 135 parishes, and 950 villages. The northern skirt of this county is hilly, forming a scattered part of the chalky ridge, which extends across the kingdom in this direction. A number of streams take their rise from this side, which, by their clearness, shew the general nature of the soil to be inclined to hardness, and but indifferent for meadow land. Flint-stones are scattered, in great profusion, over the face of the country; and beds of chalk are frequently to be met with. It is found, however, with the aid of proper culture, to be extremely favourable to corn, both wheat and barley. The weſtern part is, in general, a tolerably rich ſoil, and under excellent cultivation. The principal traffic of the county is in corn and malt. The air is celebrated as very wholeſome; and the principal rivers are the Lea, Stort, and Coln.

HIMMALEH, MOUNT, a vast chain of mountains, in Asia, which extends from Cabul, along the N. of Hindoostan, and appears to be the general boundary of Thibet, through the whole extent, from the Ganges to the river Teesta; inclosing between it and Hindoostan Proper, a tract of country from 100 to 180 miles in breadth, divided into a number of small states, none of which are understood to be tributaries, or feudatories of Thibet; such as Sirinagur, Napaul, &c. This ridge was known to the ancients by the names of Imaus, and the Indian Caucasus. The natives call it Hindoo-Ko, (the Indian Mountains) as well as Himmaleh, which last is a Sanscrit word, signifying snowy; it's summit being covered with snow.

Hinam, 2 miles from Gloucester. Hincastre, Westmorland, near Haversham. Hinchinghrook, near Huntingdon.

HICHINBROOK ISLAND, one of the New Hebrides, in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 6 miles in circumference.

HINDON, an ancient town of Wiltshire, 20 miles nearly W. of Salisbury, and 97 WSW. of London. Market on Thursday.

HINDOOSTAN, a celebrated region of Asia, which, in it's most extensive signification, comprises all the countries between the mountains of Tartary and Thibet on the N.; the countries of Assam, Meckley, Aracan, and the Bay of Bengal on the E. and SE.; the Indian Ocean on the S.; and the same ocean and Persia on the W. But it may be considered under the three grand divisions of Hindoostan Proper, the Deccan, and the Peninsula. Hindoostan Proper, includes all the countries that lie to the N. of the river Nerbudda, and of the soubahs of Bahar and Bengal. The principal soubahs, or provinces, in Hindoostan Proper, are Agimere, Agra, Cashmere, Delhi, Guzerat, Lahore, Malwa, Moultan, Oude, Rohilcund, Sindy, &c. (for an account of which, see their respective names.) The term Deccan, which signifies the South, has been extended to the whole region that lies to the S. of Hindoostan Proper; but, in it's most proper and limited sense, it means only the countries situated between Hindooſtan Proper, the Carnatic, the Weſtern Indian Sea, and Oriſſa; namely, the provinces of Candeiſh, Dowlatabad, Viſiapour, Golconda, and the weſtern part of Berar. All the tract S. of the Kiſtna, is generally called the Peninſula. The name India, by which this country, as far as it was known, is diſtinguiſhed in the earlieſt Greek hiſtories, appears to be derived from Hind, the name given to it by the ancient Perſians, through whom the knowledge of the country was tranſmitted to the Greeks. The word Hindooſtan is, indeed, entirely of Perſian origin, compounded of Stan, a region, and Hind, or Hindoo. The whole of Hindooſtan may now be ſaid to conſiſt of ſix principal ſtates, which hold as tributaries, or feudatories, ſome numerous inferior ſtates. Theſe ſix principal ſtates are the Britiſh; the Poonah Mahrattas; the Behrar Mahrattas; Nizam Ally, ſoubah of the Deccan; Myſore, or the dominions of Tippoo Sultan; and the Seiks. The Britiſh poſſeſſions are Bengal, the greater part of Bahar, part of Allahabad, part of Oriſſa, the Northern Circars, a jaghire in the Carnatic, Baramahal, Dindigul, and ſome conſiderable countries to the N. and S. of Calicut, on the coaſt of Malabar, with Bombay, and the Iſland of Salſette. The allies of the Britiſh, who may be conſidered as dependent on them, are the nabob of Oude; the nabob of the Carnatic, including Tanjore, Madura, Tinevelly, and Marrawars; the rajahs of Travancore; and the territory of Cochin. For the five other principal ſtates, ſee their reſpective names; and for an account of ſome inferior independent ſtates, ſee BUNDELA, BALLOGISTAN, THE JATS, ROHILCUND, &c. Excluſive of the Europeans, the inhabitants of Hindooſtan are computed at 10,000,000 Mahometans, and 100,000,000 Hindoos. The Mahometans, or Muſſulmans, whom the Engliſh commonly, but improperly, call Moors, or Moormen, are repreſented as bearing a very bad character. The Hindoos, or Gentoos, are of a black complexion, their hair long, their perſon ſtraight, their limbs neat, their fingers long and tapering, and their countenances open and pleaſant. They are divided into different tribes or caſts. The four principal tribes are the bramins, ſoldiers, labourers, and mechanics; and theſe are ſubdivided into a multiplicity of inferior diſtinctions. There are bramins of various degrees, who have the care of religion, or of the adminiſtration of the Gentoo law allotted to them. Theſe prieſts are held ſacred by the Indians or Hindoos. Such of them as are not engaged in worldly purſuits, are an innocent people, promoting charity as much as they can, both to man and brute, but yet very ſuperſtitious. Some acknowledge that errors have crept into their religion, and own one Supreme Being; but they laugh at the idolatry of the multitude, and inſiſt upon the neceſſity of working upon their weakneſſes. Thoſe who engage in the world are generally the worſt of all the Gentoos; for, perſuaded that the waters of the Ganges will puriſy them from their ſins, and exempted from the utmoſt rigour of the courts of juſtice, (under the Gentoo governments) they run into the greateſt exceſſes. The ſoldiers are commonly called Rajah-poots; that is, deſcendants of the rajahs. They readily enter into the ſervice of any that will pay them, and follow wherever he leads. The Engliſh have many battalions of them in their employ, under the name of Sepoys. The labourers include farmers, and all who cultivate the land. The mechanics include merchants, bankers, and all who follow any trade; theſe again are ſubdivided into each particular branch. Beſides theſe, there are the Parians, or Hallachores, who cannot be called a tribe, being rather the refuſe or outcaſts of the other tribes. They are a ſet of poor unhappy people, who are deſtined to perform the moſt diſagreeable offices of life, bury the dead, and carry away every thing that is polluted. One deſcription of theſe, or rather the outcaſts of theſe outcaſts, the Poulichees, on the Malabar coaſt, are held in ſuch abomination, that if one of them happen to touch a Hindoo of a ſuperior tribe, the latter does not ſcruple to draw his ſabre and kill him on the ſpot; and for ſo atrocious an act, he is not even called to an account. All the different tribes are kept diſtinct from each other, by inſurmountable barriers; they are forbidden to intermarry, to dwell together, to eat with each other, or even to drink out of the ſame veſſel; and if they tranſgreſs any of theſe rules, they are obliged from that inſtant to join with the Hallachores. The Hindoos admit no converts, and are moſt firmly attached to their own ſuperſtitions, except the Hallachores, who are, ſome of them, glad to be admitted into any ſociety where they are treated as fellow creatures. The Hindoos vie with the Chineſe, in reſpect to the antiquity of their nation; and the doctrine of tranſmigration is one of their diſtinguiſhing tenets. Their inſtitutions of religion form a regular and complete ſyſtem, ſtrengthened and upheld by every thing which can excite the reverence, and ſecure the attachment of the ſuperſtitious multitude. The temples conſecrated to their deities are magnificent; their religious ceremonies ſplendid; and the abſolute dominion which the Bramins have obtained over the minds of the people, is ſupported by the command of the immenſe revenues, with which the liberality of princes, and the zeal of pilgrims and devotees, have enriched their pagodas. The dominion of religion extends, indeed, to a thouſand particulars, which, in other countries, are governed by the civil laws, or by taſte, cuſtom, or faſhion. Their dreſs, their food, the common intercourſes of life, their marriages, and profeſſions, are all under the juriſdiction of religion. The food of the Hindoos is ſimple, conſiſting chiefly of rice, ghee, (a kind of imperfect butter), milk, vegetables, and oriental ſpices. The warrior caſt may eat of the fleſh of goats, ſheep, and poultry. Other ſuperior caſts may eat poultry and fiſh; but the inferior caſts are prohibited from eating fleſh or fiſh of any kind. Their greateſt luxury conſiſts in the uſe of the richeſt ſpiceries and perfumes, of which the great people are very laviſh. They eſteem milk the pureſt of food, becauſe they think it partakes of ſome of the properties of the nectar of their gods, and becauſe they eſteem the cow itſelf almoſt as a divinity. Their manners are gentle. Their happineſs conſiſts in the ſolaces of domeſtic life; and they are taught by their religion, that matrimony is an indiſpenſable duty in every man, who does not entirely ſeparate himſelf from the world, from a principle of devotion. Their religion permits them to have ſeveral wives; but they ſeldom have more than one; and their wives are diſtinguiſhed by a decency of demeanour, a ſolicitude in their families, and a fidelity to their vows, which might do honour to human nature, in the moſt civilized countries. The cuſtom of women burning themſelves on the death of their huſbands, is ſtill practiſed in Hindooſtan. In 1743, near Coſſimbuzar, when a widow, about 18, with three children, the eldeſt not four years of age, was ſtrongly urged to live, for the ſake of the future care of her infants; notwithſtanding this, and though the agonies of death were deſcribed to her in the ſtrongeſt colours, ſhe put her finger into the fire with a calm and determined countenance, and held it a conſiderable time. She then, with one hand put fire into the palm of the other, ſprinkled incenſe on it, and fumigated the Bramins. Being then told, that ſhe would not be permitted to burn, ſhe reſolutely anſwered, that death was in her own power, and that if ſhe were not allowed to burn, ſhe would ſtarve herſelf. Her friends were obliged, at laſt, to conſent to the dreadful ſacrifice of this woman, who was of high rank. But, in 1781, Mr. Hodges was witneſs, near Benares, to the ſacrifice of one of an inferior caſt, the widow of a merchant. "Reparing to the ſpot," ſays he, "on the banks of a river, where the ceremony was to take place, I found the body of the man on a bier, covered with linen, already laid at the edge of the river. At this time, ten in the morning, only a few people were aſſembled, who diſplayed the moſt perfect apathy and indifference. After waiting a conſiderable time, the wife appeared, attended by the Bramins, and muſic, with a few relations. The proceſſion was ſlow and ſolemn; the victim moved with a ſteady and firm ſtep; and, with a perfect compoſure of countenance, approached cloſe to the body, where for ſome time they halted. She then addreſſed thoſe who were near her without the leaſt trepidation of voice, or change of countenance. She held in her left hand a cocoa-nut, in which was a red colour mixed, and dipping in it the fore finger of her right hand, ſhe marked thoſe near her, to whom ſhe wiſhed to ſhow the laſt act of attention. She might be about 24 years of age. Her dreſs was a looſe robe of white flowing drapery, that extended from her head to the feet. The pile was compoſed of dried branches, leaves, and ruſhes, with a door on one ſide, and arched, and covered on the top; by the ſide of the door ſtood a man with a lighted brand. From the time the woman appeared, to the taking up of the body to convey it into the pile, might occupy half an hour, which was employed in prayer with the Bramins, in attentions to thoſe near her, and converſation with her relations. When the body was taken up, ſhe followed cloſe to it, attended by the chief Bramin; and when it was depoſited in the pile, ſhe bowed to all around her, and entered without ſpeaking. The moment ſhe entered, the door was cloſed; the fire was put to the combuſtibles, which inſtantly flamed, and quantities of dried wood were thrown upon it. This laſt part of the ceremony was accompanied with the ſhouts of the multitude, who now became numerous, and the whole ſeemed a maſs of confuſed rejoicing. In other parts of India, as the Carnatic, this dreadful cuſtom is accompanied with ſtill greater horror. It is aſſerted, that they dig a pit, in which is depoſited a large quantity of combuſtible matter, matter, which is set on fire, and the body being let down, the victim throws herself into the flaming mass. In other places, a pile is raised extremely high, and the body, with the wife, is placed upon it, and then the whole is set on fire." In the Code of Gentoo Laws, translated by N. B. Halhead, Esq. is the following remarkable passage concerning this practice: "It is proper for a woman, after her husband's death to burn herself in the fire with his corpse. Every woman, who thus burns herself, shall remain in paradise with her husband three crore and fifty lacks of years, by destiny. If she cannot burn, she must, in that case, preserve an inviolable chastity; if she remain always chaste, she goes to paradise; and if she do not preserve her chastity, she goes to hell." This code of laws, with their sacred books, the Veidam and the Shastah, were written in the Sanscrit language, which is very copious and nervous, although the style of their best authors is wonderfully concise. Hindoostan, towards the N. is pretty temperate; but hot toward the S. and it rains almost constantly for three months in the year. It's products are rice, millet, cotton, figs, pomegranates, oranges, lemons, citrons, cocoa-trees, &c. There are mines of gold, silver, and diamonds. Beside domestic animals, here are elephants, rhinoceroses, buffaloes, lions, tigers, leopards, panthers, and monkeys, with camels and dromedaries. It's principal exports are sugar, indigo, saltpetre, silk, cotton, and precious stones; and particularly calicoes, chintzes, muslins, &c.

HINZUAN, or JOANNA, one of the Comora Iſlands, between the N. end of Madagaſcar, and the continent of Africa, has been governed, for the laſt two centuries, by a colony of Arabs. Some account of it has been written by Sir William Jones, for the Society for the promoting of Oriental Knowledge, of which he was preſident. He viſited this iſland, on board the Crocodile frigate, in July, 1783. On anchoring in the bay, the frigate was ſoon ſurrounded by canoes, and the deck crowded with natives of all ranks, from the high-born chief, who waſhed linen, to the half-naked ſlave who only paddled. Moſt of them had letters of recommendation from Engliſhmen, which none of them were able to read, though they ſpoke Engliſh intelligibly. The appearance of the iſland from the Bay of Hinzuan, is thus deſcribed by the ſame writer: "We were at anchor in a bay, and before us was a vaſt amphitheatre, of which you may form a general notion by picturing in your minds a multitude of hills, infinitely varied in ſize and figure, and then ſuppoſing them to be thrown together, with a kind of artleſs ſymmetry, in all imaginable poſitions. The back ground was a ſeries of mountains, one of which is pointed, near half a mile perpendicularly high from the level of the ſea, and little more than three miles from the ſhore; all of them richly clothed with wood, chiefly fruit-trees, of an exquiſite verdure. I had ſeen many mountains of a ſtupendous height in Wales and Swiſſerland, but never ſaw one before, round the boſom of which the clouds were almoſt continually rolling, while it's green ſummit roſe flouriſhing above them, and received from them an additional brightneſs. Next to this diſtant range of hills, was another tier, part of which appeared charmingly verdant, and part rather barren; but the contraſt of colours changed even this nakedneſs into a beauty: nearer ſtill were innumerable mountains, or rather cliffs, which brought down their verdure and fertility quite to the beach; ſo that every ſhade of green, the ſweeteſt of colours, was diſplayed at one view, by land and by water. But nothing conduced more to the variety of this enchanting proſpect than the many rows of palm-trees, eſpecially the tall and graceful Aracas, on the ſhores, in the valleys, and on the ridges of hills, where one might almoſt ſuppoſe them to have been planted regularly by design. A more beautiful appearance can scarce be conceived, than such a number of elegant palms in such a situation, with luxuriant tops, like verdant plumes, placed at just intervals, and shewing between them part of the remoter landscape, while they left the rest to be supplied by the beholder's imagination. Neither the territory of Nice, with it's olives, date-trees, and cypresses, nor the Isles of Hieres, with their delightful orange-groves, appeared so charming to me as the view from the road of Hinzuan." The town where the king resides is at the E. side of the island; and, though it is three quarters of a mile in length, it does not contain above 200 houses. This town is close to the sea, at the foot of a very high hill. The houses are inclosed either with high stone walls, or palings made with a kind of reed; and the streets are little narrow alleys, extremely intricate, and forming a perfect labyrinth. The better kind of houses are built of stone, within a court-yard, have a portico to shield them from the sun, and one long lofty room, where they receive guests; the other apartments being appropriated to the women. The sides of their rooms are covered with a number of small mirrors, bits of china-ware, and other little ornaments, that they procure from the ships: the most superb of them are furnished with cane sofas, covered with chintz and satin matresses. The horned cattle are a kind of buffaloes, having a large hump on their shoulders, which is very delicious eating; but there is not one horse, mule, nor ass, in all the island. The original natives, in number about 7000, occupy the hills, and are generally at war with the Arabian interlopers, who established themselves on the sea-coast by conquest, and are about 3000 in number. Though Joanna is not the largest, it may be reckoned the principal of the Comora Islands; it claims sovereignty over, and exacts tribute from all the others. They have a regular form of government, and exercise the Mahometan religion; both being introduced by the Arabians. The colour of these two races of men is very different; the Arabs have not so deep a tinge as the others, being of a copper complexion, with neater features and a more animated countenance. They consider a black streak under the eye as ornamental; and this they make, every day, with a painting-brush dipt in a kind of ointment. The custom of chewing the betel-nut prevails greatly here, as in most of the eastern countries; and answer to the fashion of smoking tobacco or taking snuff with us, except that with them it is more general. No one is without a purse or bag of betel; and it is looked on as a piece of civility to offer it to their friend when they meet him, or take leave. Their religion licenses a plurality of wives, and likewise concubines. They are extremely jealous of them, and never allow any man to see the women: but female strangers are admitted into the haram; and, some English women, whose curiosity has led them there, make favourable reports of their beauty, and richness of apparel, displayed in a profusion of ornaments of gold, silver, and beads, in form of necklaces, bracelets, and ear-rings: they wear half a dozen or more in each, through holes bored along the outer rim of the ear. They are very temperate and abstemious, wine being forbidden them by the law of Mahomet. They are frequent in prayer, attending their mosques three or four times a day. We are allowed to enter them, on condition of taking off our shoes. In prayer the people prostrate themselves on the ground, frequently kissing it, and expressing very fervent devotion. In general they appear to be a courteous and well-disposed people, and very fair and honest in their dealings, though there are among them some inclined to theft, notwithstanding the punishment of it is very exemplary, being amputation of both hands of the delinquent. The inhabitants, like those of most hot and tropical countries, are indolent, and do not improve by their labour the richness of their exuberant soil; indeed, the climate here promotes vegetation to such a degree, as requires little toil in the husbandman; and that little is denied; so that beyond oranges, bananas, pine-apples, cocoa-nuts, yams, and purslain (all growing spontaneously) few vegetables are met with. Nor are the natural beauties of the island inferior to it's other advantages of plenty and fertility; the face of the country is very picturesque and pleasing; lofty mountains clothed to their very summits, deep and rugged valleys adorned by frequent cataracts, cascades, woods, rocks, and rivulets, intermixed, form the diversified landscape. Groves are seen extending over the plains to the very edge of the sea, formed principally by the cocoa-nut trees, whose long and naked stems leave a clear and uninterrupted passage beneath; while their tufted and over-spreading tops form a thick shade above, and keep off the scorching rays of the sun. HOLLAND, the moſt conſiderable of the Seven United Provinces, lying between the Zuyder Zee, the German Ocean, Zealand, Dutch Brabant, and Utrecht. It is divided into N. Holland, S. Holland, and W. Frieſland; not the ſtate or province of Frieſland, but a diſtrict lying to the N. of N. Holland. Theſe together make but one province, whoſe ſtates take the title of Holland and W. Frieſland. The extent is not large, being not above 180 miles in circumference. The land is almoſt every where lower than the ſea. The water is kept out by dikes, which they are particularly careful to keep in good repair, leſt the whole province ſhould be laid under water. It is croſſed by the mouths of the Rhine and Maeſe, by ſeveral ſmall rivers, and by a great number of canals, on which they travel day and night at a ſmall expence. Properly ſpeaking, it is nothing but a large meadow, and yet all things are in great plenty, in conſequence of it's trade; and the land feeds great numbers of cattle. In population, it is thought that no country in the world, of ſuch a ſmall extent, equals it. The paſtures are ſo rich, that they have plenty of butter and cheeſe, and the ſeas and rivers furniſh them with fiſh. There are 400 villages, and 29 walled towns, beſides many others that enjoy municipal privileges. Six large cities have ſeats in the States General, viz. Dort, Haerlem, Delft, Leyden, Amſterdam, and Gouda. The number of nobility admitted into the aſſembly of the ſtates of the province, is not limited, but rarely exceeds 10; they are elected by a majority of votes. The towns which have a right to ſend deputies are 18. This was the ſtate of the republic, prior to the diſputes on the French revolution. The houſes are generally well built, and extremely neat and clean. They have linen and woollen manufactures, beſide the building of a great number of ſhips. The eſtabliſhed religion is Calviniſm; but all religious ſects are tolerated. Amſterdam is the capital.

HOLLAND, a diſtrict of Lincolnſhire, in the SE. part of the county. It is divided into Upper and Lower, and lies contiguous to the ſhallow inlet of the ſea, called the Waſh. It conſiſts entirely of fens and marſhes; ſome in a ſtate of nature, but others cut by numberleſs drains and canals, and croſſed by raiſed cauſeways. The lower, or ſouthern diviſion, is the moſt watery, and is preſerved from conſtant inundations by nothing but vaſt banks, raiſed on the ſea-coaſt and rivers. The air is unwholeſome, and the water, in general, ſo brackiſh, as to be unfit for internal purpoſes; on which account, the inhabitants are obliged to make reſervoirs of rain-water. Yet even here induſtry has produced comfort and opulence, by forming excellent paſture land out of ſwamps and bogs, and even making them capable of producing large crops of corn. The reeds, with which the waters of their fens are covered make the beſt thatch, and are annually harveſted in great quantities for that purpoſe. Prodigious flocks of geeſe are bred among the undrained fens, forming a conſiderable object of commerce, as well for their quills and feathers, as for the bird itſelf, which is driven in great numbers to the London markets. The principal decoys in England for the various kinds of wild ducks, teal, widgeon, and other fowls of the duck kind, are in theſe parts. Wild geeſe, grebes, godwits, whimbrels, coots, ruffs, and reeves, and a great variety of other ſpecies of waterfowl, breed here in amazing numbers; and ſtares, or ſtarlings, reſort during winter, in myriads, to rooſt on the reeds, breaking breaking them down by their weight. Near Spalding, is the greateſt heronry in England, where the herons build together on high trees, like rooks. The avoſet, or yelper, is found in great numbers about Foſſdyke Waſh, as alſo knots and dottrels.

HOLLAND, NEW, the largeſt known land that does not bear the name of a continent; it extends from lat. 43. 42. S. to within 10. 30. of the equator; and from 110. 30. to 153. 30. E. lon. ſo that it's ſurface nearly equals that of Europe. When this vaſt iſland was firſt diſcovered is uncertain. About the beginning of the laſt century, the N. and W. coaſts were traced by the Dutch; the SE. extremity was diſcovered by Taſman, in 1642. Captain Cook, in 1770, viſited the E. and NE. parts, from 38°. S. and ſpent four months in exploring a coaſt 2000 miles in length. He aſcertained it's ſeparation from New Guinea; and, in 1773, Furneaux, by connecting Taſman's diſcoveries with Cook's, completed the circuit. In that part of it, which Taſman diſtinguiſhed by the name of Van Dieman's Land, and which was viſited by Furneaux in 1773, and again by Cook in 1777, the land is, for the moſt part, of a good height, diverſified with hills and valleys. See WALES, NEW SOUTH.

HOLSTEIN, a duchy of Germany, in the circle of Lower Saxony, ſubject to the king of Denmark, having the Baltic on the E. the German Ocean on the W. Sleſwick and the Baltic on the N. and Lunenburg, Lubeck, Hamburg, and the Elb on the S. It is about 70 miles in length, and 50 in breadth, and is a pleaſant, fruitful country, well ſeated for trade, and has ſome conſiderable harbours, particularly thoſe of Hamburg and Lubeck. There are ſome imperial cities, which are governed by their reſpective magiſtrates, but the religion of the whole country is Lutheran. The duchy is divided into Holſtein Gluckſtadt, ſubject to the king of Denmark; and Holſtein Gottorpf, ſubject to the emperor, or empreſs of Ruſſia. The intended junction between the Baltic and the North Sea, will be formed entirely through Holſtein and the other Daniſh territories.

* HOLYWELL, a town of Flintſhire, which although in great part new, is, from it's vicinity to the mines, and it's conſiderable manufactures, become the moſt flouriſhing in the county. It takes it's name from the famous well called St. Winifred's, concerning which ſo many fables and ſuperſtitious notions have prevailed. It is a copious ſtream of very cold and pure water, burſting out of the ground with great impetuoſity, at the foot of a hill. Beſide the cold bath, celebrated for wonderful cures, formed at the ſpring-head, and covered with a beautiful Gothic ſhrine, it is now applied to the purpoſe of turning ſeveral mills for the working of copper, making braſs-wire, paper, and ſnuff, and ſpinning cotton. It is 10 miles E. of St. Aſaph, and 212 NE. of London. Market on Friday.

HONDURAS, a large province of North America, bounded on the N. by the bay of the ſame name, on the E. by the Moſquitos ſhore, on the S. by Nicaragua and Guatimala, and on the W. by Guatimala and Vera Paz. This country, though exceedingly fertile, is almoſt a deſert. The ſoil bears Indian corn and grapes, three times a year; it's other produce is wheat, peas, cotton, wool, honey, wax, and proviſions of all kinds. It produces in greater abundance than any part of America, the logwood-tree, which in dying ſome colours, is ſo far preferable to any other material, that the conſumption of it in Europe is conſiderable, and it is become an article in commerce of great value. During a long period, no European nation intruded upon the Spaniards in theſe provinces, or attempted to obtain any ſhare in this branch of trade. But after the conqueſt of Jamaica by the Engliſh, one of the firſt objects of the ſettlers, on that iſland, was the great profit ariſing from the logwood trade, and the facility of wreſting ſome portion of it from the Spaniards. Their firſt attempt was made at Cape Catoche, the NE. promontory of Yucatan. When moſt of the trees near this cape were felled, they removed to the Iſland of Triſt, in the Bay of Campeachy; and, in later times, their principal ſtation has been in the Bay of Honduras. The Spaniards, alarmed at this encroachment, endeavoured by negociation, remonſtrances, and open force, to prevent the Engliſh from obtaining any footing on that part of the American continent. But, after ſtruggling againſt it for more than a century, the diſaſters of an unſucceſsful war extorted from the court of Madrid, in 1763, a reluctant conſent to tolerate this ſettlement of foreigners in the heart of it's territories. This privilege was confirmed by the definitive treaty of 1783; by which, however, it was ſtipulated, that nothing in this conceſſion ſhould be conſidered as derogating, in any reſpect, from 'the ſovereignty of his Catholic Majeſty;' that, if the Engliſh had erected any fortifications in the country, they ſhould be demoliſhed, and none erected in future; and that they ſhould confine themſelves within a certain diſtrict, lying between the rivers Wallis, or Bellize, and Rio Honda, taking the courſe of the ſaid two rivers for unalterable boundaries, ſo as that the navigation of them be common to both nations. But, by a convention ſigned in 1786, theſe limits were extended; the Engliſh line, beginning from the ſea, was to take the centre of the river Sibun, or Jabon, and continue up to the ſource of the ſaid river; thence to croſs, in a ſtraight line, the intermediate land, till it interſected the river Wallis; and by the centre of the ſame river, the ſaid line was to deſcend to the point where it would meet the line already ſettled in 1783. By this convention, moreover, the Engliſh were not only permitted to cut logwood, but mahogany, or any other kind of wood, and to carry away any other produce of the country; with certain exceptions, however, againſt the eſtabliſhing of any plantations of ſugar, coffee, &c. and they were likewiſe permitted, with certain reſtrictions, to occupy the ſmall iſland called Caſina, St. George's Key, or Cayo Caſina. The Engliſh ſettlement in this country had formerly been conſidered as foreign; but, in 1790, by an act of parliament, they were allowed all the privileges of a Britiſh colony. The principal towns are Valladolid, the capital; Truxillo; Gracias a Dios; and St. Jago.

HOTTENTOTS, COUNTRY OF THE, a large region in the southern extremity of Africa, which extends N. by W. along the coast, from the Cape of Good Hope, beyond the mouth of Orange River, and from that Cape, in an ENE. direction, to the mouth of the Great Fish River, which parts it from Caffraria Proper. The Hottentots tentots are as tall as moſt Europeans, but more ſlender, and their hands and feet are ſmall. Their ſkin is of a yellowiſh brown hue, ſomewhat reſembling that of an European who has the jaundice in a high degree; but this colour is not at all obſervable in the whites of the eyes. There are not ſuch thick lips among the Hottentots as among their neighbours the Negroes, the Caffres, and the Mozambiques. Their mouth is of the middling ſize; and they have, in general, the fineſt ſet of teeth imaginable. Their heads are covered with hair more woolly, if poſſible, than that of the Negroes. With reſpect to their ſhape, carriage, and every motion, their whole appearance indicates health and content. There is a volatility in their manner which ſhews an abundant flow of ſpirits, or a high enjoyment of animal life; in their intercourſe with Europeans, they hardly ſtand ſtill for a moment. In their mien, moreover, a degree of careleſſneſs is obſervable, that diſcovers marks of alacrity and reſolution; qualities which, upon occaſion, they certainly can exhibit, as in their encounters with wild beaſts. Not only the men, but the women alſo are clothed with ſheep-ſkins; the wool being worn outward in ſummer, and inward during the winter. They wear one ſkin over their ſhoulders, the ends of it croſſing each other before, and leaving their neck bare. Another ſkin is faſtened round their middle, and reaches down to their knees. They beſmear their bodies all over, very copiouſly, with fat, in which there is mixed up a little ſoot, and this is never wiped off. They likewiſe perfume themſelves with powder of herbs, with which they powder both the head and body, rubbing it all over them, when they beſmear themſelves. The odour of this powder is rank and aromatic, and comes neareſt to that of the poppy mixed with ſpices. Some of them adorn themſelves with necklaces of ſhells. The women cover themſelves much more ſcrupulouſly than the men. They ſeldom content themſelves with one covering, but almoſt always have two, and very often three. Theſe are made of a prepared and well-greaſed ſkin, and are faſtened about their bodies with a thong, almoſt like the aprons of European women. The outermoſt is always the largeſt, meaſuring from about ſix inches to a foot over. This is likewiſe, generally, the fineſt and moſt ſhowy, and frequently adorned with glaſs beads, ſtrung in different figures. Both the men and women generally go bareheaded. Neither their ears nor noſe are adorned with any pendant ornaments, as they are among other ſavages. The noſe, however, is ſometimes, by way of greater ſtate, marked with a black ſtreak of ſoot, or with a large ſpot of red lead; of which latter, on their high days and holidays, they likewiſe put a little on their cheeks. Both ſexes wear rings on their arms and legs; moſt of theſe are made of thick leather ſtraps, cut in a circular ſhape; and theſe have given riſe to the almoſt univerſally-received notion, that the Hottentots wrap guts about their legs, in order to eat them occaſionally. Rings of iron, copper, or braſs, of the ſize of a gooſe-quill, are conſidered as more genteel than thoſe of leather; but the girls are not allowed to uſe any rings till they are marriageable. The Hottentots ſeldom wear any ſhoes; what they do wear, are made of undreſſed leather, with the hairy ſide outward: they are rendered ſoft and pliable, by being beat and moiſtened, and are very light and cool. Their habitations are adapted to their wandering, paſtoral life. They are merely huts; ſome of them of a circular, and ſome of an oblong ſhape, reſembling a round bee-hive, or a vault; the ground-plot is from 18 to 24 feet in diameter. The higheſt of them are ſo low, that it is ſcarcely poſſible for a middle-ſized man to ſtand upright. But neither the lowneſs of the hut, nor that of the door, which is barely three feet high, can be conſidered as any inconvenience to a Hottentot, who finds no difficulty in ſtooping, and crawling on all fours. The fire-place is in the middle, and they ſit, or lie round it in a circle. The low door is the only place that admits the light, and, at the ſame time, the only outlet that is left for the ſmoke. The Hottentot, inured to it from his infancy, ſees it hover round him, without feeling the leaſt inconvenience ariſing from it to his eyes; while, rolled up like a hedge-hog, and wrapped up ſnug in his ſkin, he lies at the bottom of his hut, quite at his eaſe, in the midſt of this cloud, except that he is now and then obliged to peep out from beneath his ſheep-ſkin, in order to ſtir the fire, or perhaps to light his pipe, or elſe, ſometimes, to turn the ſteak he is broiling over the coals. The order of theſe huts, in a craal, or clan, is moſt frequently in the form of a circle, with the doors inward; by which means a kind of yard is formed, where the cattle are kept at night. The milk, as ſoon as it is taken from the cow, is put to other milk, which is curdled, and is kept in a leather ſack, the hairy ſide of which, being conſidered as the cleaneſt, is turned inward; ſo that the milk is never drank

while it is ſweet. Such are Hottentots in the vicinity of the Cape of Good Hope. Among other tribes of Hottentots are the Boſhieſmen, or Boſhmans, who inhabit the mountains in the interior part of the country, NE. of the Cape of Good Hope, and are averſe to the paſtoral life. Some of their maxims are to live on hunting and plunder, and never to keep any animal alive for the ſpace of one night. On this account, they themſelves are purſued, and ſometimes exterminated, like wild beaſts, or taken and made ſlaves of. Buſhes and clefts in rocks ſerve them by turns for dwellings. Many of them are entirely naked; but ſome of them cover their body with the ſkin of any ſort of animal, great or ſmall, from the ſhoulder downward as far as it will reach, wearing it till it fall off their backs in rags. Ignorant of agriculture, they are obliged to wander over hills and dales, after certain wild roots, berries, and plants, which they eat raw. Their table, however, is compoſed of ſeveral other diſhes, among which are the larvæ of inſects (the caterpillars from which butterflies are produced) the termites, or white ants, graſhoppers, ſnakes, and ſpiders. With all theſe changes of diet, the Boſhman is, nevertheleſs, frequently in want. When captured as a ſlave, he exchanges his meagre fare for the luxury of buttermilk, frumerty, or haſty-pudding, he ſometimes becomes fat in a few weeks. This good living, however, is ſoon embittered by the grumbling of his maſter and miſtreſs, and he muſt frequently bear, perhaps, a few curſes or blows, for neglect and indolence. Diſliking labour, and, from his corpulency, become leſs capable of bearing it, he now pines after his former uncontrouled and wandering life, which he generally endeavours to regain by eſcaping. Another tribe of Hottentots, near the mouth of Orange River, have huts ſuperior to thoſe of the generality of Hottentots; they are loftier, and thatched with graſs; and are furniſhed with ſtools made of the back-bones of the grampus. Their mode of living is in the higheſt degree wretched, and they are apparently the moſt dirty of all the Hottentot tribes. Their dreſs is compoſed of the ſkins of ſeals and jackals, the fleſh of which they eat. When a grampus is caſt aſhore, they remove their huts to the place, and ſubſiſt upon it as long as any part of it remains; and, in this manner, it ſometimes affords them ſuſtenance for half a year, though in a great meaſure decayed, and putrified by the ſun. They ſmear their ſkin with the oil, the odour of which is ſo powerful, that their approach may be perceived ſome time before they preſent themſelves to view. They carry their water in the ſhells of oſtrich eggs, and the bladders of ſeals, which they ſhoot with arrows, the ſame as the other Hottentots. Though one ſmall hut contains the whole family, and all are obliged to repoſe together, they are chaſte in their manners. Severe in their juriſprudence, they puniſh murder, adultery, and robbery with death. From the obſervance of dances or rejoicings at the full and change of the moon, they appear to be idolatrous; and the Boſhmans are ſaid to abuſe the thunder with opprobrious epithets, to threaten to aſſault the lightning with old ſhoes, or any thing that comes to hand, and to be diſſatisfied with rain, as well as cold, accounting it an evil. The country poſſeſſed by the Dutch is of pretty conſiderable extent, comprehending, not only the large tract, between Table Bay and Falſe Bay, but that which is called Hottentot Holland, extending from Falſe Bay to the Cabo dos Agulhas, or Cape of Needles, and the country farther E. beyond St. Chriſtopher's River, called Terra de Natal. The coaſt of this country abounds in bays and capes; it is naturally mountainous and barren, yet produces a ſufficiency of all the neceſſaries of life for the inhabitants, as alſo of refreſhments for all the European ſhips that touch here. In the interior parts the ſoil is aſtoniſhingly rich and fertile. The Dutch conſider the year as divided into two ſeaſons, which they term monſoons; the wet monſoon, or winter; and the dry one, or ſummer. The firſt begins with our ſpring; the latter when our ſummer ends. In the damp ſeaſon, the Cape is much ſubject to fogs; and from the middle of the wet monſoon, it rains almoſt continually till ſummer: the weather is cold, raw, and unpleaſant; but never more rigorous than autumn in Germany. Water never freezes to above the thickneſs of half a crown, and, as ſoon as the ſun appears, the ice is diſſolved. The Cape is rarely viſited by thunder and lightning, excepting a little near the turn of the ſeaſons. Among the quadrupeds of this country are antelopes, which go in herds of 20 or 30,000 each; buffaloes cameleopardaliſes; the gems-bock, or chamois, a ſpecies of antelope, which has remarkably long, ſharp horns, and, when attacked by dogs, will ſit on it's hind quarters, and defend itſelf; wild dogs much larger than the jackal, which travel in herds, and are very deſtructive to flocks of ſheep; elephants; elks; hyenas; the koeda, koedo, an animal of a mouſe colour, rather larger than our deer, with three white ſtripes over the back, and the male having very large twiſted horns; lions; jackals; tigers; the quacha, a ſpecies of the zebra, but more tractable; rhinoceroſes; horſes; domeſtic horned cattle; common ſheep; and a peculiar ſpecies of ſheep, which are covered with hair inſtead of wool. The hippopotamus, or river-horſe, is frequently ſeen here. Among the birds are vultures; oſtriches, whoſe eggs are excellent food; and the loxia, a ſpecies of gregarious bird, which builds it's curious neſt in the mimoſa-tree, where it forms a kind of thatched houſe, with a regular ſtreet of neſts on both ſides, at about two inches diſtance from each other, and containing under it's roof ſeveral hundred, or a thouſand birds. The termites, or white ants, which do no injury to the wood, as in the E. Indies, but to the graſs, the deſtruction of which they occaſion, by raiſing a number of hills, which impede the progreſs of vegetation. The Hottentots eat them; and this food is found to be far from diſagreeable. The locuſts alſo are eſteemed excellent food by the Boſhmans, by whom they are dried and kept for uſe. The black, or rock ſcorpion, is nearly as venomous here as any of the ſerpent tribe, of which there are numerous kinds. There are ſix ſpecies about the Cape; namely, the horned ſnake, about 18 inches long, the moſt poiſonous of them all; the kouſe band, or garter ſnake, about the ſame length, dangerous to travellers, on account of reſembling the ſoil ſo much in colour, that it is not readily perceived; the yellow ſnake, which differs in colour only from the hooded ſnake of India, and being from four to eight feet in length, their ſize, and bright yellow colour renders it eaſy to avoid them; the puff adder, about 40 inches in length, ſo called from blowing itſelf up to near a foot in circumference; the ſpring adder, very dangerous, but not common, from three to four feet long, and of a jet black, with white ſpots; and the night ſnake, more beautiful than any of the others, about 20 inches long, very thin, belted with black, red, and yellow, and when near, at night, has the appearance of fire. The country of the Hottentots lies between the tropic of Capricorn, and 35 degrees S. lat. and is bounded on the W. S. and E. by the Atlantic and Indian Oceans, and on the N. by regions very little, if at all explored.

HOWTH, or HOATH HEAD, a promontory forming the NE. boundary of the Bay of Dublin. It is a peninsula, the shores of which are rocky and precipitous. It was formerly covered with oaks, and was a seat of the Druids; one of their altars still remains, in a sequestered valley, on the E. side of the hill. The village of Howth is about 7 miles NE. from the metropolis. On the top of the hill there is a light-house, and a few harbours on it's shores for small craft.

Howthorp, Linc. SE. of Boothy-Pannel. Howton, Dorset. NE. of Middleton. Howton, Heref. near Wormbridge. Howtongill-Chapel, Yorks. W. Riding, NE. of Settle. Howton in the-More, Linc. NW. of Binbrook. Hoxham, Devonshire, near Poltimore. Hoxon, Suffolk, on the river Waveney, N. of Eye. Here Edmund, king of the East Angles, was bound to a tree, and shot to death with arrows by the pagan Danes, because he would not renounce the Christian religion. A monastery was afterwards erected here to his memory.

HOXTER, a town in Westphalia, belonging to the Abbey of Corvey.

HOY, one of the Orkney Islands, situated between the Island of Pomona and the N. coast of Caithnesshire. It is about 11 miles long, and more than 3 broad. On this island, besides the great conic hill of Hoyhead, which is a sea-mark, there is a stupendous rock called the Beary, where a bird, here named the layer, supposed to be a species of the penguin, is found. It is about the size of a small duck, remarkably fat, and esteemed a great delicacy. These birds burrow in the rabbit-holes. The person employed in taking the young is usually let down by a rope from the top of the precipice. In this island too, in a gloomy valley, is an entire stone, 36 feet long, and 18 broad, called the Dwarfic Stone. It is hollow within, having the form of a bed and pillow cut in the stone: it is supposed to have been once the habitation of a hermit. Lat. 58. 56. N. lon. 3. 20. W.

HOYA, a town and county of Westphalia, subject to Hanover since 1705, except a small part which belongs to Hesse Cassel. It is 32 miles long, and 29 broad, and contains 17 small towns, besides the capital (which is situated on the Weser) and 54 parishes.

Hoyland, High, Yorkshire, W. Riding, in Wentworth parish. Hoyland-Swain, Yorkshire, NW. of Barnesley.

HRADISCH, a town and circle of Moravia, 30 miles SSE. of Olmutz.

HUA, or KAHUA, a large town, the capital of Cochin China, with a handsome palace palace, where the king commonly reſides. It is ſeated in a beautiful plain, and divided into two parts by a large river. The inhabitants blacken their teeth, thinking it a ſhame to have them white, like dogs, and they wear their nails very long. There are a few Chriſtians here. Lat. 17. 40. N. lon. 105. 5. E.

HUAHINE, one of the Society Iſlands, in the S. Pacific Ocean, 30 leagues from Otaheite, and 7 in compaſs, with an excellent harbour, though a ſmall one, on the W. ſide. It's ſurface is hilly and uneven. Lat. 16. 44. S. lon. 151. 1. W.

* HUDDERSFIELD, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, which has riſen up within this century, is ſituated amid barren moors, and is the mart for narrow cloths, called plains, and fine broad cloths. It is 42 miles SW. of York, and 189 NNW. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Huddington, Worc. SE. of Droitwich. Huddleſkow, Cumb. between Penrith and Kirkhaugh. Huddleſton, Yorkſ. W. Riding, near Shirbourn, is famous for a quarry of ſtone, reckoned the fineſt in England. When firſt dug out, it is ſoft, but hardens by lying in the air. King Henry VII's. chapel, at Weſtminſter, was moſtly built of the ſtone fetched from hence. Hude, a river in Durham, running into the Tees at Middleton. Hudhay, Lanc. near Haſlingden. Hudnal, Herts, in Eleſborough pariſh.

HUDSON'S-BAY, a large bay of North America, lying between 51 and 67 deg. of N. latitude, and diſcovered, in 1610, by Captain Henry Hudſon. This intrepid mariner, in ſearching after a NW. paſſage to the S. Sea, diſcovered three ſtraits, through which he hoped to find out a new way to Aſia by America. He had made two voyages before on the ſame adventure; the firſt in 1607, and in the ſecond in 1608. In his third and laſt, in 1610, he entered the ſtraits that lead into this new Mediterranean, the bay known by his name; and coaſted a great part of it. His ardour for the diſcovery not being abated by the difficulties he ſtruggled with in this empire of winter, and world of froſt and ſnow, he ſtaid here till the enſuing ſpring, and prepared, in the beginning of 1611, to purſue his diſcoveries; but his crew, who ſuffered equal hardſhips, without the ſame ſpirit to ſupport them, mutinied, ſeized upon him, and ſeven of thoſe who were moſt faithful to him, and committed them to the icy ſeas in an open boat. Hudſon and his companions were never more heard of; but the ſhip, and the reſt of the men, returned home. Other attempts toward a diſcovery were alſo made in 1612 and 1667. In 1746, a Captain Ellis wintered as far north as 57 degrees and a half; and a Captain Chriſtopher attempted farther diſcoveries in 1761. But beſides theſe, and the late voyages, which ſatisfy us that we muſt not look for a paſſage on this ſide of the latitude 67 degrees north, we are indebted to the Hudſon's Bay Company for a journey by land, which throws much additional light on this matter, by affording what may be called demonſtration, how much farther north, at leaſt in ſome parts of their voyage, ſhips muſt go, before they can paſs from one ſide of America to the other. The northern Indians, who come down to the company's factories to trade, had brought to the knowledge of our people a river, which, on account of much copper being found near it, had obtained the name of Copper-Mine River. The company being deſirous of examining into this matter with preciſion, directed a young gentleman in their ſervice, of the name of Hearne, to proceed over land, under the convoy of thoſe Indians, for that river; which he had orders to ſurvey, if poſſible, quite down to it's exit into the ſea, to make obſervations for fixing the latitudes and longitudes, and to bring home maps and drawings, both of it and the countries through which he ſhould paſs. Accordingly, Mr. Hearne ſet out from Prince of Wales Fort, on Churchill River, on the 7th of December 1770, and, on the 13th of June following, reached the Copper-Mine River, but found it all the way, even to it's exit into the ſea, encumbered with ſhoals and falls. The tide being then out, ſeemed, by the edges of the ice, to riſe about 12 or 14 feet, entering it over a dry flat of the ſhore. This riſe, on account of the falls, will carry the tide but a little way within the river's mouth, ſo that the water in it had not the leaſt brackiſh taſte. He was, nevertheleſs, ſure of the place it emptied itſelf into being the ſea, or a branch of it, by the quantity of whale and ſeal ſkins which the Eſkimaux had at their tents; and alſo by the number of ſeals which he ſaw upon the ice. The ſea, at the river's mouth, was full of iſlands and ſhoals, as far as he could ſee by the aſſiſtance of a pocket teleſcope; and the ice was not yet broken up, but thawed away only for about three quarters of a mile from the ſhore, and for a little way round the iſlands and ſhoals which lay off the river's mouth. But he had the moſt extenſive view of the ſea when he was about 8 miles up the river; from which ſtation, the extreme parts of it bore NW. by W. and NE. It appears from the map, which Mr. Hearne conſtructed of this ſingular journey, that the mouth of the Copper-Mine River lies in lat. 72. N. and lon. 25. W. from Churchill River; that is about 119 W. of Greenwich. Mr. Hearne's journey back, from the Copper-Mine River to Churchill River, laſted till June 30th, 1772; ſo that he was abſent almoſt a year and ſeven months. The country lying round Hudſon's Bay on the W. and SW. is called New N. and New S. Wales. The extenſive peninſula to the E. of it is called Labrador, or New Britain. The entrance of the Bay, from the ocean, after leaving Cape Farewell and Davis' Straits, is between Reſolution Iſles on the N. and Button's Iſles on the S. forming the eaſtern extremity of the ſtraits, diſtinguiſhed by the name of it's firſt diſcoverer. The vaſt countries that ſurround Hudſon's-Bay, abound with animals, whoſe ſkins and furs are far ſuperior in quality to thoſe found in leſs northerly regions. In 1670, a charter was granted to a company, which does not conſiſt of above ten perſons, for the excluſive trade to this bay, and for planting the country; and they have acted under it, ever ſince, with great benefit to themſelves, but little comparative advantage to the kingdom at large. They employ 4 ſhips, and 130 ſeamen, and have ſeveral forts; namely, Prince of Wales' Fort, Churchill River; York Fort, Nelſon River; New Severn; and Albany; which are all ſeated on the WSW. ſide of the Bay.

HUDSON'S RIVER, one of the fineſt rivers in N. America, riſing in a mountainous country, about half way between the Lakes Ontario and Champlain. It waters Albany and Hudſon, and proceeds, in a ſoutherly direction, to New York, where it enters the Atlantic Ocean, at York-Bay, after a courſe of 250 miles. The tide flows a few miles above Albany, which is 160 miles from New York. It is navigable for ſloops to Albany, and for ſhips to Hudſon.

HUDSON, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of New York, which was begun to be built in 1783, and has had the moſt rapid progreſs of any place in America, except Baltimore, in Maryland. It is ſeated on the E. ſide of Hudſon's River, 60 miles S. of Albany, and 100 N. of New York. Lat. 42. 23. N. lon. 73. 41. W.

HULL, or KINGSTON-UPON-HULL, a large handſome town in the E. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on a river called the Hull, on the N. ſide of the river Humber. It's commerce has increaſed ſo much of late years, that it is probably the fourth port in the kingdom. It's ſituation is extremely advantageous; for, beſides it's communication with the Yorkſhire rivers and canals, it has acceſs alſo, by the Humber, to the Trent, and all it's branches and communications. Hence it has the import and export trade of many of the northern and midland counties. By the late inland navigations, it has alſo a communication with the rivers Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Severn, Thames, Avon, &c. which navigation, including it's windings, extends above 500 miles in the coun[illegible] of Lincoln, Nottingham, York, Lancaſter, Weſtmorland, Cheſter, Staffordſhire, Warwick, Leiceſter, Oxford, Worceſter, &c. The foreign trade is chiefly to the Baltic; but it has alſo regular traffic with the ſouthern parts of Europe, and with America. More ſhips are ſent hence to Greenland than from any other port, that of London excepted. The coaſting-trade for coal, corn, wool, manufactured goods, &c. is very extenſive. The harbour is artificial, conſiſting of a dock, the largeſt in the kingdom, with which the river communicates. Among the public buildings, are the Trinity-Houſe, for the relief of ſeamen and their widows; an exchange, and a town-hall. The grand ſtone bridge, over the river, to Holderneſs, was rebuilt in 1787, and conſiſts of 14 arches. It is 36 miles SE. of York, and 173 N. of London. Lat. 53. 45. N. lon. 0. 14. W. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

HUMMOCH, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, about 6 miles in length. Here is a rajah, ſupported in his authority by the Dutch E. India Company. The natives reſemble the Malays, both in appearance and diſpoſition, but ſpeak the ſame language as the inhabitants of Mindanao. This iſland is exceedingly fertile, and produces moſt of the tropical fruits. But their principal articles of trade with the Dutch are bees-wax and honey. It lies about 15 miles S. of the S. point of Mindanao. Lat. 5. 27. N. lon. 125. 12. E.

Huncote, Linc. near Haſlingden. Huncote, SW. of Leiceſter. Hunderton, near Hereford. Hundleby, Linc. near Spilſby. Hundon, Staffordſhire, on the NW. ſide of Clare. Hundred, Berks, in Cheſham pariſh. Hundred Houſe, Worceſterſhire, near Woodbury and Aberley-Hills.

HUNGARY, a kingdom of Europe, bounded on the W. by Moravia and the circle of Auſtria; on the N. and NE. by Poland; on the E. by Walachia, Tranſylvania, and part of Moldavia; and on the S. by Servia and the river Drave, which ſeparates it from Sclavonia and Croatia. It is divided into Upper and Lower Hungary; and to theſe may be added the Bannat of Temeſwar, incorporated into the kingdom of Hungary, in 1778. Hungary formerly included Tranſylvania, Sclavonia, Dalmatia, Servia, Walachia, and other countries. The principal rivers are the Danube, Save, Drave, Theiſſe, Temes, Leitha, Raab, Waag, Gran, and Maros. The air in the ſouthern parts is unhealthy, occaſioned by the lakes and bogs, inſomuch that a ſort of plague viſits them every three or four years, on which account it is called the grave of the Germans. It abounds in all the neceſſaries of life, and the wine, eſpecially that called Tokay, is excellent. There are mines of gold, ſilver, copper, and iron; and they have ſuch plenty of game, that hunting is allowed to all. Almoſt all the towns of Hungary have two names, the one German, and the other Hungarian; and the language is a dialect of the Sclavonian. The government is hereditary in the houſe of Auſtria, whether male or female; and the eſtabliſhed religion is Popery, though there are a great number of Proteſtants. No country in the world is better ſupplied with minerals and baths; and thoſe of Buda, when the Turks had it in poſſeſſion, were reckoned the fineſt in Europe. Buda is the capital town of Lower Hungary, and Preſburg of the Upper.

* HUNGERFORD, a town of Berkſhire, ſeated on the river Kennet, and noted for the beſt trout and crawfiſh in England. It is 64 miles W. of London. Market on Wedneſday.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the W. and N. by Northamptonſhire, on the NE. and E. by Cambridgeſhire, and on the S. by a part of Cambridgeſhire and Bedfordſhire. It extends 22 miles from N. to S. and about 18 from E. to W. The principal rivers are the Ouſe and Nen. The borders of the Ouſe, which flows acroſs the SE. part, conſiſt of fertile and beautiful meadows. The middle and weſtern parts are finely varied in their ſurface, fertile in corn, and ſprinkled with woods. The whole upland part was, in ancient times, a foreſt, peculiarly adapted for hunting, whence the name of the county took it's riſe. The NE. part conſiſts of fens, which join thoſe of Ely; but they are drained, ſo as to afford rich paſturage for cattle, and even large crops of corn; and, in the midſt of them are ſhallow pools, abounding with fiſh. The largeſt of theſe is a lake of conſiderable ſize, called Whittleſea Mere. The air is good, except in the fenny parts, which are aguiſh. It's chief commodities are corn, malt, and cheeſe; and they fatten abundance of cattle.

JACKSON, PORT, a large bay on the coast of New South Wales, about 12 miles N. of Cape Banks, thought to be the finest harbour in the world. The capes at it's entrance, which is less than 2 miles across, are high, perpendicular cliffs, and within, it gradually expands into a noble bason, with soundings sufficient for the largest vessels, and space to accommodate, in perfect security, the greatest number that could be assembled. Ships may lie in 5¼ fathoms within 50 yards of the shore, and the channel (the surface of which is as smooth as a fish pond) has mostly 15 fathoms, gradually shoaling farther up. It runs, chiefly in a western direction, about 13 miles into the country, and contains at least a hundred small coves, formed by narrow necks of land, whose projections afford complete shelter from all winds. Sydney Cove lies on the S. side of the harbour, between 5 and 6 miles from the entrance. There is an abundance of fish in the harbour, most of which are unknown in England, besides oysters, cockles, and other shell fish.

Jacobstow, Cornwall, NE. of Half-drunken Downs.

JAEN, a district of Spain, extending 60 miles from N. to S. and nearly as much from E. to W. It was a kingdom in the time of the Moors, till annexed to the crown of Castile, and is now included in the government of Andalusia. It produces excellent fruits and very fine silk.

JAEN, a city of Andalusia, capital of a province of the same name. Lat. 37. 53. N. lon. 3. 40. W.

JAFFA, an ancient town of Asia, on the coast of Palestine, formerly called Joppa. The inhabitants are Turks or Arabs, with a mixture of Greeks, Maronites, and Armenians. The houses are small, and surrounded with the ruins of the ancient walls and towers. The ancient harbour is destroyed, but there is a good road. Here pilgrims, &c. pay for permission to visit the Holy Land. The whole coast, from hence to Damietta in Egypt, is desert and wild, without a single port. It is 38 miles NW. of Jerusalem. Lat. 31. 45. N. lon. 35. 55. E.

JAFNAPATAN, a sea-port of Ceylon, at the N. end of that island, and 100 miles N of Candy. The Dutch export hence great quantities of tobacco, and some elephants, which are accounted the most docile of any in the world. Lat. 9. 47. N. lon. 80. 45. E.

JAGARNAUT, a famous pagoda, in the peninsula of Hindoostan, and circar of Rajamundry. It lies on the Bay of Bengal, close to the shore, and a few miles to the E. of the Lake Chilka. It is a shapeless mass of building, and no otherwise remarkable than as an excellent seamark, and as one of the first objects of Hindoo veneration. Lat. 19. 35. N. lon. 85. 40. E.

JAGERNDORF, a fortified town and province of Silesia, subject to Prussia.

JAGHIRE OF THE CARNATIC, a tract of land, in the peninsula of Hindoostan, subject to the English East India Company. It extends along the Bay of Bengal, from Madras to Lake Pullicate on the N. to Alemparvé on the S. and to Conjeveram on the W. being 108 miles along the shore, and 47 inland in the widest part. The term Jaghire means a grant of land from the sovereign to a subject, revokable at pleasure, but generally a life-rent. It contains 2440 square miles, and it's revenue is about 150,000l. per annum.

JAGO, ST. a large river of South America, in Peru. It falls into the S. Sea, in lat. 1. 20. N. after having watered a fertile country, abounding in cotton-trees, palms, bamboos, &c.

JAGO, ST. the largest, most populous, and fertile of the Cape de Verd Islands, on the coast of Africa. It lies 6 leagues westward of the island of Mayo, and is very high land; and but for the continual rains in the time of the travadoes, which render it unpleasant, it would be as delightful an island as any in the world. The animals are, beeves, horses, asses, mules, deer, goats, hogs, civet-cats, and well proportioned monkeys. They have a great variety of fowl, as well as Indian corn, plantains, bananas, pompions, oranges, lemons, tamarinds, pine-apples, cocoa-nuts, guavas, tar, apples, and sugar-canes. They have also some cedar trees, and plenty of cotton. St. Jago, or Ribeira-Grande, in Port Praya Bay, is the capital. Lat. 14. 54. N. lon. 23. 30. W.

JAGO, ST. a considerable town of S. America, capital of Chili, with a good

JAMA, a fort and river in the government of Peterſburgh.

JAMAGOROD, a town in the government of Peterſburgh, ſeated on the river Jama, 12 miles NE. of Narva.

JAMAICA, an iſland of the W. Indies, diſcovered by Chriſtopher Columbus, in 1494, 37 miles S. of Cuba, and 50 W. of St. Domingo. It is about 120 miles in length, and 42 where broadeſt. It is of an oval figure, and grows narrower from the middle, till it terminates in two points at the extremities of the iſland. It contains between 4 and 5,000,000 of acres, and is divided by a ridge of hills, which runs nearly from E. to W. from ſea to ſea. Here abundance of fine rivers take their riſe, and flow from both ſides in gentle ſtreams, refreſhing the valleys as they glide along, and furniſhing the inhabitants with ſweet and cool water. They are well ſtored with excellent fiſh of various kinds, not known in Europe; and they have eels and crawfiſh in great plenty, not unlike ours. None of theſe rivers are navigable, even for barges; but ſome of them are ſo large, that the ſugars are carried upon them in canoes from the remote plantations to the ſea ſide; others of them run under ground for a conſiderable ſpace, particularly the Rio Cobre and the Rio-Pedra. The mountains, and indeed the greateſt part of the iſland, are covered with woods, which never loſe their verdure, but look green at all times of the year; for here is a perennial ſpring. There are a thouſand different kinds of trees adorning the brow of every hill, irregularly mixing their different branches, appearing in gay confuſion, and forming groves and cool retreats. Among theſe are the lignum vitæ, the cedar, and the mahogany trees. In the valleys are ſugar-canes, and ſuch a variety of fruit-trees, as to make the country look like a paradiſe. But to balance theſe advantages, there are dreadful alligators in the rivers; guiances and galliwaſps in the fens and marſhes; and ſnakes, and noxious animals, in the mountains. The days and nights are almoſt of an equal length all the year round. There are two ſprings, or ſeaſons, for planting grain, and the year is diſtinguiſhed into two ſeaſons, the wet and the dry. July, Auguſt, and September are called the hurricane months, becauſe then theſe dreadful tempeſts are moſt frequent, and there is lightning almoſt every night. Not above half of the iſland is cultivated, all the plantations being by the ſea ſide. Here and there are ſavannas, or large plains, where the original natives uſed to plant their Indian corn, and which the Spaniards afterwards made uſe of for breeding their cattle; but theſe are now quite bare and barren. The houſes are generally built low, being only one ſtory, on account of the hurricanes and earthquakes; and the negroes live in huts made of reeds, which hold only two or three perſons. The common drink is Madeira wine, or rum punch. The common bread, or that which ſerves for it, is plantains, yams, and caſſava-roots. The yams are like potatoes, only coarſer, and of a much larger ſize. But in 1793, a great number of the bread-fruit trees were brought here from the Iſland of Otaheite, by Captain Bligh, in the Providence frigate. Hogs are plentiful, and their mutton and lamb pretty good; but the ſervants generally feed upon Iriſh ſalt-beef, and the negroes have herrings and ſalt-fiſh. The current coin is all Spaniſh money. The general produce of this iſland is ſugar, rum, ginger, cotton, indigo, pimento, chocolate, ſeveral kinds of woods and medicinal drugs. They have ſome tobacco, tobacco, which is but indifferent, and uſed only by the negroes. They have no ſorts of European grain; but they have Indian corn, Guinea corn, and peaſe of various kinds, but none like ours, with variety of roots. Fruits are in great plenty, ſuch as Seville and China oranges, common and ſweet lemons, ſhadocks, citrons, pomegranates, mammes, ſourſops, papas, pine apples, ſtar apples, prickly pears, alicada pears, melons, pompions, guavas, and many other ſorts. The common diſtempers are, fevers, fluxes, and the dry gripes. Jamaica is divided into 3 counties, Middleſex, Surry, and Cornwall, in which are 6 towns and 27 villages. The legiſlature conſiſts of a governor, appointed by the king; a council; and houſe of aſſembly. In 1787, the number of negroes amounted to 250,000, the whites to 30,000, the freed negroes and people of colour to 10,000, and the Maroons (who have been ſince tranſported to Nova Scotia) to 1400. In the ſame year, the exports amounted, in the whole, to the ſum of 2,136,442l. 17s. 3d. ſterling, at the current London prices, and the imports to the ſum of 1,496,232l. 5s. 4d. The principal town is Kingſton; but St. Jago-de-la-Vega, or Spaniſh Town, is the ſeat of government. In 1655, Jamaica was taken from the Spaniards by the Engliſh, under Penn and Venables.

JAPAN ISLANDS, a large country of Aſia, ſituated to the eaſtward of China, Corea, and Tartary. It conſiſts of 3 large iſlands, the names of which are Niphon, or Xiphon, Ximo, and Xikoko, and ſeveral ſmaller ones. The whole empire is divided into 7 principal countries, which are ſubdivided into 70 provinces. It is the richeſt country in the world for gold, and the air and water are very good. It produces a great deal of rice, millet, wheat, and barley. Cedars are common, and ſo large, that they are proper for the maſts of ſhips, and columns for temples. Both their porcelain and japan are much better than thoſe articles are in China; they have alſo ſilk, ſkins, and red pearls, which are not in leſs eſteem than the white. Their horſes, though extremely ſmall, are very beautiful, and highly valued; and they have an art of tempering ſteel beyond any other nation in the world. They have tea of all ſorts much finer, and better cured than that of China. The inhabitants are very ingenious, and their manners are, in many reſpects diametrically oppoſite to thoſe of the Europeans. Our common drinks are cold, and theirs are all hot; the Europeans uncover the head out of reſpect, and they the feet; we are fond of white teeth, and they of black; we get on horſeback on the left ſide, and they on the right; and they have a language ſo peculiar, that it is underſtood by no other nation. The ſciences are highly eſteemed among them, and they have ſeveral ſchools at different places. Thoſe they ſtudy moſt are arithmetic, rhetoric, poetry, history, and aſtronomy. Some of their ſchools at Meaco have each 3 or 4000 ſcholars. They treat the women with great ſeverity, and puniſh adultery with death; yet a man may take as many wives as he pleaſes. The Japaneſe formerly carried on a trade with the neighbouring countries; but now all communication with others is forbidden, except the Chineſe, Coreans, the country of Jedſo, and with the Dutch. Formerly their emperors were alſo ſovereign pontiffs, and in the minority of one of them, when they had civil wars, one of the competitors of the crown aſſumed the eccleſiaſtical government, retaining the ancient title of Dairo, or Emperor; while the other, who ruled in civil affairs, was called Cubo; and things have remained on the ſame footing to this day. The Dairo is, at preſent, the nominal emperor, and confers the dignity upon the other, as if he were his vaſſal. He reſides at Meaco, and has no lands: but he has a right of ſelling titles and dignities; and the idolatrous prieſts make great contributions. He wears a black habit, and a cap upon his head. His feet muſt never touch the ground, nor muſt he ever be expoſed to the rays of the ſun. He never cuts his hair, nor his beard, nor his nails; and all his victuals muſt be dreſt in new veſſels. When he goes abroad, he is carried by 14 men in a litter, ſurrounded with curtains, ſo that he may ſee, and not be ſeen. He has generally 12 wives, who have each a palace, with ſinging and dancing women for his diverſion. He has alſo an unlimited number of concubines. His palace is adorned with 365 idols. The Cubo, however, is the real emperor, and bears an abſolute dominion over all civil and military affairs throughout the empire. The Dairo, therefore, may be conſidered as only the high prieſt, while the Cubo is now the real monarch of Japan. The religion of the whole country is Paganiſm; but there are two different ſects; one of which is ſubjected to the moſt painful ſeverities; the other abandons itſelf to the moſt voluptuous enjoyments. There were once a great number of Chriſtians, proſelytes to the Jeſuit miſſionaries, in different parts of the empire; but, in 1622, they underwent great perſecutions, inſomuch that they were, at length, all rooted out. The cauſe of this was the oppoſition of the prieſts; the haughty behaviour of the Portugueſe, they not allowing ſeveral wives; and the perſuaſions of the Dutch, who told them, that their emperor would become a ſlave to the Pope, and to the king of Spain. The emperor of Japan is monarch paramount, and all the petty kings are his vaſſals. His army generally conſiſts of 100,000 foot, and 20,000 horſe, excluſive of thoſe maintained by his vaſſals. His ordinary revenue is immenſe. The palace of the emperor is at Jeddo, in the iſland of Niphon, and it is the capital of the whole. The only Europeans that trade with Japan are the Dutch; and whenever their ſhips arrive, they take away their guns, ſails, and helms, and carry them on ſhore, till they are ready to return back. In the abſence of the ſhips, the factors are ſhut up in a ſmall peninſula, and are not ſuffered ſo much as to have a lighted candle in their houſes in the night time. The merchandiſe which the Dutch carry to Japan are ſpices, ſugar, ſilks, linen and woollen cloths, elephants' teeth, haberdaſhery wares, raw hides, drugs, and glaſſes of all ſorts; for which they receive gold, ſilver, copper, iron, and ſteel; porcelain, japanned and lackered wares, furs, tea, precious ſtones, ambergris, and medicinal herbs. The Japaneſe have neither tables, beds, nor chairs, but they ſit and lie on carpets and mats, in the manner of the Turks.

JAPARA, a town of Java, ſeated on the N. coaſt, with a good harbour. It was the capital of a conſiderable kingdom, till the Dutch made themſelves maſters of it; and now they have a colony here, and a conſiderable trade. It is 200 miles E. of Batavia. Lat. 6. 35. S. lon. 111. 5. E.

JAVA, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, generally known by the name of Great Java, to diſtinguiſh it from Bali, by ſome named the Leſſer Java; and is upwards of 600 miles in length, and from 60 to 80 in breadth. The N. coaſt has a great many commodious creeks, bays, harbours, and towns, with many little iſlands near the ſhore. In former times, it had as many petty kings as there were large towns; but now it has two kingdoms only; one of which is under the juriſdiction of the king of Mataram, and the other under the king of Bantam. The inhabitants are of a brown complexion, have faces rather flat, ſhort coal-black hair, large eye-brows, and large cheeks, with ſmall eyes. The men are very robuſt and ſtrong limbed; but the women are ſmall. The men wear a piece of calico wrapt two or three times round their middle; and the women wear them from their arm pits down to their knees; but all other parts are bare. Thoſe living near the ſea-ſide are generally Mahometans; but within land they are Gentoos, abſtaining from fleſh of all kinds. It is a fertile iſland, producing ſugar and the various tropical fruits; and it has very high mountains. It has likewiſe impaſſable foreſts and wilderneſſes; but the N. between Batavia and Bantam, is a very populous country, full of rice-fields, and various ſorts of wild and tame animals. Here alſo is plenty of ſalt, pepper, caſſia, wood uſeful for building, gum benzoin, &c. beſide flowering trees and ſhrubs, and moſt ſorts of fruits proper to the climate. They have alſo hogs, beeves, and ſheep, with other tame creatures; and likewiſe fowl, both wild and tame, in great abundance, among which are beautiful parroquets, peacocks of an extraordinary ſize, Bantam fowls, &c. In the woods are large tigers, rhinoceroſes, and ſeveral other animals unknown in Europe; and in the rivers are crocodiles. The air is as temperate and healthy as any part of the Eaſt Indies. The rains, which begin in November, lay the low grounds under water, kill the inſects, and continue till the return of May. The coaſts of the iſland are moſtly under the dominion of the Dutch. Beſide the native Javaneſe, here are Chineſe, Malayans, Amboyneſe, Topaſſes, Bugaſſes, Timoreans, and many other people, brought from diſtant countries by the Dutch. Java lies to the SE. of the Iſland of Sumatra, from which it is only ſeparated by the Straits of Sunda. Lat. 5. 45. to 7. 50, S. lon. 104. 20. to 114. 15. E.

ICE, VALLEY OF. See GLACIERS.

ICELAND, a large iſland to the N. of Europe, about 600 miles in length, and 300 in breadth. For two months together the ſun never ſets; and in the winter it never riſes for the ſame ſpace, at leaſt not entirely. The middle of this iſland is mountainous, ſtony, and barren; but in ſome places there are excellent paſtures, and the graſs has a fine ſmell. The ice, which gets looſe from the more northern country in May, brings with it a large quantity of wood, and ſeveral animals, ſuch as foxes, wolves, and bears. Mount Hecla is the moſt noted mountain, and is a volcano, which ſometimes throws out ſulphureous torrents. Their houſes are ſcattered about at a diſtance from each other, and many of them are deep in the ground, but they are moſtly miſerable huts, covered with ſkins. Many of the natives profeſs Chriſtianity; but thoſe that live at a diſtance are Pagans. Some of them are clothed with ſkins of beaſts. The exports are dried fiſh, ſalted mutton, beef, butter, train oil, tallow, coarſe and fine jackets of Wadmal, woollen ſtockings and gloves, red wool, ſheep ſkins, ſea-horſes' teeth, fox tails of ſeveral colours, feathers, and quills. The imports are iron, horſes ſhoes, timber, meal, wine, brandy, tobacco, coarſe linen, and domeſtic utenſils. The number of inhabitants is about 50,000. Their language is the old Runic, or Gothic, the vernacular tongue of the Swedes, Danes, and Norwegians, before it branched into the ſeveral dialects ſince ſpoken by the natives of theſe three kingdoms. Lat. 63. 15. to 67. 15. N. lon. 16. to 25. W.

JEAN-DE-LONE, ST. a town in the dept. of Côte d'Or, ſeated on the river Saone, 15 miles nearly S. of Dijon, and 115 SE. of Paris. Lat. 47. 8. N. lon. 5. 19. E.

JEAN-DE-LUZ, ST. a town in the dept. of Lower Pyrenees, the laſt next Spain, with a harbour. This little town owes it's opulence to the cod and whale fiſhery. It is ſeated on a ſmall river, near the ſea, 12 miles SW. of Bayonne, and 315 S. by W. of Paris. Lat. 43. 23. N. lon. 1. 40. W.

JEAN-DE-MAURIENNE, ST. a town in the dept. of Mont Blanc, capital of the county of Maurienne, in a valley of the ſame name. It is ſeated on the river Arc, 15 miles S. by W. of Montier, and 25 NE. of Grenoble. Lat. 45. 17. N. lon. 6. 24. E.

JEAN-PIED-DE-PORT, ST. a conſiderable town in the dept. of Lower Pyrenees. It is ſeated on the river Nive, at the entrance of thoſe paſſages, or defiles, in the Pyrenees, which, in this country, are called Ports. It is 20 miles SE. of Bayonne, and 30 NE. of Pampeluna. Lat. 43. 12. N. lon. 1. 22. W.

JED, a river of Roxburghſhire, which runs into the Teviot, 2 miles N. of Jedburgh. On the banks of this river are ſeveral large caverns, which were the ſtrong holds, or hiding places, of the ancient border warriors.

JEDBURGH, a town of Roxburghſhire, ſituated almoſt in the centre of the county, on the banks of the Jed, and near it's confluence with the Teviot. It contains near 3000 inhabitants, and is the ſeat of the law-courts for the county. It is 34 miles SE. of Edinburgh.

JEDDO, or YEDDO, the ſecond capital of Japan, in the Iſland of Niphon, where the dairo, or nominal emperor, reſides. The houſes are built with earth, and boarded on the outſide, to prevent the rain from deſtroying the walls. In every ſtreet is an iron gate, which is ſhut up in the night, and a kind of cuſtom houſe or magazine, to put merchandiſe in. It is 9 miles in length and 6 in breadth, and contains 1,000,000 inhabitants. A fire happened in 1658, which, in the ſpace of 48 hours, burnt down 100,000 houſes, and in which a great number of the inhabitants periſhed. The emperor's palace was reduced to aſhes; but the whole is rebuilt. The royal palace is in the middle of the town, and is defended by walls, ditches, towers, and baſtions. Where the emperor reſides are three towers, nine ſtories high, each covered with plates of gold; and the hall of audience is ſupported by pillars of maſſy gold. Near the palace are ſeveral others, where the relations of the emperor live. The empreſs has a palace of her own, and there are 20 ſmall ones for the concubines. Beſides, all the vaſſal kings have each a palace in the city, with a handſome garden, and ſtables for 2000 horſes. The generality of the houſes are nothing but a ground floor, and rooms are parted by folding ſcreens: ſo that they can make the rooms larger or ſmaller at pleaſure. Jeddo is ſeated in a plain, at the bottom of an extenſive gulf or bay; and the river, which croſſes it, is divided into ſeveral canals. Lat. 35. 46. N. lon. 139. 30. E.

JERSEY, an iſland in the Engliſh Channel, 18 miles from the coaſt of the dept. of the Channel, and 84 S. of Portland in Dorſetſhire, ſubject to the Engliſh. It is about 12 miles long and 6 broad, and is difficult of acceſs, on account of the rocks and ſands. It contains 12 pariſhes: the principal towns are St. Helier, in the S. part of the iſland, and St. Aubin. It lies extremely well for trade. It is well watered with rivulets, and is well ſtocked with fruit-trees. They have a noted manufacture for woollen ſtockings and caps. The civil government is intruſted to a bailiff and 12 jurats, under a governor appointed by the crown. Round towers have been erected on all the acceſſible parts of the coaſt, ſince the year 1781, when a body of French, under the Baron de Rullecourt, effected a landing, but were all either killed, wounded, or taken priſoners. Lat. 49. 11. N. lon. 2. 10. W.

JERSEY, NEW, one of the United States of N. America, bounded on the E. by Hudſon's River and the Atlantic Ocean; on the S. by the Atlantic, and the Bay of Delaware; on the W. by Pennſylvania and the ſtate of Delaware, from both which it is ſeparated by the river of that name; and on the N. by a line drawn from the mouth of Mahakkamak River, in lat. 41. 24. to a point in Hudſon's River, in lat. 41. It is 161 miles long and 52 broad. It is divided into 13 counties. It's produce is much the ſame as that of the neighbouring ſtates. The principal towns are Burlington, Amboy, Brunſwick, and Trenton.

JERUSALEM, an ancient and celebrated city of Aſia, formerly capital of the kingdoms of Iſrael and Judah, after David had conquered the Jebuſites. It was taken by Nebuchadnezzar, in the eleventh year of the reign of Zedekiah, and the Jews were led captive to Babylon. It was afterwards taken by the Romans, and ruined, together with the temple, 70 years after the birth of Chriſt, being one of the moſt remarkable ſieges in hiſtory. The emperor Adrian built a new city, near the ruins of ancient Jeruſalem. It was taken by the Perſians in 614, and by the Saracens in 636. In 1099 it was retaken by the Cruſaders, who founded a new kingdom which laſted near 63 years, under 5 Latin kings, and 8 patriarchs in the church. Saladin, king of Egypt and Syria, got poſſeſſion of it in 1187. The Turks drove away the Saracens in 1217, have kept poſſeſſion of it ever ſince, and call it HELEODS, that is, the Holy City. It is now inhabited by Turks, Arabs, Jews, and Chriſtians. It ſtands on a high rock, rock, with ſteep aſcents upon every ſide, except to the N. It is almoſt ſurrounded with valleys encompaſſed with mountains, ſo that it ſeems to ſtand in the middle of an amphitheatre. It is about 3 miles in circumference, and includes Mount Calvary, which was formerly without the walls. On this hill is erected a large ſtructure, with a round nave, which has no light but what comes through the top, like the Pantheon at Rome. This is called the Church of the Holy Sepulchre; the chapel is cut out of the rock, and lamps are kept conſtantly burning in it. The Chriſtian pilgrims flock here from various parts, and the inhabitants accommodate them with lodgings and proviſions, which is their chief buſineſs, and a baſhaw, with a guard of janizaries, always reſides here, to protect them from the inſults of the Arabs. Jeruſalem is 112 miles SSW. of Damaſcus, and 45 from the Mediterranean Sea. Lat. 31. 55. N. lon. 35. 25. E.

JIONPOUR, a ſmall city of Hindooſtan Proper, capital of a circar of the ſame name, in the diſtrict of Benares. It is ſeated on the river Goomty, and was, at one time, the ſeat of an empire. Chaja Jehan, vizier to Sultan Mahummud Shah, during the minority of his ſon, Mamood Shah, aſſumed the title of Sultan Shirki, or King of the Eaſt, took poſſeſſion of Bahar, and fixed his reſidence at Jionpour, where he built the great musjud, or mauſoleum, which is ſtill remaining, for himſelf and family. The bridge over the Goomty is built of ſtone, and conſiſts of 16 pointed arches. On the top of the bridge are many little ſhops on both ſides, built of ſtone. It was built in 1567, upon ſuch ſound principles, as to have withſtood for ſuch a length of time, the force of the ſtream, which, in the time of the rains, is very great. The inundations have been known to riſe frequently over the bridge, inſomuch, that in 1774, a whole brigade of the Britiſh Army (that is, 10,000 men) paſſed over it in boats. Jionpour is 40 miles NW. of Benares. Lat. 25. 45. N. lon. 82. 55. E.

IMERITIA, or more properly IMIRETTA, a country of Aſia, between the Black Sea and the Caſpian; bounded on the S. by Georgia; on the W. by Mingrelia; on the N. by Oſſetia; and on the E. by the Perſian dominions. This country, properly ſpeaking, is a part of Georgia. The late ſovereign, the Czar Solomon, having forbidden the ſcandalous traffic of the noblemen in their peaſants, offended the Turks ſo much, that he was driven from his throne, and compelled to live like a wild man, for 16 years, in the woods and caverns of the mountains, till the Ruſſians reinſtated him in his dominions. The revenues ariſe from a contribution of the peaſants in wine, grain, and cattle, and from the tribute of the neighbouring princes. Among the extraordinary ſources of revenue, confiſcations have a conſiderable ſhare; but as all this is inſufficient for the ſubſiſtence of the prince, he uſually travels from houſe to houſe, and is entertained by his vaſſals, never changing his quarters, while they have the means of accommodating him. It will, of courſe, be underſtood, that the court of Imeritia is not remarkable for ſplendor, nor the prince's table ſumptuouſly ſerved. His uſual fare conſiſts of gom (a ſpecies of millet, ground and boiled into a paſte) a piece of roaſted meat, and ſome preſſed caviar. Theſe he eats with his fingers; forks and ſpoons being unknown in this country. At table he is frequently employed in judging cauſes, which he decides at his diſcretion, there being no law but his own will. He uſually wears a coarſe dreſs of a brown colour, with a muſket upon his ſhoulder; but, upon ſolemn occaſions, he puts on a robe of rich gold brocade, and hangs round his neck a ſilver chain. He is diſtinguiſhed from his ſubjects, by riding upon an aſs, and by wearing boots. His civil ordinances are iſſued weekly, on the market day, by one of his ſervants, who aſcends a tree, and with a loud voice proclaims the edict, which is communicated to the people, by each perſon, upon his return to the place of his abode. The inhabitants, eſtimated at about 20,000 families, are ſcattered over the country in ſmall hamlets. They are leſs mixed with foreigners, and are accounted handſomer than the other Georgians. They are likewiſe wife more induſtrious: they ſend yearly conſiderable quantities of wine to the neighbouring parts of Georgia, in leathern bags, carried by horſes; but they are without manufactures, very poor and miſerable, and cruelly oppreſſed by their landlords. The Imeritians are of the Greek religion, and their patriarch is generally of the royal family, and can ſeldom read or write. Cutais is the capital of the preſent prince, the Czar David.

Inchmarnock, a beautiful little iſland, SW. of Bute, on the W coaſt of Scotland.

INDIA, an extenſive region in Aſia, which lies between 66 and 108 deg. E. lon. and 8 and 36 deg. N. lat. Under this name is generally underſtood all the countries which lie S. of Tartary, and extend from the eaſtern frontiers of Perſia to the weſtern coaſts of China, divided into India within, and India without, the Ganges. The moderns have likewiſe included, under the denomination of the Eaſt Indies, the iſlands of Japan, with all the iſlands in the Eaſtern and Indian Oceans, nearly as far as New Holland and New Guinea. But the name of India is moſt frequently applied to that country only, which is diſtinguiſhed in Aſia, as well as in Europe, by the name of Hindooſtan. See HINDOOSTAN.

INDIES, WEST, the name given to a great number of iſlands in the Atlantic Ocean, which extend from the NW. extremity of the Bahama Iſlands, off the coaſt of Florida, in lat. 27. 45. N. in a ſouth-eaſterly direction to the Iſland of Tobago, which is 120 miles from the coaſt of Terra-Firma, in 11 deg. 30 min. N. lat. They lie between 59 and 86 deg. W. lon. Cuba being the moſt weſtern, and Barbadoes the moſt eaſtern of all theſe iſlands. When Chriſtopher Columbus diſcovered them in 1492, he conſidered them as part of thoſe vaſt regions in Aſia, comprehended under the general name of India, to reach which, by a courſe due W. acroſs the Atlantic Ocean, had been the grand object of his voyage; and this opinion was ſo general, that Ferdinand and Iſabella, king and queen of Caſtile, in their ratification of their agreement, granted to Columbus, upon his return, gave them alſo the name of Indies. Even after the error which gave riſe to this opinion was detected, and the true poſition of the New World was aſcertained, the name has remained, and the appellation of the Weſt Indies is ſtill given to theſe iſlands, and that of Indians to the inhabitants, not only of the iſlands, but of the two continents of America. They are likewiſe called the Caribbee Iſlands, from the aborigines of the country, and the ſea in which they lie, is ſometimes called, by modern geographers, the Archipelago of the Caribbees. By the French, they are called the Greater and Leſs Antilles; and nautical men diſtinguiſh them, from the different courſes taken by ſhips, into the Leeward and Windward Iſlands. The name of the Caribbees ſhould properly be confined to the ſmaller iſlands, which lie between Porto Rico and Tobago. Theſe were inhabited by the Caribbees, a hardy race of men, nowiſe reſembling their feeble and timid neighbours in the larger iſlands. Even in later times, they have made a ſtout reſiſtance in defence of the laſt territory (the Iſland of St. Vincent) which the rapacity of their invaders had left in their poſſeſſion. The reader will find moſt of theſe iſlands treated of ſeparately.

INDIANS of NORTH and SOUTH AMERICA, the original natives of theſe two vaſt continents. Of the manners of the North American Indians, the reader may have a general idea, by an account of thoſe who inhabit the countries to the E. of the river Miſſiſſippi. Theſe conſiſt of 28 different nations; the principal of which are the Cherokees, the Chicaſaws, the Choctaws, the Creeks, the Delawares, the ſix Nations, the Shawaneſe, the Hurons, the Illinois, &c. Allowing about 700 to a nation or tribe, they will contain, in all 20,000 people. The Indians are not born white; and take a great deal of pains to darken their complexion, by anointing themſelves with greaſe, and lying in the ſun. They alſo alſo paint their face, breaſts, and ſhoulders of various colours, but generally red; and their features are neat, eſpecially thoſe of the women. They are of a middle ſtature, their limbs clean and ſtraight, and ſcarcely any crooked or deformed perſon is to be found among them. In many parts of their bodies they tatoo themſelves, or prick in gunpowder in very pretty figures. Some ſhave, or pluck the hair off their heads, except a patch about the crown, which is ornamented with beautiful feathers, beads, wampum, and ſuch like baubles: and except the head and eyebrows, they pluck the hair with great diligence, from all parts of the body. Their ears are pared and ſtretched in a thong down to their ſhoulders. They are wound round with wire to expand them, and adorned with ſilver pendants, rings, and bells, which they likewiſe wear in their noſes. Some of them will have a large feather through the cartilage of the noſe; and thoſe who can afford it, wear a collar of wampum, a ſilver breaſtplate, and bracelets on the arms and wriſts. A bit of cloth about the middle, a ſhirt of the Engliſh make, on which they beſtow innumerable broaches to adorn it, a ſort of cloth boot and mockaſons, which are ſhoes of a make peculiar to the Indians, ornamented with porcupine quills, with a blanket or match-coat thrown over all, complete their dreſs at home; but when they go on expeditions, they leave their trinkets behind, and mere neceſſaries ſerve them. There is little difference between the dreſs of the men and women, excepting that a ſhort petticoat, and the hair, which is exceeding black and long, clubbed behind, diſtinguiſh ſome of the latter. They are ſuch expert markſmen, that they will kill birds flying, fiſhes ſwimming, and wild beaſts running. They are very intelligent people, quick of apprehenſion, ſudden in execution, ſubtle in buſineſs, exquiſite in invention, and induſtrious in action. They are of a very gentle and amiable diſpoſition to thoſe they think their friends, but as implacable in their enmity; their revenge being only completed in the entire deſtruction of their enemies. They are very hardy, bearing heat, cold, hunger, and thirſt, in a ſurpriſing manner; and yet no people are more addicted to exceſs in eating and drinking, when it is conveniently in their power. The follies, nay miſchief, they commit, when inebriated, are entirely laid to the liquor; and no one will revenge any injury, (murder excepted) received from one who is no more himſelf. Among the Indians all men are equal, perſonal qualities being moſt eſteemed. No diſtinction of birth, no rank, renders any man capable of doing prejudice to the rights of private perſons; and there is no pre-eminence from merit, which begets pride, and which makes others too ſenſible of their own inferiority. Though there is perhaps leſs delicacy of ſentiment in the Indians than among us, there is, however, abundantly more probity, with far leſs ceremony, or equivocal compliments. Their public conferences ſhew them to be men of genius; and they have, in a high degree, the talent of natural, or unſtudied eloquence. They live diſperſed in ſmall villages, either in the woods, or on the banks of rivers, where they have little plantations of Indian corn and roots, not enough to ſupply their families half the year; and ſubſiſt the remainder of it by hunting, fiſhing and fowling, and the fruits of the earth, which grow ſpontaneouſly in great plenty. Their huts are generally built of ſmall logs, and covered with bark, each one having a chimney, and a door, on which they place a padlock. One of their towns, called Old Chelicothe, is built in form of a Kentucky ſtation, that is, a parallelogram, or long ſquare; and ſome of their houſes are ſhingled. A long council-houſe extends the whole length of the town, where the chiefs of the nation frequently meet and conſult of all matters of importance. Some huts are built by ſetting up a frame on forks, and placing bark againſt it; others of reeds, and ſurrounded with clay. The fire is in the middle of the wigwam, and the ſmoke paſſes through a little hole. They join reeds together by cords run through them, which ſerve them for tables and beds. They moſtly lie upon ſkins of wild beaſts, and ſit on the ground. They have braſs kettles and pots to boil their food. Gourds or calabaſhes, cut aſunder, ſerve them for pails, cups, and diſhes. The accounts of travellers, concerning their religion, are various. All agree that they acknowledge one Supreme God. They adore the Great Spirit, and believe that his care is extended over them; and, that 'he puts good into their hearts.' They alſo believe in a future ſtate; that after death they ſhall be removed to their friends, who have gone before them, to an elyſium, or paradiſe. The Wyandotts, near Detroit, and ſome others, have embraced the Romiſh faith, introduced among them by miſſionaries. The Shawaneſe, Cherokees, Chicaſaws, and ſome others are little concerned about religion. They have their feſtivals, and other rejoicing days, on which they dance and ſing in a ring, taking hands, having ſo painted and diſguiſed themſelves, that it is difficult to know any of them; and after enjoying this diverſion for a while, they retire to the place where they have prepared a feaſt of fiſh, fleſh, fowls, and fruits; to which all are invited, and entertained with their country ſongs. They believe that there is great virtue in feaſts for the ſick. For this purpoſe, a young buck muſt be killed, and boiled, the friends and near neighbours of the patient invited, and having firſt thrown tobacco on the fire, and covered it up cloſe, they all ſit down in a ring, and raiſe a lamentable cry. They then uncover the fire, and kindle it up; and the head of the buck is firſt ſent about, every one taking a bit, and giving a loud croak, in imitation of crows. They afterward proceed to eat all the buck, making a moſt harmonious, melancholy ſong; in which ſtrain their muſic is particularly excellent. As they approach their towns, when ſome of their people are loſt in war, they make great lamentations for their dead; and their cries of woe are anſwered by thoſe within. They bear their deceaſed friends long in remembrance, often viſit their graves, and even deck out their putrid remains with their beſt ſkins and other finery. Some nations abhor adultery, do not approve of a plurality of wives, and are not guilty of theft; but there are other tribes that are not ſo ſcrupulous. Among the Chickaſaws, a huſband may cut off the nole of his wife, if guilty of adultery; but men are allowed greater liberty. This nation deſpiſes a thief. Among the Cherokees they cut off the noſe and ears of an adultereſs; afterward her huſband gives her a diſcharge. Their form of marriage is ſhort: the man, before witneſſes, gives the bride a deer's foot, and ſhe in return, preſents him with an ear of corn, as emblems of their ſeveral duties. The women are very ſlaves, in many inſtances to the men; in others, they are upon an equal footing, deliberating in the public aſſemblies, and in private life, enjoying the priviiege of declaring their affection, or paying their addreſſes to thoſe they love. They are charged with being revengeful; but this revenge is ſeldom executed, but in caſes of murder and adultery; and indeed, the murderer is generally delivered up to the friends of the deceaſed, to do as they pleaſe. When one kills another, the deceaſed's friend kills him, and ſo they continue avenging one anothers death until much blood is ſhed; and at laſt the quarrel is ended by mutual preſents. Sometimes a chief, when offended, breaks off with a party, ſettles at ſome diſtance, and then commences hoſtilities againſt his own people. When they take captives in war, they are exceedingly cruel, treating the unhappy priſoners in ſuch a manner, that death would be preferable to life. They afterward give them plenty of food, load them with burdens, and when they arrive at their towns, they muſt run the gauntlet. In this, they exerciſe ſo much cruelty, that one would think it impoſſible they ſhould ſurvive their ſufferings. Many are killed; but if one outlives this trial, he is adopted into a family as a ſon, and treated with paternal kindneſs; and if he avoids their ſuſpicions of going away, he is allowed the ſame privileges as their own people. But ſometimes their priſoners are deſtined to be tortured to death, in order to ſatiate the revenge of their conquerors. While their lot is in ſuſpenſe, the priſoners themſelves appear altogether unconcerned about what may befal them. They talk, they eat, they ſleep, as if there were no danger impending: when the fatal ſentence is intimated to them, they receive it with an unaltered countenance, raiſe their death-ſong, and prepare to ſuffer like men. The victors aſſemble as to a ſolemn feſtival, reſolved to put the fortitude of the captives to the utmoſt proof. A ſcene enſues, the bare deſcription of which is enough to chill the heart with horror. The priſoners are tied naked to a ſtake, but ſo as to be at liberty to move round it. All preſent, men, women, and children, fall upon them with knives and other inſtruments; and ſuch is their cruel ingenuity in torturing, that, by avoiding to touch the vital part, they often prolong the ſcene of anguiſh for ſeveral days. In ſpite of all their ſufferings, the victims continue to chant their death-ſong with a firm voice, they boaſt of their own exploits, they inſult their tormentors for their want of ſkill to avenge the death of their friends and relations, they warn them of the vengeance that awaits them on account of what they are now doing, and excite their ferocity by the moſt provoking reproaches and threats. To diſplay undaunted fortitude in ſuch dreadful ſituations, is the nobleſt triumph of a warrior: to avoid the trial by a voluntary death, or to ſhrink under it, is deemed cowardly and infamous. If any one betray ſymptoms of timidity, his tormentors often diſpatch him at once, with contempt, as unworthy being treated like a man. Animated by thoſe ideas, they endure, without a groan, what what it seems almost impossible that human nature should sustain. Weary, at length, with contending with men, whose constancy they cannot vanquish, some chief puts a period to their sufferings, by dispatching them with his dagger or his club. The people of S. America gratify their revenge in a manner somewhat different, but with the same unrelenting rancour. Their prisoners, after meeting, at their first entrance, with the same rough reception as among the N. Americans, are not only exempt from injury, but treated with the greatest apparent kindness, feasted and caressed. But, by a refinement of cruelty, while they seem studious to attach their captives to life, their doom is irrevocably fixed. On an appointed day, the victorious tribe assembles, the prisoner is brought forth with great solemnity, he meets his lot with undaunted firmness, and is dispatched with a single blow. The moment he falls, the women seize the body, and dress it for the feast. They besmear their children with the blood, in order to kindle in their bosoms a hatred of their enemies, and all join in feeding upon the flesh with amazing greediness and exultation. Wherever this practice prevails, captives never escape death; but they are not tortured with the same cruelty as among tribes which are less accustomed to such horrid feasts. The Indians of S. America immediately under the Spanish government, although the most depressed order of men in the country which belonged to their ancestors, are now far from being treated with that rigour and cruelty which was laid to the charge of the first conquerors of that continent. They are no longer considered as slaves: on the contrary, they are reputed as freemen, and entitled to the privileges of subjects. A certain tax, or tribute, is indeed imposed upon them, and certain services required; but these are all under the due regulations of policy and humanity. The Indians who live in the principal towns, are entirely subject to the Spanish laws and magistrates; but, in their own villages, they are governed by caciques, some of whom are the decendants of their ancient lords; others are named by the Spanish viceroys. These regulate the petty affairs of the people under them, according to maxims of justice, transmitted to them by tradition from their ancestors. To the Indians, this jurisdiction lodged in such friendly hands, affords some consolation; and so little formidable is this dignity to their new masters, that they often allow it to descend by hereditary right. For the farther relief of men so much exposed to oppression, the Spanish court has appointed an officer in every district, with the title of Protector of the Indians. It is his duty, as the name implies, to assert the rights of the Indians; to appear as their defender in the courts of justice; and to set bounds to the encroachments and exactions of his countrymen. A portion of the annual tribute is destined for the salaries of the caciques and protectors; another part is appropriated to the payment of their tribute in years of famine, or when a particular district is afflicted by any extraordinary local calamity. Provision too is made, by various laws, that hospitals should be founded in every new settlement, for the reception of Indians. Such hospitals have accordingly been erected, both for the indigent and infirm, in Lima, Cuzco, and Mexico, where the Indians are treated with tenderness and humanity. See ESKIMAUX, INDIES WEST, PATAGONIA, and ST. VINCENT'S.

INDORE, a modern city of Hindoostan, capital of a territory in the province of Malwa, subject to a Mahratta chief. It is 30 miles S. of Ongein. Lat. 22. 56. N. lon. 76. 11. E.

INDRE AND LOIRE, a department of France, lying to the NW. of the department of Indre. Tours is the capital.

INDUS, a great river of Hindoostan, called by the natives Sinde, or Sindeh. It is formed of about ten principal streams, which descend from the Persian and Tartarian mountains; but, according to Major Rennell, the sources of these streams must be far more remote than the sides of these mountains. From the city of Attock, in about lat. 32. 27. downward to Moulton, to the conflux of the Jenaub, or Chunaub, it is commonly named the river of Attock. Below the city of Moultan, it proceeds in a SW. direction, through the province of that name, and that of Sinde, enters the Western Indian Ocean by several mouths, NW. of the Gulf of Cutch. It is a fine, deep, and navigable river, for vessels of any burden; the different branches are also most of them navigable to a great extent: it's mouth, however, is so choked up with ſand, that no ſhip can enter it.

INGRIA, a province of the Ruſſian empire, which now forms the government of of St. Peterſburgh. It is bounded on the N. by the river Neva and the Gulf of Finland, on the E. and S. by the government of Novogorod and that of Pleſkow, and on the W. by the Gulf of Finland and the governments of Eſthonia and Riga. It is about 130 miles long and 50 broad. The Czar Peter the Great wreſted it from the Swedes, and it was confirmed to him by the treaty of Nyſtadt in 1721. At this time, the inhabitants of the flat country were a Finniſh people, but little different from the Fins of Carelia, as to their language and manners. They were called Iſchortzi, from the river Iſchora, which runs into the Neva. Ingria did not retain it's ancient Swediſh privileges; on the contrary, Peter made a preſent of one part of the Iſchortzi to certain Ruſſian nobles; who, on their ſide, were obliged to people the leſs cultivated cantons of Ingria, with colonies of Ruſſians from their eſtates; and thence it is, that we often ſee a village of Ruſſians ſurrounded by villages of Finns. Before the conqueſt of this country, the Ingrians had Lutheran preachers for every canton; but numbers of them have ſince conformed to the profeſſion of the Greek faith. The country abounds with various wild animals, particularly rein-deer.

* INVERNESS, a town of Scotland, capital of a county of the ſame name, pleaſantly ſituated on the S. bank of the river Neſs, and overlooking the Frith of Murray. It has a ſafe and convenient harbour, and a good deal of ſhipping. Several large buildings have been erected on the N. ſide of the town, in which a conſiderable manufactory of ropes and canvaſs is carried on. It is a royal burgh, holding it's firſt charter from Malcom Canmore, and is a populous and flouriſhing place. Over the river Neſs is a handſome bridge of ſeven arches. The ſalmon fiſhery in this river is very conſiderable, and is let to ſome fiſhmongers of London. A little to the W. of this town, is the remarkable vitrified fort, called Craig Phadrick; the ſtones, compoſing it's walls, appear to have been partly melted by fire. Inverneſs is 50 miles NE. of Fort William, and 106 NNW. of Edinburgh. Lat. 57. 30. N. lon. 4. 5. W.

INVERNESS, the moſt extenſive county of Scotland, bounded on the W. by the ocean; on the N. by Roſsſhire; on the E. by the counties of Nairne, Murray, Aberdeen, and Perth; and on the S. by thoſe of Perth and Argyle. It's extent from N. to S. is 45 miles; and from E. to W. about 75. The northern part is very mountainous and barren. The woody mountains are the haunts of ſtags and roes. The capercailzie is alſo ſeen ſometimes among the lofty pines; the heath is poſſeſſed by wild fowl; and the lofty ſummits by ptarmigans and Alpine hares. This county has ſeveral conſiderable lakes; being divided, in a manner, into two equal parts, by Loch Neſs, Loch Oich, Loch Lochy, and Loch Eil; all which might be united by a canal, that would form a communication between the two ſeas. The great lakes in this county are ſeldom or never known to freeze; much leſs are the arms of the ſea, even in the moſt northern parts of Scotland, ſubject to be frozen in the hardeſt ſeaſons; while the Texel, and many bays and great rivers in Holland and Germany, are covered with ice. The ſouthern part of the ſhire is alſo very mountainous, and is ſuppoſed to be the moſt elevated ground in Scotland. The extenſive plains which ſurround the lakes, are, in general, fertile; and the high grounds feed many ſheep and black cattle, the rearing and ſelling of which is the chief trade of the inhabitants. Limeſtone, iron ore, and ſome traces of different minerals have been found in this county, with beautiful rock cryſtals of various tints; but no mines have been worked hitherto with much ſucceſs. The principal river is the Spey; but there are many others of inferior note, as the Neſs, Fyers, Glaſs, Lochy, &c. The people in the high parts of the country, and on the weſtern ſhore, ſpeak Gaelic or Erſe, but the people of faſhion in Inverneſs, and it's neighbourhood, uſe the Engliſh language, and pronounce it with propriety.

JONKIOPING, or JORTEKOPING, a town of Sweden, capital of the province of Smoland, and ſeat of the ſuperior court of juſtice for Gothland. The houſes are chiefly of wood covered with turf; for, excepting the largeſt towns and country ſeats, few of the buildings in Sweden are roofed with tiles. They are principally covered with turf or moſs; no thatching being uſed, as both too dear, and too dangerous in caſe of fire. In order to keep out the rain, large layers of birch bark are ſpread over the timber-work of the roof, and covered with turf or moſs. Theſe turf roofs make a ſingular appearance, many of them producing herbage, which is occaſionally cut for the uſe of the cattle; and a few are ornamented with flowers. The town is ſeated on the S. ſide of the Lake Wetter, 50 miles NW. of Calmar. Lat. 57. 48. N. lon. 14. 7. E.

IREKEN, or JERKIN, YARKAN, a rich, populous, and large town in Bocharia, Little Tartary. It is the ſtaple town of the trade carried on between the Indies and the N. part of Aſia, and is ſubject to the Kalmucs. Lat. 39. 6. N. lon. 79. 5. E.

IRELAND, one of the Britiſh iſlands, lying to the W. of that of Great Britain. It is bounded on the E. by St. George's Channel, or the Iriſh Sea, which ſeparates it from England and Wales; on the NE. by a channel about 20 miles broad, which ſeparates it from Scotland; and on every other ſide by the ocean. It lies between lon. 5. 43. and 10. 38. W. and between lat. 51. 15. and 55. 13. N. being about 287 miles in length, and 155 in breadth. It is divided into 4 provinces, viz. Ulſter on the north; Munſter on the ſouth; Leinſter on the eaſt; and Connaught on the weſt. Theſe are ſubdivided into 32 counties, viz. Carlow, Dublin, Kildare, Kilkenny, King's County, Longford, Lowth, Meath, Queen's County, Weſt Meath, Wexford, Wicklow, in the province of Leinſter. Antrim, Armagh, Cavan, Down, Donegal, Fermanagh, Londonderry, Monaghan, and Tyrone, in the province of Ulſter. Clare, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary, and Waterford, in the province of Munſter. Galway, Leitrim, Mayo, Roſcommon, and Sligo, in the province of Connaught. The air is mild and temperate, being cooler in ſummer, and warmer in winter, than in England; though it is not ſo clear and pure, nor ſo proper for ripening corn and fruits. It is more humid than in England; but this quality is pretty much mended, and will be more ſo, when the bogs and moraſſes are drained. In general, it is a fruitful country, well watered with lakes and rivers; and the ſoil, in moſt parts, is very good and fertile; even in thoſe places, where the bogs and moraſſes have been drained, there is good meadow ground. It produces corn, hemp, and flax, in great plenty; and the herds of cattle are ſo numerous, that their beef and butter are exported into foreign parts; the Engliſh, and foreign ſhips frequently come to victual in Iriſh ports. The principal riches and commodities of Ireland are cattle, hides, wool, tallow, ſuet, butter, cheeſe, wood, ſalt, honey, wax, furs, hemp, and more eſpecially fine linen cloth, which they have brought to great perfection, and their trade in it is vaſtly increaſed. This country is exceedingly well ſituated for foreign trade, and has many ſecure and commodious bays, creeks, and harbours, eſpecially on the W. coaſt. Their laws differ but little from thoſe of England; and the national eſtabliſhment of religion is the ſame. The members of parliament uſually ſat for life, unleſs upon the demiſe of the king of Great Britain; but, in 1768, their parliaments were made octennial. Formerly, this kingdom was entirely ſubordinate to that of Great Britain, whoſe parliament could make laws to bind the people of Ireland; and an appeal might be made from their courts of juſtice to the houſe of lords in England; but, in 1782, it was declared, that although Ireland was an imperial crown, inſeparably annexed to that of Britain (on which connection the intereſt and happineſs of both nations eſſentially depended) yet the kingdom of Ireland was diſtinct, with a parliament of it's own, and that no body of men were competent to make laws for Ireland, except the king, lords, and commons thereof. And, ſome time after, this declaration being thought inſufficient, the Britiſh legiſlature, by an expreſs act of parliament for that purpoſe, relinquiſhed all claim of right to interfere with the judgment of the Iriſh courts, or to make laws to bind Ireland in time to come. The lord-lieutenant of Ireland, as well as the council, are appointed, from time to time, by the king. The native Iriſh are deſcribed as impatient of abuſe and injury, quick of apprehenſion, implacable in reſentment, ardent in all their affections, and remarkably hoſpitable. In the country there remains a great deal of this amiable national characteriſtic, and even in their towns, formality and etiquette are often ſo loſt in hearty ſalutations, and a familiar manner of addreſs, that the ſtranger ſoon feels himſelf at home, and imagines the people about him all relations. There are ſome conſiderable mountains in Ireland, the chief of which are the Knock Patrick, Sliew-Bloomy, and Curlieu-Hills. Of all it's bogs, that called the Bog of Allen is the moſt conſiderable. The chief lakes are Lough-Lean, Lough-Erne, Lough-Neagh, and Lough Coribb; and it's principal rivers are the Shannon, Boyne, Barrow, Liffey, Nore, and Suir. The kingdom is ſaid to have been formerly full of woods, but the caſe is now ſo different, that it has been found neceſſary to plant new ones, and to give parliamentary encouragement for their preſervation and increaſe. The mineral productions of this country have been little known till of late years, the natives in general having given themſelves (at leaſt for ſome centuries paſt) little trouble about them. Nevertheleſs, copper, lead, iron, and even ſilver ores have been found in the Iriſh mines; ſome veſtiges of works of this ſort appear at Clontarf, on the edge of Dublin Bay. In the county of Antrim, there is a mine which conſiſts of a mixture of ſilver and lead, every 30lb. of lead ore producing about a pound of ſilver. There is another in Connaught, of the ſame kind; and one ſtill richer in Wicklow. About 12 miles from Limerick, two mines have been diſcovered, one of copper, and the other of lead. Iron mines are diſperſed all over the kingdom. There are likewiſe quarries of marble, ſlate, and freeſtone, and the earth produces in various places, coal and turf for firing.

IRELAND, NEW, a large iſland in the S. Atlantic Ocean, N. of New Britain. The moſt ſoutherly point, Cape George, is in lat. 4. 59. S. lon. 152. 7. E.

ISADAGAS, a town of Eſcura, Morocco. It is ſeated in a country abounding in cattle; and the honey is very white, and in great eſteem.

Iſbury, Berks, near Lambourn. Iſby-Walton, Leiceſ. near Caſtle Dunnington.

Ischia, an island of Naples, about 10 miles in circuit, and lying 8 or 10 miles W. of the city of Naples. It is full of agreeable valleys, which produce excellent fruits; mountains, on which grow vines of an exquisite kind; rivers, and fine gardens.

Ischia, a town of Naples, capital of an island of the same name. It stands upon a rock, which is joined to the island by a strong bridge; the rock is about seven furlongs in circumference, and the city is like a pyramid of houses piled one upon another, which makes a very singular and striking appearance. At the end of the bridge are iron gates, which open into a subterraneous passage, through which they enter the city. From it's healthy air, it is much resorted to by invalids. Lat. 40. 41. N. lon. 14. 2. E.

Isel, Cumberland, near Cockermouth, 3 miles up the Derwent. Iselsham, Cambridgeshire, NE. of Soham.

Islands, Bay of, a bay of New Zealand, on the NE. coast of the northern of the two islands that go under that name.

Islay, or Ila, one of the Western Isles of Scotland, to the SW. of Jura, from which it is separated by a narrow strait or sound. It's greatest length is 25 miles; it's breadth 18. The principal village is Bowmore, which is in a manner, a new town, and has a convenient harbour. The inhabitants are between 7 and 8000. The face of the country is hilly. Here are mines of copper, emery, quicksilver, lead ore, and black lead; with immense stores of limestone, marl, coral, and shell-sand, for manure. Some corn and flax is raised here, and numerous droves of cattle are annually exported. In this, and some of the neighbouring islands, multitudes of adders infest the heath. On the NW. side of the island is the cave of Sanegmore, which is a grotto, divided into a number of far-winding passages, sometimes opening into fine expanses; again closing, for a long space, into galleries, and forming a curious subterraneous labyrinth. There are also many other caverns, the haunts of numerous wild pigeons, that lodge and breed in them. The goats that feed among the rocks are so wild, that they are shot like deer.

Isle-Adam, a town in the dept. of Seine and Oise, seated on the river Oise, 6 miles NNE. of Pontoise.

is the new village or Pentonville, to which it is likewise united. The New River, which is a great ornament to this place, is received, at the SW. end of it, into a large reservoir, called the New River Head, whence it's water is conveyed in pipes, to all parts of the metropolis. The parish is very extensive, including the hamlets of Upper and Lower Holloway, Kingsland Green, and three sides of Newington Green. Near the New River Head, is a noted spring of chalybeate water, called New Tunbridge Wells. Islip, Northamptonshire, near Thrapston.

ISLIP, a town of Oxfordshire, 56 miles from London, noted for the birth and baptism of Edward the Confessor.

ISMAIL, a town of Bessarabia. It was taken by storm by the Russians, under General Suwarrow, on the 22d of December 1790; and it is said, that the long siege and the capture, did not cost less than 10,000 men. The most atrocious part of the transaction is, that the garrison (whose firmness would have received, from a less sanguinary foe, the highest applause) were massacred by the merciless conquerors, to the amount of, by their own account, 30,000 men; and the place was abandoned to the fury of the brutal soldiery. Ismail is seated on the N. side of the Danube, 140 miles SW. of Ockzakow. Lat. 45. 11. N. lon. 29. 30. E.

ISNY, an imperial town of Algau, Suabia.

ISNIC, a town of Natolia. It is the ancient Nice, famous for the first general council held here in 325. There is now nothing remaining of it's ancient splendor but an aqueduct. The inhabitants are mostly Jews. It is seated in a fertile country, on a lake which communicates with the Sea of Mamora, and is 60 miles SE. of Constantinople. Lat. 40. 13. N. lon. 30. 9. E.

ISOLA, a sea-port of Calabria Ultra; and a town of Terra di Lavora, both in Naples: also a town of Istria; and a river of the Tyrolese.

ISONA, a town of Catalonia.

ISPAHAN, a celebrated city of Asia, capital of Persia, seated in the province of Irac-Agemi, and thought by some, to be the finest city in the East. It stands in the middle of a plain, surrounded on all sides by mountains, at 8 miles distance, which rise gradually in the form of an amphitheatre. There is no river except a small one, called Zenderoud, which supplies almost all the houses with water, and over which are several fine bridges. It is nearly of an oval form, with well-built houses and flat roofs, on which they walk, eat, and even sleep in the summer-time, for the sake of the cool air. The walls are built of mud, and about 20 miles in compass, but being kept in no repair, and hidden by the adjoining houses and gardens, they have but a mean appearance, and are hardly to be discovered. Here are a great number of magnificent palaces; and that of the king is two miles and a half in circumference. There are 160 mosques, 1800 large caravanseras, above 260 public baths, a prodigious number of coffee-houses, and very fine streets, in which are canals, planted with trees. The streets are not paved, but are generally free from dirt and dust, as the air here is very dry, and every housekeeper waters the street before his own door twice a day. The inhabitants were formerly computed at 1,000,000; but, what with intestine broils and civil wars, this kingdom has been almost torn to pieces, by which the principal towns are greatly depopulated. There are three large suburbs; that called Juisa, is inhabited by Armenians; Hasenbath, by Georgians; and Kebrabath by Pagans. Though it is at a distance from the sea, it carries on a great trade, the people of several nations resorting there for the sake of traffic. It is 265 miles NE. of Bussarah, 300 S. of the Caspian Sea, and 1400 SE. of Constantinople. Lat. 32. 25. N. lon. 52. 55. E.

ISSEL, or YSSEL, and ISSEL, or YSSEL, THE LITTLE, two rivers of the United Provinces. The former rises in Westphalia, and falls into the Zuyder Zee, by two mouths, a little below Campen; the latter waters Yfselstein, &c. and falls into the Maese, a mile and a half above Rotterdam.

ISSELSTEIN, or YSSELSTEIN, a town of Utrecht, with a small territory, seated on the Issel.

Ifferkelly, in Galway, Connaught.

ISSEQUIBO, a flourishing settlement of the Dutch, in Guiana, S. America, contiguous to that of Demerary, and 8 or 10 miles W. of the town of Surinam. It is seated on the river Issequibo, which is about 3 leagues wide at it's mouth. It has been twice taken by the English; in 1781, but restored by the treaty of peace, in 1783; and since the commencement of the present war: it still remains in their possession.

ISSOIRE, an ancient town in the dept. of Puy de Dome, near which are found amethysts, of as beautiful a colour as those of the East, but not so hard. Issoire is seated on the river Couze, near the Allier, 15 miles SSE. of Clermont.

ISSOUDUN,

Issoudun, a town in the depart. of Indre, containing about 10,000 inhabitants. It's trade is in wood, cattle, cloth, hats, and ſtockings. It is 17 miles SW. of Bourges, and 135 nearly S. of Paris.

Is-sur-Tille, a town in the dept. of Côte d'Or, 9 miles N. of Dijon.

Iſthwith, a river in Cardiganſhire. Iſting-Ebourn, Suſſex, NW. of Midhurſt. Iſtrad, a river in Denbighſhire.

Istria, a peninſula of Italy, lying on the N. part of the Adriatic, long divided between Auſtria and the republic of Venice. The air is unwholeſome, eſpecially near the coaſt; but the ſoil produces plenty of wine, oil, and paſtures; there are alſo quarries of fine marble. That part of it which lately belonged to the Venetians, is now moſtly annexed to the houſe of Auſtria. Capo d'Iſtria was the capital.

Iſwick, Lancaſhire, in Amounderneſs, N. of Kirkham.

Italy, one of the fineſt and moſt celebrated countries of Europe, extending from NW. to SE. nearly 700 miles. On the N. and NW. it is bounded by France, Swiſſerland, and Germany; on the E. by Carniola and the Adriatic; and on the S. SW. and W. by the Mediterranean; it's figure bearing ſome reſemblance to that of a boot. It was formerly the ſeat of the Roman empire, and, afterwards, of that more ſingular uſurpation, the dominion of the pope; for this eccleſiaſtical monarch, under the modeſt title of miniſter miniſtrorum, ſervant of ſervants, claimed a right to diſpoſe not only of the affairs of ſuch nations as acknowledged his ſupremacy; but alſo of pagan lands to the ends of the earth; beſtowing them, as an inheritance, on the royal ſupporters of his church. Italy is divided into a great number of ſtates, which differ much in extent and importance. Between the confines of France and Swiſſerland, on the W. and N. are the continental dominions of the king of Sardinia, namely, Piedmont, Montferrat, and part of the Milaneſe. To the NE. are the ci-devant territories of Venice, now moſtly reduced to the obedience of the emperor. S. of theſe are the late Italian dominions of the emperor, namely, part of the Milaneſe, and the Mantuan, now formed into an independent republic, under the protection of France. S. of theſe are Modena, Mirandola, and Reggio, lately belonging to the duke of Modena, but now incorporated with the new republic. W. of theſe are the duchies of Parma, Placentia, and Guaſtalla, whoſe ſovereign is of the houſe of Bourbon. S. of Parma lies the republic of Genoa, and SE. of this, that of Lucca. Hence extends, along the coaſt of the Mediterranean, the grand duchy of Tuſcany. The Eccleſiaſtical State, or territory of the Pope, lies principally to the E. and SE. of Tuſcany, between the Gulf of Venice and the Mediterranean; and the remainder of Italy, which occupies the whole ſouthern extremity, is the kingdom of Naples, with it's dependant iſlands, of which Sicily is the principal. The air of Italy is very different, according to the different ſituations of the countries it contains. In thoſe on the NE. ſide of the Apennines, it is temperate; but on the SW. it is very warm. The air of the Campania of Rome, and of the Ferrareſe, is ſaid to be unwholeſome; which is owing to the lands not being duly cultivated, nor the marſhes drained. That of the other parts is generally pure, dry, and healthy. In ſummer the heat is very great in the kingdom of Naples, and would be almoſt intolerable, if it were not alleviated by the ſea-breezes. The principal rivers are the Po, Tiber, Arno, Adige, and Var; and there are ſeveral fine lakes, as the Maggiore, Lugano, Como, Garda, Perugia, Braccianno, and Celano. As there are a number of rivers in Italy, beſide thoſe mentioned above, the ſoil, in general, is very fertile. It produces a great variety of wines, and the beſt oil in Europe; excellent ſilk in abundance; corn of all ſorts, but not in ſuch plenty as in other countries; oranges, lemons, citrons, pomegranates, almonds, raiſins, ſugar, innumerable mulberry-trees, figs, peaches, nectarines, apricots, pears, apples, filberts, cheſnuts, &c. Moſt of theſe fruits were at firſt imported by the Romans from Aſia Minor, Greece, Africa, and Syria, and were not the natural products of the ſoil. This country alſo yields good paſture, and abounds with cattle, ſheep, goats, buffaloes, wild boars, mules, and horſes. The foreſts are well ſtored with game; and the mountains yield, not only mines of iron, alum, ſulphur, marble of all ſorts, alabaſter, jaſper, porphyry, &c. but alſo gold and ſilver; with a great variety of aromatic herbs, trees, ſhrubs, and evergreens, as thyme, lavender, lauel, wild olive-trees, tamarinds, junipers, oaks, and pines. Wine, oil, perfumes, fruits, and ſilks, are the principal articles of exportation; and great ſums of money are expended by travellers in the purchaſe of pictures, curioſities, relics, antiquities, &c. The Italians have been the moſt celebrated of all the moderns for their genius and taſte in architecture, painting, carving, and muſic, and ſeveral of them have alſo been eminent as writers. The women affect yellow hair, as did formerly their predeceſſors, the ladies of ancient Rome; they alſo uſe paints and waſhes for their hands and faces. The Italian language is a corruption of the Latin, and is ſaid to be ſpoken beſt at Florence.

Itchel, Hants, near Alderſton. Itchen, or Aire, a river of Hants, which riſes in the centre of the county, and, watering Wincheſter, enters the Bay of Southampton, at the town of that name. Itching, or Irthing, a river of Northumberland and Cumberland, falling into the Eden near Warwick. Itching-Abbots, Hants, NW. of Alreſford. Itching-Stoke, Hants, E. of Itching-Abbots. Itchington, Glouceſterſhire, in Titherington pariſh.

ITCHINGTON-BISHOP'S, Warw. NE. of Kineton. Market on Wedneſday.

Itchington, Long and Nether, Warw. near Southam. Itenfield, Cumb. near Inglewood-Foreſt. Ithon, a river in Radnorſ. Itteringham, Norf. NW. of Aleſham. Itton, Monm. W. of Chepſtow.

ITZEHOE, a town of Daniſh Holſtein.

JUAN DE LA FRONTERA, ST. a town of S. America, in Peru, in the diſtrict of Chachapoyas. It lies to the E. of the Andes.

JUAN DE PUERTO RICO, ST. an iſland of the W. Indies, 50 miles E. of St. Domingo, and called by the Engliſh Porto Rico. It is 100 miles in length, and 50 in breadth, and is ſubject to the Spaniards. It is full of very high mountains, and extremely fertile valleys, interſperſed with woods, and well watered with ſprings and rivulets. It produces ſugar, rum, ginger, corn, and fruits, partly proper to the climate, and partly introduced from Spain. Beſides, there are ſo many cattle, that they often kill them for the ſake of the ſkins alone. Here are a great number of uncommon trees, and there is a little gold in the N. part of the iſland. The air is pretty healthy, but it is ſubject to ſtorms and hurricanes, like the reſt of theſe iſlands. The capital is of the ſame name, ſeated on the N. coaſt of the iſland, with a good harbour. Lat. 18. 29. N. lon. 67. 4. W.

JUAN FERNANDEZ, an iſland in the S. Sea, about 12 miles long and 6 wide. It is 330 miles W. of the coaſt of Chili, parallel with St. Jago. It is uninhabited, but having a good harbour on the N. coaſt, called Cumberland Bay, it is found extremely convenient to touch at and water. Lat. 33. 40. S. lon. 83. W.

JUAN DE ULLOA, ST. an iſland in the Gulf of Mexico, half a mile NE. of Vera Cruz.

JUCATAN, or YUCATAN, a large peninſula of Mexico, nearly oppoſite the W. end of the Iſland of Cuba. It has the Gulf of Honduras to the E. and the Bay of Campeachy to the W. and contains a great quantity of timber, proper for building of ſhips; as alſo ſugar, caſſia, indigo, cotton, and Indian corn. The original inhabitants are very few, they having formerly been very ill uſed by the Spaniards. It is a flat, level country, and is unhealthy in ſome parts, which may be owing to the frequent inundations. Merida is the capital; but ſome give that appellation to the town of Campeachy. See HONDURAS.

JUDENBURG, a town of Stiria. The public buildings, with the ſquare, are magnificent.

JUDOIGNE, or GELDENACKEN, a town of the late Auſtrian Brabant.

Ive, St. Cornwall, W. of Kellington. Ive-Church, Kent, by Romney-Marſh. Ivedon, Devonſhire, in Auleſcomb pariſh. Iver, Bucks, near Uxbridge.

IVES, ST. a ſea-port of Cornwall, ſeated on a bay of the ſame name, which has about 30 ſhips belonging to it's harbour. It trades largely in pilchards and Corniſh ſlates. It is 8 miles NE. of Penzance, and 277 W. by S. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

* IVES, ST. a town of Huntingdonſhire, with the largeſt market in England for cattle, except that of Smithfield. It is an ancient, large, and handſome place, ſeated on the river Ouſe, over which is a fine ſtone bridge. It is 6 miles nearly E. of Huntingdon, and 59 N. of London. Market on Monday.

JUGON, a town in the department of the North Coaſt, containing about 700 inhabitants.

IVICA, an iſland of the Mediterranean, about 15 miles long, and 12 wide, ſubject to Spain. It is mountainous, but fertile in corn, wine, and fruits; and remarkable for the great quantity of ſalt made in it. It is 50 miles SW. of Majorca. The capital is of the ſame name, ſeated on a bay, with a good harbour. Lat. 39. 30. N. lon. 1. 25. E.

Ivil, or Ivel, a river in Bedfordſhire. Ivil, a river in Somerſetſhire.

IVINGO, a town in Bucks. 6 miles SW. of Dunſtable. Market on Monday.

JULIAN, ST. a harbour on the coaſt of Patagonia. Lat. 49. 10. S. lon. 68. 44. W.

Julian's, St. Monm. near Caerlion.

Julian's Town, in Meath, Leinſter.

JULIEN, ST. a town in the depart. of Upper Vienne, 13 miles NW. of Limoges.

JULIEN DU SAULT, ST. a town in the department department of Yonne, ſeated near the river Yonne, 5 miles from Joigny.

JULIERS, a ſmall duchy of Weſtphalia, ſituated between the Rhine and the Maeſe. The principal towns are Juliers, the capital, in lat. 50. 57. N. lon. 6. 23. E. Dueren, Aix-la-Chapelle, Munſter-Eyſſel, and Eufzkirchen. It is ſubject to the elector palatine, is about 68 miles in length, and 30 in breadth, and is remarkable for the great quantity of woad it produces.

KALISCH, a palatinate, late of Poland, now of W. Pruſſia, and it's capital, ſeated on the river Proſna.

Kallamer, Lancaſhire, in Amounderneſs.

KALMUCS, a nation of Tartars, that inhabit that part of the Ruſſian government of Caucaſus, that lies between the river Volga, and the river Yaick (now Ural) toward the Caſpian Sea; in all which immenſe tract there is not a houſe to be ſeen, as they all live in tents, and remove from one place to another, in queſt of paſturage for their large herds of cattle, conſiſting of horſes, camels, cows, and ſheep. They neither ſow nor reap, nor make hay for their cattle, ſo that they live without bread, or any ſort of vegetable; and in the winter, their cattle fare as other wild beaſts. Their food is fleſh, (eſpecially that of horſes) fiſh, wild-fowl, and veniſon; and they have great plenty of milk, butter, and cheeſe; but mare's milk is the moſt eſteemed among them, and from it they make a ſtrong ſpirit, of which they are very fond, and which is clear as water. They are divided into a number of hordes, or clans, each under their own particular khan, and all acknowledging the authority of one principal khan, who is called orchicirtikhan, or king of kings, who derives his pedigree from Tamerlane. All of them, however, have ſubmitted to the government of Ruſſia, or live under it's protection. They are pagans. They wear coats of ſtuff, or ſilk, above which they wear a large, wide, fur coat of ſheep-ſkins, and a cap of the ſame. Their cattle are large, and their ſheep are of the largeſt kind, having great fat tails, weighing from twenty-five to thirty pounds; their ears hanging down like our dogs, and, inſtead of wool, they have ſoft curled hair, ſo that their ſkins are converted into fur coats. Their horſes are ſmall, but ſwift, hardy, and ſtrong; and many of them pace naturally, and trot at an incredible rate. They eat the fleſh of camels, cows, and ſheep, but univerſally give the preference to that of the horſe. When they go upon any expedition, they have no regard either to bridges or boats; they no ſooner come to a river, than in they plunge with their horſes, and, ſliding from their backs, hold faſt by the manes till they get over, and then immediately mount again, and proceed. They live but 4 months at moſt in the deſerts, and inhabit a moſt pleaſant country all the reſt of the year (when it is not overflowed) tending their flocks and herds, fiſhing, and hunting. When they go upon an expedition, every one takes a ſheep with him for his proviſion, and three horſes, which he rides alternately; and when any of them fail, they kill it, and divide the fleſh, putting pieces of it under their ſaddles, and, after riding ſome time upon it, they eat it without any farther preparation. Their kibbets, or tents, are large, and ſurpriſingly warm, having a fire in the middle, and a hole at the top to let out the ſmoke; they are 24 feet in diameter, and capable of being enlarged or contracted at pleaſure; they are all round, the ſides being made of a kind of checkered wicker-work, and the croſs ſticks neatly jointed, for folding together, or extending. The kibbet withſtands wind and rain well, and is erected with greater eaſe and in leſs time than we could ſet up an officer's tent. The ſmall-pox is as much dreaded among the Kalmucs as the peſtilence among us. When any of them are ſeized with it, they immediately break up their camp and flee, leaving the ſick perſon in one of their kibbets, or tents, with a killed ſheep, part of which is roaſted and part raw, and a jar of water, and ſome wood for fire; if they recover, they follow the horde, but this ſeldom happens, for they moſtly die for want of attendance.

KALNICK, a town of Bracklaw, Poland.

KALO, a town of Hungary.

KALUGA, or KALUTSKOE, a town and government of the Ruſſian empire, formerly included in the government of Moſcow. It is about 140 miles in length, and from 40 to 90 in breadth. Occa is the principal river.

KAMBALA, MOUNT, a ridge of mountains

tains in Thibet, between the lake Jamdro, and the Sampoo river.

KAMINIECK, a town of Poland, capital of Podolia.

KAMTSCHATKA, a peninſula of Siberia, in the province of Irkutſk, and government of Irkutſkoi, bounded on the N. by the province of Ochotſk; on the E. and S. by the N. Pacific Ocean; and on the W. by the Sea of Ochotſk and the Penzinſkoe Gulf. It is 600 miles in length, and from 30 to 200 in breadth. The ſouthern extremity is Cape Lopatka, in lat. from 52. to 61. N. and lon. 156. 45. E. according to Captain King, who viſited this country in 1779. A chain of high mountains from N. to S. extends the whole length of the peninſula, and almoſt equally divides it; whence ſeveral rivers take their riſe, and empty themſelves on both ſides into the Pacific Ocean, and the Sea of Ochotſk. Stunted trees are thinly ſcattered over the whole face of the country, whoſe bottoms are moſſy, with a mixture of low heath; the whole reſembling Newfoundland in a ſtriking degree. This diſadvantage of ſoil, however, is not univerſal; for ſome parts produce tolerably good hay. Four months, commencing at midſummer, may be conſidered as forming their ſpring, ſummer, and autumn, the reſt of the year is all dreary winter. They have great quantities of wholeſome vegetables in a wild ſtate, ſuch as chervil, garlic, onions, angelica, and wild celery, with ſome excellent turnips, and turnip-radiſhes, upon a few ſpots of ground in the valleys; and this is the utmoſt extent of their garden cultivation. They have a variety of wild berries, which are gathered at proper ſeaſons, and preſerved by maſhing them into a thick jam. Theſe conſtitute a conſiderable part of the winter proviſions, ſerving as a general ſauce to their dried fiſh. Fiſh is certainly the ſtaple article of food among the inhabitants of this peninſula, who cannot poſſibly derive any conſiderable part of their ſuſtenance either from agriculture or cattle: they, however, obtain ſome from their foreſts, particularly in the bear, which to hunt and kill, is, with the inhabitants, a ſkilful and dangerous adventure. The people of Kamtſchatka may be ſaid to conſiſt of three ſorts; the Kamtſchadales, the Ruſſians, and Coſſacks, and a mixture produced by their intermarriages. The habitations of the natives conſiſt of three different kinds, which they call jourts, balagans, and loghouſes. They inhabit the firſt in the winter, and the ſecond in the ſummer; in the third, introduced by the Ruſſians, only the more wealthy people reſide. The external appearance of a jourt reſembles a round, ſquat hillock; a hole, ſerving for a chimney, window, and door, is left in the centre, and the inhabitants go in and out by the aſſiſtance of a long pole, having notches deep enough to afford a little ſecurity for the toe. The upper garment of the Kamtſchadales reſembles a waggoner's frock: if for ſummer wear, it is made of nankeen; if intended for winter, it is made of a ſkin, having one ſide tanned, and the hair preſerved on the other, which is worn innermoſt; a cloſe jacket of nankeen, or other cotton ſtuff, is the next under this; and, beneath that, a ſhirt made of thin Perſian ſilk, of any colour. They wear long breeches and boots, made of ſkins, with the hair innermoſt. They have alſo a fur cap, with two flaps that are uſually tied up cloſe to the head, but are let to fall round the ſhoulders in rough weather. The true Kamtſchadales are a people of great antiquity, and have for many ages inhabited this peninſula. The Ruſſians firſt diſcovered the country in 1697, and, in 1699, 60 Ruſſian ſoldiers, with as many Coſſacks, penetrated into the heart of the peninſula, levying a tribute of furs in their progreſs. Their government, conſidered as a military one, is mild and equitable in a high degree. The natives are permitted to chuſe their own magiſtrates, with all the privileges they had ever enjoyed, who refer to the governor of Kamtſchatka ſuch caſes only as, from their intricacy or heinouſneſs, they do not chuſe to decide upon themſelves. Bolcheretſk is the principal place, on the SW. coaſt, in lat. 52. N.

KAUFFBEUREN, a free town of Suabia.

KAYE's ISLAND, in the N. Pacific Ocean, near the W. coaſt of N. America, about 30 miles in length and 4 in breadth, diſcovered and named by Captain Cook. The SW. point is a naked rock, conſiderably elevated above the land within it. Pine trees, abound in all parts of the iſland; which indeed is covered, in a manner, with a broad girdle of wood. The trees, however, are far from being of an extraordinary growth; ſo that they would be of no great ſervice for ſhipping, excepting as materials for ſmall things. The pine-trees appear to be all of one ſpecies; and neither the Canadian pine, nor cypreſs, are found here. Lat. 59. 51. N. lon. 143. 0. W.

KEN, or KAN, a river of Weſtmorland, which flows by Kendal, and empties itſelf into the ſandy waſh of Lancaſhire, called Morcambe Bay. It has a cataract near it's mouth, which renders it incapable of navigation; ſo that the town of Milthrop, ſituated on a little creek, near the mouth of the Ken, is the only port of Weſtmorland; and this is capable of receiving very ſmall veſſels only, by which the fine Weſtmorland ſlates, hams, and other articles are exported.

KEN, a river of Scotland, which deſcending from the mountains in the N. of Kirkcudbrightſhire, flows in a ſouthern direction to the town of New Galloway, below which it expands into a fine lake, about 4 miles in length, and 1 in breadth. Here it is joined by the river Dee.

*KENDAL, a large, handſome town of Weſtmorland. It is pleaſantly ſeated in a valley, among hills, on the W. ſide of the river Ken, over which are ſeveral bridges. It has been long noted for it's woollen manufactories: particularly knit ſtockings, a thick ſtuff, called cottons, for the clothing of the people in the W. Indies, and for ſailors' jackets, and linſey-woolſey. There is likewiſe a conſiderable tannery; and fiſh-hooks, waſte ſilk, and woolcards are manufactured here. The mills for ſcouring, fulling, and frizing cloth; and for cutting and raſping dying wood, &c. are well worth ſeeing. So early as the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. Kendal was noted for it's manufactures, ſpecial laws having been enacted in thoſe reigns, for the better regulation of the Kendal cloths; and ſuch has been the ſpirit and induſtry of the inhabitants, that they have continued to flouriſh ever ſince, notwithſtanding the diſadvantage of poſſeſſing no water carriage. Kendal is 46 miles S. of Carliſle, and 259 NNW. of London. Lat. 54. 15. N. lon. 2. 52. W. Market on Saturday.

Kenſington, a village of Middleſex, two miles W. of Hyde-Park corner, London. Here is a royal palace, with very extenſive gardens, (originally deſigned by Kent, and much improved by Browne) which have become a very faſhionable promenade.

Kenſworth, Herts, E. of Studham.

KENT, a county of England, bounded on the W. and SW. by Surry and Suſſex; on the N. by the Thames; on the E. and SE. by the German Ocean and the Straits of Dover; and on the S. by Suſſex and the Engliſh Channel. From E. to W. it is about 58 miles, and from N. to S. from 30 to 36. It is divided into 5 lathes, under each of which are ſeveral hundreds. It contains 2 cities, 39 market-towns, and 408 pariſh churches. In the ſoil and face of the country, there is great diverſity. The banks of the Thames are low and marſhy, but backed by a range of chalky eminences, ſometimes riſing to a moderate height. This kind of hard chalky ſoil, inclining to barrenneſs, extends to the NE. extremity of the county, and thence round to Dover, exhibiting it's nature in the lofty white cliffs, which here bound the iſland, and produce that ſtriking appearance at ſea, which gave it the name of Albion. The S. part of Kent, called the Weald, is a flat, woody tract, of a clayey ſoil; fertile, but unwholeſome on account of it's moiſture. It terminates in the great marſh of Romney. The midland and weſtern diſtricts are a happy mixture of hill and vale, arable and paſture, equal in pleaſantneſs, and variety of products, to any part of England. This county produces, beſide the uſual objects of agriculture, large quantities of hops; fruit of various kinds, eſpecially cherries and apples, of which there are large orchards for the London markets; madder for dying; timber in the woody parts; and birch twigs for brooms, which form no inconſiderable article of commerce for the metropolis. The country inland from Dover, conſiſting chiefly of open downs, is excellent for feeding of ſheep; and many bullocks are fattened to an extraordinary ſize in Romney-Marſh. The principal rivers, beſide the Thames, are the Medway, Darent, Stour, Cray, and Rother. Maidſtone is the county town.

KENTAIFFE, MOUNT, a ridge of mountains in the S. of Thibet, bordering on Hindooſtan Proper. On the W. ſide of this ridge are the two heads of the Ganges, and from it's E. ſide iſſues the Sanpoo, or Burrampooter.

KENTUCKY, a country in N. America, ſituated in it's central part, near the lat. of 38°. 0'. N. and 85. 0. W. lon. It is bounded on the N. and NW. by the Ohio; on the E. by Virginia; on the S. by the Tenaſſee State, including the country of the Upper Cherokees; and on the W. and SW. by the Miſſiſſippi and the Cherokee River. It is 390 miles in length from E. to W. and from 20 to 150 in breadth from N. to S. and is at preſent divided into 9 counties, 7 of which are Lincoln, Fayette, Bourbon, Mercer, Jefferſon, Nelſon, and Maddiſon. The principal rivers are are the Ohio, the Kentucky, the Licking River, the Red River, the Elkhorn, Dick's River, Green River, Cumberland River, and the Great Kenhaway, or New River. Theſe are all navigable for boats almoſt to their ſources, without rapids, for the greateſt part of the year. This country is generally level, and abounds with limeſtone. The ſprings and ſtreams leſſen in June and continue low, hindering navigation until November, when the autumnal rains prepare the rivers for boats, and repleniſh the whole country with water. The ſoil is amazingly fertile: the inhabitants diſtinguiſh it's quality by firſt, ſecond, and third rate lands; and ſcarcely any ſuch thing as a marſh or ſwamp is to be found. This country is more temperate and healthy than the other ſettled parts of America. The winter is ſhort, and ſnow ſeldom falls deep or lies long. The W. winds often bring ſtorms, and the E. winds clear the ſky; but there is no ſteady rule of weather in that reſpect, as in the northern ſtates. The W. winds are ſometimes cold; but the weather is not ſo intenſely ſevere as theſe winds are in Pennſylvania. The country, in general, may be conſidered as well timbered, producing large trees of many kinds, and to be exceeded by no country in variety. Thoſe which are peculiar to Kentucky, are the ſugar-maple, which grows in all parts in great plenty, and furniſhes every family with plenty of excellent ſugar; and the honey-locuſt, which is curiouſly ſurrounded with large thorny ſpikes, bearing broad and long pods in form of peas, has a ſweet taſte, and makes excellent beer. Here are alſo the coffee-tree, which greatly reſembles the black oak, grows large, and alſo bears a pod, in which is incloſed coffee; the papwa-tree, which does not grow to a great ſize, is a ſoft wood, bears a fine fruit, much like a cucumber in ſhape and ſize, and taſtes ſweet; black mulberry-trees in abundance: the wild cherry-tree, which is of a large ſize, and ſupplies the inhabitants with boards for all their buildings; the buck-eye, a very ſoft wood, bearing a remarkably black fruit; and ſome other kinds of trees not common elſewhere. Here is great plenty of fine cane, on which the cattle feed, and grow fat: and the cane-brakes are ſo thick and tall, that it is difficult to paſs through them. Where no cane grows, there is abundance of wild rye, clover, and buffalo-graſs, covering vaſt tracts of country, and affording excellent food for cattle. The fields are covered with abundance of wild herbage not common to other countries. The Shawaneſe ſallad, wild lettuce, pepper-graſs, and many more, as yet unknown to the inhabitants, but which, no doubt, have excellent virtues. Here are ſeen the fineſt crown-imperials in the world; the cardinal-flower, ſo much extolled for it's ſcarlet colour; and all the year, excepting the winter months, the plains and valleys are adorned with variety of flowers of the moſt admirable beauty. Here is alſo found the tulip-bearing laurel-tree, or magnola, which has an exquiſite ſmell, and continues to bloſſom and ſeed for ſeveral months together. Iron ore and lead are found in abundance, but we do not hear of any ſilver or gold mines. The weſtern waters produce plenty of fiſh and fowl. The fiſh, common to the Ohio, are the buffalo-fiſh, of a large ſize, and cat-fiſh, ſometimes exceeding one hundred weight. Trout have been taken in Kentucky river, weighing 30 pounds weight. The mullet, rock, perch, gar-fiſh, and eel, are here in plenty. Suckers, ſun-fiſh, and other hook fiſh, are abundant. On theſe waters, and eſpecially on the Ohio, the geeſe and ducks are amazingly numerous. The land fowls are turkeys; a ſpecies of grouſe, which the inhabitants call pheaſants; and quails, to which they give the name of partridges. Here likewiſe is the parroquet, a bird every way reſembling a parrot, but much ſmaller; and the ivory-bill woodcock, of a whitiſh colour, with a white plume. It flies ſcreaming exceedingly ſharp; and it is aſſerted, that it's bill is pure ivory; a circumſtance very ſingular in the plumy tribe. Here alſo is the great owl, reſembling it's kind in other parts, but remarkably different in it's vociferation, ſometimes making a ſtrange, ſurpriſing noiſe, like a man in the moſt extreme danger and difficulty. Serpents are not numerous, and are ſuch as are to be found in other parts of the continent, except the bull, the horned, and the mockaſon ſnakes. Among the native animals, is the buffalo, much reſembling a large bull, of a great ſize, with a large head, thick, ſhort, crooked horns, and broader in his forepart than behind. Upon his ſhoulder is a large lump of fleſh, covered with a thick boſs of long wool and curly hair, of a dark brown colour. They do not riſe from the ground as our cattle, but ſpring up at once upon their feet; are of a broad make, and clumſy appearance, with ſhort legs, but run faſt, and ſcarcely turn aſide for any thing when chaſed. They weigh from five to ten hundred weight, are excellent meat, ſupplying the inhabitants in many parts with beef, and their hides make good leather. They are innocent, harmleſs creatures. There are ſtill to be found many deer, elks, and bears. There are alſo panthers, wild cats, and wolves. The waters have plenty of beavers, otters, minks, and muſk-rats; nor are the animals common to other parts wanting, ſuch as foxes, rabbits, ſquirrels, racoons, ground-hogs, polecats, and opuſſums. Moſt of the ſpecies of the domeſtic quadrupeds have been introduced ſince the ſettlement; ſuch as horſes, cows, ſheep, and hogs, which are prodigiouſly multiplied, ſuffered to run in the woods without a keeper, and only brought home when wanted. Many caves are found in this country amazingly large; in ſome of which one may travel ſeveral miles under a fine limeſtone rock, ſupported by curious arches and pillars: in moſt of them runs a ſtream of water. Kentucky was purchaſed by the ſtate of Virginia, of the Indians, in 1775, and formed into an independent ſtate in 1792. In 1790, the number of inhabitants was 73,677, and from it's rapid increaſe in population, may now probably be eſtimated at 200,000. There are many conſiderable towns, the principal of which are are Lexington and Waſhington.

KENTUCKY, a river of N. America, which riſes with three heads, called the north, ſouth, and middle forks, in the ſtate to which it gives name. Theſe branches unite together near Franklinville, and the united ſtream taking a NW. courſe, falls into the Ohio, in lat. 38. 35. N. and lon. 85. 30. W. Among the natural curioſities of the country, are the winding banks of this river, and of that called Dick's River. They are rather precipices than banks; for, almoſt every where, the aſtoniſhed obſerver beholds three or four hundred feet of a ſolid perpendicular limeſtone rock; in ſome parts a fine white marble, either curiouſly arched, pillared, or blocked up into fine building ſtones. Theſe precipices are like the ſides of a deep trench, or canal; the land above being level, except where creeks ſet in, and crowned with fine groves of red cedar. It is only at particular places that this river can be croſſed, one of which is worthy of admiration; a great road, large enough for waggons, made by the buffalo, ſloping with an eaſy deſcent from the top to the bottom of a very large ſteep hill, at or near the river above Leeſtown.

Kenvil, Surry, near Working. Kenward, Suſſex, near Cuckfield. Kenwick, Shropſ. W. of Wem. Kenwyne, Cornw. E. of Northallerton. Kerbrough, Yorkſhire, SE. of Giſborn.

KERCOLANG, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, about 80 miles in circumference. The face of the country ſeems to be ſteep hills and extenſive valleys, and every part to be covered with trees and verdure, with ſome pleaſant cultivated grounds. The houſes ſtand on poſts, and appear to be well-built, and neatly thatched. Their fiſhing hooks and lines are moſtly European; and the inhabitants are Malays. Their clothing, in general, is made of a coarſe kind of calico, though ſome wear ſilk; moſt of them have a kind of turban round their head; and a few have been ſeen with a Chineſe pointed hat. Lat. 4. 28. N. lon. 126. 31. E.

Kergo, Cornwall, W. of Columb.

KERGUELEN'S LAND, an iſland in the Southern Indian Ocean, viſited by Captain Cook, in 1779, which, from it's ſterility, has been called the Iſland of Deſolation. No place hitherto diſcovered, in either hemiſphere, affords ſo ſcanty a field for the naturaliſt as this ſpot. Some verdure, indeed, appeared when at a ſmall diſtance from the ſhore, which might raiſe the expectation of meeting with a little herbage; but all this lively appearance was occaſioned by one ſmall plant, reſembling ſaxifrage, which grew upon the hills in large ſpreading tufts, on a kind of rotten turf, which, if dried, might ſerve for fuel, and was the only thing ſeen here that could poſſibly be applied to that purpoſe. A few amphibious animals were diſcovered. Lat. 49. 20. S. lon. 69. 37. E.

Keriog, a river in Denbighſhire. Keriog, a river in Merionethſhire.

KERMAN, a province of Perſia, bounded on the N. by Segeſtan, and a part of Koraſan; on the E. by Mecran; on the S. by the Perſian Gulf; and on the W. by Farſiſtan. The northern part is barren, but the ſouthern is more fertile. The Guebres are numerous. Here are ſheep, which loſe their fleeces in ſpring, and become as naked as ſucking pigs; and the inhabitants drive a great trade in their wool. Sirgian, or according to ſome writers, Kerman, is the capital.

Kern, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Kernbray, or Carnbarrah, Cornw. near the Land's End. Kernbridge, Cornwall, near Kellington. Kerneth, Cornwall, NE. of Tregony. Kernmarge-Beacon, Cornwall, SW. of Redruth. Kernſcaw, Cornwall, NW. of Penryn.

KERPEN, a town and county of Weſtphalia, 10 miles ESE. of Juliers.

KERRY, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munſter, bounded on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean; on the N. by the river Shannon; on the E. by the counties of Limerick and Cork; and on the S. by a part of Cork and the ocean. It is about 54 miles long, and from 18 to 40 broad. It poſſeſſes many fine harbours, and the ſouthern diſtrict is plain and fertile, but a large part of it is full of mountains, almoſt inacceſſible, ſo that little corn is produced, and grazing is more attended to. Conſiderable quantities of beef, butter, hides, and tallow are exported. It contains 84 pariſhes, about 19,400 houſes, and 107,000 inhabitants. Iron ore is to be had in moſt of the ſouthern baronies, and here are ſeveral ſpas, or medicinal ſprings. The principal rivers are the Blackwater, Feal, Gale and Brick, Caſh-in-Mang, Lea, Fleſk, Laune, Carrin, Farthin, Finny, and Roughty. The county town is Tralee.

Kerſal, Nottinghamſhire, near Beſthorp. Kervent, Monmouthſ. 5 miles from Chepſtow. Kery, a river in Cardiganſhire. Kerſtall, Yorkſh. NW. of Leeds. Keſgrave, Suffolk, between Woodbridge and Ipſwich.

KESROAN, a chain of mountains in Aſia, on the coaſt of Syria, which makes a part of Mount Libanus. It is one of the moſt pleaſant and fertile countries in the Eaſt.

KESSEL, a town of Pruſſian Gueiderland with a handſome caſtle, ſeated on the W. ſide of the river Maeſe, 7 miles N. of Ruremond.

KESSELDORF, a town of Meiſſen, Upper Saxony.

Keſſilgunt, a river in Merionethſhire. Keſſingland, Suffolk, near Benacre.

KESTEVEN, one of the three diviſions of Lincolnſhire, containing the weſtern part of the county, from the middle to the ſouthern extremity. It poſſeſſes variety of ſoil; but, on the whole, though intermixed with large heaths, is a fertile country. Part of the fens of Lincolnſhire are in this diſtrict; the air of which, however, is more ſalubrious than that of the diſtrict of Holland; and the ſoil, moreover, is more fruitful.

Keſtle, Cornwall, near Helford-Haven. Keſton, Huntingd. NW. of Kimbolton. Keſton, Kent, 5 miles from Bromley. Keſwell, Cornwall, near Padſtow-Haven. Keſwell, Abbots and Kings, Devonſ. E. and SE. of Aſhburton.

*KESWICK, a ſmall, but neat and well-built town of Cumberland, pleaſantly ſeated in a beautiful and extenſive vale, through which flows the Derwent. It is 25 miles NW. by N. of Kendal, and 287 NNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

KESWICK, VALE OF, a romantic ſpot, in the ſouthern part of Cumberland, lately much viſited by the admirers of beautiful ſcenes in nature. Here is the Lake of Keſwick, or more properly, the Lake of Derwent-Water. To the N. of this romantic piece of water, ſoars the lofty mountain Skiddaw, near the foot of which is Baſingthwaite-Water. To the S. are the craggy hills of Borrowdale, where the eagles build their neſts, and whence the Derwent derives it's ſupplies of water. See BORROWDALE, BASINGTHWAITE, DERWENT-WATER, and SKIDDAW.

Keſwick, SW. of Norwich. Keſwick, Yorkſ. SW. of Wetherby. Keſworth, Dorſetſhire, near Wareham. Ket's Coity Houſe, Kent, near Aylesford. Ketheringham, Norfolk, near Windham. Ketterick-ſwart, Yorkſ. N. Riding, near Catterick Bridge.

*KETTERING, a handſome, populous town of Northamptonſhire, where ſome manufactures of lace, ſhalloons, ſerges, and tammies are carried on. It is 12 miles NE. of Northampton, and 75 NW. of London. Market on Friday.

Kettlebaſton, Suff. near Bilſton. Kettleborough, Suff. S. of Framlingham. Kettleby, Linc. W. of Alford, near Glandford-Bridge. Kettleſdale-Spring, Yorkſ. W. KHERSON, or CHERSON. See CHERSON.

KIANG NAN, a province of China, bounded on the N. by Chantong; on the E. by the Gulf of Nanquin; on the S. by Tchekiang and Kiangſi; and on the W. by Honan and Hou-Quang. It contains 14 cities of the firſt rank, and 93 of the ſecond and third, which are very populous, and of the greateſt note for trade in the empire. It is the rendezvous of all the great barks, being full of lakes, rivers, and canals, and their ſilks, japanned goods, ink, and paper, are in high eſteem. In the city of Changhi only, there are 200,000 weavers of plain cottons and muſlins.

KIANG-SI a province of China, bounded on the N. by Kiang-Nan; on the S. by Quantong; on the W. by Hou-Quang; and on the E. by Fokien and Tchekiang. The mountains that lie to the S. are almoſt inacceſſible; but there are fine valleys among them, which are well cultivated. It is watered by brooks, lakes, and rivers, which abound with fiſh; and there are mines of gold, ſilver, lead, iron, and tin. The rice and arrack here are excellent; but it is more particularly noted for it's fine porcelain, which is made at Kiang-Teching.

* KIDDERMINSTER, a town of Worceſterſhire, ſeated under a hill, on the river Stour, is the principal manufacturing place in the county. The inhabitants are about 5800. It's former trade of ſtuffs is much declined, on account of the general uſe of cotton goods; but it's carpet manufactory has greatly increaſed; and it is the firſt market in England for pile or pluſh carpets, which, for beauty of colour, and patterns exceed any other. Theſe are frequently called Wilton, from having been firſt made at that town; but at preſent by much the greater part are made at Kidderminſter. The ſilk and worſted trades have alſo been introduced here, and employ 2000 hands. The goods go chiefly to Portugal, and their carriage has been much facilitated by the late canal communications. It is 14 miles SE. of Bridgenorth, and 125 NW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Kiddeſley-Park, Derbyſ. S. of Alfreton. Kiddington, Cheſhire, near Malpas. Kiddington, Oxfordſ. 4 miles from Woodſtock. Kiderew, Staffordſhire, near Talk.

KIDWELLY, a town of Carmarthenſhire, ſeated on a creek of the Briſtol Channel. From this town a canal has been cut to ſome collieries, whence coal is brought down and exported. It is 8 miles S. of Carmarthen, and 218 W. by N. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

KIEL, a rich and conſiderable town of Germany, capital of Ruſſian Holſtein, with an univerſity. It ſtands upon a ſmall peninſula in a bay of the Baltic, and has a very commodious harbour for ſhips of the largeſt ſize. It is already one of the moſt commercial places in Holſtein; and it's trade will be ſtill farther augmented, when the inland navigation acroſs the peninſula is finiſhed. By this navigation it is propoſed to unite the Northern Sea with the Baltic; and it is to be formed acroſs Daniſh Holſtein, by the Canal of Kiel, and the river Eyder, which paſſes by Rendſburgh, and falls into the German Ocean at Tonningen. This canal was begun in 1777, is almoſt finiſhed, and it is ſuppoſed, will ſoon be opened for navigation. Kiel is 46 miles N. of Hamburg.

Kilcummer, in Cork, Munſter. Kilcummen, in King's County, Leinſter.

KILDA, ST. a ſmall iſland of Scotland, one of the Hebrides, about 11 leagues W. of North Uiſt. The inhabitants live chiefly by fiſhing and catching wild-fowls. In the latter employment, they are amazingly adventurous, being let down by a rope from the ſummit of high precipitous rocks, where they clamber among the rugged cliffs, in ſearch of the eggs and neſts of various birds. But the more ſafe and common method of catching theſe fowls is, by ſpreading a large net over the face of the rock, where they lodge, in which great numbers are at once entangled, and lowered down into a boat. St. Kilda is the moſt weſterly iſland of Great Britain.

Kildale, Yorkſ. E. of Stokeſley.

Kildangon, in Kildare, Leinſter.

* KILDARE, a town of Leinſter, capital of a county of the ſame name. It is 27 miles SW. of Dublin.

Kilkerle, in Down, Ulſter. Kilkelly, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

* KILKENNY, a town of Ireland, capital of a county of the ſame name. It is one of the neateſt towns in the kingdom, and contains about 17,000 inhabitants. The manufactures chiefly carried on here, are coarſe woollen cloths, blankets of extraordinary fine quality, and conſiderable quantities of ſtarch. In the neighbourhood, alſo, are made very beautiful chimney-pieces of Kilkenny marble, which is cut and poliſhed by water. It is 26 miles N. of Waterford, and 54 SW. of Dublin. Lat. 52. 36. N. lon. 7. 18. W.

KILKENNY, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinſter, 35 miles in length, and 18 in breadth. It is bounded on the W. by Tipperary; on the N. by Queen's County; on the E. by Carlow and Wexford; and on the S. by Waterford. It contains 127 pariſhes, about 17,750 houſes, and near 100,000 inhabitants. The ſoil is fertile, and, being proper for tillage, produces corn, wool, marble, and a ſpecies of coal, which, like charcoal, burns without ſmoke. The country abounds with fine plantations, and is, from the purity of the air, eſteemed extremely healthful.

Kilkhampton, Cornwall, near Hartland-Point, 3 miles N. of Stratton.

Kill, in Dublin, Leinſter. 5 miles from the metropolis. Kill, in Kildare, Leinſter. Killacounty, in Cork, Munſter. Killogh, in Kerry, Munſter.

*KILLARNEY, a town of Kerry, in Munſter, on the ſide of the lake of the ſame name. Within half a mile of this place are the ruins of the cathedral of Aghadoe, an ancient biſhopric united to Ardfert. It is 143 miles SW. of Dublin.

KILLARNEY, a beautiful lake of Kerry, in Munſter, otherwiſe called Lough Lean, from it's being ſurrounded by high mountains. It is properly divided into three parts, called the Lower, Middle, and Upper Lake. The northern, or lower lake, is 6 miles in length, and from 3 to 4 in breadth. The country on this and the eaſtern boundary, is here and there diverſified with gentle ſwells, many of which afford beautiful proſpects of the lake, the iſlands, and ſurrounding ſcenery. The S. ſhore is compoſed of immenſe mountains, riſing abruptly from the water, and covered with woods of the fineſt timber. From the centre of the lake, the view of this range is aſtoniſhingly ſublime, preſenting to the eye an extent of foreſt 6 miles in length, and from half a mile to a mile in breadth; hanging as a robe of rich luxuriance on the ſides of two mountains, whoſe bare tops, riſing above the whole, form a perfect contraſt to the verdure of the lower region. On the ſide of one of theſe mountains is O'Sullivan's caſcade, which falls into the lake with a roar that ſtrikes the timid with awe. The view of this ſheet of water is uncommonly fine, appearing as if it were deſcending from an arch of wood, which overhangs it above 70 feet in height from the point of view. Coaſting along this ſhore affords an almoſt endleſs entertainment, every change of poſition preſenting a new ſcene; the rocks hollowed and worn into a variety of forms by the waves, and the trees and ſhrubs burſting from the pores of the ſapleſs ſtone, forced to aſſume the moſt uncouth ſhapes, to adapt themſelves to their fantaſtic ſituations. The iſlands are not ſo numerous in this as in the upper lake; but there is one of uncommon beauty, namely, Innisfallen, nearly oppoſite O'Sullivan's caſcade. It contains 18 Iriſh acres. The coaſt is formed into a variety of bays and promontories, ſkirted and crowned with arbutus, holly, and other ſhrubs and trees. The interior parts are diverſified with hills and dales, and gentle declivities, on which every tree and ſhrub appears to advantage: the ſoil is rich even to exuberance; and trees of the largeſt ſize incline acroſs the vales, forming natural arches, with ivy intwining in the branches, and hanging in feſtoons of foliage. The promontory of Mucruſs, which divides the upper from the lower lake, is a perfect land of enchantment; and a road is carried through the centre of it, which unfolds all the interior beauties of the place. Among the diſtant mountains, Turk appears an object of magnificence; and Mangerton's more lofty, though leſs intereſting ſummit, ſoars above the whole. The paſſage to the upper lake is round the extremity of Mucruſs, which confines it on one ſide, and the approaching mountains on the other. Here is that celebrated rock, called The Eagle's Neſt, which produces wonderful echoes. A French horn ſounded here, raiſes a concert ſuperior to 100 inſtruments, in ſome ſituations; and the report of a ſingle cannon is anſwered by a ſucceſſion of peals reſembling the loudeſt thunder, thunder, which seems to travel the surrounding scenery, and die away among the distant mountains. The upper lake is 4 miles in length, and from 2 to 3 in breadth; it is almost surrounded by mountains, from which descend a number of beautiful cascades. The islands in this lake are numerous, and afford an amazing variety of picturesque views. The centre lake, which communicates with the upper, is small in comparison with the other two, and does not shew an equal variety. The shores, however, are in many places, indented with beautiful bays, surrounded with dark groves of trees, some of which have a very picturesque appearance, when viewed from the water. The eastern boundary is formed by the base of Mangerton, down the steep side of which descends a cascade, visible for 150 yards. This fall of water is supplied by a circular lake near the summit of the mountain, called the Devil's Punch-bowl; which, on account of it's immense depth, and continual overflow of water, is considered as one of the greatest curiosities in Killarney. One of the best prospects which this admired lake affords, is from a rising ground near the ruined cathedral of Aghadoe. In the several mountains adjacent to the lakes, vestiges of ancient mines of iron, lead, and copper, are still to be seen.

KILLICRANKIE, a noted pass of Perthshire, near the junction of the Tumel with the Garry. It is the grand entrance into the Highlands in those parts, and is formed by the lofty mountains impending over the Garry, which rushes through in a deep, darksome, and rocky channel, overhung with trees, forming a scene of horrible grandeur. In the last century, this was a pass of much difficulty and danger: a path hanging over a tremendous precipice threatened destruction to the least false step of the traveller. At present, a fine road, formed by the soldiery lent by government, gives an easy access to the remote Highlands; and the two sides are joined by a fine arch.

KILLOUGH, or PORT ST. ANNE, a town of Down, Ulster, 76 miles N. by E. of Dublin. It lies N. of St. John's Point, and has a good quay, from which considerable quantities of barley are exported. Here is a profitable manufacture of salt. At a small distance from the town, near the sea, is a rock, in which there is an oblong hole, whence a strange noise is heard, at the ebbing and flowing of the tide, somewhat resembling the sound of a huntsman's horn; at the coming in of the tide, whilst the waters are beating up under the rock, a cold air bursts from it with a mixture of spray; but as the waters retire during the ebb, there is a strong draft of air sets in at the hole, to fill up or prevent the vacuum which the retiring of the water would produce. In an open field, about a quarter of a mile from the town, there is a very curious cave, about 27 yards long, which has a winding passage, two feet and a half broad, with three doors in it, beſides the entrance, leading to a circular chamber, 3 yards in diameter, where there is a fine, cool, limpid well.

Kilmainham, a decayed ſort of town, ſituated on the W. extremity of the city of Dublin, in a pretty little valley, on the great weſtern road. It was ſometimes the ſeat of government, before the caſtle at Dublin was appropriated to that purpoſe. A ſtream of water runs in the bottom, which carries ſome mills, and on which there are ſeveral tan-yards. On the hill on one ſide, ſtands the Royal Hoſpital of Invalids, an elegant building; and, on the oppoſite hill, the Foundling Hoſpital. The quarter-ſeſſions for the county of Dublin, and the election for the knights of the ſhire, are held here.

KING GEORGE's SOUND, the name given by Captain Cook, in 1778, to the harbour which he diſcovered on the W. coaſt of N. America, at the mouth of a great river, in lon. 126. 48. W. and lat. 49. 33. N. But the natives called it Nootka; the name now generally adopted by the Engliſh. Upon the ſea-coaſt, the land is tolerably high and level; but within the Sound, it riſes into ſteep hills, which have an uniform appearance. The trees, of which the woods are compoſed, are the Canadian pine, white cypreſs, and two or three other ſorts of pine. In general, the trees grow here with great vigour, and are of a large ſize. About the rocks and borders of the woods, were ſeen ſome ſtrawberry plants and raſpberry, currants, and gooſeberry buſhes, all in a flouriſhing ſtate. The principal animals ſeen here were racoons, martens, and ſquirrels. Birds are far from being numerous, and thoſe that are to be ſeen are remarkably ſhy, owing perhaps, to their being continually haraſſed by the natives, who take them for food, and uſe their feathers as ornaments. The variety of fiſh is not very great here, yet they are in greater quantities than birds. The principal ſorts are the common herring, a ſilver-coloured bream, and another of a brown colour. The ſtature of the natives is, in general, below the common ſtandard; but their perſons are not proportionably ſlender, being uſually pretty plump, though not muſcular. The women are, in general, of the ſame ſize and proportion as the men. Their bodies are always covered with red paint, but their faces are ornamented with a variety of colours, a black, a bright red, or a white colour; the laſt of which gives them a ghaſtly and horrible appearance. They appear to be docile, courteous, and good-natured; but they are quick in reſenting injuries, and as quickly forget them. A rattle and a ſmall whiſtle are the only inſtruments of muſic that were ſeen among them. Their houſes conſiſt of very long broad planks, reſting upon the edges of each other, tied in different parts, with withes of pine-bark. Their furniture conſiſts principally of cheſts and boxes of various ſizes, piled upon each other, at the ſides or ends of their houſes, in which are depoſited their garments, and whatever they deem valuable. They have alſo ſquare and oblong pails, and bowls to eat their food out of, &c. From their curing their fiſh in their houſes, and leaving the bones and fragments in heaps of filth before the doors, and from their houſes being without chimneys, their habitations have a ſtrong diſagreeable ſmell of train oil, fiſh, and ſmoke.

KISMISH, a fertile iſland in the Gulf of Perſia, W. of Ormus. It is about 50 miles in circumference, and remarkable for it's pearl fiſhery.

KISTI, one of the ſeven Caucaſian nations, that inhabit the countries between the Black Sea and the Caſpian. They conſiſt of 16 different diſtricts, or tribes, which are often at variance with each other, and with their neighbours. Their dialects appear to have no analogy with any known language, and their hiſtory and origin are utterly unknown. Thoſe belonging to the diſtricts of Wapi, Anguſhi, and Shalkha, ſubmitted to Ruſſia in 1770. The Tſhetſhen tribe is ſo numerous and warlike, and has given the Ruſſians ſo much trouble, that it's name is uſually given by them to the whole Kiſti nation. The Inguſhi live in villages near each other, containing about 20 or 30 houſes: they are diligent huſbandmen, and rich in cattle. Many of their villages have a ſtone tower, which ſerves, in time of war, as a retreat to their women and children, and a magazine for their effects. Theſe people are all armed, and have the cuſtom of wearing ſhields. Their religion is very ſimple, but has ſome traces of Chriſtianity. They believe in one God, whom they call Dalé, and, on the firſt day of the week, reſt from labour. They eat pork, and have a faſt in ſpring, and another in ſummer. They obſerve no ceremonies either at births or deaths; but they allow of polygamy, and, at certain times, a ſheep is ſacrificed by a perſon who ſeems to be conſidered as a kind of prieſt, as he is obliged to live in a ſtate of celibacy. A ſingular ſort of hoſpitality is attributed to theſe people by Major Rennel. "When a gueſt, or ſtranger, comes to lodge with them, one of the hoſt's daughters is obliged to receive him, to unſaddle and feed his horſe, take care of his baggage, prepare his dinner, paſs the night with him, and continue at his diſpoſal during his ſtay."

KISTNA, a river of Hindooſtan, which riſes on the E. ſide of the Gauts, and croſſing almoſt the whole of the peninſula, falls into the Bay of Bengal, between Maſulipatam and Nizampatam, in the circar of Guntoor.

KOEI-TACHEOU, a province of China, one of the ſmalleſt in that empire, and full of inacceſſible mountains. It is inhabited by a people who are independent, and who would never ſubmit to the laws of the empire. However, the emperor has found means to build forts therein, and garriſon ſome of the towns; but all the taxes they can raiſe here will not defray the expence. This province is remarkable for it's copper-mines, and, between the mountains, there are ſeveral fruitful valleys. They have neither ſilk nor cotton, and therefore they make their cloth of a ſort of graſs, like hemp. Their cows, ſtags, and wild hens are numerous, and the horſes are the beſt in China.

KOLA, a town of the Ruſſian government of Archangel, and the capital of Ruſſian Lapland. It has a good harbour on the river Kola, near the bay of the ſame name in the Frozen Ocean. Lat. 68. 34. N. lon. 32. 26. E.

KOLOMNA. See COLUMNA.

KOLYVAN, a government of the Ruſſian empire, bounded on the N. by the government of Tobolſk, on the E. by that of Irkutſk, and on the S. and W. by Tartary. It's capital, of the ſame name, is ſeated on the Oby, 480 miles SSE. of Tobolſkoi. This country has productive ſilver mines, which have been called the Potoſi of Ruſſia.

KONGSBERG, a town of Aggerhuys, Norway, celebrated for it's ſilver mines. It contains about 1000 houſes, and 6000 inhabitants. It is 45 miles SW. of Chriſtiania.

KONGSWINGER, a town of Chriſtiania, Norway, containing about 50 ſmall wooden houſes. It is 42 miles NE. of Chriſtiania.

KONIGSBERG, a town of Saxe-Weimar, Franconia; alſo a town of the New March, Brandenburgh; with ſeveral other towns in Germany; and one in Hungary.

KONINGSBERG, the capital of the kingdom of Pruſſia, with an univerſity, and a magnificent palace, in which is a hall, 274 feet long, and 59 broad, without pillars to ſupport it, and a handſome library. The town-houſe, the exchange, and the cathedral, are fine ſtructures. The tower of the caſtle is very high, and has 284 ſteps to the top, whence there is an extenſive proſpect. There are 18 churches in all, of which 14 are Lutherans, 3 Calviniſts, and 1 is Romiſh. The number of houſes is about 3800. The town is about 7 Engliſh miles in circumference, and, including the garriſon of 7000 men, contains 60,000 inhabitants. It ſtands on the Pregel, a navigable river, which here falls into the eaſtern extremity of the Friſche Haf, an inlet of the Baltic. No ſhips drawing more than 7 feet water can paſs the bar, and come up to the town; ſo that the large veſſels anchor at Pillau, a ſmall town on the Baltic, which is the port of Koningſberg; and the merchandiſe is ſent up in ſmaller veſſels. The trade of Koningſberg is very conſiderable. It is 125 miles N. of Warſaw. Lat. 54. 42. N. lon. 20. 48. E.

KONINGSGRATZ, a circle of Bohemia with it's capital, ſeated on the Elbe.

KONITZ, a town of Schwartzburg Rodolſtadt, Upper Saxony; a bailiwick of Berne, Swiſſerland; and a town of Pomerelia, Pruſſia.

KOPYL, a town of Novogrodeck, Lithuania.

KORIACS, a nation on the borders of Kamtſchatka, tributary to the Ruſſians. There are two ſorts of Koriacs. Thoſe who are properly called by that name have a fixed reſidence: the others are wanderers, and are known by the appellation of Raindeer Koriacs. Their flocks are very numerous, and they maintain them by conducting them to thoſe cantons that abound with moſs. When theſe paſtures are exhauſted, they ſeek for others. In this manner they wander about inceſſantly, encamping under tents of ſkin, and ſupporting themſelves with the produce of their deer, which are as ſerviceable for draught to the Koriacs, as the dogs are to the Kamtſchadales. Their country is terminated to the S. by the peninſula of Kamtſchatka, and the Gulf of Penginſk; to the E. by the Ocean; to the N. by the country of the Tehoukchis; and to the W. by the Tongouſes, the Lamouts, and the Yakouts. It is confidently aſſerted, that this country was formerly very populous, and that the ſmallpox had made very conſiderable ravages; but it is doubted whether that diſeaſe has carried off more of the inhabitants than their frequent conteſts with their neighbours, and with the Ruſſians. The number of fixed Koriacs ſcarcely exceeds, at preſent, 900; and though it is not eaſy to calculate that of the wandering Koriacs, it is imagined that they do not much ſurpaſs this amount. Their regular occupation is hunting and fiſhing; but every ſeaſon will not permit them to follow it. During theſe intervals, ſhut up in their profound habitations, they ſleep, ſmoke, and get drunk. Thoughtleſs of the future, without regret for the paſt, they come not out of their yourts till the moſt urgent neceſſity compels them. Theſe yourts are larger than thoſe of the northern Kamtſchadales, but are diſtributed nearly in the ſame manner, and are hardly more clean or comfortable, as they have not a venthole, or chimney, for the emiſſion of the ſmoke. Like the Kamtſchadales they live upon dried fiſh, and the fleſh and fat of the whale and ſea-wolf. The whale is commonly eaten raw, and the ſea-wolf dried and cooked in the ſame manner as their fish, except the sinews, the marrow, the brain, and, now and then, a slice of the flesh, which they devour raw with extreme avidity. Rein-deer is their favourite dish. Vegetables also form a part of their food: they gather in autumn various sorts of berries, of a part of which they make themselves a refreshing beverage, and the rest is bruised to powder, and kneaded with the oil of the whale or sea-wolf. Their passion for strong liquors, increased by the dearness of brandy, and the difficulty of procuring it, has led them to invent a drink equally potent, which they extract from a red mushroom, known in Russia as a strong poison by the name of Moukhamorr. They put it in a vessel with certain fruits, and it has scarcely time to clarify when their friends are invited to partake of it. The entertainment lasts for one, two, or three days, till the beverage is exhausted. Frequently, that they may not fail of being intoxicated, they eat the raw mushroom at the same time. The wandering Koriacs have the same characteristic outlines as the Kamtschadales. Among the women, particularly, there are very few who have not sunk eyes, flat noses, and prominent cheeks. The men are almost entirely beardless, and have short hair. The women carry their children in a kind of nest, or basket arched over, in which the infant is placed in a sitting posture, and sheltered from the weather. The Koriacs acknowledge a Supreme Being, the Creator of all things, and imagine that the sun is his throne, or palace. They address no prayer to him; goodness, they say, is his essence; all the good that exists in the world proceeds from him; and it is impossible that he should do an injury. The principle of evil they consider as a malignant spirit, and, to appease his wrath, offer up, as expiatory sacrifices, various animals newly born; as rein-deer and dogs, also the first fruits of their hunting and fishing, and whatever they possess that is most valuable.

Kubesha, a large town of Asia, in the country of the Letguis, one of the 7 Caucasian nations, between the Black Sea and the Caspian. Colonel Gaeber, who wrote an account of these countries in 1728, gives the following description of this very curious place: "Kubesha is a large, strong town, situated on a hill, between high mountains. It's inhabitants call themselves Franki (Franks, a name common in the east to all Europeans) and relate, that their ancestors were brought hither by some accident, the particulars of which are now forgotten. The common conjecture is, that they were cast away upon the coast; but those who pretend to be better versed in their history, give the following account: The Greeks and the Genoese carried on, during several centuries, a considerable trade, not only on the Black Sea, but on the Caspian, and were certainly acquainted with the mines contained in these mountains, from which they drew, by their trade with the inhabitants, great quantities of silver, copper, and other metals. In order to work these upon the spot, they sent hither a number of workmen, to establish manufactures, and instruct the inhabitants. The subsequent invasions of the Arabs, Turks, and Monguls, during which the mines were filled up, and the manufactures abandoned, prevented the strangers from effecting their return; so that they continued here, and erected themselves into a republic. They are still excellent artists, and make very good fire arms, sabres, coats of mail, and several articles in gold and silver, for exportation. They have likewise, for their own defence, small copper cannon, of three pounds calibre, cast by themselves. They coin Turkish and Persian silver money, and even rubles, which readily pass current, because they are of the full weight and value.

lue. In their valleys, they have paſture and arable land, as well as gardens; but they purchaſe the greater part of their corn, truſting chiefly for their ſupport to the ſale of their manufactures, which are much admired in Turkey, Perſia, and the Crimea. They are generally in eaſy circumſtances, and are a quiet, inoffenſive people, but high-ſpirited and independent. Their town is conſidered as a neutral ſpot, where the neighbouring princes can depoſit their treaſures with ſafety. They elect yearly twelve magiſtrates, to whom they pay the moſt unlimited obedience; and, as all the inhabitants are on a footing of the moſt perfect equality, each individual is ſure to have, in his turn, a ſhare in the government. In the year 1725, their magiſtrates, as well as the Uſniel, or Khan of the Caitaks, acknowledged the ſovereignty of Ruſſia, but without paying any tribute.

KUFSTEIN, a ſmall town of Auſtria, on the Inn, in the Tiroleſe.

Kunbridge, Dorſetſhire, S. of Wareham.

KURGAN, a river and province of Perſia. The former riſes in Coraſan, and after watering Aſtrabad, falls into the Caſpian Sea.

KURILES, a chain of iſlands, extending from the ſouthern extremity of Kamtſchatka to Japan; chiefly valuable for their furs, particularly that of the ſea-otter. The inhabitants of the neighbourhood of Lopatka, who were themſelves called Kuriles, gave theſe iſlands the ſame name, as ſoon as they became acquainted with them. They are 22 in number, excluſive of the very ſmall ones. The northernmoſt iſland, which is called Shoomſka, and the next, which is named Paramouſic, were firſt viſited by the Ruſſians in 1713, and at the ſame time brought under their dominion. The others, in order, are at preſent made tributary down to Ooſheſheer incluſive. Ooſheſheer is the ſouthernmoſt iſland that the Ruſſians have yet brought under their dominion, but they trade to Ooroop, which is the 18th. A group of iſlands lies to the SW. which the Japaneſe call Jeſo; a name which they alſo give to the whole chain of iſlands between Kamtſchatka and Japan. The ſouthernmoſt, called Matmai, hath been long ſubject to the Japaneſe, and is fortified and garriſoned on the ſide toward the continent.

abounds in fruit, and is now included in the department of Lower Pyrenees.

LABRADOR, an extenſive country to the E. of Hudſon's Bay, in N. America. The climate, even about Haye's River, in only lat. 57. N. is exceſſively cold during winter. The ſnows begin to fall in October, and continue falling, by intervals, the whole winter; and, when the froſt is moſt vigorous, in form of the fineſt ſand. The ice on the rivers is then 8 feet thick; port wine freezes in a ſolid maſs; brandy coagulates; and the very breath falls on the blankets of a bed in the form of a hoar froſt. The ſun riſes in the ſhorteſt day at five minutes paſt nine, and ſets five minutes before three. In the longeſt, it riſes at three, and ſets about nine. The ice begins to diſappear in May, and hot weather commences about the middle of June, which, at times, is ſo violent, as to ſcorch the faces of the hunters. Thunder is not frequent, but ſometimes violent. But there muſt be a great difference of heat and cold in this vaſt extent, which reaches from lat. 50. 40. to lat. 62. N. Mock ſuns and halos are not unfrequent: they are very bright, and richly tinged with all the colours of the rainbow. The ſun riſes and ſets with a large cone of yellowiſh light. The night is enlivened by the aurora borealis, which ſpreads a variety of different lights and colours over the whole concave of the ſky, not to be eclipſed even by the ſplendor of the full moon, and the ſtars of a fiery redneſs. The animals in theſe countries are, the mooſe-deer, ſtags, rein-deers, bears, tigers, buffaloes, wolves, foxes, beavers, otters, lynxes, martins, ſquirrels, ermines, wild-cats, and hares. The feathered kinds are geeſe, buſtards, ducks, patridges, and all kinds of wild fowl. Their fiſh are whales, morſes, ſeals, codfiſh, and a white fiſh preferable to herrings; and, in their rivers and freſh waters, pike, perch, carp, and trout. All the quadrupeds in theſe countries are clothed with a cloſe, ſoft, warm fur; and even the dogs and cats from Britain, that have been carried into Hudſon's Bay, on the approach of winter, have changed their appearance, and acquired a much longer, ſofter, thicker coat of hair than they originally had. In ſummer there is here, as in other places, a variety in the colour of the ſeveral animals; when that ſeaſon is over, which holds only for three months, they all aſſume the livery of winter, and every ſort of beaſts, and moſt of their fowls, are of the colour of the ſnow: every thing animate and inanimate is white. The ſoil, in the parts that are known, is poor, yet the coaſt abounds with large, convenient, and ſafe harbours. In the bays are thouſands of iſlands, wherein innumerable multitudes of cider-ducks, and other waterfowl breed. The climate is remarkably healthy, and few parts of the world produce better furs. There are ſeveral Moravian ſettlements on the E. coaſt, the principal of which is Nain.

LAHORE, the capital of a province of the ſame name, in Hindooſtan Proper, and in the Panjab, or country of the Five Rivers, or five eaſtern branches of the Indus. It is ſituated on the S. bank of the Rauvee, is a place of high antiquity, and was the reſidence of the Mahometan conquerors of Hindooſtan, before they had eſtabliſhed themſelves in the central parts of the country. It owed it's modern improvements, however, to Humaioon, the father of Acbar, who made it his reſidence during a part of his troubleſome reign. Thevenot ſays that, including the ſuburbs, it was 3 leagues in length at that period; and when he ſaw it, in 1665, the city itſelf was above a league in extent. Ice is brought from the northern mountains to Lahore, and ſold there all the year. The famous avenue of ſtately trees, ſo much ſpoken of by the early Indian travellers, began at Lahore, and extended to Agra, near 500 Engliſh miles. Lahore is now the capital of the Seiks, a new power, whoſe name, even as a ſect, was hardly known till the rapid decline of the Mogul's empire, in the preſent century. Here they have extenſive manufactures of cotton cloths, and ſtuffs of all kinds, and they make very curious carpets. It is 240 miles N. by W. of Delhi. Lat. 31. 15. N. lon. 72. 48. E.

LAHORE, a province in Hindooſtan Proper, oftener called Panjab, and bounded on the W. by Cabul and Kandahar, on the N. by Cachemire, on the E. and SE. by Sirinagur and Delhi, and on the S. by Moultan. It is near 300 miles in length from E. to W. and about 100 miles from N. to S. The ſoil is remarkably fertile, abounding in rice, corn, vines, ſugars, cotton wool, and fruits of every kind. In the tract between the Indus and the Behat are ſalt ſprings, wonderfully productive, and affording fragments of rock-ſalt, hard enough to be formed into veſſels, &c.

LAMO, an iſland and ſea-port of Africa, on the coaſt of Zanguebar, in lat. 2. 0. S. and lon. 40. 24. E. The king and government, being Mahometans, are frequently at war with the reſt of the inhabitants, who are Pagans. In 1589, the king of this iſland was beheaded by the Portugueſe. His crime, whether real or pretended, was his having baſely betrayed the governor of the coaſt. For this he was ſeized, with four of his Mahometan ſubjects, in his own capital, and carried to Pate, where they were publicly executed, in the preſence of the king of that iſland, and of ſeveral petty kings of the neighbouring iſlands; ever ſince which, Lamo has been tributary to the Portugueſe.

LANCASHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the W. by the Iriſh Sea, on the N. by Cumberland and Weſtmorland, on the E. by Yorkſhire, and on the S. by Cheſhire. It is 74 miles from north to ſouth (including a detached hundred on the northweſt, called Furneſs, which is ſeparated from the reſt by a creek, at the head of Morecambe Bay) and from 15 to 44 in it's greateſt breadth. It is divided into 6 hundreds, containing 26 market towns, and 62 pariſhes. The air, in general, is very healthful, the inhabitants living to a great age. This county compriſes a variety of ſoil and face of country; but, upon the whole, it is one of thoſe which are the leaſt favoured as to natural advantages, a proof of which is the ancient thinneſs of it's population, ſhown by the very ſmall number of pariſhes into which it is divided. The hundred of Furneſs is a wild and rugged region, ſtored with quantities of iron ore and ſlate, and covered with a growth of underwood, which is cut in ſucceſſion, and made into charcoal for the uſe of the iron furnaces. The eaſtern part of the county between the Ribble and the Merſey, compriſing the ancient foreſts of Wyreſdale and Bowland, is mountainous and generally barren; but the ſouthern part of the tract between theſe two rivers is flat, quite from the ſea, to the commencement of the ridge called Blackſton-edge, that ſeparates the county from Yorkſhire. Much of this is a fertile country, though occaſionally deformed by the black turf bogs, here called moſſes: ſome of which are of large extent, and abſolutely impaſſable in wet ſeaſons. In the northeaſt part of this diviſion, are ſome lofty hills, the moſt noted of which is Pendle-Hill. The remaining part is varied with hill, dale, and moor. The natural products of this country are of little conſequence, except the coal and turf with which it's ſouthern parts abound. Of the former is a ſpecies, called cannel, far exceeding all other, not only in making a clear fire, but for being capable of being manufactured into candleſticks, cups, ſtandiſhes, ſnuff-boxes, &c. and and of being poliſhed, ſo as to repreſent a beautiful black marble. Lancaſhire is little adapted for a corn country, not only, in many parts, from the nature of it's ſoil, but from the remarkable wetneſs of it's climate; the land, however, is ſingularly fitted to the growth of the potatoe. All the rivers afford ſalmon; and the Merſey is viſited by annual ſhoals of ſmelts, here called ſparlings, of remarkable ſize and flavour. As a commercial and manufacturing county, Lancaſhire is diſtinguiſhed beyond moſt others in the kingdom. It's principal manufactures are linen, ſilk, and cotton goods; fuſtians, counterpanes, ſhalloons, bays, ſerges, tapes, ſmall wares, hats, ſail-cloth, ſacking, pins, iron goods, caſt plate-glaſs, &c. Of the commerce of this county, it may ſuffice to obſerve, that Liverpool is the third, if not the ſecond, port in the kingdom. The principal rivers are the Merſey, Irwell, Ribble, Lone, Leven, Wyre, Hodder, Roche, Duddon, Winſter, Ken, and Calder, and it has two conſiderable lakes, Winander Mere and Coniſton Water. Lancaſter is the county town.

*LANCASTER, the county-town of Lancaſhire, is an ancient, well-built, populous, and improving town, ſeated on the river Lone, which here forms a port for veſſels of moderate burden, and over which is a handſome ſtone bridge of five arches. On the ſummit of a hill ſtands the caſtle, ſerving both as the ſhire-houſe and the county-gaol. On the top of this caſtle is a ſquare tower, called John of Gaunt's Chair, where there is a fine proſpect of the mountains of Cumberland, and of the courſe of the Lone; the view toward the ſea, extending to the Iſle of Man. The town-hall is a handſome ſtructure. Lancaſter carries on a conſiderable trade, eſpecially to the Weſt Indies, and is noted for the making of mahogany cabinet-ware. It is 235 miles NNW. of London. Lat, 54. 4. N. lon. 2. 56. W. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

LANCASTER, the county-town of a county of the ſame name, in Pennſylvania. It's trade is large, and daily increaſing. LANDEN, a town of Auſtrian Brabant, where the allies, under King William and the Elector of Bavaria, were defeated by the Duke of Luxemburg, July 29, 1693. The French were repulſed two or three times, and loſt a great many officers and men, but returning to the charge, they gained a victory, which, however, coſt them dear. The confederates loſt 60 pieces of cannon, 9 mortars, &c. with ſeveral ſtandards, colours, and about 7000 men killed and wounded. The French army amounted to 80,000 men, and that of the allies to leſs than one-third of that number.

This country is full of foreſts, and abounds in rice, fruits, and fiſh. The inhabitants are robuſt, of an olive complexion, and mild. Their principal occupation is tilling the ground and fiſhing. The king is abſolute, and has no other law than his own will; and ſhows himſelf but twice in a year. He has a large revenue from elephants' teeth found in his dominions. Their religion is much the ſame as that which prevails in all the countries of the Farther India. Langione is the capital.

Lapford, Devonſ. SE. of Chumleigh.

LAPLAND, a large country in the N. of Europe, ſubject to Sweden. It is bounded on the N. by the Frozen Ocean; on the E. by the White Sea; on the S. by Sweden and Bothnia; and on the W. by Norway, being computed to be 450 miles long and 300 broad. The country chiefly conſiſts of mountains, deſerts, foreſts, heaths, fens, and lakes, and abounds in variety of birds, beaſts, and fiſhes. The furs and ſkins of beavers, otters, black, red, and white foxes, &c. are their chief articles of trade, and they are enabled to ſell a conſiderable quantity to their neighbours. The Laplanders are of middling ſtature, have generally a flattiſh face, fallen cheeks, dark grey eyes, thin beard, brown hair, are ſtout, ſtraight, and of a yellowiſh complexion, occaſioned by the weather, the ſmoke of their habitations, &c. Their manner of life renders them hardy, agile, and ſupple; but, at the ſame time, they are much inclined to indolence. They are peaceable, not given to theft, nor fickle, and ſo proud of their country and conſtitution, that, when removed from the place of their nativity, they uſually die, it is ſaid, of the noſtalgia, or longing to return. The language of the Laplanders comprehends ſo many dialects, that it is with difficulty they underſtand each other. They preſerve their paſtoral manners, ſo that agriculture proſpers not much among them. They are divided into Fiſhers and Mountaineers. The former make their habitations in the neighbourhood of ſome lake, whence they draw their ſubſiſtence. The others ſeek their ſupport upon the mountains, poſſeſſing herds of rein-deer, which they uſe according to the ſeaſon, but they go generally on foot. They are very induſtrious herdſmen, and are rich in compariſon of the Fiſhers, ſome of them poſſeſſing ſix hundred or a thouſand rein-deer. The caſtrated rein-deer are alert, tame, large, ſtrong, and handſome; on which account they uſe them for draught, and hold them in ſuch eſtimation, that it is a compliment among them to call each other a gelt rein-deer. The Lapland fiſhers, who are alſo called Laplanders of the woods, becauſe in ſummer they dwell upon the borders of the lakes, and in winter in the foreſts, live by fiſhing and hunting, and chuſe their ſituation from it's convenience for either. The introduction of fire-arms has almoſt entirely aboliſhed the uſe of the bow and arrow. With reſpect to the larger animals, ſuch as wild rein-deer, wolves, &c. they moſt frequently knock them down with clubs, as it is eaſy to come up with them by their ſnow-ſhoes, which are very long, and prevent them from ſinking into the ſnow; ſnow: bears they generally ſhoot, and finiſh them with ſpears. Beſides looking after their rein-deer, the fiſhery, and the chace, the men employ themſelves in the conſtruction of their canoes, which are little, light, and compact. They alſo make ſledges, to which they give the form of a canoe; harneſs for the rein-deer; all ſorts of utenſils in wood, ſuch as cups, bowls, &c. which are ſometimes prettily carved, ſometimes ornamented with bones, braſs, or horn; it is the man's buſineſs, likewiſe, to look after the kitchen. The employment of the women conſiſts in making nets for the fiſhery, drying fiſh and meat, milking the rein-deer, making cheeſe, and tanning hides. They prepare the nerves of the rein-deer in ſuch a manner as to make them ſerve for thread; and draw braſs wire by the help of the horns of the rein-deer pierced, inſtead of a drawing-iron. They embroider their clothes with braſs wire, ſilver, ſham-gold, or wool, which they have the art of dying in all ſorts of colours. Theſe people live in huts in the form of tents, covered with briars, bark, linen, turf, coarſe cloth, felt, or rein-deer ſkins; and the door is of felt, made like two curtains, which open aſunder. They are not able to ſtand upright in theſe huts, but ſit upon their heels round the fire. At night they lie down and cover themſelves with their clothes, and in winter put their feet into a fur bag, ſeparating their apartments with deer-ſkins. Their houſehold furniture conſiſts of iron or copper kettles, wooden cups, bowls, ſpoons, and ſometimes tin, or even ſilver baſons: to theſe may be added their implements of fiſhing and hunting. In their dreſs they uſe no linen. The men wear cloſe breeches, reaching down to their ſhoes, which are made of untanned ſkin, pointed, and turned up before; and in winter they put a little hay in them. Their doublet is made to fit their ſhape, and open at the breaſt; over this they wear a cloſe coat, the ſkirts of which reach down to the knees, and it is faſtened round them by a leathern girdle, ornamented with plates of tin or braſs. To this girdle they tie their knives, their inſtruments for getting fire, and their ſmoking apparatus. Their clothes are made of fur, leather, or cloth; always bordered with fur, or cloth of different colours. Their caps are edged with fur, pointed at top, and the four ſeams adorned with liſts of a different colour. The Ruſſian Laplanders generally border their caps with rat-ſkins. The dreſs of the women very much reſembles that of the men; but their girdle is commonly embroidered with braſs wire. Beſide theſe, they wear kerchiefs, and little aprons, made of Ruſſian painted cloth, rings on their fingers, and ear-rings, to which they ſometimes hang chains of ſilver, which paſs two or three times round the neck. They ſometimes wear caps folded after the manner of turbans, and ſometimes caps to the ſhape of the head; but all are ornamented with the embroidery of braſs wire, or with liſt of different colours. The rein-deer ſupply the Laplanders with the greateſt part of their proviſions: the chace and the fiſhery furniſh the reſt; but the fleſh of the bear is their moſt delicate meat. They eat every kind of fiſh, even the ſea-dog; as well as all ſorts of wild animals, not excepting birds of prey and carnivorous animals. Their winter proviſions conſiſt of fleſh and fiſh, both of which they eat raw. They put the milk of the rein-deer into the ſtomachs of that animal, and ſo let it freeze; and when they want to uſe their frozen milk, they chop off pieces with a hatchet. The ſeaſoning of their food is the fat of ſea-dogs and ſalt, if they can get it. They make ſoups of a ſort of cheeſe, which is ſo fat, that it takes fire on applying a candle. Their common drink is water, ſometimes mixed with milk; brandy is ſcarce with them; but they are very fond of it. Their moſt conſiderable traffic is with the Norwegians. Formerly this trade was carried on in the way of barter; but coin is now current among them. The balance is always in favour of the Laplanders; becauſe they can furniſh more merchandiſe in ſkins and furs, than they buy flour, cloth, and hardware goods. Their weddings are kept at the bride's houſe, who is dreſſed in her beſt manner, and appears with her head quite uncovered, which, at other times, is never the cuſtom, with either women or maidens; the feaſt is a kind of club meſs, to which each of the gueſts brings meat and drink. Their diverſion at weddings, and other merry-makings, is the game of fox and geeſe; they wreſtle, and jump over a ſtick, and are fond of giving groteſque accounts or exhibitions of different adventures. They likewiſe dance and ſing, or howl in diſagreeable meaſures. The new-married people live with the woman's relations for the firſt year; at the end of which they retire to their own hut. The Laplanders bury their dead in coffins; in ſome cantons with their clothes on, in others quite naked. Their religion is a compound of Chriſtian and Pagan ceremonies.

* LEEDS, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſituated in a vale, which trade has rendered one of the moſt populous ſpots in England, and through which an inland navigation paſſes. It is the principal of the clothing towns in Yorkſhire, and is particularly the mart for the coloured and white broad cloths, of which vaſt quantities are ſold in it's Cloth-Halls. That called the Mixed-Cloth-Hall, is a building of conſiderable extent, in which the cloth is placed on benches, for ſale, every market-day; and the whole buſineſs is tranſacted within little more than an hour, without the leaſt noiſe or confuſion. The White-Cloth-Hall, is a ſimilar building. The manufactures that ſupply theſe two halls extend about 10 miles to the S. 15 to the SW. and 8 to the N. and W. the mixed cloths being moſtly made in the neighbourhood of the river Aire, and the white cloths in that of the Calder. Leeds has has a manufactory of camlets, which has declined, and a flourishing one of carpets, resembling those of Wilts and Scotland. Here are also mills for the cutting of tobacco, and a great pottery, with several glass-houses. Within 3 miles of the town are numerous collieries. Of late years the town has been considerably enlarged; and some of the new parts are built, and building in an elegant style. It is 22 miles WSW. of York, and 192 N. by W. of London. Lat. 53. 48. N. lon. 1. 29. W. Markets on Tuesday and Saturday.

LEEWE, in the late Austrian Brabant.

Lefield, Oxf. near Whichwood Forest.

LEFOOGA, one of the Hapaee Islands, in the Pacific Ocean. Many parts of the country, near the sea, are still waste, owing, perhaps, to the sandiness of the soil; but, in the internal parts, the soil is better; and the marks of considerable population, and of an improved state of cultivation, are conspicuous. Many of the plantations are inclosed in such a manner, that the fences, running parellel to each other, form spacious public roads. Here are large spots covered with the paper mulberry-tree, the plantations in general are abundantly stocked with plants and fruit-trees; and to these Captain Cook in 1776 made some addition, by sowing the seeds of melons, Indian corn, &c. The islands is but 7 miles in length, and it's breadth, in some places not above 3.

LEGHORN, a handsome and considerable town of Italy, in the duchy of Tuscany, with an inward and outward harbour in the Mediterranean. It is a free port, every bale of goods, whether great or small, paying only two piastres, or scudi. The Greeks and Armenians have churches of their own, and the Turks have a mosque. The Jews have a handsome synagogue here, as well as schools. Though subject to heavy imposts, they are very rich, and well protected. The inhabitants are computed at 50,000, among whom are 16,000 Jews. The streets are wide and straight, and almost all the houses are of the same height. There are so many canals, that some have given it the title of New Venice. Near the harbour is a large building, in which they shut up every night the Turkish and the galley slaves. At a little distance, on a small island, is a light-house, where, every night, 30 burning lamps are contained in one lanthorn. The air here was very unhealthy till the marshes about it were drained. The commodities imported hence, by the English, are chiefly silk, wine, and oil. In 1741, this city suffered greatly by an earthquake. It is 45 miles SW. of Florence, and 145 NNW. of Rome. Lat. 43. 34. N. lon. 10. 17. E.

LEICESTER, the county town of Leicestershire, ceſterſhire, ſeated on the river Soar, which has lately been made navigable from Leiceſter to Loughborough, is a place of great antiquity, and though declined from it's former magnitude, is ſtill a populous, but not a handſome town. In the Saxon Heptarchy it was the ſee of a biſhop, and the chief city of the Mercian kingdom. It was at one time a moſt wealthy town, and according to Matthew Paris, it had 32 pariſh churches. It has a ſpacious market-place, with one of the largeſt markets in England for corn and cattle. The combing and ſpinning of wool into worſted, and manufacturing it into ſtockings by frames, is the chief buſineſs of the town and neighbourhood. In ſome years 60,000l. have been returned in theſe articles. It's fairs, which are upon a large ſcale, for ſheep, horſes for the collar, cattle, and cheeſe, are on May 12th, July 5th, October 10th, and December 8th. It is 24 miles S. by E. of Derby, and 99 NNW. of London. Lat. 52. 38. N. lon. 1. 3. W. Market on Saturday.

LEICESTERSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the NW. and N. by Derbyſhire and Nottinghamſhire, on the E. by the counties of Lincoln and Rutland, on the SE. and S. by Northamptonſhire, and on the SW. by Warwickſhire. It extends about 38 miles from N. to S. and as many from E. to W. in the broadeſt part. It contains 6 hundreds, 12 market towns, and 200 pariſhes. The air is healthy, and the ſoil, in general, ſtrong and ſtiff, compoſed of clay and marl. It affords great quantities of rich grazing land, and is peculiarly fitted for the culture of beans, for which it is proverbially noted. Toward the NW. the Bardon Hills riſe to a great height; and, in their neighbourhood, lies Charnwood, or Charley Foreſt, a rough and open tract. Farther to the NW. are valuable coal mines. The NE. parts feed great numbers of ſheep, which are the largeſt, and have the greateſt fleeces of wool of any in England: they are without horns, and clothed with thick long flakes of ſoft wool, particularly fitted for the worſted manufactures. The E. and SE. part of the country is a rich grazing tract. This county has been long famous for it's large black dray horſes, of which great numbers are continually ſent up to London, as well as for it's horned cattle and ſheep, which ſupply the London markets with the largeſt mutton; and it's reputation has been much extended by the great ſkill of the late Mr. Bakewell of Diſhley, who bred every ſpecies of domeſtic quadrupeds, to the utmoſt perfection of form and ſize. The manufacture of ſtockings is the principal one in this county. It's chief rivers are the Avon; the Soare, anciently the Leire; the Wreke; Anker; and Welland.

LEINSTER, a province of Ireland, bounded on the E. and S. by St. George's Channel, on the W. by Connaught and Munſter, Munſter, and on the N. by Ulſter. It is about 112 miles in length, and 70 in breadth. It contains 12 counties and 992 pariſhes. The counties are Carlow, Dublin, Kildare, Kilkenny, King's County, Longford, Louth, Meath, Queen's County, Weſt Meath, Wexford, and Wicklow. It is the moſt level and beſt cultivated province in the kingdom; but in the early ages, was almoſt one continued foreſt, the remains of which are ſtill found in the trees which are dug out of the bogs. Dublin is the capital. The chief rivers are the Barrow, Boyne, Liffey, Neur, Urrin or Slane, and the Inny. The air is temperate, and the ſoil fruitful in corn and paſtures.

LEIPSICK, a rich, large, and celebrated city of Upper Saxony. It is a handſome place, neat, and regularly built, and the ſtreets are lighted in the night. It alſo carries on a great trade. The univerſity contains 6 handſome colleges, two Latin ſchools, and two celebrated ſocieties; a German ſociety, and another for the encouragement of the liberal arts. There are three great fairs here every year, celebrated throughout all Germany, which laſt a fortnight each. The town-houſe makes but an indifferent appearance, but the exchange is a fine ſtructure. It is ſeated in a plain, on the river Pleyſſe, 44 miles WNW. of Dreſden. Lat. 51. 19. N. lon. 12. 25. E.

LEITH, a ſea-port of Scotland, in Edinburghſhire, ſeated on the Frith of Forth, 2 miles N. of Edinburgh, of which city it is the port. It is a large and populous town, containing many handſome houſes; but the greater part of the ancient buildings are neither elegant nor commodious. As the town is ſituated on both ſides of the harbour, it is divided into N. and S. Leith. The harbour is ſecured by a grand ſtone pier, at the mouth of the little river, called the Water of Leith. This harbour is now greatly improved, and accommodated with an elegant draw-bridge and a good quay; and when the propoſed new baſin and docks are added, this place will become, in every reſpect, a ſafe, capacious, and convenient ſtation for trading veſſels. The commerce of Leith is very conſiderable; and the veſſels employed in the London trade are, in general, of a large ſize, and conſtructed with peculiar elegance. The largeſt ſhips in this part, however, are thoſe employed in the Greenland whale fiſhery. The port is well ſituated for the navigation of the eaſtern ſeas. To Germany, Holland, and the Baltic, are exported lead, glaſs ware, linen, woollen ſtuffs, and a variety of other goods. Thence are imported vaſt quantities of timber, oak-bark, hides, linen rags, pearl-aſhes, flax, hemp, tar, &c. From France, Spain, and Portugal, are imported wine, brandy, oranges, and lemons; and from the W. Indies and America, rice, indigo, rum, ſugar, and logwood. Ships of conſiderable ſize are built at this port; and here are ſeveral extenſive rope-walks. There are alſo flouriſhing manufactories of bottle-glaſs, window-glaſs, and cryſtal; a great carpet-manufactory, a ſoap-work, ſome iron forges, and an ancient hoſpital for diſabled ſeamen. Lat. 56. 0. N. lon. 3. 7. W.

LEMNOS, a celebrated town and iſland of the Archipelago, now called Stalimene, ſituated near the entrance of the Dardanelles. It is above 112 miles in circumference according to Pliny, who ſays, that it is often ſhadowed by Mount Athos, though at the diſtance of 87 miles. The poets made it ſacred to Vulcan, who was thence called Lemnius Pater. Lemnos was alſo celebrated for it's labyrinth, of which not a trace now remains. The modern Greeks ſeem to entertain the ſame opinion as the ancients, of that earth of Lemnos, which is ſaid to have cured Philoctetus, and which Galen went to examine. It is never dug up but on one particular day of the year, and then with all the pomp of ceremony. This earth, called Terra Sigillata, formed into ſmall loaves, and ſealed with the Grand Signior's ſeal, is then diſperſed over all Europe. The greateſt virtues are attributed to it. Some phyſicians have even preſcribed it; but it appears to be nothing more than a mere argillaceous earth, incapable of producing the effects that have been attributed to it. Lemnos is ſubject to the Turks; but the inhabitants, who are almoſt all Greeks, are very induſtrious. It is the ſee of a Greek archbiſhop. Lat. 40. 3. N. lon. 25. 28. E.

LEOTONG, a country of Chineſe Tartary, bounded by part of China, and a gulf of the ſame name on the S.; by Chineſe Tartary on the N.; by Korea on the E.; and by another part of Tartary on the W. It was from this country that the Tartars entered China, when they made themſelves maſters of it. The inhabitants are not ſo gentle, polite, and induſtrious as the Chineſe; they neither like trade nor huſbandry, although their country is very proper for both. Chenyang, or Mougden, the principal town, is large and populous.

LEPANTO, a conſiderable town of Turkey, in Europe, in Livadia, built on a mountain, in the form of a ſugar-loaf, on the top of which is a caſtle. The harbour is very ſmall, and may be ſhut up with a chain; the entrance being but 50 feet wide. The produce of the adjacent country is wine, oil, corn, rice, Turkey leather, and tobacco. Near this town, Don John of Auſtria obtained a celebrated victory over the Turkiſh fleet in 1752. The Turks have ſix or ſeven moſques here, and the Greeks two churches. It is ſeated on the Gulf of Lepanto, 100 miles WNW. of Athens, and 364 WSW. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 38. 30. N. lon. 22. 0. E.

LESGUIS, COUNTRY OF THE, one of the ſeven Caucaſian nations, ſituated between the Black Sea and the Caſpian. Their country is indifferently called by the Georgians, Leſguiſtan, or Dagheſtan. It is divided into a variety of diſtricts, generally independent, and governed by chiefs, elected by the people. The Leſguis are probably deſcended from the tribes of mountaineers, known to ancient geographers under the name of Leſgæ or Ligyes; and the difficulty of their country, which is a region of mountains, whoſe paſſes are known only to themſelves, has, at all times, ſecured them from foreign invaſion. They ſubſiſt by raiſing cattle, and by predatory expeditions into the countries of their more wealthy neighbours. During the troubles in Perſia, toward the beginning of this century, they repeatedly ſacked the towns of Shamachie and Ardebil, and ravaged the neighbouring diſtricts; and the preſent wretched ſtate of Georgia and part of Armenia, is owing to the frequency of their incurſions. In their perſons and dreſs, and general habits of life, as far as theſe are known to us, they greatly reſemble the Circaſſians.

LEUGNE, a village in the dept. of Upper Saone, lying to the E. of Veſoul. Here is a cavern, 35 paces deep, and 60 wide, which ſerves as a barometer to all the country people. A fog, at the entrance of this glacier, is an infallible ſign of rain the next day. From the roof, which is 50 feet high, deſcend maſſes, or rather columns of ice, of a prodigious ſize. The brook, which runs through a part of this grotto, is frozen in ſummer, yet flows in winter.

Leugnerſh, Suſſex, N. of Pagham. Levington, Linc. SW. of Fokingham. Levington, Suffolk, on the Stour, SE. of Ipſwich.

LEUK, a town of Swiſſerland, in the Upper Valais, ſeated on an eminence near the Rhone. It is one of the independent dixains of the Upper Valais, and is remarkable for it's ſprings, whoſe water is ſo hot, that it will boil an egg. Leuk is much frequented in the ſummer, on account of theſe ſprings. The patients either bathe or drink the waters, which are beneficial in rheumatiſms, diſeaſes of the ſkin, &c. and ſeem nearly to reſemble thoſe of Bath. In 1719, an avalanche (a vaſt body of ſnow) fell with ſuch impetuoſity from a neighbouring glacier, upon the village, as to overwhelm the greateſt part of the houſes and the baths, and to deſtroy many of the inhabitants. Lat. 46. 12. N. lon. 7. 39. E.

It's buildings, as well private as public, are magnificent; and it has ſeveral canals in the ſtreets, which are a great aſſiſtance to their trade; eſpecially as they are continued not only to the ſea, but to the moſt conſiderable towns in the province. It is 27 miles W. of Groningen, and 65 N. by E. of Amſterdam. Lat. 53. 11. N. lon. 5. 42. E.

Lewcomb, Dorſetſhire, NW. of Everſhot. Lewell, Dorſetſhire, between Stafford and Woodford.

LEWENTZ, a town of Gran, Hungary.

LEWES, the principal town of Suſſex, is a well-built, populous place, and is ſeated on the river Ouſe, which is navigable here for barges. It is finely ſituated on the declivity of a hill, on which are the remains of an ancient caſtle, the environs of which command a beautiful view of a richly-varied country, in which the downs form the moſt remarkable and ſtriking part of the ſcene. On the river are ſeveral iron-works, where cannon are caſt for merchant ſhips, beſides other uſeful works of that kind. The timber hereabouts is prodigiouſly large, and the ſoil is the richeſt in this part of England. Lewes is 30 miles E. of Chicheſter, and 49 S. of London. Lat. 50. 55. N. lon. 0. 5. E. Market on Saturday.

LEWIS, one of the moſt conſiderable of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland, which being connected by a narrow iſthmus with HARRIS, forms but one iſland, which is about 40 miles in length, and 13 in it's mean breadth. Like moſt of the Scottiſh iſles, it is greatly interſected by arms of the ſea. By theſe it may be ſaid to be divided into five peninſulas. The country, in general, is wild, bleak, barren of wood, and little fitted for cultivation: the hills are covered with heath, which affords ſhelter for various ſorts of game. The lakes and ſtreams abound with ſalmon, large red trout, &c. The land animals here are ſimilar to thoſe found in the northern iſles, and the fiſheries on the coaſt are not inferior. Stornaway is the only town in Lewis. The iſland belongs to Roſsſhire. There are ſeveral inferior iſles and rocks, which are comprehended under Inverneſsſhire. The whole lie 20 miles NW. of the Iſle of Skye.

LEYDEN,

LEYDEN, a city of Holland, ſuppoſed to be the ſame which Ptolemy calls Lugdunum Batavorum, ſeated in a country full of gardens and meadows, ſurrounded by ditches and canals, near the ancient bed of the Rhine, which now looks like a canal. It is about four miles and a half in circumference; and it's ditches are bordered with rows of trees. It has 8 gates, and contains 50 iſlands, and 145 bridges, the greateſt part of which are made with freeſtone. The public buildings are very handſome. There are ſeveral large hoſpitals, and an univerſity, which has generally about 200 ſtudents, though there are but two colleges; for theſe ſcholars board in the town, and have no dreſs to diſtinguiſh them. The ſchool conſiſts of a large pile of brick building, three ſtories high. Adjoining to the ſchool is the phyſic-garden, where the profeſſor reads lectures in botany. The library contains curious manuſcripts; and the theatre for anatomy is the fineſt in Europe. Here are manufactures of the beſt cloths and ſtuffs in Holland, there being no leſs than 1600 workmen employed in them. It is 4 miles E. of the ſea, 15 SSE. of Haarlem, and 20 SW. of Amſterdam. Lat. 52. 10. N. lon. 4. 33. E.

LEYTE, one of the Philippine Iſlands, in Aſia, about 80 leagues in circumference. It's ſoil on the E. ſide is very fertile, yielding two hundred for one. The mountains abound in deer, cows, wild hogs, and fowls; and cocoas grow without culture. They have two plentiful harveſts in the year, to which the numerous rivers, deſcending from the mountains, not a little contribute. The iſland contains about 9000 inhabitants, who pay tribute to the Spaniards in rice, wax, and quilts. Lat. 11. 0. N. lon. 125. 0. E.

LIMA, a city of S. America, capital of Peru. It has an univerſity, and gives it's name to the principal audience of Peru.

The

The ſtreets are handſome and ſtraight, but the houſes are generally only one ſtory high, on account of the earthquakes. However, they are pretty, and much adorned, having long galleries on the front. One part of the roofs is covered with coarſe linen cloth, and the others only with reeds, which is not inconvenient, becauſe violent rains are not known here; but the rich inhabitants cover theirs with fine mats, or beautiful cotton cloths. There are trees planted all round their houſes, to keep off the heat of the ſun. What the houſes want in height, they have in length and depth; for ſome of them are 200 feet long, and proportionably broad, ſo that they have 10 or 12 large apartments on the ground floor. The royal ſquare is very handſome; and in the middle is a fountain of bronze, adorned with the image of Fame, which ſpouts out water. On the E. and W. ſides are the public ſtructures, which are well built. The river which croſſes Lima forms canals or ſtreams, which run to moſt of the houſes, and ſerve to water their gardens, &c. The city is about four miles in length, and two in breadth, and is divided into 5 pariſhes. They make uſe of mules to draw their coaches, and of theſe there are about 5000. The churches and convents are extremely rich, and divine ſervice is performed in them with a magnificence ſcarcely to be imagined. The ornaments, even on common days, exceed, in quantity and richneſs, thoſe which many cities of Europe diſplay on the moſt extraordinary occaſions. Lima is the ſeat of the viceroy, whoſe office is generally triennial, and contains ſeveral courts, as that of the viceroy, of the archbiſhop, of the inquiſition, of the conſulada, or commerce, and of the wills. Earthquakes are here very frequent, and ſome have done this city a great deal of damage, particularly that in 1746, by which it was almoſt deſtroyed. The inhabitants are ſo rich, that when the viceroy, ſent from Spain, in 1682, made his public entrance into this city, they paved the ſtreets he was to paſs through with ingots of ſilver. It is ſaid, that the inhabitants are very debauched, but, at the ſame time, extremely ſuperſtitious, having a ſtrong belief in the power of charms; that about a fourth part of the city conſiſts of monks and nuns, who are not more chaſte than the reſt; that if any one happen to rival a monk, he is in danger of his life, for they always carry a dagger under their frocks; that the moſt profligate of them think they can atone for all their crimes, by hearing a maſs, or kiſſing the robe of St. Francis, or St. Dominic; and that then they return to their former practices. Lima is ſeated in the pleaſant and fertile valley of Rimac, or Lima, on a ſmall river, near the ſea. Lat. 12. 1. S. lon. 76. 44. W.

LIMA, THE AUDIENCE OF, a large province of S. America, in Peru, lying on the S. Sea, with an extenſive valley, and a river of the ſame name. It contains one archbiſhopric, viz. Lima; and four biſhoprics, viz. Truxillo, Guamanga, Cuſco, and Arequipa. There are ſeveral animals in this province, which are very fierce and dangerous, eſpecially near the mountains; but that which they call a lion is not one, for it is more like a wolf, and never attacks mankind. However, there are very large tawny tigers, or panthers, which are as wild and fierce as thoſe of Africa.

LIMERICK, a city of Ireland, in the county of Limerick, and province of Munſter, three miles in circumference. Within a century, it was reckoned the ſecond city in the kingdom: at preſent it has loſt it's rank; not becauſe it flouriſhes leſs, but becauſe Cork flouriſhes more. It is divided into the Iriſh and Engliſh Town; the latter is ſituated on an iſland, formed by the river Shannon, and called King's Iſland. It is been diſmantled about 30 years, and has increaſed prodigiouſly within that period by the addition of handſome ſtreets and quays: and it's commerce has kept pace with it's ſize. The linen, woollen, and paper manufactures are carried on here to a great extent; and the export of beef and other provisions is considerable. Here are many hospitals, and some handsome public structures. The inhabitants are estimated at upwards of 40,000. The country around it is fertile and pleasant, but the air is rather moist. It is 50 miles SSE. of Galway, 50 N. of Cork, and 94 SW. of Dublin. Lat. 52. 35. N. lon. 8. 30. W.

*LINCOLN, the capital of Lincolnshire, is pleasantly seated on the side of a hill, on the Witham, which here divides into 3 streams. It is much reduced from it's former extent and splendor, and now consists principally of one street, above two miles long, well paved, and several cross and parallel streets, well peopled. Here are some handsome modern buildings, but more antique ones. The Roman's north-gate still remains under the name of Newport-Gate. It is a vast semicircle of stones, of very large dimensions, laid without mortar, and connected only by their uniform shape. Upon the whole, this city has an air of ancient greatness, arising, in a great measure, from the number of monastic ruins; most of which are now converted into stables, out-houses, &c. The cathedral is much admired for it's interior architecture, which is in the richest and lightest Gothic style. The great bell, called Tom of Lincoln, requires 15 able men to ring it. The chief trade here is in coals brought by the Trent and Fossdyke; and oats and wool, which are sent by the river Witham. Here is a small manufacture of camlets. It is 32 miles NE. of Nottingham, and 133 N. of London. Lat. 53. 15. N. lon. 0. 25. W. Markets on Tuesday and Friday.

It is 77 miles from N. to S. and 45 in breadth, where widest. It is divided into three parts, namely, Holland on the SE. Kesteven on the SW. and Lindsey on the N. It contains 30 hundreds, one city, 33 market-towns, and 630 parishes. It's principal rivers are the Trent, Humber, ber, Witham, and Welland. The air is various, according to it's three grand diviſions, each of which ſee. The ſoil, in many places, is very rich, the inland part producing corn in great plenty, and the fens cole-ſeed, and very rich paſtures; whence their breed of cattle is larger than that of any other county in England, except Somerſetſhire; their horſes are alſo excellent, and very large; their hunting hounds and hares are particularly noted for their extreme ſwiftneſs; and their ſheep are not only of the largeſt breed, but are clothed with a long thick wool, peculiarly fitted for the worſted and coarſe woollen manufactures.

LIPARI, the common name of 12 iſlands in the Mediterranean, which lie to the N. of Sicily, between lon. 14. 1. and 15. 12. E. and lat. 38. 20. and 38. 40. N. They were formerly called Æolian, and are nearly as follows, in the order of their ſize; namely, Lipari, Strombolo, Volcano, Salini, Felicudi, Alicudi, Panaria, Volcanello, Vacheluſe, Liſca, Dattolo, and Tiia Navi. Theſe iſlands are ſubject to the king of Naples, to whom they bring in a good revenue. They produce great quantities of allum, ſulphur, nitre, cinnabar, and moſt kinds of fruits, particularly raiſins, currants, and figs, in great perfection. Some of their wines are likewiſe much much esteemed, particularly the Malvasia, well known all over Europe. These islands are of volcanic origin. See STROMBOLO, VOLCANO, &c.

LIPARI, the largest, most fertile, and populous of the Lipari Islands, about 15 miles in circumference. It was celebrated among the ancients; and, by the description of Aristotle, it appears to have been considered by the sailors in his time, what Strombolo is in ours, as a light-house, as it's fires were never extinguished. It has not suffered from subterraneous fires for many ages past, though it every where bears the marks of it's former state. The form of this island is very irregular; and in this volcanic spot, such a number of spiracles have been opened, that the greatest part of them are confounded with each other. It abounds with the currant grape; cotton also grows here; and great quantities of pumice are gathered. It's capital, an ancient town of the same name, stands on the S. side of the island. The principal trade of the inhabitants is in the exportation of the products of the island; but the chief necessaries of life they import from Sicily. Lat. 38. 35. N. lon. 15. 30. E.

LISBON, the capital of Portugal, a large, rich, celebrated city, one of the principal of Europe, with an university. The squares, public buildings, and palaces were magnificent, but it was almost totally destroyed by an earthquake, November 1, 1755. The new town is much more handsome than the former: the plan is regular, the streets and squares are spacious, and the buildings are elegant. The harbour will contain ten thousand sail of ships, which ride in the greatest safety; and the city, being viewed from the southern shore of the river, affords a beautiful prospect, as the buildings gradually rise above each other. The number of inhabitants is estimated at 270,000, of which the negroes and mulattoes make a sixth part. They reckon here more than 20,000 houses, 40 parish churches, and 50 convents of both sexes. Lisbon is seated on the river Tajo, 10 miles from the mouth of it, 178 W. by N. of Seville, and 255 S. by W. of Madrid. Lat. 38. 42. N. lon. 9. 5. W.

Lithuania, a large country of Europe, between Poland and Ruſſia. It is about 300 miles in length and 250 in breadth, and is watered by ſeveral large rivers, the principal of which are, the Dnieper, Dwina, Niemen, Pripecz, and Bog. It is a flat country, like Poland, and the lands are very proper for tillage. The ſoil is not only fertile in corn, but it produces honey, wood, pitch, and vaſt quantities of wool. They have alſo excellent little horſes, which they never ſhoe, becauſe their hoofs are very hard. There are vaſt foreſts, in which are bears, wolves, elks, wild oxen, lynxes, beavers, gluttons, wild cats, &c. and eagles and vultures are very common. In theſe foreſts, large pieces of yellow amber are frequently dug up. The country abounds with Jews, who, though numerous in every other part of Poland, ſeem to have fixed their head-quarters in this duchy. "If you aſk for an interpreter," ſays Mr. Coxe, "they bring you a Jew; if you come to an inn, the landlord is a Jew; if you want poſt-horſes, a Jew procures them, and a Jew drives them; if you wiſh to purchaſe, a Jew is your agent; and this, perhaps, is the only country in Europe, where Jews cultivate the ground: in paſſing through Lithuania, we frequently ſaw them engaged in ſowing, reaping, mowing, and other works of huſbandry." The peaſants of this country are in a ſtate of the moſt abject vaſſalage. The eſtabliſhment of religion has heretofore been the Romiſh, but there were Lutherans, Calviniſts, Socinians, Greeks, and even Turks, as well as Jews. At preſent it is under Ruſſia.

Litiz, a town of Pennſylvania. Here is a flouriſhing ſettlement of the Moravians, begun in 1757. Liverdun, a town in the depart. of Meurthe, seated on a mountain, near the river Moselle, 8 miles NE. of Toul.

* Liverpool, a large, flourishing, and populous sea-port of Lancashire. At the commencement of this century, it was only a small village, a hamlet to the parish of Walton, about 3 miles off; but it has now become, with respect to extent of commerce, the third, if not the second port in the kingdom. It is seated on the river Mersey, and has an excellent harbour, formed with great labour and expence; here being 8 wet-docks, secured by large flood-gates, and capable of containing 900 vessels. The warehouses here are built upon a most extensive scale, some of them having 12 or more stories, or different floors. Since the completion of the Duke of Bridgewater's canals, the last of which was that at Runcorn, a new dock has been formed by the duke above the town. One very considerable branch of trade carried on from this port, is that of procuring slaves on the coast of Africa, and disposing of them in the West Indies and N. America. The trade to Ireland is very considerable; many ships are sent to the Greenland whale-fishery; and the coasting-trade hence to London, employs a great number of ships; the cargoes with which they are freighted consisting chiefly in corn and cheese; and many good ships are built here. Liverpool communicates, by the Mersey, with Warrington, and with a canal, called the Sankey Canal, running to some coal-pits and other works, a little way up the country; by the Irwell and the Duke of Bridgewater's Canal, with Manchester; by the Weever, with the Cheshire salt-works; and, by the Duke of Bridgewater's Canal, with the Staffordshire Grand Trunk and all it's communications. The exchange is a handsome modern edifice of stone, with piazzas for the merchants, and over it is the town-hall. The houses, in general, are new, and built of brick. The stone used here is obtained from quarries in the neighbourhood; it is of a yellow colour, and extremely soft when hewn in the quarry, but hardens by being exposed to the air. The merchants of Liverpool have disgraced themselves, more than any other people in Europe, by their iniquitous exertions in the man trade; and they seem to wish these incorrigible men to perpetuate their infamy, by giving African names to the new and improved parts of the town. Liverpool is 15 miles W. of Warrington, and 203 NW. of London. Lat. 53. 23. N. lon. 2. 54. W. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

Livonia, a province of the Russian empire, situated to the E. of the Gulf of Riga, which, with that of Esthonia, has been reciprocally claimed and possessed by the three bordering powers of Russia, Sweden, and Poland, and, for more than two centuries, has been a constant source and perpetual scene of the most bloody wars. It was finally wrested from the Swedes by Peter the Great, and confirmed to the Russians by the peace of Nystadt, in 1721. It now forms the Russian government of Riga, or Livonia, of which the town of Riga is the capital. It is about 250 miles from N. to S. and 150 from E. to W. The land is so fertile in corn, that it is called the granary of the North; and it would produce a great deal more, if it were not so full of lakes. The fish that abound here are salmon, carp, pike, flat fish, and many others. In the forests are wolves, bears, elks, rein-deers, stags, and hares. The domestic animals are very numerous; but the sheep bear a bad sort of wool, resembling goat's hair. Here are a great number of forests, which consist of birch-trees, pines, and oaks; and all the houses of the inhabitants are built with wood. They export flax, hemp, honey, wax, leather, skins, and pot-ash. The Czar, Peter the Great, perceiving the inhabitants did not like the change of sovereigns, compelled them to abandon their country, and drove many of them as far as the Caspian Sea; but being persuaded to recal them, most of them perished before the edict was published, so that he was obliged to repeople their country with other nations.

LOANDA, a town of Africa, capital of a fertile province, called Loanda, in the kingdom of Angola, with a good harbour. It is large and handſome, conſidering the country, containing ſeveral churches, convents, and about 5000 inhabitants, of which only 1000 are whites. The houſes are moſtly built of ſtone, and covered with tiles. There is alſo a vaſt number of negroes' huts made of ſtraw and earth. The Jeſuits had a college here. The country abounds in cattle and ſheep, Indian corn, millet, manioe, and fruits. It is ſubject to the Portugueſe. Lat. 8. 45. S. lon. 13. 25. E.

LOANGO, a town and kingdom of Africa, in Congo, or Lower Guinea, lying on the ſea ſide, being about 250 miles in length, and 188 in breadth. The natives, it is ſaid, are converted to Chriſtianity, at leaſt the greater part of them. The land is ſo fruitful, that they have three crops of millet a year; and there is a great number of trees, whence they draw palm-wine. Their principal trade conſiſts in ſlaves, elephants teeth, copper, tin, lead, and iron. The women cultivate the ground, ſow, and get in the harveſt. There is a great number of towns and villages in this country, of which little is known but their names. They have plenty of cattle and fowl, both wild and tame. The inhabitants are black, and of mild and agreeable manners. This country lies between 10 and 19 deg. E. lon. and 1 and 5 S. lat.

LOBAW, a town of Culm, Pruſſia.

LOBOA, in Spaniſh Eſtramadura.

LOCARNO, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of a diſtrict of the ſame name, which is one of the four tranſalpine bailiwicks. It contains about 1500 inhabitants. Part of the town is built on piazzas, in the form of a creſcent, with two wings; and in the front, is a row of trees, and the public walk. It contains 3 convents, and a ſmall Franciſcan monaſtery, perched on a rock overhanging the valley, and commanding a ſuperb view of the Lake of Locarno and it's boundaries. Locarno was once ſituated on the lake, and had a port capable of receiving large barks; at preſent it ſtands at the diſtance of a quarter of a mile, which is owing to the accumulation of ſand brought down by the torrent Maggia. Lat. 46. 10. N. lon. 8. 31. E.

LOCARNO, LAKE. See MAGGIORE.

LOCHABER, a bleak, barren, mountainous, and rugged diſtrict of Inverneſſſhire, in the ſouthern part of the county.

LOCHEM, in Dutch Guelderland.

LOCHER MOSS, a moraſs of Dumfrieſſhire, in Scotland, about 10 miles in length and 3 in breadth. From the vaſt oak-trees trees that have been dug up here, it is evident that this moraſs has been, at ſome diſtant period, a great foreſt. Canoes and anchors have been frequently found here; and as the preſent moraſs is but little elevated above flood mark, it is ſuppoſed to have been once covered by the ſea.

LOCHES, a town in the dept. of Indre and Loire. Here was one of thoſe horrid dungeons, built by the cruel Lewis XI. the walls, floors, ceilings, and doors of which were lined with plates of iron, faſtened to bars of the ſame metal. The unfortunate Ludovic Sforza, duke of Milan, taken in battle, under Lewis XII. ended his days in one of them. Loches is ſeated on the river Indre, near a foreſt, 15 miles S. of Amboiſe.

LOCHMABEN, a town of Dumfriesſhire, ſituated on the W. ſide of the river Annan, 10 miles NE. of Dumfries.

Lollington, Suſſex, W. of Pevenſey.

LOMBARDY, a part of Italy, which comprehends almoſt all the ancient Ciſalpine Gaul. It lies toward the N. and is divided into the Upper and Lower. Upper Lombardy is the weſtern part, and comprehends Piedmont, with it's dependencies, and the duchies of Montferrat and Milan. Lower Lombardy, which is the eaſtern part, comprehends Parma, Modena, Mantua, Ferrara, the Bologneſe, the Paduan, Vicentin, Veroneſe, Breſſan, Cremaſco, Bergameſe, and ſome ſmaller principalities and ſtates.

LOMBEZ, a ſmall town in the dept. of Gers, 16 miles SE. of Auch.

LOMOND BEN, a great mountain in the N. of Stirlingſhire, in Scotland, about 3200 feet above the level of the lake, at it's bottom. It ſtretches along the E. ſide of Loch Lomond ſeveral miles; and it's broad baſe extends ſo far into the country, that the aſcent of this mountain, though ſteep, is computed to be 6 miles. In this long aſcent, we meet with a diverſity of climates, and a variety of inhabitants. Ptarmigans, and other heath fowls, frequent it's upper regions: it's lower are the haunts of the roebuck; and herds of cattle feed in the irriguous valleys and ſheltered paſtures at it's baſe. From this lofty mountain are ſeen Loch Lomond, the Clyde, the Forth, Edinburgh, the eaſtern coaſt as far as the Cheviot Fells, the Iſles of Bute and Arran, the rock of Ailſa, Ireland, the mountain of Plinlimmon in Wales, and the Skiddaw in Cumberland, and the hills far beyond it.

LOMOND HILLS, in the weſtern part of Fifeſhire, are beautiful and verdant.

LOMOND, LOCH, a beautiful and extenſive lake of Dumbartonſhire, which deſcends from the northern point of that country, expanding as it advances ſouthward. It is 28 miles long; it's breadth from 7 miles decreaſing three quarters of a mile; and, were it's windings followed, it's circuit would be upwards of 100 miles. There are 33 iſlands in this lake, ſeveral of which are inhabited, and contain antique ruins, concealed among ancient yews. Others riſe into high rocky cliffs, the habitation of the oſprey, or ſea-eagle. In 1755, when Liſbon was deſtroyed by an earthquake, this lake was exceedingly agitated: on the SE. corner of it, terminate the Grampian mountains.

LON, LUNE, or LOYNE, a river which riſes in Weſtmorland, and flowing by Kirby Lonſdale in that county, falls into the Iriſh Sea below Lancaſter. The banks of this river are beautiful and romantic.

LONDON, the metropolis of Great Britain, one of the largeſt and moſt opulent cities in the world, mentioned by Tacitus as a conſiderable commercial place in the reign of the Roman emperor Nero. In it's moſt extenſive view, as the metropolis, it conſiſts of the The City, properly ſo called, the city of Weſtminſter, which was once a mile from London, and the borough of Southwark; beſide the ſuburbs in Middleſex and Surry, within what are called the Bills of Mortality. London and Weſtminſter are ſituated in Middleſex, on the N. ſide of the river Thames. Southwark is ſeated on the oppoſite bank in Surry. The extent of the whole, from Limehouſe and Deptford to Milbank and Vauxhall, is above 7 miles; but the greateſt breadth does not exceed 3. With reſpect to the government of this metropolis, the city is divided into 26 wards, each governed by an alderman. From the aldermen the lord mayor is annually choſen. There are likewiſe 236 common-councilmen, a recorder, two ſheriffs, who are alſo ſheriffs of Middleſex, and other officers. The government of Weſtminſter is veſted in the high ſteward, an under ſteward, and the high bailiff, all choſen alſo by the dean and chapter. The ſuburbs are under the juriſdiction of the magiſtrate of Middleſex. Among the public buildings, St. Paul's cathedral, as the moſt conſpicuous, firſt claims attention. This noble fabric is 2292 feet in circumference, and 365 in height to the top of the croſs. It is inferior to none in Europe, except St. Peter's at Rome. Weſtminſter Abbey is a grand ſpecimen of Gothic architecture, ſaid to have been founded by Sebert, king of the Eaſt Saxons, in 610. Having been deſtroyed by the Danes, it was rebuilt by Edward the Confeſſor, in 1066. Henry III. pulled down the Saxon pile, and began to build the preſent ſtructure in 1245. The work was carried on ſlowly by ſucceeding princes, and can hardly be ſaid to have been finiſhed before the time of Sir Chriſtopher Wren, who built the two towers at the weſt end. It is 360 feet in length within the walls; at the nave it is 72 broad, and at the croſs 195. The chapel of Henry VII. adjoining, Leland calls "The Wonder of the World." St. Stephen's, Wallbrook, is a ſmall church of exquiſite beauty, the maſterpiece of Sir Chriſtopher Wren; perhaps Italy itſelf can produce no modern building that can vie vie with this in taſte and proportion. Bow church in Cheapſide; St. Bride's, in Fleet-ſtreet; St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt; and St. Martin's in the Field, are, among the other churches, moſt diſtinguiſhed for fine architecture. The pariſhes, in what are called the Bills of Mortality, amount to 146; namely, 97 within the walls, 16 without the walls, 23 out pariſhes in Middleſex and Surry, and 10 in the city and liberties of Weſtminſter. With reſpect to palaces, the magnificence of royalty is not to be found in them. That of St. James was an hoſpital for leprous females, dedicated to that ſaint. It was ſurrendered to Henry VIII. who erected on it's ſite the preſent palace; of which it has been obſerved, that notwithſtanding it's mean exterior, it is the moſt commodious for the parade of royalty of any in Europe. He likewiſe laid out a large piece of ground adjoining into a park, formed a canal and walks, calling it, in conformity to the name of the palace, St. James' Park. Charles II. enlarged and improved this ſpot, adorning it with plantations of trees; but, a few years ago, it was improved in a ſtill more beautiful degree. The Queen's Palace ſtands in the moſt favourable ſituation that St. James' Park could furniſh. It was erected by the Duke of Buckingham, in 1703, and called Buckingham Houſe, until it was purchaſed, in 1761, for the royal reſidence; when it acquired it's preſent name. In 1775, parliament ſettled this houſe upon the queen, in caſe ſhe ſhould ſurvive the king. Carlton Houſe, the reſidence of the Prince of Wales, the gardens extending to St. James' Park, is a ſtately building on which vaſt ſums have been expended; but it is not yet completed. The Banqueting Houſe, at Whitehall, was begun in 1619, from a deſign by Inigo Jones. It is only a ſmall part of the vaſt plan of a palace, intended for the reſidence of the Britiſh monarchs, but left incomplete. Beſide the royal palaces, there are many fine houſes of the princes of the blood, and of the nobility and gentry. Weſtminſter Hall, and ſome buildings appendant to it, contain the Houſes of Lords and Commons, and the ſuperior courts of juſtice. The great hall, in which are held the trials of peers, and of perſons impeached before the lords, exceeds, in dimenſion, any in Europe, which is not ſupported by pillars. It's length is 270 feet; the breadth 74; and the height in proportion. The Guildhall of the city, ſituated at the end of King-ſtreet, Cheapſide, was built in 1431. It's great hall is 153 feet long, 59 broad, and 58 high. The front of this hall has been rebuilt in the Gothic ſtyle. Here the courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas hold ſittings at Niſi Prius: here alſo the city elections are held, and all the buſineſs of the corporation tranſacted. The Seſſions Houſe in the Old Bailey, in which the criminals of both London and Middleſex are tried; and the County Hall for Middleſex, on Clerkenwell Green, are noble ſtructures. Of the buildings appropriated to the great national offices, military, naval, and fiſcal, the moſt ancient is the Tower of London. It is ſurrounded by a wall and ditch, which alſo incloſe ſeveral ſtreets. The circumference is about a mile. It was a palace during 500 years; the monarchs, on their acceſſion to the throne, conſtantly holding their courts in this fortreſs; but after the acceſſion of Queen Elizabeth, this cuſtom ceaſed. The Horſe Guards, an elegant ſtructure, ſtands oppoſite the Banqueting Houſe. The War Office is in this place, and here courts-martial for the army are held. The Ordnance Office, for the military department, is in St. Margaret's-ſtreet, Weſtminſter. The Admiralty is a large ſtructure, in which the higher departments of the buſineſs of the navy is tranſacted, and the lords of the admiralty have houſes. The Navy, Navy Pay, and Victualling Offices, are in Somerſet Place, a ſtupendous and magnificent ſtructure, built on the ſite of the old palace, erected by the firſt Duke of Somerſet in the reign of Edward VI. It was begun during the laſt war, and was intended to bring into one ſpot the moſt conſiderable public offices; and, although not yet finiſhed, it already contains, beſide the offices above-mentioned, the following, namely, the auditors of impreſt, clerk of the eſtreats, duchy courts of Lancaſter and Cornwall, hackney coach, hawkers and pedlars, horſe duty, lord treaſurer's, remembrancer's, lottery, pipe and comptroller of the pipe, ſalt, ſick and hurt, ſignet, ſtage coach duty, ſtamp, ſurveyor of crown lands, tax, and wine licence offices. The king's barge-houſes are comprehended in the plan, with a dwelling for the barge maſter; beſide houſes for the treaſurer, paymaſter, and 6 commiſſioners of the navy; 3 commiſſioners of the victualling and their ſecretary; 1 commiſſioner of the ſtamps, and 1 of the ſick and hurt; with commodious apartments in every office for a ſecretary, or ſome other acting officer, for a porter, and their families. In the front, toward the Strand, which conſiſts of a rich baſement, ſupporting an excellent example of the Corinthian order, and containing a principal and attic ſtory, are apartments for the Royal Academy, and the Royal and Antiquarian ſocieties. The grand entrance, by 3 lofty arches, leads into a ſpacious quadrangle, on each ſide of which, to the eaſt and weſt, a ſtreet is to be formed, beyond which the wings are to be carried. The front to the Thames is erected on a noble terrace, 53 feet wide; and the building, when finiſhed, will extend 1100 feet. This terrace, unparalleled for grandeur and beauty of view, is ſupported on a rough ruſtic baſement, adorned with a lofty arcade of 32 arches, each 12 feet wide, and 24 high. The grand ſemicircular arch, in the middle of the baſement, is that intended for the reception of the king's barges. The Treaſury, which has a noble, elevated front, is in St. James' Park; and what is called "The Cockpit," forms a part of this building, and is now the council chamber for the cabinet miniſters. In the city is the Royal Exchange, originally built in 1567, by Sir Thomas Greſham. Being deſtroyed by the great fire in 1666, it was rebuilt, in it's preſent form, at the expence of 80,000l. In each of the principal fronts is a piazza, and in the centre an area. The height of the building is 56 feet, and from the centre of the ſouth ſide riſes a lantern and turret 178 feet high, on the top of which is a vane, in the form of a graſshopper, the creſt of Sir Thomas Greſham. The inſide of the area, which is 144 feet long, and 127 broad, is ſurroumded by piazzas. The Bank of England, a magnificent ſtructure, is ſituated in Threadneedle ſtreet. The Cuſtom Houſe, to the weſt of the Tower, is a large irregular pile, before which ſhips of 350 tons can lie, and diſcharge their cargoes. It was built in 1718, on the ſite of a former Cuſtom Houſe, deſtroyed by fire. The Exciſe Office, in Broad-ſtreet, is a building of magnificent ſimplicity, erected, in 1768, on the ſite of Greſham College. The Eaſt India Houſe, in Leadenhall-ſtreet, was built in 1726. The front is very confined; but it has great extent in depth, and contains all the offices neceſſary for the tranſacting the buſineſs of a commercial company. The South Sea Houſe, in Threadneedle-ſtreet, is a handſome building; but the General Poſt-office, in Lombard-ſtreet, is rather convenient than ſplendid. Of the ſtructures, which more particularly belong to the city, the moſt diſtinguiſhed is the Manſion Houſe, erected in 1752, for the reſidence of the Lord Mayor: it is magnificent, but ponderous. The Monument is a grand fluted Doric column, 202 feet high, erected in commemoration of the great fire in 1666. The bridges are a great ornament to the metropolis. The moſt ancient, London Bridge, was begun in 1176, and finiſhed in 1209. The length of it is 915 feet. The number of arches was 19, of unequal dimenſions, and deformed by the enormous ſterlings, and by houſes on each ſide, which overhung in a terrific manner. Theſe were removed in 1756, when the upper part of the bridge aſſumed a modern appearance; but the ſterlings remain, though they ſo contract the ſpace between the piers, as to occaſion, at the ebb of tide, a fall of 5 feet, or a number of temporary cataracts, which have occaſioned the loſs of many lives. Weſtminſter Bridge, one of the fineſt in the world, was built by Labelye, a native of Swiſſerland. The firſt ſtone was laid in 1739, the laſt in 1747; but on account of the ſinking of one of the piers, the opening of the bridge was retarded till 1750. The whole is of Portland ſtone, except the ſpandrels of the arches, which are of Purbeck. It is 1223 feet in length. It has 13 large, and 2 ſmall ſemicircular arches: the centre arch is 76 feet wide; the other arches, on each ſide, decreaſing in width 4 feet. Blackfriars Bridge, built by Mr. Mylne, was begun in 1760, and completed in 1768. It's length is 995 feet; the breadth of the carriage way 28, and of the footpaths 7 feet each. It conſiſts of 9 elliptical arches, the centre of one of which is 100 feet wide; and both this, and the arch on each ſide, are wider than the celebrated Rialto at Venice. This noble ſtructure is built of Portland ſtone. In London are ſeveral muſeums. The Britiſh Muſeum, which is open to the public gratis, was founded by parliament, in 1753, in purſuance of the will of Sir Hans Sloane, who directed his executors to make an offer to the public of his collection of natural and artificial curioſities and books, for the ſum of 20,000l. and the noble building called Montague Houſe, was purchaſed for their reception. At the ſame time were purchaſed the MSS. collected by Edward Harley, earl of Oxford. Here are likewiſe the collections made by Robert and John Cotton; and large ſums have ſince been voted to augment this noble repoſitory. George II. preſented to it the libraries of the kings of England, from the reign of Henry VII. His preſent majeſty gave it an intereſting collection of tracts publiſhed in the reigns of Charles I. and II. and antiquities, brought from Italy, were purchaſed by parliament, for 8410l.

in 1762. The Leverian Muſeum is ſituated in Great Surry-ſtreet, on the S. ſide of Blackfriars Bridge. This magnificent muſeum was collected by the late Sir Aſhton Lever, and contains the moſt aſtoniſhing collection in natural hiſtory that had ever been formed by an individual. Having obtained an act of parliament, empowering him to diſpoſe of this muſeum by a lottery, to conſiſt of 30,000 tickets, at a guinea each, he found ſo little avidity in the public to adventure, that he ſold no more than 8000 tickets, when the appointed time of drawing arrived; when this valuable treaſure was transferred from him to the preſent poſſeſſor, Mr. Parkinſon, who erected the building it now occupies for it's reception. Another muſeum, conſiſting of anatomical preparations, and natural curioſities, collected by the late Dr. William Hunter, who built a ſpacious edifice for their reception, in Windmill-ſtreet, Haymarket, is now open to the public, and is to continue ſo for 30 years from the time of his death in 1783. Of the inns of court, or ſocieties for the ſtudy of the law, the principal are the Middle and Inner Temples, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn. Theſe are very ſpacious, and have large gardens, which are open to the public. The others are Clifford's Inn, Clement's Inn, Serjeant's Inn, New Inn, Lyon's Inn, Barnard's Inn, Furnival's Inn, and Staple's Inn. The College of Phyſicians, unfortunately hidden in Warwick-lane, was built by Sir Chriſtopher Wren. Sion College, near London Wall, founded, in 1603, by the Rev. Thomas White, is governed by a preſident, 2 deans, and 4 aſſiſtants; and all the clergy within the bills of mortality are it's fellows. Here is a library for their uſe, and almſhouſes for 10 men and 10 women. The Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, have a handſome houſe in the Adelphi. Of public ſeminaries, the moſt diſtinguiſhed are Weſtminſter School, St. Paul's School, the Charter Houſe, and Merchant Taylors School. The places of diverſion are numerous and magnificent. Of the halls of the city companies, the moſt diſtinguiſhed in point of architecture, are Surgeons Hall, in the Old Bailey; Goldſmiths Hall, Foſter-lane; Ironmongers Hall, Fenchurch-ſtreet; and Fiſhmongers Hall, near London Bridge. The principal hoſpitals are Chriſt's Hoſpital, near Newgate-ſtreet, a royal foundation, for orphans and poor children; St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, Weſt Smithfield, another royal foundation for the ſick and lame; Bridewell, in Blackfriars, once a royal palace, but now a royal hoſpital, for the apprenticing of the induſtrious youth, and a priſon for the diſſolute; Bethlem, in Moorfields, another royal hoſpital, for lunatics; St. Luke's, in Old-ſtreet, alſo for lunatics; St. Thomas', in the Borough, the fourth royal hoſpital, for the ſick and lame; and for the ſame purpoſe are Guy's Hoſpital, adjoining; the London Hoſpital, in Whitechapel-road; the Middleſex Hoſpital, Berners-ſtreet; the Weſtminſter Infirmary, Petty France; and St. George's Hoſpital, Hyde Park Corner. The Foundling Hoſpital, in Lamb's Conduit Fields; the Aſylum, at Lambeth, for orphan girls; the Magdalen Hoſpital, in St. George's Fields, for penitent proſtitutes; the Marine Society, in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; the Smallpox Hoſpitals at Pancras; the Lock Hoſpital, near Groſvenor Place; the Weſtminſter Lying-in Hoſpital, and many others for the ſame purpoſe, are alſo excellent inſtitutions; and there are many diſpenſaries for diſpenſing medicines to the ſick, who keep to their houſes, under the direction of a phyſician to each diſpenſary, and proper aſſiſtants. The priſons are numerous: the principal are Newgate, a ſtupendous ſtructure; the New Compter, Giltſpur-ſtreet; the Fleet Priſon, for debtors; the King's Bench, in St. George's Fields, for the ſame purpoſe; and a new county goal (including a new ſeſſions-houſe) in Southwark. Some of the ſquares and ſtreets in the metropolis are magnificent; and many of thoſe which cannot boaſt of grandeur, are long, ſpacious, and airy. Portland Place forms, perhaps, the moſt magnificent ſtreet in the world; Stratford Place is truly elegant; and the Adelphi Terrace is the admiration of foreigners, for the noble view which it affords of the river, the bridges, and other public buildings, and of the fine hills beyond Lambeth and Southwark. The broad ſtream of the Thames flowing between London and Southwark, continually agitated by a briſk current, or a rapid tide, brings conſtant ſupplies of freſh air, which no buildings can intercept. The country round, eſpecially on the London ſide, is nearly open to ſome diſtance; whence, by the action of the ſun and wind on a gravelly ſoil, it is kept tolerably dry in all ſeaſons, and affords no lodgment for ſtagnant air or water. The cleanlineſs of London, as well as it's ſupply of water, are greatly aided by it's ſituation on the banks of the Thames; and the New River, with many good ſprings within the city itſelf, further contributes to the abundance of that neceſſary element. All these are advantages, with respect to health, in which this metropolis is exceeded by few. It's situation, with regard to the circumstance of navigation, is equally well chosen; had it been placed lower on the Thames, it would have been annoyed by the marshes, and more liable to the insults of foreign foes; had it been higher, it would not have been accessible, as at present, to ships of large burden. It now possesses every advantage that can be derived from a sea-port, without it's dangers; and, at the same time, by means of it's noble river, enjoys a very extensive communication with the internal parts of the country, which supply it with necessaries, and, in return, receive from it such commodities as they require. With the great article of fuel, London is plentifully supplied by sea from the northern collieries. Corn and various other articles are with equal ease conveyed to it from all the maritime parts of the kingdom, and great numbers of coasting vessels are continually employed for this purpose. London, therefore, unites in itself all the benefits arising from navigation and commerce, with those of a metropolis at which all the public business of a great nation is transacted; and is, at the same time, the mercantile and political head of these kingdoms. It is also the seat of many considerable manufactures; some almost peculiar to itself, as ministering to the demands of studied splendor and refined luxury; others in which it participates with the manufacturing towns in general; with this difference, that only the finer and more costly of their works are performed here. The most important of it's peculiar manufactures is the silk weaving, established in Spitalfields by refugees from France. A variety of works in gold, silver, and jewellery; the engravings of prints; the making of optical and mathematical instruments, are likewise principally, or solely, executed here, and some of them in greater perfection than in any other country. The porter-brewery, a business of very great extent, is also chiefly carried on in London. To it's port are likewise confined some branches of foreign commerce, as the vast East India trade, and those to Turkey and Hudson's Bay. Thus London has risen to it's present rank of the first city in Europe with respect to opulence; and nearly, if not entirely so, as to number of inhabitants. It is probable, that the residents in London, Westminster, Southwark, and all the out parishes, do not fall short of 900,000. London is a bishop's see, and sends 4 members to parliament. To enumerate all the events by which this great capital has been distinguished, would greatly exceed our limits; we shall only mention, therefore, the great plague in 1665, which cut off 90,000 people, and the dreadful conflagration in 1666, by which 13,000 houses were destroyed. LORD HOWE'S GROUP, an extenſive group of iſlands, in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Hunter in 1791, who from the maſthead could diſtinctly deſcry 32 of them. They appeared thickly covered with wood, among which the cocca-nut was very diſtinguiſhable. The natives were of a dark copper colour; their hair tied in a knot on the back of the head; and they ſeemed to have ſome method of taking off the beard, for they appeared as if clean shaved. They had an ornament, consisting of a number of fringes, like an artificial beard, which they fasten between the nose and mouth, and close under the nose. To that beard hung a row of teeth, which gave them the appearance of having a mouth lower than their natural one. They have holes run through the sides of the nose into the passage, into which, as well as through the septum, they thrust pieces of reed or bone. The arms and thighs are tattooed in the manner described by Captain Cook, of some of the natives of the islands he visited in these seas, called Tatowing; and some were painted with red and white streaks. They wore a wrapper round their middle. Lat. 5. 30. S. lon. from 159. 14. to 159. 37. E.

Lord Howe's Island, an island of the S. Pacific Ocean, about 140 leagues E. of New S. Wales. On the W. side is good anchorage, but the bottom is a coral rock. Many excellent turtle have been caught here on a sandy beach; and the island abounds with a variety of birds, which, when our seamen landed here, were so unaccustomed to be disturbed, that they came near enough to knock down as many as they wanted with a stick. This island was discovered, in 1788, by Lieutenant King, in his voyage from Port Jackson to Norfolk Island. At the S. end of it are two very high mountains nearly perpendicular from the sea, the southernmost named Mount Gower. About 14 miles to the S. is a very remarkable rock, named Ball's Pyramid, which had much the appearance of a steeple at a distance. Lord Howe's Island is three miles and a half long, and very narrow across. Lat. 31. 36. S. long. 159. 0. N.

Lordings, Suffolk between Stepham and Billinghurst.

Loredo, in the Dogada, lately belonging to Venice.

Loretto, a town of Italy, in the marquisate of Ancona. They pretend to shew here the house of Nazareth, in which Jesus was brought up; and say that it was carried by angels into Dalmatia, and thence to the place where it now stands. The inner part of this house, or chapel, is very old, but it is surrounded by a marble wall, and within is a church built of freestone. A statue, to represent Mary, the mother of Jesus, with the image of Christ, covered with diamonds, in her arms stands upon the principal altar: it is of cedar-wood, three feet high, but the face can hardly be seen, on account of the smoke of the numerous lamps around it. She is clothed with cloth of gold, set off with jewels, with a triple crown on her head, and the infant is covered with a shirt, holding a globe in it's hand, adorned with rich jewels. The sanctuary is perfectly crowded with 62 great lamps of gold and silver; one of the golden ones, which was presented by the Republic of Venice, weighs 37 pounds; there are also angels waiting about the holy image, one of massive gold and two of silver: and the walls are covered with plates of silver. Christina, queen of Sweden, gave a crown of gold, worth above 100,000 crowns; and Isabella, infanta of Spain, sent a garment, which cost 40,000 ducats. Lewis XIII. of France, and his queen, sent two crowns of gold, enriched with diamonds. Beside these crowns, they sent an angel of massy silver, holding in it's hand the figure of the dauphin, of solid gold. The Jewels of the Holy House are nothing in comparison with the treasure, where the number, variety and richness of the vestments, lamps, candlesticks, goblets, crowns, crucifixes, images, cameos, pearls, gems of all kinds, &c. is prodigious. As for the town itself, exclusive of the chapel, it is neither very considerable nor very agreeable, nor does it contain above 300 inhabitants, who are almost all shoemakers, taylors, or sellers of chaplets. Loretto is seated on a mountain, 3 miles from the Adriatic, 10 SE. of Ancona, and 112 NE. of Rome.

as a frontier town towards Ruſſia. The houſes are all of wood, two ſtories high, and painted red.

LOUISBURGH, a town of N. America, capital of the Iſland of Cape-Breton, ſubject to the Engliſh. It has an excellent harbour, near 4 leagues in circumference, with a fine careening wharf to heave down. It's entrance is not above 1800 feet wide, formed by two ſmall iſlands. The principal trade of Louiſburgh is the cod-fiſhery; the fiſh being remarkably plentiful, and, at the ſame time, better than any about Newfoundland. Lat. 45. 54. N. lon. 59. 48. W.

LOUISIANA, a large country of North America, ſituated on both ſides of the Miſſiſſippi, and bounded on the E. by Florida and the United States; on the S. by the Gulf of Mexico; on the W. by New Mexico; and on the N. by Indian Nations. It is agreeably ſituated between the extremes of heat and cold; it's climate varying as it extends toward the N. The ſouthern parts, lying within the reach of the refreſhing breezes from the ſea, are not ſcorched like thoſe under the ſame latitude in Africa; and it's northern regions are colder than thoſe in Europe under the ſame parallels, with a wholeſome, ſerene air. From the favourableneſs of the climate, two annual crops of Indian corn, as well as rice, may be produced; and the ſoil, with little cultivation, would furniſh grain of every kind in the greateſt abundance. The timber is as fine as any in the world; and the quantities of live oak, aſh, mulberry, walnut, cherry, cypreſs, and cedar, are aſtoniſhing. The neighbourhood of the Miſſiſſippi, beſides, furniſhes the richeſt fruits in great variety; the ſoil is particularly adapted for hemp, flax, and tobacco; and indigo is at this time a ſtaple commodity, which commonly yields the planter three or four cuttings a year. Whatever is rich and rare in the moſt deſirable climates in Europe ſeems to be the ſpontaneous production of this delightful country. It is interſected by a number of fine rivers, among which are the Natchitoches, and the Adayes, or Mexicano. In 1763, Louiſiana was ceded to Spain.

LOUISVILLE, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of Kentucky, and county of Jefferſon. It is ſeated on the river Ohio, oppoſite Clarkſville, at the Falls, in a fertile country, and promiſes to be a place of great trade; but it's unhealthineſs, owing to ſtagnated waters at the back of the town, has hitherto retarded it's growth. It is 80 miles SW. of Lexington. Lat. 38. 3. N. lon. 86. 30. W.

Lound, Eaſt, Linc. in Axholm Iſle.

Lound-Hall, Nott. N. of Retford.

LOUNG, LOCH, an arm of the ſea, in Argyleſhire, 15 miles long and 1 wide, between Loch Fyne and Loch Lomond. Near it's NE. extremity is the dark, wild, and romantic Vale of Glencroy.

LOUTH, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinſter, 22 miles in length, and from 9 to 14 in breadth; bounded on the W. by Monaghan and Meath; on the N. by Armagh and Carlingford-Bay; on the E. by St. George's Channel; and on the S. by Meath, from which it is parted by the river Boyne. It is the ſmalleſt county in the kingdom, but very fertile and pleaſant, and contains 61 pariſhes, 11,500 houſes, and about 57,750 inhabitants. It's chief towns are Dundalk, Carlingford, Drogheda, Ardee, and Dunleer.

LOUTH, a town of Ireland, in the county of the ſame name, 6 miles SW. of Dundalk.

*LOUTH, a town of Lincolnſhire. It is large and well built, containing about 4000 inhabitants. From hence there is a canal to the ſea, at Tilney, about 8 miles. It is 28 miles NE. of Lincoln, and 148 N. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

Loutherſtown, in Fermanagh, Ulſter.

LOUVAIN, a large city of the late Auſtrian Brabant, with a celebrated univerſity. The walls of this place are nearly 7 miles in circumference, but within them are a great many gardens and vineyards. The public buildings are magnificent, and the univerſity conſiſts of ſixty ſmall colleges. They formerly made large quantities of cloth, inſomuch that there were 15,000 weavers; but at preſent their trade is greatly decayed, and the place is chiefly remarkable for it's good beer, with which it ſerves the neighbouring towns. It is ſeated on the river Dyle, 12 miles NNE. of Bruſſels. Lat. 50, 53. N. lon. 4. 49. E.

LOUVESTEIN, a fortreſs in S. Holland, on an iſland called the Bommel Waert, formed by the Waal and the Maeſe. In this caſtle, the patriotic chiefs were impriſoned by prince Maurice, whence that party has ever ſince been called the Louveſtein party. Their principles are ſtrongly republican, and, of courſe, in direct oppo-oppoſition to the ſtadtholder. Louveſtein is 6 miles SE. of Gorcum, and 16 E. of Dort.

Lowbyer, Cumberl. near Kirkhaugh.

Lowdham, Nottingh. between Nottingham and Southwell.

LOWDORE, a celebrated cataract of Cumberland, on the E. ſide of the Lake of Derwent, in the Vale of Keſwick. It is formed by the ruſhing of the waters of Watanlath, through an awful chaſm made by the contiguity of two vaſt rocks; but entirely fails in a dry ſeaſon.

Lowes-Foreſt, Northumb. in the SW.

LOWES WATER, a lake of Cumberland, about a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile in breadth. It is a moſt romantic ſpot; the oppoſite ſhores being rivals in beauty of hanging-woods, little groves, and waving incloſures, with farms ſeated in the ſweeteſt points of view. It is of no great depth, and without char; but it abounds with pike and perch, and has ſome trout. It is 6 miles S. of Cockermouth.

Lubbenham, Leiceſ. near Harborough.

LUBECK, a ſea-port of Holſtein, Lower Saxony. It is a free, imperial city, and was the head of the famous Hanſeatic League, which was formed here in 1164. It was likewiſe the moſt commercial city and powerful republic of the north. It's fleet ſet the northern powers at defiance, and rode triumphant in the Baltic. But Lubeck retains ſcarcely a ſhadow of it's former power. It's trade, however, is ſtill conſiderable, but will probably be ſtill farther diminiſhed, if the Canal of Kiel ſhould anſwer the purpoſe for which it was planned; for, by that means, great part of the merchandiſe, which now paſſes through this town, will be conveyed along that canal, down the Eyder, to Tonningen, and thence by ſea, and up the Elbe to Hamburg. The houſes of Lubeck are built in a very ancient ſtyle of architecture; the doors being ſo large as to admit carriages into the hall, which frequently ſerves for a coach-houſe. The walls of many houſes bear the date of the 15th century, and, at that period, no doubt, the town was eſteemed very beautiful. Here are 4 parochial churches, beſides the cathedral. The town-houſe is a ſuperb ſtructure, and has ſeveral towers. In it is a large hall, called Haanſeſaal, where the deputies of the Hanſe Towns uſed formerly to meet. Here is alſo a fine exchange, built in 1683. The inhabitants are all Lutherans, and there are 21 preachers, whoſe chief has the title of Superintendant. Here were formerly 4 convents; and and in that of St. John, there are ſtill 22 Proteſtant girls, under the government of an abbeſs. That of St. Mary Magdalen is turned into an hoſpital; that of St. Anne is made a houſe of correction; and of the monaſtery of St. Catharine, they have made a handſome college. In the great hoſpital, there is always a conſiderable number of poor men and women. Beſide this, there are 14 other hoſpitals, one for lunatics, a peſt-houſe, and 4 others for ſick perſons. Lubeck is ſeated at the confluence of ſeveral rivers, the largeſt of which is the Trave, 14 miles SW. of the Baltic, and 40 NE. of Hamburg. Lat. 53. 52. N. lon. 10. 44. E.

LUBEC, THE BISHOPRIC, a ſmall territory in the duchy of Holſtein. The biſhop, who is always of the houſe of Holſtein, is a prince of the empire. The chapter conſiſts of 30 perſons, who are all Lutherans, 4 Roman Catholics excepted. The cathedral ſtands in Lubeck, where, however, it has no authority.

LUBEC, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, near Madura. Lat. 5. 50. S. lon. 112. 22. E.

LUCAYA ISLANDS. See BAHAMA.

LUCCA, a town of Italy, capital of a republic of the ſame name. It is about 3 Italian miles in circumference, and fortified with 11 baſtions. The inhabitants, who are above 40,000, are conſiderable manufacturers of ſilk, and gold and ſilver ſtuffs; for this reaſon it is called Lucca the Induſtrious. They oblige all travellers who have arms to leave them at the city gate, and will not ſuffer any one to wear a ſword within it. The ſtate palace is a large building, and includes the arſenal, which has arms for 20,000 men. The houſes are handſome, and the ſtreets broad and well paved, but moſt of them are irregular. It is ſeated in the middle of a fruitful plain, terminating in pleaſant eminences, near the river Serchio, 10 miles NNE. of Piſa, 37 W. of Florence, and 155 N. by W. of Rome. Lat. 43. 50. N. lon. 10. 35. E.

LUCCA, THE REPUBLIC OF, a ſmall territory of Italy, lying on the Tuſcan Sea; about 24 miles in length, and from 10 to 20 in breadth. The ſoil does not produce much corn; but there is plenty of wine, oil, ſilk, wool, and cheſnuts. Their oil, in particular, is in high eſteem, but the poorer people receive part of their ſupport from cheſnuts, lupins, and French beans. The induſtry of the people, in improving to the beſt advantage every ſpot of their ground, is equally ſurpriſing and commendable. This republic is under the protection of the emperor. The regency conſiſts of a gonfalonier, aſſiſted by a council of 9 members; all of theſe, however, are changed every two months, and are choſen out of the great council. This is compoſed of 240 nobles, of whom one half forms the ordinary counſellors, and the others the extraordinary. Both are changed once in two years, by a new election. The gonfalonier, and nine regent counſellors, whilſt in the adminiſtration, live in the ſtate palace, and at the public expence. The republic maintains a regular body of 500 men, and 70 Swiſs, as a guard for the regency. The number of ſouls in the city, and the 150 villages belonging to it, is computed at upwards of 120,000. The revenues amount to about 30,000l. per annum.

LUCE, a great bay of Wigtonſhire, lying to the E. of the Mull of Galloway.

LUCERA, a town of Capitanata, Naples.

LUCERN, one of the 13 cantons of Swiſſerland, and the moſt conſiderable of them, except Zurich and Bern. It is bounded on the E. and SE. by the cantons of Zug, Schweitz, and Underwalden; and on all the other ſides by the canton of Bern. The inhabitants are Romaniſts. It is 30 miles in length, and 20 in it's mean breadth. The ſovereign power of this republic reſides in the council of 100, compriſing the ſenate, or little council. The former is the nominal ſovereign; but the power reſides in the latter, conſiſting of 36 perſons, who are formed into two diviſions, which exerciſe the office by rotation. Although the government appears purely ariſtocratic, yet this ariſtocracy is reſtrained in divers reſpects; as in the matter of making war or peace, concluding new alliances, acquiring new territories, or impoſing new taxes, the conſent of all the citizens muſt be obtained. The chiefs of the republic are two magiſtrates, called advoyers.

LUCERN, the capital of the canton of Lucern, in Swiſſerland. It is divided into two parts by one of the branches of the river Reuſs, which falls into the lake, on which the town is ſituated. It ſcarcely contains 3000 inhabitants, has no manufactures of conſequence, and little commerce; and there are few places where learning meets with leſs encouragement, and, conſequently, is leſs cultivated. The bridges, which ſkirt the town, round the edge of the lake, are the faſhionable walk of the place, and remarkable for their length. Being covered at the top, and open at the ſides, they afford a conſtant view of the beautiful and romantic country. They are decorated with coarſe paintings, repreſenting the Hiſtories of the Hebrews, the Battles of the Swiſs, and the Dance of death. Lucern is 30 miles SW. of Zurich, and 35 E. of Bern. Lat. 47. 5. N. lon. 8. 6. E.

LUCERNA, a town of the Four Valleys, Piedmont.

LUCHEN, a town of Valencia,

LUCIA, ST. an iſland of the W. Indies, 22 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. It is partly hilly, and partly conſiſts of rich plains, well watered with rivulets, and furniſhed with timber, having ſeveral good bays, and commodious harbours. In it are two high mountains, by which this iſland may be known at a conſiderable diſtance. In 1779, it was taken by the Engliſh, but reſtored to the French by the peace of 1783. It has been again taken by the Engliſh in the preſent war, and ſtill remains in their poſſeſſion. It is about 70 miles NNW. of Barbadoes, and 38 S. of Martinico. Lat. 13. 25. N. lon. 60. 58. W.

LUCKNOW, an ancient city of Hindoottan, capital of Oude. It is an extenſive place, but poorly built: the houſes are chiefly mud walls, covered with thatch; and many conſiſt entirely of mats and bamboos, and are thatched with leaves of the cocoa-nut, palm-tree, and ſometimes with ſtraw. The houſes of the merchants are of brick, lofty, and ſtrong. The others are moſtly built on eminences here and there, whence the inequality of the ground makes it troubleſome to walk, continually aſcending or deſcending. The ſtreets, moreover, are crooked, narrow, and ſtinking, every kind of filth being thrown into them, and no care taken to keep them clean. In the dry ſeaſon, the duſt and heat are almoſt intolerable; in the rainy ſeaſon, the mire is ſo deep as to be ſcarcely paſſable; and there is a great number of elephants belonging to the nabob and the great men of his court, which are continually paſſing the ſtreets, either to the palace or to the river, to the great danger and annoyance of the foot-paſſengers, and ſhopkeepers. The palace of the nabob is ſeated on a high bank near the Geomty, and commands an extenſive view both of that river and the country on the eaſtern ſide. Lucknow is 650 miles NW. of Calcutta. Lat. 26. 35. N. lon. 81. 25. E.

LUCONIA, or MANILLA, the chief of the Philippine Iſlands, in Aſia, 400 miles in length and 100 in breadth. It is not ſo hot as might be expected, becauſe it is well watered by large lakes and rivers, and the periodical rains, which inundate all the plains. There are ſeveral volcanos in the mountains, which occaſion earthquakes; and a variety of hot baths. The produce of this iſland is wax, cotton, wild cinnamon, ſulphur, cocoa-nuts, rice, gold, horſes, buffaloes, and all ſorts of game. The inhabitants are compoſed of ſeveral nations, beſides Spaniards, and they all produce a mixed breed, diſtinct from any of the reſt. The blacks have long hair, and good features; and there is one tribe who tattoo themſelves, drawing curious figures on their bodies. To this iſland the Spaniards bring all ſorts of commodities; ſuch as ſilver from New Spain, Mexico, and Peru; diamonds from Golconda; ſilks, tea, Japan and China ware, and gold-duſt, from China and Japan. The Spaniards ſend hence two large ſhips every year to Acapulco in Mexico, with merchandiſe, and return back with ſilver.

LUND, the capital of Scania, with an university. It is accounted the most ancient town in Sweden, contains scarcely more than 800 houses, and has but little trade. Here is an university, founded by Charles XI. for 21 professors, and furnished with a good library. The number of students is about 300. Here likewise a Royal Physiographical Society was instituted in 1776, and incorporated by the king in 1778. The subjects treated of in it's Acts relate only to natural history, chemistry, and agriculture. The cathedral is an ancient, irregular building. It is 20 miles SSE. of Landscrona, and 225 SW. of Stockholm. Lat. 55. 33. N. lon. 13. 26. E.

LUNDEN, a town of Danish Holstein.

LUNDY, an island in the mouth of the Bristol Channel, near the middle, between Devonf. and Pembrokef. It is about 5 miles long and 2 broad, and encompassed with inaccessible rocks, so that it has but one

one entrance, and there ſcarcely two perſons can go abreaſt. In the N. part of it is a high pyramidical rock, called the Conſtable. Here are horſes, kine, hogs and goats, with great ſtore of ſheep and rabbits; but the chief commodity is fowl, with which it abounds much, their eggs being very thick on the ground at their ſeaſon of breeding. It had once a fort and a chapel: at preſent the only inhabitants are a man and his family.

*LUTON, a town in Bedfordſhire, celebrated for it's manufactures in ſtraw. It is 18 miles S. of Bedford, and 31 N. by W. of London. Market on Monday.

LUTSCHINEN, a river of the bailiwic of Interlacken, and canton of Bern, in Swiſſerland. The road to Zwey-Lutſchinen and Lauterburnen is over this river, by a kind of bridge, which, to a ſtranger to the country, preſents the moſt terrific appearance. It is ſuſpended over a roaring torrent, and fixed againſt the ſides of rocks; while a huge, vertical ſtone, raiſed in the middle of the river, ſupports ſome thick planks, ſo badly joined, as to be neither ſteady nor ſolid; and theſe form a wretched, inſecure bridge, over which the inhabitants of the country daily paſs, with a firm ſtep and undaunted eye; a paſſage, which the traveller, unaccuſtomed to ſuch ſtrange communications, would tremble to attempt.

LUTTER, a town of Brunſwick, Lower Saxony;

Saxony; alſo a river of Weſtphalia; and a river of Lower Saxony.

*LUTTERWORTH, a town of Leiceſterſhire, ſeated on the river Swift, in a fertile ſoil, 14 miles S. of Leiceſter, and 88 NNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

*LYNN REGIS, or KING'S LYNN, a populous and flouriſhing town of Norfolk, carrying on a large trade by means of it's inland communications. By the Ouſe, and it's aſſociated rivers, it ſupplies moſt of the midland counties with coal, timber, and wine; and, in return, exports malt and corn in great quantities. It alſo partakes in the Greenland fiſhery; and trades to Holland, Norway, the Baltic, and to Spain and Portugal. The harbour is ſafe when ſhips are in it, but difficult to enter by reaſon of the many flats and ſhoals in the paſſage; but they are well buoyed, and good pilots are always ready. It's air is unwholeſome, on account of it's vicinity to the fens. The ſtreets are narrow, but well paved, and it has a good market-place, and a noble old town-houſe and exchange. It is 106 miles N. by E. of London. Lat. 52. 45. N. lon. 0. 28. E. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

Lynn, North, Norf. at the mouth of the Ouſe. It had formerly a church, called St. Edmond's, which has long ſince been entirely ſwallowed up by the ſea. On the oppoſite ſide of the river is Lynn, Old or Weſt. Lynſtock-Caſtle, Cumb. on the river Eden, NE. of Carliſle. Lynthorp, Yorkſ. W. of Bradford. Lynton, Yorkſ. E. MACAO, a town of China, in the province of Canton, ſeated in an iſland at the mouth of the river Tae. The Portugueſe have been in poſſeſſion of the town and harbour ſince the early part of the 17th century. The houſes are built after the ſame manner as in Europe. The Portugueſe on this iſland are properly a mixed breed; having taken Aſiatic women to their wives. Here is a Portugueſe governor, as well as a Chineſe mandarin. The former nation pays a tribute of 100,000 ducats, for the liberty of chuſing their own magiſtrates, &c. The city is defended by 3 forts, built upon eminences; the works are good, and well planted with artillery. Lat. 22. 13. N. lon. 113. 51. E.

MACASSAR, or BONY, a conſiderable kingdom of Aſia, in the ſouthern part of the Iſland of Celebes. In the mountains there are quarries of very fine ſtone, as well as mines of gold and copper. The ſoil is extremely fertile, and there are ripe fruits at all times of the year. There is a great number of monkeys, whoſe enemies are the ſerpents; and it is ſaid, that ſome of them are ſo large, that they will ſwallow a monkey whole. The Macaſſars are are large, robuſt, courageous, and addicted to war. They are Mahometans by profeſſion, and the flatteſt-noſed women are accounted the greateſt beauties.

MACASSAR, a town and harbour on the SW. coaſt of the Iſland of Celebes, capital of the kingdom of the ſame name. The houſes are all of wood, and ſupported by thick poſts; and they have ladders to aſcend into them, which they draw up when they have entered. The roofs are covered with very large leaves, ſo that the rain cannot penetrate. It is ſeated near the mouth of a large river, which runs through the kingdom from N. to S. The king is in alliance with the Dutch. Lat. 5. 0. S. lon. 119. 54. E.

MACZUA, a ſmall iſland in the Red Sea.

MADAGASCAR, an iſland lying on the eaſtern coaſt of Africa, about 800 miles in length, and from 120 to 200 in breadth. The inhabitants in the interior are black. Their hair is long and curled, at leaſt on the coaſts; and there are ſome likewiſe of a yelloviſh complexion, who have neater features than the reſt. It is a populous country, but they have no cities or towns, but a great number of villages, a ſmall diſtance from each other. Their houſes are huts, with doors ſo low, that a boy of 12 years old cannot enter them without ſtooping. They have neither windows nor chimneys, and the roofs are covered with reeds or leaves. Their furniture conſiſts of a few baſkets, to put their neceſſaries in, and they can change their habitations when they pleaſe. There are a great many petty kings, whoſe riches conſiſt in cattle and ſlaves, and they are often at war with each other. Great quantities of iron and ſteel are found throughout the iſland; as alſo three ſorts of gold. The rivers and brooks are rich in various kinds of precious ſtones. The productions of the iſland, are rice, barley, ſugar canes, white pepper, ginger, cocoa-nuts, grapes, saffron, several kinds of gums, five different kinds of honey, and a variety of plants unknown to Europeans. Buffaloes run in herds, and there are great numbers of sheep, whose mutton is finely tasted, as well as goats and kids. Crocodiles, monkeys, wild boars, cameleons, locusts, and insects are numerous. The chief employment of the inhabitants is in building, gold and iron works, making earthenware, spinning, weaving, cordage, fishing, hunting, and mostly in agriculture. The language has a great affinity with the Arabic, the Arabs having made a conquest of the island about 300 years ago. The French have attempted to settle here, but have always been driven hence. Lat. from 12. 0. to 25. 30. S.

Madam's Court Hill, in Kent, 29 miles from London, in the road to Sevenoaks. It commands a beautiful prospect of Kent and Sussex. Madam's Cowel, Kent, a hill near Maidstone. Maddenton, Wilts, 9 miles from Salisbury.

MADEIRA, an island of the Atlantic Ocean, principal of a group called the Madeiras, and subject to the Portuguese. The climate is more temperate than in the Canaries, and the soil more fertile. Spring and autumn reign here together, and produce flowers and fruit throughout the year. It abounds in every kind of tropical and European fruits; as oranges of all sorts and dimensions, lemons of a prodigious size, bananas, citrons, peaches, figs, plums, and strawberries that grow wild in the mountains with astonishing profusion; grapes which are as large as our common plums, and remarkable for their peculiar flavour. The oranges are of a sanguine red: this species is produced from the common orange-bud, ingrafted on the pomegranate stock. There is likewise a kind of pear found here, not bigger than a walnut, and very crisp. The sugar-cane also is cultivated with success, though not in any considerable quantity. The cedar tree is found in great abundance: it is extremely beautiful: most of the ceilings and furniture at Madeira are made of that wood, which yields a very fragrant smell. The dragon tree is a native of this island. Flowers nursed in the English greenhouses grow wild here in the fields; the hedges are mostly formed of myrtles, roses, jessamine, and honeysuckle in everlasting bloom, while the larkspur, the fleur-de-lis, the lupin, &c. spring up spontaneously in the meadows. There are very few reptiles to be seen in the island; the lizard is the most common. Canary birds and goldfinches are found in the mountains; of the former, numbers are sent every year to England. But Madeira is principally celebrated for it's excellent wine, which moreover keeps best in the hottest climate under the torrid zone. For this reason the inhabitants of the W. India Islands, that can afford it, drink little else; and the Madeira wine that is brought to England is thought to be worth little, unless it has first been a voyage to the E. or W. Indies. These wines are of different kinds, different both in taste, colour, and strength. The exports of this article, and the profits on it are immense, and bring a large revenue to the king of Portugal. In Madeira are made the finest sweetmeats in the world; all kinds of fruits being here candied in the most exquisite perfection. Madeira is well watered and peopled; the inhabitants are good-natured, sober, frugal, and indolent. Funchal is the capital of this island, which is about 150 miles in circumference, and lies in 16 deg. W. lon. and 33 deg. N. lat.

MADELEY, a town of Shropshire, near Colebrook Dale.

Madeley, Staff. SW. of Newcastle-under-Line. Madeley Alphore, Staff. near Uttoxeter. Maden House, Linc. MADIA, MAGGIA, or MEYNTHAL, a long and narrow valley of Switzerland, on the confines of the Milanese and the Upper Valais, containing 22 parishes, and about 24,000 inhabitants. It is watered throughout it's whole length by a river of the same name, and is the fourth bailiwick of the Swiss in Italy. There is a town of the same name, seated on the river.

Madingley, 3 miles from Cambridge. Madley, SW. of Hereford.

MADRAS, or FORT ST. GEORGE, called by the natives CHINA-PATAM, a fort and town of the peninsula of Hindoostan, on the coast of Coromandel. It is the principal settlement of the English East India Company on the E. side of the peninsula, and is a fortress of very great extent, including within it a regular well-built city. It is close on the margin of the sea, from which it has a rich and beautiful appearance; the houses being covered with a stucco called chunam, which in itself is nearly as compact as the finest marble, and, as it bears as high a polish, is equally splendid with that elegant material terial. They conſiſt of long colonnades, with open porticoes, and flat roofs; and they may be conſidered as elegant, particularly ſo, from being finiſhed with ſuch a beautiful material as the chunam; and the city contains many handſome and ſpacious ſtreets. But the inner apartments of the houſes are not highly decorated, preſenting to the eye only white walls; which, however, from the marble-like appearance of the ſtucco, give a freſhneſs grateful in ſo hot a country. Ceilings are very uncommon in the rooms. Indeed it is impoſſible to find any which will reſiſt the ravages of that deſtructive inſect, the white ant. Theſe animals are chiefly formidable from the immenſity of their numbers, which are ſuch as to deſtroy, in one night's time, a ceiling of any dimenſions. It is the wood work which ſerves for the baſis of the ceilings, ſuch as the laths, beams, &c. that theſe inſects attack. "The approach to Madras, from the ſea," ſays Mr. H dges, "offers to the eye an appearance ſimilar to what we may conceive of a Grecian city in the age of Alexander. The clear, blue, cloudleſs ſky, the poliſhed white buildings, the bright ſandy beach, and the dark green ſea, preſent a combination totally new to the eye of an Engliſhman, juſt arrived from London, who, accuſtomed to the ſight of rolling maſſes of clouds floating in a damp atmoſphere, cannot but contemplate the difference with delight: and the eye being thus gratified, the mind aſſumes a gay and tranquil habit, analogous to the pleaſing objects with which it is ſurrounded. Some time before the ſhip arrives at her anchoring ground, ſhe is hailed by the boats of the country, filled with people of buſineſs, who come in crowds on board. This is the moment in which an European feels the great diſtinction between Aſia and his own country. The ruſtling of fine linen, and the general hum of unuſual converſation, preſents to his mind for a moment the idea of an aſſembly of females. When he aſcends upon the deck, he is ſtruck with the long muſlin dreſſes, and black faces adorned with very large gold earrings and white turbans. The firſt ſalutation he receives from theſe ſtrangers is, by bending their bodies very low, touching the deck with the back of the hand, and the forehead three times. The natives firſt ſeen in India by an European voyager, are Hindoos, the original inhabitants of the peninſula. In this part of India they are delicately framed; their hands, in particular, are more like thoſe of tender females; and do not appear to be, what is conſidered a proper proportion to the reſt of the perſon, which is uſually above the middle ſize. Correſpondent to this delicacy of appearance are their manners; mild, tranquil, and ſedulouſly attentive: in this laſt reſpect they are indeed remarkable, as they never interrupt any perſon who is ſpeaking, but wait patiently till he has concluded; and then anſwer with the moſt perfect reſpect and compoſure. From the ſhip a ſtranger is conveyed on ſhore in a boat of the country, called a Maſſoolah boat; a work of curious conſtruction, and well calculated to elude the violent ſhocks of the ſurf, that breaks here with great violence: they are formed without a keel, flat bottomed, with the ſides raiſed high, and ſewed together with the fibres of the cocoa-nut tree, and caulked with the ſame material: they are remarkably light, and are managed with great dexterity by the natives; they are uſually attended by two kattamarans, (rafts, paddled by one man each, the intention of which is, that, ſhould the boat be overſet by the violence of the ſurf, the perſons in it may be preſerved. The boat is driven, as the ſailors ſay, high and dry; and the paſſengers are landed on a fine ſandy beach, and immediately enter the fort of Madras. The appearance of the natives is exceedingly varied; ſome are wholly naked, and others ſo clothed, that nothing but the face and neck are to be diſcovered: beſide this, the European is ſtruck with many other objects, ſuch as women carried on men's ſhoulders on palankeens, and men riding on horſeback, clothed in linen dreſſes like women; which, with the very different face of the country from all he had ever ſeen, or conceived of, excite the ſtrangeſt emotions of ſurpriſe!" There is a ſecond city, called the Black Town, nearly 4 miles in circuit, ſeparated from Madras by the breadth of a proper eſplanade only. Madras, in common with all the European ſettlements on this coaſt, has no port for ſhipping; the coaſt forming nearly a ſtraight line; and it is incommoded alſo with a high and dangerous ſurf. The citadel here, which was planned by Mr. Robins, and is ſituated in the middle of the White, or Engliſh Town, is one of the beſt fortreſſes in poſſeſſion of the Britiſh nation. The town is alſo encompaſſed with a ſtrong wall, of the ſame ſtone with which the citadel is built, defended by batteries, baſtions, half-moons, and flankers; the whole mounted with upwards of 200 pieces of cannon and mortars. Oppoſite the weſt gate of the citadel are barracks, and a convenient hoſ-pital for the company's ſoldiers, and at the other end of the barracks is a mint, where the company coin gold and ſilver. Madras was firſt ſettled by the Engliſh, in 1640, and greatly enlarged in the reign of Charles II. it was taken by the French in 1746, but reſtored by the treaty of Aix la-Chapelle. Lat. 13. 5. MADRE DE POPA, a town and convent of S. America, in Terra Firma, ſeated on the river Grande, 50 miles E. of Carthagena. It is almoſt as much reſorted to by pilgrims of America, as Loretto is in Europe; and they pretend that the image of Mary, the mother of Jeſus, has done a great many miracles in favour of the fleets and ſeafaring people.

Madresfield, Worceſterſhire, N. of Malvern-Chace.

MADRID, the capital of Spain, in New Caſtile. It was formerly an obſcure place, belonging to the archbiſhop of Toledo, but the purity of the air engaged Charles V. and his ſucceſſors, to chuſe it for their reſidence. It is ſeated in a large plain, ſurrounded by high mountains, but has no wall, rampart, or ditch. The houſes are all built with brick, and the ſtreets are long, broad, and ſtraight, and adorned at proper diſtances with handſome fountains. There are above 100 towers or ſteeples, in different places, which contribute greatly to the embelliſhment of the city. The royal palace is built on an eminence, at the extremity of the city. The fineſt ſquare in Madrid is the Placa Mayor, which is ſurrounded with 136 houſes, five ſtories high, and of an equal height. Every ſtage is adorned with a handſome balcony, and the fronts are ſupported by columns, forming a piazza round the ſquare. Here the market is held, and here they had their famous bull-fights. However, it is obſervable, that the very fineſt houſes have no glaſs-windows, they being only lattices. The Prado, which is the public airing place, is ſhaded with regular rows of poplar trees, and is watered with 23 fountains. Here the ſtately Spaniards make the moſt brilliant diſplay of their finery. Philip II. built a large and magnificent bridge over the river, which river being exceedingly ſmall, has occaſioned a great many jokes. The city of Madrid contains 15 gates, 18 pariſhes, 35 convents of monks, and 31 of nuns, 39 colleges, hoſpitals, or houſes of charity, 7398 dwelling houſes, and about 160,000 inhabitants. There are four academies in Madrid: the Academy of Belles Lettres; the Academy of Spaniſh Hiſtorical Monuments; the Academy of the fine Arts, painting, ſculpture, and architecture; and the Academy of Medicine; which laſt is held in no great eſteem. MADRIGAL, two towns in Old Caſtile.

MADRIGAL, a town of S. America, in the province of Popayan.

MADROGAM, or BUONATAPA, a large town of Africa, capital of Monomotapa, with a ſpacious palace, where the king reſides. The upper part of the houſes are in the ſhape of bells. Lat. 18. 0. S. lon. 31. 40. E.

MADURA, a town of Hindooſtan, capital of a province of the ſame name, 60 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is ſituated on the coaſt of Coromandel, 80 miles SSW. of Tanjore. Lat. 9. 55. N. lon. 78. 12. E.

MADURA, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, 75 miles in length, and from 9 to 15 in breadth. Two provinces are under the Dutch; the third is governed by a native king. It is exceedingly fertile in rice. Madura, the capital, is ſituated on the S. coaſt, in lat. 7. 5. S. and lon. 112. 49. E.

MAELLA, a ſmall town of Arragon.

MAELER, a beautiful lake of Sweden, ſituated between the provinces of Weſtmanland and Sudermanland, and communicating with Stockholm. It is ſaid to contain 120 iſlands.

MAELSTRAND. See MARSTRAND.

MAELSTROM, a very extraordinary and dangerous whirlpool on the coaſt of Norway, in lat. 68 deg. N. Of the ſituation of this whirlpool we have the following account from Jonas Ramus: "The mountain of Helteggen, in Lofoden, lies a league from the Iſland Ver, and betwixt theſe two, runs that large and dreadful ſtream, called Moſkoeſtrom, from the iſland Moſkoe, which is in the middle of it, together with ſeveral circumjacent iſles, as Ambaaren, half a quarter of a league northward, Ifleſen, Hoeholm, Kieldholm, Suarven, and Buckholm. Moſkoe lies about half a quarter of a mile ſouth of the Iſland of Ver, and betwixt them theſe ſmall iſlands, Otterholm, Flimem, Sandfleſen, and Stockholm. Betwixt Lofoden and Moſkoe, the depth of the water is between 36 and 40 fathoms; but on the other ſide, toward Ver, the depth decreaſes ſo as not to afford a convenient paſſage for a veſſel, without the riſk of ſplitting on the rocks, which happens even in the calmeſt weather. When it is flood, the ſtream runs up the country between Lofoden and Moſkoe with a boiſterous rapidity; but the roar of it's impetuous impetuous ebb to the sea is scarce equalled by the loudest and most dreadful cataracts; the noise being heard several leagues off, and the vortices or pits are of such extent and depth, that if a ship comes within it's attraction, it is inevitably absorbed and carried down to the bottom, and there beat to pieces against the rocks; and when the water relaxes, the fragments thereof are thrown up again. But these intervals of tranquillity are only at the turn of the ebb and flood, and calm weather, and last but a quarter of an hour, it's violence gradually returning. When the stream is most boisterous, and it's fury heightened by a storm, it is dangerous to come within a Norway mile of it; boats, ships, and yachts having been carried away, by not guarding against it before they were within it's reach. It likewise happens frequently, that whales come too near the stream, and are overpowered by it's violence; and then it is impossible to describe their howlings and bellowings in their fruitless struggles to disengage themselves. A bear once, attempting to swim from Lofoden to Moskoe, with a design of preying upon the sheep at pasture in the island, afforded the like spectacle to the people; the stream caught him, and bore him down, while he roared terribly, so as to be heard on shore. Large stocks of firs and pine trees, after being absorbed by the current, rise again, broken and torn to such a degree as if bristles grew on them. This plainly shows the bottom to consist of craggy rocks, among which they are whirled to and fro. This stream is regulated by the flux and reflux of the sea; it being constantly high and low water every 6 hours. In the year 1645, early in the morning of Sexagesima Sunday, it raged with so much noise and impetuosity, that on the Island of Moskoe, the very stones of the houses fell to the ground."

Maenclochog, Pembrokeshire, S. Wales.

Maer, Staffordshire, between Drayton in Shropshire and Whitmore.

MAESE, or MEUSE, a large river which rises in France, near the village of Meuse, in the dept. of Upper Marne. It waters Verdun, Sedan, &c. and entering the Netherlands at Givet, it flows to Charlemont, Namur, Liege, Maestricht, Venlo, Grave, Battenburg, and Voorn, where it is joined by the Waal. At Dort, it receives the Merwe, and enters the German Ocean by several channels, through the islands of Holland and Zealand.

MAESLAND-SLUYS, a town in S. Holland, 5 miles SW. of Delft.

MAESTRICHT, a town of the Netherlands, about 4 miles in circumference. The town-house and other public buildings are handsome, and the place is so well defended by detached bastions, horn-works, intrenchments, and numerous redoubts, &c. that it is justly reckoned one of the strongest fortresses in Europe. It is seated on the river Maese, which separates it from Wyck, and with which it communicates by a handsome bridge. It is 15 miles N. of Liege.

MAESYEK, a town of Liege, on the Meuse.

MAGADOXA, or MOLDOSCHO, the capital of a kingdom of the same name, in Africa, on the coast of the Indian Sea; seated near the mouth of a river of the same name, with a good harbour. The country of Magadoxa extends from the river Juboo, near the equator, to beyond the fifth degree of N. lat. The inhabitants are mostly Mahometans, who came and settled here in the time of the caliphs. Mixed with them are the Bedwin Arabs, who still follow their old pagan superstitions, and a still greater number of Abyssinian Christians. All speak the Arabic tongue. The inhabitants are warlike, and use poisoned arrows and lances. Lat. 2. 30. N. lon. 44. 0. E.

Magdalen, Hants, N. of Winchester.

Magdalen-Hill, Hants, near Winton.

Magdalen's, St. Somersets. near Bristol.

MAGDALENE'S-CAVE, a cave in Carinthia, 10 miles E. of Gortz. It appears like a chasm in a rock, and at the entrance torches are lighted to conduct travellers. It is divided into several apartments, with a vast number of pillars formed by nature, which give it a beautiful appearance, they being as white as snow, and almost transparent. The bottom is of the same substance, insomuch that a person may fancy himself to be walking among the ruins of an enchanted castle, surrounded by magnificent pillars, some entire, and others broken.

MAGDEBURG, a large and trading town of Lower Saxony, capital of a duchy of the same name. The public buildings are elegant. In the cathedral is a superb mausoleum of Otho the Great. Here are different manufactories of cotton and linen goods, stockings, hats, beautiful leathern gloves, tobacco, and snuff; but the principal are those of woollen and silk. It is happily situated for trade, having an easy communication with Hamburg by the Elbe, and lying on the road between Upper and Lower Germany. It was taken by storm, in 1631, by the imperial general Tilly, who burnt the town and massacred the inhabitants, of whom only 800 escaped out of 40,000; and many young women plunged into the Elbe to escape violation. It is 52 miles WSW. of Potsdam. Lat. 52. 11. N. lon. 11. 45. E.

MAGDEBURG, a duchy in Lower Saxony, about 60 miles in length and 30 in breadth, subject to the king of Prussia. In 1703, it contained 35 towns and 431 villages. It produces fine cattle, and a considerable quantity of corn; those parts, which are not marshy and overgrown with wood, being very fertile. The country affords several mines of pit-coal; and the salt-springs are so rich, that they are able to supply all Germany with that commodity.

MAGDELANA, a large river of S. America, which rises under the equator, and running N. through Terra-Firma, unites with the Cance, is then called Rio Grande, and falls into the Atlantic Ocean, below Madre de Popa.

MAGDALENA, a river in Louisiana.

MAGEE, an island on the coast of Antrim, Ulster, 6 miles long and 2 broad, situated N. of Carrickfergus-Bay.

MAGELLAN, a famous strait of South America, discovered in 1520 by Ferdinando Magellan, a Portuguese in the service of Spain. It has many safe harbours in it, with narrow entrances, sheltered closely on all sides by high mountains. The inhabitants on each side are of a copper colour, with long black hair like the rest of the native Americans. On their heads they have caps of the skins of fowls, with the feathers on, and on their feet they tie pieces of skins. The Spaniards call the country to the N. of the Strait, Tierra Magellanica, and reckon it a part of Chili. They had a fort and garrison upon this strait, but the men all perished through cold and want of provisions.

Magestan, Dorsetsh. near Gillingham.

MAGGIA. See MADIA.

MAGGIORE, or LOCARNO, a lake in Italy, about 46 miles long and 6 or 8 broad, lying between the Swiss bailiwicks and the Milanese.

Maghen, Monmouthsh. W. of Newport.

Maghera, in Derry, Ulster, 92 miles from Dublin. Maghera, in Down, Ulster. Magheracrecgan, in Tyrone, Ulster. Magheralin, in Armagh, Ulster, pleasantly situated on the river Lagan; there are several bleach-yards and manufactories about it. Magheredroll, i. e. The Field of Difficulties; a name given to the country about Ballinahinch, in Down, Ulster, on account of it's being full of rocks and mountains.

MAGHERIES BAY, in Kerry, Munster, between Brandon-Head and the Magheries Islands, or Seven Hogs. It is a dangerous place, being full of sunken rocks, and exposed to frequent squalls from the mountains.

Magherelin, or Maralin, in Down, Ulster. The linen manufacture is carried on extensively here. Magherevoly, in Fermanagh, Ulster. Maghery, in Armagh, Ulster. Magherybeg, in Kerry, Munster. Maghremore, in Donegal, Ulster. Magilla, in Cork, Munster. Magillagan-Point, a cape in Derry, Ulster.

MAGLIANO, a town of the pope's territories, in Sabina, 28 miles N. of Rome.

MAGNAVACCA, a fort in the Ferrarese.

MAGNESIA, a town of Natolia, seated on the Sarabat, 22 miles above the city of Smyrna. It was formerly the seat of the Ottoman empire, and is still large, populous, and rich. Lat. 38. 50. N. lon. 27. 25. E.

MAGNY, a town in the dept. of Seine and Oise; and a town in the depart. of Nievre.

Magor, Monm. SW. of Caldicot.

MAGRA, a river of Italy, which rises in the Apennine Mountains, in the Valley of Magra, and falls into the Mediterranean, 5 miles S. of Sarzana, in the territory of Genoa.

MAGUELONE, a lake in the dept. of Herault, near a town of the same name, seated on the coast of the Mediterranean.

Maguniby, in Kerry, Munster. Maguire's Bridge, in Fermanagh, Ulster.

MAHALEU, a town of Egypt, capital of Garbia, trading in linen, cottons, and sal-ammoniac; the inhabitants have ovens here to hatch chickens, as in other parts of this country. Lat. 31. 50. N. lon. 30. 31. N.

Mahallagh, in Cork, Munster, on the Lee, 5 miles E. of Macroomp.

MAHANADA, a river of Hindoostan, which rises in Berar, crosses the country of Orissa, and falls, by several mouths, into the Bay of Bengal, 40 miles ESE. of Cattack.

Mahon River, in Waterford, Munster.

MAHRATTAS, the name of two large states of India, which derive their name from Marhat, an ancient province of the Deccan. They are called the Poonah, or Western Mahrattas; and the Berar, or Eastern. Collectively, they occupy all the southern part of Hindoostan Proper, with a large proportion of the Deccan. Malwa, Candeish, Visiapour, and part of Orissa; the principal parts of Berar, Guzerat, and Agimere;

Agimere; and a small part of Dowlatabad, Agra, and Allahabad, are comprised within their extensive empire, which extends nearly from sea to sea, across the widest part of the peninsula; and from the confines of Agra northward to the river Kistna southward; forming a tract of about 1000 miles long and 700 broad. The western state, the capital of which is Poonah, is divided among a number of chiefs, or princes, whose obedience to the paishwah, or head, like that of the German princes to the emperor, is merely nominal at any time; and, in some cases, an opposition of interests begets wars, not only between the members of the empire themselves, but also between the members and the head. Nagpour is the capital of the eastern Mahrattas. Both these states, with the Nizam of the Deccan, were in alliance with the English East India Company, in the late war against Tippoo Sultan, from whose territories, on the termination of the war, they gained some considerable acquisitions.

Maiden-Bradley, Wilts, 5 miles from Frome and Warminster. Maiden Crofs, Herts, near Hitchin.

*MAIDENHEAD, a town of Berkshire, seated on the river Thames, on the great western road, carrying on a great trade in malt, meal, and timber, in their barges to London. It is 12 miles E. by N. of Reading, and 26 W. of London. Market on Wednesday.

Maiden-Heath, Lanc. near Blackburn.

MAIDEN NEWTON, a town of Dorsetsf. 3 miles NW. of Frampton. Market disused.

Maiden-Oak, Suffex, near the road from Petersfield to London.

Maidens, or Whillans, rocks so called between the mouths of Larne and Glenarm Bays, in Down, Ulster.

Maidford, Northamp. NW. of Towcester. Maidhurst, Suffex, NW. of Arundel. Maidsmorton, N. of Buckingham.

*MAIDSTONE, a borough of Kent, seated on the river Medway, a branch of which runs through the town. It is a large and populous place, with a jail and county-hall. In the ancient Britons' time, it was reckoned their third chief city, having been a station of the Romans. By means of the Medway, it enjoys a brisk trade in exporting the commodities of the county, particularly hops, of which there are numerous plantations around it, as well as orchards of cherries. Here are likewise some capital paper-mills, and a manufactory of linen thread, originally introduced by the Flemings. The tide flows quite up to the town, and brings up barges of 50 or 60 tons. It is 20 miles W. of Canterbury, and 35 SE. by E. of London. Lat. 51. 16. N. lon. 0. 38. E. Market on Thursday, and another market on the second Tuesday in every month.

Maidwell, Linc. near Burwell. Maidwell, Northamptonsh. near Harborough. Maies, Suffex, near Selmston.

Maimhead, Devonf. W. of Exmouth.

MAIN, a province of North America, which belongs to the state of Massachusetts. It is 300 miles long and 104 broad, and is bounded on the N. and NW. by Canada; on the NE. by New Brunswick; on the SE. by the Atlantic Ocean; and on the W. by Vermont and New Hampshire. It is divided into three counties, Lincoln, Cumberland, and York. Portland is the county town of Cumberland, and capital of the whole territory. The heat in summer is intense, and the cold in winter equally extreme: all the fresh-water lakes, ponds, and rivers are usually passable on ice for near three months in the winter. The climate is very healthful; many of the inhabitants living 90 years.

MAINA, a country in the Morea, lying between two chains of mountains which advance into the sea. The inhabitants were never yet subdued by the Turks. They maintain their independence in the fastnesses of their mountains, and traffic in slaves, which they take indifferently from the Turks and the Christians. They have a harbour and a town of the same name, 30 miles SW. of Mistra.

Main-Broad, Dorsetshire, 3 miles N. of Owen Main.

MAINE, a river of Germany, which rises in the marquisate of Culmbach, on the confines of Bohemia, and running westward, falls into the Rhine, near Mentz. It runs by Bamberg, Wirtzberg, Aschaffenburg, Hanau, and Francfort.

MAINE, or MAYENNE, a department of France. It takes it's name from the river Mayenne, which joins the Sarte near Angers, and soon after falls into the Loire. Laval is the capital.

MAINE AND LOIRE, a department of France, so called from the junction of the two rivers of the same name. Angers is the capital.

MAINLAND, ORKNEY, or POMONA, the principal of the Orkney Islands, is 24 miles long and 9 broad. The general appearance of the country is not very different from the Mainland of Shetland.

The soil, however, is more fertile, and, in some parts, better cultivated. Kirkwall is the capital. See ORCADES.

MAINLAND, the principal of the Shetland Isles, is 60 miles long from N. to S.; it's breadth, which varies greatly, seldom exceeds 6 miles. The face of the country exhibits a prospect of black, craggy mountains, and marshy plains, interspersed with some verdant spots, which appear smooth and fertile. Neither tree nor shrub is to be seen, except the juniper and the heath. The mountains abound with various kinds of game. Lofty cliffs, impending over the ocean, are the haunts of eagles, falcons, and ravens. The deep caverns underneath shelter seals and otters; and to the winding bays resort the swans, geese, scarfs, and other aquatic birds. The seas abound with fish, such as the cod, turbot, and haddock; but, particularly, at certain seasons, with shoals of herrings of incredible extent; and they are visited, at the same time, by whales, and other voracious fishes. Lobsters, oysters, muscles, &c. are also plentiful. The hills are covered with sheep of a small breed, and of a shaggy appearance; but their fleece is commonly very soft, and often extremely fine. From their wool, stockings of such a fine texture have been made, that, although of a large size, a pair was capable of passing through a common gold ring. Their horses are of a diminutive size, but remarkably strong and handsome, and are well known by the name of Shelties, from the name of the country. Many rivulets, and considerable lakes, abound with salmon, trout, &c. A mine of copper, and another of iron, have lately been opened near the S. extremity of this island. They are in the hands of the Anglesey Company, and are said to be extremely productive. There is an inexhaustible store of peat, but no coal. Lerwick is the capital.

Mainlaw, Northumb. in the barony of Wark. Main Little, or Frier, Dorsetsh. Mains, Lancas. in Amounderness.

MAINTENON, a town in the dept. of Eure and Loire, seated on the river Eure, 7 miles N. of Chartres.

MAINUNGEN, a town of Henneburg, Franconia.

MAJORCA, an island belonging to Spain, in the Mediterranean Sea, between Ivica and Minorca, about 50 miles in length and 35 in breadth. It is mountainous in the N. and W. parts, but fertile, producing corn, oil, honey, saffron, cattle, fish, rabbits, partridges, deer, wild fowl, horses, &c. The whole island is encompassed with watch towers. It is temperate and wholesome, but the excessive heat frequently occasions a scarcity. It has no considerable rivers, though there are a great many fine fountains and wells, and several good harbours. The inhabitants are robust, lively, and good sailors. The capital, MAJORCA, anciently PALMA, is a large and rich town, situated in a bay on the SW. coast of the island, with a good harbour. It has large and broad streets, spacious squares, stately stonehouses, built in the antique manner, and 22 churches, besides chapels and oratories. The inhabitants are about 10,000. The university is more ancient than celebrated. Lat. 39. 34. N. lon. 2. 25. E.

MAIRE, LE, a strait of S. America, lying between Staten Land and Terra del Fuego, so called from the navigator, who discovered it in 1616. Lat. 55. 0. S.

Maize Hill, Kent, in East Greenwich. Maismore, near Gloucester.

MAIXANT, ST. a town in the dept. of the Two Sevres, trading in corn, stockings, and woollen stuffs. It is 26 miles SW. of Poitiers, and 215 SW. of Paris.

Makely, Derb. E. of Uttoxeter. Makeney, N. of Derby. Maker, Devons. above Hamoaze, on a hill between Mount Edgecomb and Ram-Head. Makestock-Castle, Warw. E. of Colshill.

MAKRAN. See MACKERAN.

MALABAR, the name of the western coast of the peninsula of Hindoostan, from Cape Comorin to about 100 miles S. of Goa.

MALACCA, a large peninsula in Asia, bounded on the N. by Siam; and on all other sides by the ocean: about 500 miles in length, and from 60 to 150 in breadth. It produces few commodities for trade, except tin and elephants' teeth; but there are a great many excellent fruits and roots, which yield good refreshment for strangers that call here. The pine-apple is the best in the world, and the manjottain is a delicious fruit, in the shape of an apple, whose skin is thick and red. The rambottan is of the size of a walnut, with a very agreeable pulp; and the durian, though it has not a pleasant smell, yet has a very delicious taste. They have plenty of cocoa-nuts, and their shells will hold an English quart; beside lemons, oranges, limes, sugar-canes, and mangoes. There is but little corn, and sheep and bullocks are scarce; but pork, poultry, and fish are pretty plentiful. The religion of the natives is a mixture of Mahometanism. Their language is peculiarly soft, and is as common in the Indies as the the French is in Europe. The interior inhabitants have abandoned themſelves, with deſperation, to the moſt ferocious habits, taking delight in doing miſchief to their neighbours. The Dutch have been maſters of the town of Malacca, ſituated on the SW. coaſt, ſince 1640, when they took it from the Portugueſe, after a ſix months ſiege. During the preſent war, it has been attacked and taken by the Engliſh, and is now in their poſſeſſion. Lat. 2. 11. N. lon. 101. 11. E.

MALACCA, STRAIT OF, the narrow ſea between the Iſland of Sumatra and the SW. coaſt of Malacca.

Maladar, Cornwall, N. of Grampound.

MALAGA, a conſiderable ſea-port of Granada, with a good harbour. The inhabitants export to the amount of two millions and a half of piaſtres, in wines, fruits, ſumach, pickled anchovies, oil, &c. and only import to about one million and a half; Malaga, however, has little navigation of it's own, the ſhips which arrive there being chiefly Engliſh and Dutch. It is ſeated on the Mediterranean, 15 miles S. of Cordova, and 235 S. of Madrid. Lat. 36. 44. N. lon. 4. 25. W.

MALAHIDE, a town and bay of Dublin, 6 miles from the metropolis. A cotton manufacture is eſtabliſhed here, and the works are carried on by water.

MALAMOCO, a ſmall iſland and ſea-port of Italy, in the Lagunes of Venice, 5 miles S. of that city.

MALATIAH, a town of Aladulia, in Turkey in Aſia.

Malborough, Devonſ. on the coaſt, between Salcomb and Hope Key. Malchanger, Hants, SE. of Kingſclere.

MALCHIN, a town of Mecklenburg, Lower Saxony.

Malchway, a river in Radnorſ. Malden, Kent, in Sheppey Iſle. Malden, Surry, 5 miles from Kingſton.

MALDEN, a town of Eſſex, the firſt Roman colony in Britain, and the ſeat of ſome of the old Britiſh kings, ſituated near the confluence of the Chelmer with the Blackwater. Veſſels of 400 tons burden come up to the haven to unload. Malden carries on a conſiderable trade in corn, coals, iron, wine, brandy, rum, and deals. It is 10 miles E. of Chelmsford, and 37 NE. of London. Market on Saturday.

Malden-Jenkins, Eſſex, two miles from Malden.

MALDIVE ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands, ſaid to be 1000 in number, SW. of Cape Comorin, in the Indian Sea. The northernmoſt is in lat. 7. 5. N. lon. 73. 4. E. The are moſtly ſmall, and uninhabited. The inhabitants are a mixture of Arabs, and Indians of Malabar. They ſupply veſſels with ſails and cordage, cocoa-nuts, oil, honey, tortoiſe-ſhell, and, eſpecially, cowries.

MALESHERBES, a town in the dept. of the Loiret.

MALINES. See MECHLIN.

MALIO, or ST ANGELO, a cape of the Morea, 50 miles SE. of Miſitra.

Mallerſtang-Foreſt, Weſtmorland.

MALLICOLLO, one of the largeſt of the Hebrides, in the S. Sea, lying in 16. deg. 15. min. S. lat. and 167. deg. 45. min. E. lon. It is about 18 leagues long, and from 5 to 7 wide. It's inland mountains are high, and clad with foreſts. The ſoil is a rich and fertile mould. It's vegetable productions are luxuriant, and in great variety; cocoa-nuts, bread-fruit, bananas, ſugar-canes, yams, eddoes, turmeric, and oranges. Hogs, and common poultry, are their domeſtic animals. They had no dogs, for which reaſon, Captain Cook left them a dog and a bitch. The inhabitants, in their form, language, and manners, are widely different from thoſe of the Friendly and Society Iſlands. They correſpond in many particulars with the natives of New Guinea and Papua, particularly in their black colour and woolly hair. Both men and women are ugly; and the latter paint their heads, faces, and ſhoulders red. They are of a ſlender make, have lively features, and tie a rope ſo faſt round their belly, that the ſhape of their bodies reſembles that of an overgrown pilmire. The climate of Mallicollo is very warm, and the inhabitants feel little inconvenience in going almoſt naked, either from heat or cold. Their keeping their bodies entirely free from punctures, is one particular, that remarkably diſtinguiſhes them from the other tribes of the S. Sea.

MALLING, WEST, a town of Kent, ſeated near Compherſt-Wood. It is 6 miles W. of Maidſtone, and 30 E. by S. of London. This pariſh was anciently taxed to contribute, towards the repair of the third arch, or pier, of Rocheſter-Bridge. Market on Saturday.

*MALLOW, a conſiderable town of Cork, in Munſter. Here is a fine ſpring of moderately tepid water, reſembling in it's qualities the hot-well waters of Briſtol. It is ſeated on the river Blackwater, 14 miles N. of Cork.

Mallocks, or Mallocks, Herts, on the river Ash, near Hunidon.

MALMEDY, a town of Liege.

MALMISTRA, a town and river of Natolia.

MALMO, a sea-port of Sweden, in Scania, seated on the Sound.

MALMSBURY, an ancient town in Wiltshire, pleasantly seated on the river Avon, which almost surrounds it, and over which it has six bridges. It was long famous for it's abbey, which exceeded all the county in revenues and honour. This town drives a considerable trade in the woollen manufactory. King Athelstan was buried under the high altar of the church, and his monument still remains in the nave of it. It is 26 miles E. by N. of Bristol, and 95 W. of London. Market on Saturday.

Malmeton, Linc. N. of Kirton, in Lindsey. Malmsborn, Westm. SW. of Appleby.

MALO, St. a sea-port in the dept. of Ille and Vilaine. It is seated on an island, united to the main land by a causeway; has a large, well-frequented harbour, but difficult of access, on account of the rocks that surround it; and is a rich, trading place, defended by a citadel. It is 205 miles NW. of Paris. Lat. 48. 39. N. lon. 1. 57. W.

MALORA, a town of Genoa.

MALPARTIDO, a town of Spanish Estramadura, 14 miles SSW. of Placentia.

MALPAS, a town of Cheshire, seated on a high eminence, near the river Dee. It contains three streets, an hospital, and a grammar-school, and the benefice is rich enough to support two rectors, who officiate alternately. It is 15 miles SE. of Chester, and 166 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

Malperton, Dorset. near Charborough.

MALPLAQUET, a village of the late Austrian Hainault, famous for a dearly-purchased victory, gained, in 1709, by the allies under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, over the French, commanded by the Marshals Villars and Boufflers. The confederates took 40 colours and standards, 16 pieces of artillery, and a good number of prisoners.

MALTA, an island of the Mediterranean, between Africa and Sicily, 20 miles in length, and 12 in it's greatest breadth. It was anciently little else than a barren rock; but such quantities of soil have been brought from Africa, that it is now become fertile. It has excellent vines, lemons, fruits, cotton, plenty of honey, good pastures, considerable fisheries, sea salt, and a profitable coral fishery. However, they sow but little corn, because they can purchase it cheap in Sicily. The number of the inhabitants is estimated at 60,000, who speak a corrupt Arabic, and, in the towns, Italian. After the taking of Rhodes, the emperor Charles V. gave this island to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem. It was attacked by the Turks in 1566, who, after many dreadful assaults, were obliged to abandon the enterprise, with the loss of 30,000 men. The whole island is extremely well fortified. The knights of Malta formerly consisted of 8 nations; but they have long been only seven, because the English have forsaken them. They are obliged to suppress all pirates, are at perpetual war with the Turks and other Mahometans, and are all under a vow of celibacy and chastity. It is about 60 miles SSW. of Cape Passaro, in Sicily.

MALTA, or CIVITA VECCHIA, a strongly fortified town of the island of Malta, seated on a hill in the centre of the island. It is the see of a bishop, and contains several churches and convents, besides the cathedral, which is large and handsome. Near it are the catacombs, which are said to extend several miles under ground.

The ſoil varies in different tracts, yet produces more corn than is ſufficient to maintain the natives. The air, which is ſharp and cold in winter, is healthy, and the inhabitants live to a very great age. The commodities of this iſland are black cattle, wool, hides, ſkins, honey, tallow, and herrings. The froſts here are ſhort, and the ſnow, eſpecially in lands near the ſea, lies not lot long on the ground. Their cattle and horſes are ſmall, and they have badgers, foxes, eagles, and mottled hawks. Here are quarries of ſtone and ſlate, and ſome mines of lead, copper, and iron. About the rocks of the iſland breed an incredible number of all ſorts of ſea-fowl, and eſpecially on the Calf of Man, an iſland 3 miles in circuit, before the S. promontory of Man, and ſeparated from it by a channel 2 furlongs broad. On this little iſland 5000 young puffins are generally taken every year. The biſhop is nominated by the Duke of Athol; he was formerly reckoned a baron, but does not ſit in the houſe of peers, although he is allowed the higheſt ſeat in the lower houſe of convocation. The language is a dialect of the Erſe. In it's civil government, the iſland is divided into 6 ſheedings, each having it's proper coroner, who is intruſted with the peace of his diſtrict, and acts in the nature of a ſheriff. Of their laws, the Lord Chief Juſtice Coke obſerves, "that they are ſuch as are ſcarce to be found any where elſe."

On their feſtival days, the Hindoo inhabitants carry their idols in triumph, being placed in a waggon, adorned on all ſides with flowers. There are ſeveral ſharp, crooked, iron hoops faſtened to the wheels, upon which the mad devotees throw themſelves, and are cruſhed to pieces. Their manner of puniſhing criminals, is by expoſing them quite naked on the ſands, where they expire by a miſerable and lingering death. It is the greateſt place for trade of any in the kingdom; and the Portugueſe have a factory here for rice, and a pretty large church, frequented by black converts. The houſes are meanly built along the ſides of the rivers. Lat. 12. 50. N. lon. 74. 44. E.

MANGEEA, an iſland in the S. Sea, about 4 leagues in circumference. The coaſt is guarded by a reef of coral rocks, againſt which a heavy ſurf is continually breaking. In the interior parts it riſes into ſmall hills, whence there is an eaſy deſcent to the ſhore. They have neither hogs nor dogs; but they have plantains, taro, and bread-fruit. Captain Cook repreſents this as a very fine iſland; but the hoſtile appearance of it's inhabitants obliged him to leave it without making any ſtay. Lat. 21. 27. S. lon. 158. 13. W.

MARQUESAS, a group of iſlands in the South Sea, firſt diſcovered by Mendana, a Spaniard, in 1595. They are 5 in number, and named St. Chriſtina, Magdalena, Dominica, St. Pedro, and Hood. Captain Cook lay ſome time at the firſt of theſe, in 1774. The natives are of a tawny complexion, but look almoſt black, by being punctured over the whole body. They go almoſt naked, having only a ſmall piece of cloth, perfectly reſembling that made by the people of Otaheite, round their waiſt and loins. Their beard and hair are of a fine jet black, like thoſe of the other natives of the torrid zone. The iſland, though high and ſteep, has many valleys, which widen toward the ſea, and are covered with fine foreſts to the ſummits of the interior mountains. The products of theſe iſlands are bread-fruit, bananas, plantains, cocoa-nuts, ſcarlet beans, paper-mulberries, of the bark of which their cloth is made, caſuarinas, with other tropical plants and trees, and hogs and fowls. They have alſo plenty of fiſh. Forſter ſays, he never ſaw a ſingle man deformed, or even ill-proportioned among the natives: all were ſtrong, tall, well-limbed, and active in the higheſt degree. Their arms were clubs and ſpears, and their government, like that of the Society Iſlands, monarchical. But they were not quite ſo cleanly as the inhabitants of the Society Iſles, who, in that reſpect, ſurpaſs, perhaps, any other people in the world. The drink of the Marqueſans is purely water, cocoa-nuts being rather ſcarce. Their muſic, muſical inſtruments, dances, and canoes, reſemble thoſe of Otaheite. Indeed, the inhabitants of the Marqueſas, Society, and Friendly Iſlands, Eaſter Iſland, and New Zealand, ſeem to have all the ſame origin; their language, manners, cuſtoms, &c. bearing a great affinity in many reſpects. Lat. 9. 55. S. lon. 139. 9. W.

Marr, Yorkſhire, 3 miles W. of Doncaſter. Marrick, Yorkſhire, SW. of Richmond Moor.

They have some large caverns in them, and are so perforated, in several places, as to give a free passage to boats.

MARSEILLES, a flourishing sea-port in the dept. of the Mouths of the Rhone, lately an episcopal see. It was so celebrated in the time of the Romans, that Cicero styled it the Athens of the Gauls, and Pliny called it the Mistress of Education. It is seated on the Mediterranean, at the upper end of a gulf, covered and defended by many small islands, and is divided into the Old Town or the City, and the New Town. The first appears like an amphitheatre to the vessels which enter the port; but the houses are mean, and the streets dirty, narrow, and steep. In the latter, the streets are straight and broad, and adorned with handsome edifices. In this part, is the principal church, built by the Goths, on the ruins of the temple of Diana. This place was considered as endowed with an invaluable privilege confirmed by different popes; namely, that it should be for ever exempt from an interdict. The armoury is the finest in the kingdom, and contains arms for 40,000 men. Here is also a large arsenal, well stored with all the implements for building and fitting out the galleys. The harbour is not deep enough for men of war. Gold and silver stuffs are made here. The inhabitants are estimated at 90,000. With respect to commerce, Marseilles, has been eminent, since the days of antiquity, and it is now sometimes called Europe in Miniature, on account of the variety of dresses and languages. In 1649, the plague raged with great violence in Marseilles, and with still greater in 1720, 1721, and 1722, when it carried off 50,000 of the inhabitants. During this last dreadful visitation, M. de Belfunce, (the "Marseilles good bishop" celebrated by Pope) the canon Bourgeret, the magistrate Moustier, and the commandant Langeron, by their intrepid and indefatigable humanity, did the most signal honour to themselves and to human nature. Marseilles is 18 miles NW. of Toulon, and 362 S. by E. of Paris. Lat. 43. 18. N. lon. 5. 27. E.

MARTABAN, a province of Pegu, on the Gulf of Bengal, a long time an independent kingdom. The ſoil is fertile in rice, fruits, and wines of all kinds. It's capital is of the ſame name, and was a rich trading place before ſhips were ſunk at the entrance of the harbour to choke it up, which it has done effectually. The chief trade is now in earthen ware and fiſh. The whole country, moreover, is now ſubject to the king of Burmah, who, in 1754, ſubdued the kingdom of Pegu, and rendered it a dependent province. The town of Martaban is 80 miles SE. of that of Pegu. Lat. 16. 38. N. lon. 97. 3. E.

MARTEL, a town in the department of Lot, 28 miles NNE. of Cahors.

MARTHA, ST. a province of S. America, on the coaſt of Terra Firma. It is 350 miles in length, and 209 in breadth, and is moſtly a mountainous country, having Venezuela on the E. aud Carthagena on the W. It is extremely hot on the ſea-coaſt, but within cold, on account of the mountains. It abounds with fruits proper to the climate, and there are mines of gold and precious ſtones, and ſalt-works. The Spaniards poſſeſs but one part of this province, in which they have built St. Martha, the capital. The air about the town is wholeſome, and it is ſeated near the ſea, having a harbour ſurrounded by high mountains. It was formerly very conſiderable, when the Spaniſh galleons were ſent thither, but is now come almoſt to nothing. Lat. 11. 27. N lon. 74. 0. W.

Here is a conſiderable iron manufactory, with furnaces for ſmelting the iron out of the ore, forges for making it malleable, and mills for flatting the tin plates, which are alſo tinned here. Great quantities of goods of hammered iron are made here for exportation; and they alſo convert iron into ſteel, and caſt all kinds of veſſels, &c. in the ſame metal.

MASCATE, the principal town of Oman, on the coaſt of Arabia, beſide a ſmall gulf encompaſſed with ſteep rocks, and forming a ſecure harbour for the largeſt veſſels. Arrian calls it Moſca, and ſpeaks of it as being, even then, a great emporium of the trade of Arabia, Perſia, and India; an advantage which it has ever enjoyed, and ſtill poſſeſſes. The Portugueſe conquered it about the year 1508, but the Arabs took it from them in 1658, and put all the garriſon to the ſword, except 18, who turned Mahometans. The cathedral, built by the Portugueſe, is now the palace of the wali or governor, acting for the ſcheik or iman, and their other church is a magazine. There are neither trees, ſhrubs, nor graſs to be ſeen on the coaſt near it, and only a few date-trees in a valley at the back of the town, though they have all things in plenty. The bazars, or market-places, are covered with the leaves of date-trees, laid on beams, which reach from the houſe-tops on one ſide, to thoſe on the other. The horſes, cattle, and ſheep are accuſtomed to eat roaſted fiſh; notwithſtanding which, the beef and mutton are both good. Their religion is Mahometaniſm, and yet they ſuffer any one to go into their moſques, contrary to the cuſtom of the Turks. There are about 1200 Banians in this city, who are permitted to bring their wives here, ſet up idols in their chambers, and burn their dead, &c. The products of the country are horſes, dates, fine brimſtone, coffee, and ruinoſs, a root that dyes red. Lat. 24. 0. N. lon. 57. 26. E.

MAY, or MAYO, one of the Cape de Verd Iſlands, lying in the Atlantic Ocean, about 21 miles in circumference, it's form oval, with a variety of ſharp rocks and points projecting into the ſea about a mile. The ſoil conſiſts of ſand, or a looſe, crumbling ſtone, without rivulets, ſprings, or any natural moiſture, except the dews in the night, and ſhowers in the wet ſeaſon; however, they have plenty of beeves, goats, and aſſes; as alſo, ſome corn, yams, potatoes, plantains, figs, water-melons, citrons, oranges, pompions, and calavanas, or a ſpecies of bean. In the whole iſland is but one ſpring, which riſes in the centre, and runs off in a ſmall ſtream through a valley confined by the hills. Here are no large trees; what few they have are on the ſide of the hills. Here is a large ſalt-pond, 2 miles in length, and half a mile in breadth: with this commodity many Engliſh ſhips are loaded in the ſummer time. The ſea is plentifully ſtocked with a variety of fiſh. The inhabitants are negroes, who ſpeak the Portugueſe language, and are ſtout, luſty, and plump. There are only three villages, the principal of which is Pinoſa, with a church, and about 200 inhabitants, many of whom go naked. Lat. 15. 10. N. lon. 22. 25. W.

MECCA, a city of Hedias, in Arabia, ſeated on a barren ſpot, in a valley, ſurrounded by little hills, about a day's journey from the Red Sea. It has neither walls nor gates, but the buildings are better here than in any other town of Arabia. What chiefly ſupports it, is the annual reſort of a great many thouſand pilgrims at a certain ſeaſon of the year; for, at other times, the ſhops are ſcarcely open. The inhabitants are poor, very thin, lean, and ſwarthy. The hills about the town are numerous; all conſiſt of a blackiſh rock; and ſome of them are half a mile in circumference. The town has plenty of water, and yet little garden-ſtuff; but there are ſeveral ſorts of good fruit, as grapes, melons, watermelons, and cucumbers. Numbers of ſheep are brought hither to be ſold to the pilgrims. Mecca ſtands in a very hot climate, and the inhabitants uſually ſleep on the tops of their houſes, for the ſake of coolneſs. Among it's edifices, the moſt remarkable is the famous Kaba, or Houſe of God, held in high veneration by the Arghars, even before the days of Mahomet, and ſaid to have been Abraham's houſe of prayer. The Kaba is a ſquare tower, covered on the top with a piece of black gold-embroidered ſilk ſtuff. It has 42 doors, and reſembles, in it's form, the Royal Exchange, but is near ten times as large. The ground in the middle, or area, is moſtly covered with gravel. There are cloiſters all round, and in the ſides are cells for thoſe that live a monaſtic life.

The arcades around the ſquare are ſaid to be magnificent, and are illuminated with a vaſt number of lamps, and candleſticks of gold and ſilver. In the Kaba is a ſingular relic, the famous black ſtone, ſaid to have been brought from heaven by the Angel Gabriel, which every Muſſulman muſt kiſs, or at leaſt touch, every time he goes round the Kaba. Here alſo is the Well of Zemzem, ſaid to have been that where Hagar quenched the thirſt of Iſmael. Lat. 21. 45. N. lon. 40. 55. E.

MECHLIN, or MALINES, a town and diſtrict of the late Auſtrian Brabant. It conſiſts of ſeveral ſmall iſlands, made by artificial canals, over which are a great many bridges. Here is a very large houſe, in which are brought up 800 or 1000 young girls, and a great foundry for ordnance of all kinds. It is famous for it's manufactures in bed-quilts, thread, and particularly in fine lace, and they brew a ſort of beer, which is ſent into the neighbouring provinces. It is ſeated on the river Dyle, 10 miles NNE. of Bruſſels.

MEDINA, a city of Hedjas, in Arabia Felix, celebrated for being the burial place of Mahomet. It is of moderate extent, is walled round, and has a large moſque, but nothing like the temple at Mecca. In one corner is a place, 14 paces ſquare, with great windows, and braſs gates, and in the middle the tomb of Mahomet, incloſed within iron rails, hung with curtains, and ſurrounded by a vaſt number of lamps. The tomb is not expoſed to any, except the 40 eunuchs who guard it, and light the lamps. It is placed between two other tombs, in which reſt the aſhes of the two firſt cailiphs. The ſtory of it's being ſuſpended in the air by a loadſtone is now well known to be a fable. Proviſions are brought to this place out of Nubia, acroſs the Red Sea, in odd ſort of veſſels, whoſe ſails are made of mats. It is called the City of the Prophet, becauſe here he was protected by the inhabitants, when he fled from Mecca; and here he was firſt inveſted with regal power. The time of his death was in 637; but the Mahometan epoch begins in 622, from the time of his flight. It is ſeated on a ſandy plain, abounding in palm-trees, 176 miles NNW. of Mecca. Lat. 24. 20. MEDWAY, a river riſing in Surry, in different branches, which unite in Kent, where it waters Tunbridge, and from Maidſtone is navigable to Rocheſter; below which, at Chatham, it is a ſtation for the royal navy. It falls into the Thames at the Nore. From Rocheſter Bridge to Sheerneſs, the diſtance is about 17 miles. In this part of the river, the channel is ſo deep, the banks ſo ſoft, and the reaches ſo ſhort, that it is one of the beſt and ſafeſt harbours in the world. The forts of Upnor and Gillingham, erected on oppoſite ſhores of the river, are well furniſhed with cannon, and defend all the ſhips which ride between them and the bridge. There is alſo a platform of guns at the Swam, and another at Cockhamwood. But the principal defence of this river is the caſtle and works at Sheerneſs. On the 22d of June 1667, the Dutch ſquadron ſailed boldly up to Blackſtakes, and 7 of their largeſt ſhips went as far as Upnor, where they burnt the London, and ſeveral other men of war, damaged moſt of the ſhips within reach of their cannon, and carried off the Royal Charles, a firſt rate of 100 guns.

MEQUINEZ, a city of Fex, in Morocco, 26 miles SW. of Fez, the reſidence of the emperor, and the capital of the whole empire. Hither the baſhaws and alcayds reſort resort with the tribute and presents every two or three years. In the middle of the city the Jews have a place to themselves, walled in and guarded, with an alcayd to protect them. It is death for them to curse, or lift up a hand against a Moor, insomuch that the boys kick them about at their pleasure. They are obliged to wear black clothes and caps, and to pull off their shoes whenever they pass by a mosque. Close by Mequinez, on the NW. side, stands a large negro town, which takes up as much ground as the city, but the houses are not so high, nor so well built. The inhabitants are all blacks, or of a dark tawny colour; and thence the emperor recruits the soldiers for his court. The palace stands on the S. side, and is guarded by several hundreds of black eunuchs, who are armed with knives and scimiters, covered with wrought silver. The streets are exceedingly narrow, with hardly any of the windows to be seen, except little holes to look out at. The houses are flat at the top; so that, in many places, they can walk a great way upon them. The women live in the upper apartments, and often visit each other from the tops of the houses. When these go abroad, they have their heads covered with their outward garment, which comes down close to their eyes; and underneath they tie a piece of white cloth, to hide the lower part of their faces. They are quite covered all over, except their legs, which are generally naked; but within doors they appear in their hair, and have only a single fillet over their foreheads. Here, as well as at Morocco, is a convent of Spanish Recollects, for the benefit of Christian captives, the fathers of both which, supply the poor with medicines gratis. Lat. 33. 56. N. lon. 6. 6. MEXICO, a city of N. America, capital of the province of that name. It was a flourishing place before the Spaniards entered the country, and is seated on several islands, in a salt-water lake, to which there is no entrance, but by five causeways, three of which are about two miles in length. It formerly contained 80,000 houses, with several large temples, full of rich idols, and three palaces, where the emperor of Mexico resided. Mexico was taken by Ferdinando Cortez, in 1521, after a siege of three months. As the Mexicans defended themselves from street to street, it was almost ruined, but afterward rebuilt by the Spaniards. It now contains about 35,000 houses, built of stone and brick, with a suburb of 3000 houses, inhabited by the native Americans, 29 churches, and 22 monasteries and nunneries. It is the usual residence of the viceroy, whose employment continues 3 years, and has a royal audience, an university, and the tribunal of the inquisition. All the streets are straight, and exactly disposed in point of regularity, and and it is remarkable for having neither gates, walls, nor artillery. The revenue of the cathedral amounts to nearly 80,000l. a year, out of which the archbiſhop receives annually 15,000l. beſides vaſt ſums that ariſe by perquiſites. The inhabitants are immenſely wealthy, and a vaſt abundance of ſilver, gold, and jewels, is expoſed in plate and toys in the ſtreets, by the goldſmiths and ſhopkeepers. Mexico enjoys a prodigious commerce, being the centre of all the trade carried on between Spaniſh America and Europe, and Spaniſh America and the E. Indies. An incredible number of horſes and mules is employed in tranſporting goods from Acapulco to Vera Cruz, and from Vera Cruz to Acapulco. Hither all the gold and ſilver is brought to be coined; here the king's fifth is depoſited; and all that immenſe quantity of plate wrought which is annually ſent to Europe. This place was overflowed by an inundation in October, 1629, in which 40,000 perſons were drowned. This obliged the Spaniards to make a great conduit through a mountain, in order to empty the lake; which being done, part of the town became ſeated on dry land. Mexico is ſupplied with freſh water by an aqueduct of three miles in length. The Spaniards do not make a tenth part of the inhabitants, the others being negroes, mulattoes, native Americans, and a mixture of them all. It is 130 miles W. by N. of Vera Cruz, and 250 NE. by N. of Acapulco. Lat. 19. 54. N. lon. 100. 0. W.

Mexico, or New Spain, a country of N. America, including, in it's largeſt ſenſe, all that extenſive peninſula ſituated between Louiſiana and unknown countries on the N. and Terra Firma, in S. America, on the S. but the audience of Mexico contains only the provinces of Mexico Proper, Mechoacan, Guaſteca, Tlaſcala, Guaxaca, Tabaſco, and Yucatan. It is waſhed on the E. by the Atlantic Ocean; and on the S. and W. by the S. Sea, and is above 2000 miles in length, and from 60 to 600 in breadth. It is divided into 23 diſtricts or provinces, the principal of which is that of Mexico Proper, and contains mines of gold and ſilver, of the latter of which they count above a thouſand, beſide mines of iron, copper, lead, alum, cryſtal, vitriol, precious ſtones, marble, &c. The ſoil produces Indian corn, cabbage-trees, cocoa-nuts, vanellas, plantains, pine-apples, cochineal, cotton, and ſeveral other fruits, gums, and drugs proper to the climate. Before the Spaniards came here, they had a ſort of dogs that did not bark, but howled like wolves; grey lions, leſs formidable than thoſe of Africa; and alſo ſmall tigers, bears, though uncommon, elks, or mooſe-deer, pecaries, warres, beavers, opoſſums, armadillos, guanoes, flying ſquirrels, racoons, crocodiles, manattes, or ſea-cows, monkeys, parrots, macaws, pelicans, cormorants, and great variety of other birds, ſnakes, ſcorpions, and other inſects. The Spaniſh clergy are very numerous, and there are a great number of convents. In general, it is a mountainous country, intermixed with many rich valleys: but the higheſt mountains are near the coaſt of the South Sea, many of which are volcanoes. The eaſtern ſhore is a flat, level country, full of bogs and moraſſes, overflowed in the rainy ſeaſon, which is at the ſame time as our ſummer. The hills between the mountains, and the flat country, are beſt inhabited, becauſe there the air is moſt temperate. The revenues of the crown, which are great, ariſe from a fifth part of the gold and ſilver, and from the duties and cuſtoms, as well as the lands held of the crown.

Mexico, New, a large country of N. America, bounded on the W. by the Gulf of California; it's other limits are uncertain. The ſoil and climate are as rich, plentiful, and temperate as in any country of America, or any other part of the world. MIDDLESEX, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Hertfordſhire; on the E. by Eſſex; on the S. by Surry, and a corner of Kent; and on the W. by Buckinghamſhire. It is one of the leaſt counties in England, being only about 22 miles in length and 14 in breadth, but is much the richeſt and moſt populous, and pays more taxes than any ten beſide. It contains 7 market-towns, and about 200 pariſhes, without including thoſe in London and Weſtminſter. The air is healthy; but the ſoil, in general, being a lean gravel, it is naturally a diſtrict of little fertility; though, by means of the vicinity to the metropolis, many parts of it are converted into rich beds of manure, clothed with almoſt perpetual verdure. There are ſtill, however, very extenſive tracts of uncultivated heath. Beſide the Thames, the Lea, and the Coln, Middleſex is watered by ſeveral ſmall ſtreams; one of which, called the New River, is artificially brought from Amwell, in Herts, for the purpoſe of ſupplying London with water. Indeed, the whole county may be conſidered as a demeſne to the metropolis, the land being laid out in gardens, paſtures, and incloſures of all ſorts for it's convenience and ſupport.

MILAN, a city of Italy, capital of a duchy of the ſame name. It was the ancient capital of Lombardy, and is the largeſt city in Italy, except Rome; but, although it is thought rather to exceed Naples in ſize, it does not contain above one half the number of inhabitants. It is ſeated in a pleaſant plain, between the rivers Adda and Teſin. It is about 10 miles in circumference, and called by the Italians, Milan the Great. Here are 22 gates, 230 churches, 90 convents, 100 religious fraternities, 120 ſchools, and about 250,000 inhabitants. Broad and ſtraight ſtreets are but few in compariſon of the narrow and crooked; and the many paper windows, or glaſs and paper panes intermixed, even in the fineſt palaces, have a mean appearance. The governor's palace, or the old regency-houſe, is the moſt ſtately and ſpacious. The cathedral is a grand ſtructure, being 500 feet long, 200 broad, and 400 high. It ſtands in the centre of the city, and, next to St. Peter's at Rome, is the largeſt in Italy. This vaſt fabric is entirely built of ſolid white marble, and ſupported by 50 columns, ſaid to be 84 feet high. The 4 pillars under the cupola are 28 feet in circumference. The college of St. Ambroſe has a library, which, beſide ſome thouſands of manuſcripts, contains 45,000 printed volumes. In it is an academy of painting. The moſt conſiderable commerce of the inhabitants is in grain (eſpecially rice), cattle, and cheeſe, which they export; and they have manufactures of ſilk and velvet ſtuffs, ſtockings, handkerchiefs, ribbons, gold and ſilver laces, and embroideries, woollen and linen cloths, glaſs, and earthen ware, in imitation of China. Here are ſeveral rivers and many canals. It is 65 miles N. of Genoa, 145 NNW. of Florence, and 270 NW. of Rome. Lat. 45. 28. N. lon. 9. 16. E.

MILAN, THE DUCHY OF, a conſiderable country of Italy, bounded on the N. by Switzerland, and the country of the Griſons; on the E. by the ci-devant ſtate of Venice, and the duchies of Parma and Mantua; on the S. by Parma and Piedmont; and on the W. by Piedmont and Savoy, being 108 miles in length and 96 in breadth. The ſoil is as fertile as that of any country of Europe in corn, wine, fruits, rice, olives, and vegetables; and the diſtrict of Lodi breeds vaſt herds of cattle. The rivers are, the Secchia, Teſin, Adda, and Oglio. There are likewiſe ſeveral lakes, the three principal of which are thoſe of Maggiore, Como, and Lugano. This duchy, including the Milaneſe Proper, the dukedom of Mantua, the territories of Como, Pavia, Lodi, and Cremona, has been, ſince the beginning of this century, ſubject to the houſe of Auſtria, but in the preſent war it has been overrun by French troops, and now forms a principal part of the new Ciſalpine Republic.

MILFORD-HAVEN, a deep inlet of the Iriſh Sea, on the coaſt of Pembrokeſhire, univerſally allowed to be the beſt harbour in Great Britain, and as ſafe and ſpacious as any in Europe. It has 16 deep and ſafe creeks, 5 bays, and 3 roads, all diſtinguiſhed by their ſeveral names, in which 1000 ſail of ſhips may ride in perfect ſecurity, and at ſufficient diſtance from each other. There is no danger in ſailing in or out with the tide, by day or night, from whatever point the wind may happen to blow; and if a ſhip in diſtreſs comes in, without either anchor or cable, ſhe may run on ſhore on ſoft ooſe, and there lie in ſafety till ſhe is refitted. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, 2 forts were begun at the entrance of the haven, 1 on each ſide, called Nangle and Dale Blockhouſes, but they were not finiſhed. In the middle of the entrance between Nangle and Dale, the Stack Rock riſes above water. The breadth of the entrance, between rock and rock, is but 200 yards at high water, and 122 at low water. One great advantage attending this harbour is, that a ſhip may be in or out of it in an hour's time, and may get out to the W. much ſooner than from either Plymouth or Falmouth. The parliament, on April 14th, 1759, granted granted 10,000l. for fortifying this harbour, all of which was expended on the fort at Neyland, which, however, ſtill remains unfiniſhed.

MINDANAO, one of the Philippine Iſlands, and next to Luconia in point of ſize, being 180 miles in length and 120 in breadth. It is generally a mountainous country, full of hills and valleys; but the mould is deep, black, and fruitful. There are many lofty trees of kinds not known in Europe, and the valleys are well watered with rivulets. The inhabitants find very good gold, by digging deep into the ground, as alſo in the rivers, making trenches before the floods. The libby-trees produce the ſago, of which, when reduced into meal, the poor people make bread and biſcuits. Here are all the various ſorts of fruits proper to the climate, beſide plenty of rice. The cinnamon-tree grows here on the mountains, without culture, and has no owner but him that finds it. They have horſes, beeves, buffaloes, goats, deer, monkeys, guanoes, bats of a large ſize, lizards, and ſnakes; but they have neither lions nor tigers. Their hogs are accounted very ugly creatures, and they have all great knobs growing over their eyes; however, their fleſh is ſweet. Their fowls are, ducks, hens, pigeons, parrots, parroquets, and turtle-doves, beſide many ſmall birds. The air is temperate, they having ſea-breezes by day, and cooling land-winds at night. The inhabitants are of a mean, low ſtature, with ſmall limbs, and little heads. They have flat foreheads, black ſmall eyes, ſhort low noſes, and pretty large mouths. Their hair is black and ſtraight, and their complexion tawny, but more inclined to yellow than that of other Indians. The chief trades are goldſmiths, blackſmiths, and carpenters, and they can build pretty good veſſels for the ſea. Polygamy is practiſed here. The ſultan has a queen, beſide 20 other women, and many of the men have ſeveral wives; for their religion is Mahometaniſm. Their houſes are built on poſts, from 14 to 20 feet high; and they have ladders to go up out of the ſtreets. They have but one floor, which is divided into ſeveral rooms, and the roofs are covered with palmetto leaves. The principal town, of the ſame name, is pretty large, and is ſeated on the eaſtern coaſt.

Mocha, a considerable town of Yemen, Arabia, surrounded by walls, consisting of half stone and half earth; and several towers, guarded by soldiers. The women, except a small number of the common sort, never appear in the streets in the day-time, but visit each other in the evening. Over their other dress, they wear a large veil of painted calico, that they can see through without being seen. They have also little buskins of Morocco leather: some of the women of rank are handsome, and not browner than the Spanish women. Mocha was the last city in Yemen of which the Turks retained possession. It has now no other master than the Iman. The inhabitants are computed at 10,000, without comprehending the Armenians, or the Jews, who inhabit the suburbs. Here are about 700 Banians and other Indians, who, when they have made a small fortune, commonly return to India. The English engross almost exclusively the trade of this place, which consists chiefly in coffee, and often gain considerably by carrying money to India, with which the Arabian merchants intrust them. It is seated in a sandy country, abounding in date-trees, near the Straits of Babelmandel. Lat. 13. 19. N. lon. 43. 23. E.

* MONMOUTH, the county town of Monmouthſhire, pleaſantly ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Wye and Mynnow, which almoſt ſurround it. It is a large and handſome town, carries on a conſiderable trade with Briſtol by the Wye, and is 21 miles W. by S. of Glouceſter, and 128 W. by N. of London. Lat. 51. 49. N. lon. 2. 46. W. Market on Saturday. Fairs on Whitſun Tueſday, September 4th, and November 22d.

MONMOUTHSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Herefordſhire and Brecknockſhire, on the E. by Glouceſterſhire, on the SE. by the mouth of the Severn, and on the W. by the counties of Brecknock and Glamorgan. It's extent from N. to S. is about 28 miles, and from E. to W. 20. It is divided into 6 hundreds, and contains 7 market-towns, and 127 pariſhes. The air is temperate and healthy, and the ſoil fruitful, though mountainous and woody. The hills feed ſheep, goats, and horned cattle; and the valleys produce plenty of graſs and corn. Beſide the Wye, the Mynnow, and the Rhyney, or Rumney, this county has almoſt peculiar to itſelf the river Uſk, which divides it into two unequal portions, the eaſtern, and largeſt part of which is a tract, fertile, on the whole, in corn and paſture, and well wooded. It abounds with limeſtone, which is burnt on the ſpot, for the general manure of the country. The ſmaller weſtern portion is mountainous, and, in great part, unfavourable for cultivation; whence it is devoted to the feeding of ſheep. It has ſeveral long, narrow valleys, watered by ſtreams that fall into the Briſtol Channel. All the rivers above mentioned, particularly the Wye and Uſk, abound with fiſh, eſpecially ſalmon and trout. Monmouthſhire was formerly reckoned one of the counties of Wales; and, from the names of it's towns and villages, it's mountainous, rugged ſurface, as well as it's ſituation beyond the Wye, which ſeems to form a natural boundary between England and Wales in this part, it certainly partakes moſt of the character of the latter country, though, ſince the reign of Charles II. when it was added to the Oxford circuit, it has been conſidered as an Engliſh county. The people uſe the Welſh language, but the Engliſh tongue is coming into uſe. The manufacture of this county is flannels.

MONOEMUGI, or NIMAAMA, a kingdom of Africa, lying near the equator, ſaid to be bounded by Abyſſinia on the N.; Mongallo, Mozambique, and other ſtates of Zanguebar on the E.; Monomotapa on the S.; and Congo and Angola on the W.; but the real limits are unknown. The ſovereign, however, is rich and powerful, having ſubdued moſt of the petty kings around. His ſubjects carry on a commerce with Abyſſinia and the eaſtern coaſts in gold, and vaſt quantities of ivory teeth, which they exchange for European and Indian commodities. This is all we can find concerning this unknown empire.

MONOMOTAPA, a country of Africa, extending from the Indian Sea to a conſiderable diſtance from it, between lat. 15. 0. and 23. 0. S. and between lon. 24. and 35. E. The climate is temperate; the air is clear and healthy, and the ſoil fertile, well watered, and abounding with paſture grounds. Sugar-canes grow here without cultivation. There are a great many oſtriches, and vaſt herds of elephants, and their foreſts ſwarm with wild beaſts and game. Their rivers abound with gold as well as fiſh, and they have mines of ſilver. They exchange their gold and ſilver with the Portugueſe for cotton cloth, and other merchandiſe, and trinkets brought from India and Europe. The houſes in Benematapa, the metropolis, called by ſome Medrogan, are white-waſhed within and without, and adorned with beautiful cloths of cotton, finely wrought and dyed. The palace is a large ſpacious fabric of wood, well flanked with towers, and with four avenues or ſtately gates, continually kept by a numerous guard. The natives are all black, with woolly hair, notwithſtanding their diſtance from the equator. They believe in one God that created the world, and admit of polygamy. The metropolis is about 20 miles W. of Sofala.

MORLACHIA, a mountainous country of Daſmatia, the inhabitants of which are called Morlacks, or Morlacchi. They inhabit habit the pleasant valleys of Koter, along the rivers Kerka, Cettina, Narenta, and among the inland mountains of Dalmatia. They are said, by some, to be of Walachian extraction; but this is denied by Abbé Fortis, who thinks their origin involved in the darkness of barbarous ages. The inhabitants of the sea-coast of Dalmatia tell many frightful stories of their avarice and cruelty; but these, M. Fortis thinks, are all either of an ancient date; or, if any have happened in later times, they ought rather to be ascribed to the corruption of a few individuals, than to the bad disposition of the nation in general. Indeed, among a variety of curious particulars respecting their manners and customs, he presents some very pleasing traits of character. "Friendship," he says, "is lasting among the Morlacchi. They have even made it a kind of religious point, and tie the sacred bond at the foot of the altar. The Sclavonian ritual contains a particular benediction, for the solemn union of two male or two female friends, in the presence of the congregation. He was present at the union of two young women, who were made Posestre, in the church of Perusich. The satisfaction, he continues, that sparkled in their eyes, when the ceremony was performed, gave a convincing proof, that delicacy of sentiments can lodge in minds not formed, or rather not corrupted, by society, which we call civilized. The male friends, thus united, are called Pobratimi, and the females Posestreme, which mean half-brothers and half-sisters. Friendships between those of different sexes are not bound with so much solemnity, though perhaps in more ancient and innocent ages it was also the custom. From these consecrated friendships among the Morlacchi, and other nations of the same origin, it should seem, that the sworn brothers arose, a denomination frequent enough among the common people in many parts of Europe. If discord happen to arise between two friends, among the Morlacchi, it is talked of, over all the country, as a scandalous novelty; and there have been some examples of it of late years, to the great affliction of the old Morlacchi, who attribute the depravity of their countrymen, to their intercourse with the Italians. Wine, and strong liquors, of which the nation is beginning to make daily abuse, after our example, will, of course, produce the same bad effects as among us."

MORLAIX, a considerable sea-port in the dept. of Finisterre, with a tide-harbour. The Notre-Dame church is a singular structure, and the hospital is very handsome; the inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in linen, hemp, and tobacco. It is seated on a river of the same name, 30 miles NE. of Brest.

Morland, Westmorl. W. of Appleby. Morlas, a river in Carmarthens. Morley, 3 miles NE. of Derby. Morley, Devons. between Totness and Kingsbridge. Morley, St. Botolph's and St. Peter's, Norf. SW. of Windham. Morley, Yorkshire, SW. of Leeds. Morley-Hall, called also Hallingbury, Essex, near Birchinghanger. Morley-Nether, Northumberland, near Chipchase. Morlinch, Somersetshire, near Bridgewater. Morningthorp, Norfolk, S. of Saxlingham.

MOROCCO, an empire of Africa, comprehending a considerable part of the ancient Mauritania, bounded on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean, on the E. by Algiers and Biledulgerid, on the N. by the Mediterranean, and on the S. by Zahara. It's greatest length is about 450 miles; and, where widest, about 390. The territories of Morocco are formed by the union of several small kingdoms, anciently limited to a single province, and perpetually at variance with each other, till, at last, they were all subdued, and united under one sovereign, by the sharifs. The S. part of the empire contains the kingdoms of Suz, Tarudant, Morocco Proper, Tafilet, and Segilmessa; and the N. part, those of Fez, Mequinez, and Tremecen; but the latter having been conquered by the Turks of Algiers, is now a part of that regency. The air of this country is very pure, and pretty temperate, especially to the N. of Mount Atlas. The soil, though sandy and dry on the western coast, is exceedingly fertile; the land containing within itself salts sufficient to make it fruitful. The increase of corn is often as sixty to one. The fruits, as well as the pastures, are excellent, but the country is not properly cultivated. The humidity of the atmosphere is so corrosive, that it quickly covers with rust, iron, steel, metals, and even the keys and scissars carried in the pocket. The Moors make food of the locusts; prodigious quantities of them are brought to market, salted and dried like red herrings. The inhabitants are Mahometans, of a tawny complexion, robust, and very skilful in managing a horse and wielding a lance. There are two sorts of inhabitants; the Arabs, who dwell in moveable villages, composed of about 100 tents, and the Bereberies, or Brebes, who are the ancient inhabitants, and dwell in cities and towns. There are a great number of Christian Chriſtian ſlaves, and ſome merchants, upon the coaſt, beſide a multitude of Jews, who carry on almoſt all the trade; eſpecially by land with the negroes, to whom they ſend large caravans, who travel over vaſt deſerts, almoſt deſtitute of water. They carry with them woollen manufactures, ſilk, ſalt, &c. and, in return, have men, gold, and elephants' teeth. Out of the ſlaves the emperor recruits his cavalry. They alſo ſend large caravans to Mecca every year, partly out of devotion, and partly for trade, conſiſting of ſeveral thouſand camels, horſes, and mules. Their commodities are woollen manufactures, Morocco leather, indigo, cochineal, oſtrich feathers, ſalt, and wax; in return for which they have ſilks, muſlins, calicoes, coffee, and drugs. In the deſerts are lions, tigers, leopards, and ſerpents of ſeveral kinds. The fruits are dates, figs, grapes, almonds, lemons, oranges, melons, pomegranates, apples, pears, &c. They have alſo flax and hemp, but little timber. The naval force conſiſts chiefly of rovers, who now and then take large prizes, eſpecially thoſe belonging to Sallee. The emperor is abſolute, his will being a law, and he often exerciſes great cruelties. His uſual taxes are, one tenth of the goods of his Mahometan ſubjects, and ſix crowns a year of the Jews; but he often breaks through theſe rules, and ſeizes what he pleaſes. He can bring 100,000 men into the field, half of which are foot, and half horſe; but they are poorly armed, and know but little of the art of war.

MOROCCO, the capital of the kingdom of Morocco, ſeated in a beautiful plain, planted with palm-trees, formed by a chain of mountains on the N. having Mount Atlas, from which it is diſtant about 20 miles, on the S. and E. Though one of the capitals of the empire (for there are three, Morocco, Mequinez, and Fez) it has nothing to recommend it but it's great extent, and the royal palace. It is incloſed by remarkably ſtrong walls, built of tabby, the extent of which ſtill exiſts entire, and ſuppoſes a city which might contain 300,000 ſouls: they are flanked by ſquare towers, and ſurrounded by a wide and deep ditch. The moſques are more numerous than magnificent. The ſtreets are narrow, dirty, and irregular, and many of the houſes uninhabited, and falling to ruin. Thoſe which are decent are built of tabby, and incloſed in gardens; but the generality of them, which are no better than ruins of houſes heaped one upon another, ſerve only to harbour thieves, who lurk among them, in order to rob paſſengers. M. Chenier doubts whether Morocco contains 30,000 inhabitants, even when the court is there. The Jews, who are pretty numerous here, have a ſeparate town, walled in, and under the charge of an alcade, appointed by the emperor. It has two gates, which are regularly ſhut every evening at nine o'clock, after which no perſon can enter or depart, till they are opened the next morning. They have a market of their own; and when they enter the Mooriſh town, market, or palace, they are compelled to be barefooted. The palace is a very extenſive and ſolid building, with gates compoſed of Gothic arches, embelliſhed with ornaments in the Arabian taſte. Within the walls are various courts and gardens, elegantly laid out by European gardeners. Lat. 31. 12. N. lon. 6. 45. W.

MORON, a town of Seville, Andaluſia.

MOROTOI, one of the Sandwich Iſles, about 7 miles WNW. of Mowee. Yams are it's principal produce; yet it has but little wood. The coaſt on the ſouthern and weſtern ſides of the iſland forms ſeveral bays, which promiſe a tolerable ſhelter from the trade-winds. Lat. 21. 10. N. lon. 157. 14. W.

MOSAMBIQUE, a kingdom of Africa, on the coaſt of Zanguebar, ſo called from the capital of the ſame name, ſituated on an iſland, chief of 3 iſlands which form a part of the kingdom. This iſland is not more than 3 miles in length, and half as much in breadth, and is about 2 miles from the continent. It was ſeized by the Portugueſe in 1497, and they have kept poſſeſſion of it ever ſince. The town is large, well-built, and rich, with handſome churches and convents, and a fort or caſtle, the ſtrongeſt and beſt contrived the Portugueſe have on this coaſt. The ſoil, on the continent, is fat and fertile, and the country breeds numerous herds of cattle, and ſheep with large tails. They alſo ſwarm with ſtags, wild boars, other wild beaſts, and elephants ſo fierce and deſtructive, that the natives dare not ſtir far from their homes without lighted firebrands in their hands to frighten them away. The country has alſo rich mines of gold. The governor is changed every three years, and the Portugueſe export gold, ſilver, copper, elephants teeth, wax, rice, other proviſions, and ſlaves. Their ſhips always call here in going to the Eaſt Indies; and the harbour is ſo commodious, that whole fleets may anchor here, and refit their veſſels, as well as provide themſelves with all neceſſaries; and they have a large hoſpital for ſick ſailors. MOSCOVY. See RUSSIA.

MOSCOW, one of the moſt ancient and conſpicuous provinces of Ruſſia, formerly a duchy, but now one of the 41 governments of that vaſt empire. It's capital is of the ſame name.

MOSCOW, a large city of the Ruſſian empire, capital of the government of Moſcow, and formerly of the whole empire. It may be conſidered as a town built upon the Aſiatic model, but gradually becoming more and more European; exhibiting, in it's preſent ſtate, a motley mixture of diſcordant architecture. It is diſtributed into the following diviſions. 1. Kremlin, which is in the central and higheſt part of the city, ſurrounded by high walls of ſtone and brick, 2 miles in circumference. This diviſion is not deformed by wooden houſes. It contains the ancient palace of the czars, ſeveral churches, 2 convents, the patriarchal palace, and the arſenal now in ruins. 2. The Khitaigorod, or the Chineſe town, which is much larger than the Kremlin: it contains the univerſity, the printing-houſe, and many other public buildings, with all the tradeſmen's ſhops. The houſes are moſtly ſtuccoed, or white-waſhed; and it has the only ſtreet in Moſcow in which the houſes ſtand cloſe to each other, without any interval between them. 3. The Bielgorod, or White Town, which runs round the two preceding diviſions: it takes it's name from a white wall, by which it was formerly ſurrounded. 4. Semlainogorod, which environs all the other three quarters; and is so denominated from a circular rampart of earth by which it is encompassed. The two last-mentioned divisions exhibit a grotesque group of churches, convents, palaces, brick and wooden houses, and mean hovels. 5. The Sloboda, or suburbs, which form a vast exterior circle round all the parts already described, and are invested by a low rampart and ditch. These suburbs contain, besides buildings of all kinds, corn-fields, much open pasture, and some small lakes, which give rise to the Neglina. The Moskva, from which the city takes it's name, flows through it in a winding channel; but, excepting in Spring, is only navigable for rafts. It receives the Yausa in the Semlainogorod, and the Neglina at the western extremity of the Kremlin; but the beds of both these last-mentioned rivulets are, in summer, little better than dry channels. Moscow exhibits an astonishing degree of extent and variety, irregularity, and contrast. The streets, in general, are very long and broad. Some of them are paved; others, particularly in the suburbs, are formed with trunks of trees, or are boarded with planks like the floor of a room. Wretched hovels are blended with large palaces; cottages of one story stand next to the most stately mansions; many brick structures are covered with wooden tops: some of the wooden houses are painted; others have iron doors and roofs. Numerous churches appear in every quarter, built in a peculiar style of architecture; some with domes of copper, others of tin, gilt, or painted green, and many roofed with wood. In a word, some parts of this vast city have the appearance of a sequestered desert; others, quarters of a populous town; some of a poor village; others of a great capital. Moscow is certainly the largest town in Europe; it's circumference, within the rampart that incloses the suburbs, being 26 miles; but it is built in such a straggling manner, that it's population corresponds, in no degree, with it's extent. It has, however, been pretty well ascertained: it contains, within the ramparts, 300,000 souls. It is still the most populous city in the empire, notwithstanding the residence of the court is at Petersburgh. Here the chief nobles reside, who do not belong to the court: they here support a large number of retainers; gratify their taste for a ruder and more expensive magnificence in the ancient feudal style; and are not, as at Petersburgh, eclipsed by the superior splendor of the court. The places of public worship in Moscow, including chapels, amount to above 1000; of these, 484 are public churches, 199 of which are of brick, stuccoed, or white-washed; and the others of wood, painted red. Some of their bells are of a stupendous size: they hang in belfreys detached from the church, are fixed immovably to the beams, and are rung by a rope tied to the clapper. It has always been esteemed here a meritorious act of religion to present a church with bells; and the piety of the donor has been measured by their magnitude. Accordingly, Boris Godunuf, who gave a bell of 288,000 pounds to the cathedral of Moscow, was the most pious sovereign of Russia, till he was surpassed by the empress Anne, who presented a bell that weighs 432,000 pounds, and is the largest in the known world. Among the public institutions, in Moscow, is the Foundling Hospital, endowed, in 1764, by Catharine, and supported by voluntary contributions; to encourage which, she granted to all benefactors some valuable privileges, in proportion to the extent of their liberality; and, it is remarkable, that a private merchant, named Dimidof, has expended on this charity 200,000l. The gardens hereabouts yield the famous transparent apple, called by the Russians Naliwi, with variety of other fruits. Moscow is the centre of the inland commerce of Russia, particularly connecting the trade between Europe and Siberia. The navigation to this city is formed solely by the Moskva, which, falling into the Occa, near Colomna, communicates, by that river, with the Volga. But as the Moskva is navigable in the spring only, upon the melting of the snows, the principal merchandise is conveyed upon sledges in winter. This city is 460 miles SE. of Petersburgh, and 1200 N. by E. of Constantinople. Lat. 55. 45. N. lon. 37. 31. E.

MOSQUITO,

MOSQUITO SHORE, a country of Mexico, in North America, lying on the Atlantic Ocean. It is bounded on the N. and E. by the ſea, on the S. by Nicaragua, and on the W. by Honduras. In magnitude it exceeds the kingdom of Portugal; is well watered by navigable rivers and lakes; abounds in fiſh, game, and proviſions of all ſorts; furniſhes every neceſſary for raiſing cattle and ſtock on plantations of every kind, and to any extent; and is clothed with woods, producing timber for every uſe and purpoſe at land or ſea. The ſoil is ſuperior to that of the Weſt India Iſlands; the air and climate are more ſalubrious; and the deſtructive ravages of hurricanes and earthquakes have never been known here. The Spaniards have no ſettlements in the Moſquito country, and reckon it a part of Honduras. When they firſt invaded this part of Mexico, they maſſacred moſt of the natives, which gave thoſe that eſcaped into the inacceſſible part of the country, an inſuperable averſion to them; and they have always appeared ready to join Europeans that came upon their coaſts, and particularly the Engliſh, who frequently came hither againſt the Spaniards. The Moſquito-men being excellent markſmen, the Engliſh employed them in ſtriking the maratee fiſh, &c. and many of the Moſquito Indians went to Jamaica, and ſailed with the Engliſh in their voyages. They are ſo ſituated between moraſſes and inacceſſible mountains, and a coaſt full of rocks and ſhoals, that no attempts againſt them by the Spaniards, whom they mortally hate, could ever ſucceed. The connection between the Engliſh and the Moſquitos no longer exiſts. By a convention with Spain, in 1786, the former, in conſideration of certain ceſſions on the coaſt of Honduras, agreed to evacuate this country totally; and it is now a province of Spain. MOULTAN, one of the moſt ancient cities in Hindooſtan, capital of the province of the ſame name. Thevenot deſcribes it as a city of ſmall extent, for a capital, but ſtrongly fortified, having a pagoda temple much reverenced. He deſcribes the river that led to Moultan as having been partly choked up in his time, (1665) and that this had greatly leſſened it's trade. He alſo takes notice of a particular ſect of Hindoos in this city, called Catry; a tribe, which he elſewhere explains to mean Rajpoots, or warriors; that is the Kuttry tribe, which Rennel ſuppoſes to be the Catheri, or Cathei, with whom Alexander warred on the banks of the Malli. The king of Candahar keeps a garriſon here. The country of Moultan has Lahore to the N. Delhi to the E. Agimere and Sindy to the S. and Perſia to the W. Moultan is ſeated on the Chunaub, 200 miles SW. of Lahore, and 800 miles from the ſea by the courſe of the river. Lat. 29. 52. N. lon. 70. 40. E.

MULHAUSEN, a town of Alſace, which though ſituated at the diſtance of ſome miles from the frontiers of Swiſſerland, and inſulated by the French dept. of the Upper Rhine, is not only in alliance with the Helvetic confederacy, but is conſidered and reſpected as a part of it, and entitled to all the privileges enjoyed by that body. The walls of the town incloſe a circumference of not more than two miles; and it's whole territory is confined within a precinct of eight miles. This little republic maintained it's privileges, which had been granted by the emperors in the feudal times, by contracting alliances, at different periods, with Baſil, Straſburg, the towns of Alſace and Suabia, Bern, Friburg, and Soleure. In 1515, it was received into the Helvetic confederacy; which league has preſerved it's liberty and independence from the encroachments of the empire, on the one hand, and, on the other, from the attacks of France. The town contains about 6000 inhabitants, who are Proteſtants; and there are 2000 people in it's adjacent villages. It owes it's preſent flouriſhing ſtate to it's manufactures, which are chiefly of printed linens and cottons. The government is ariſto-democratical. The ſupreme power reſides in the great and little council, conſiſting together of 78 perſons, and drawn from the burghers, whoſe number amounts to 700, diſtributed into 6 tribes. Mulhauſen is 15 miles NW. of Baſle.

MUNICH, one of the moſt pleaſant and populous cities in Germany, capital of the duchy of Bavaria. The houſes are high, and the ſtreets large and ſpacious, with canals in many of them. The palace of the late electors of Bavaria, which now belongs to the elector palatine of the Rhine, as Duke of Bavaria, is a ſtupendous ſtructure, magnificently adorned. The cabinet of curioſities, in which are 200 marble ſtatues and buſts of Roman emperors, and ſome other antiques, moſtly brought from Italy, the muſeum, the library, and the ducal gardens, attract the attention of travellers. The cathedral contains 25 chapels, and 30 altars; but the two ſteeples, and the tomb of one of the emperors, of black marble, adorned with ſtatues of bronze, are the moſt remarkable things belonging to it. There are many other fine buildings, both public and private, in this city. The market-place is very beautiful; and here are manufactures of ſilk, velvet, woollen-cloth, and tapeſtry. MUNSTER, a large, rich, and populous city in Weſtphalia, capital of the biſhopric of the ſame name. The cathedral is a ſtately fabric, and the houſes, in general, are of freeſtone and well-built. The treaty of Weſtphalia was concluded here in 1648. It is ſeated on the river Aa, 70 miles N. by E. of Cologne, 77 S. by W. of Bremen, and 77 NW. of Caſſel. Lat. 51. 49. N. lon. 7. 49. E.

MUNSTER, a town in the dept. of Upper Rhine, 9 miles WSW. of Colmar.

MUNSTER, the name of ſeveral towns of Germany.

MUNSTER, one of the four provinces of Ireland; bounded on the N. and NE. by Leinſter and Connaught, and on all other ſides by the ocean. It is about 135 miles in length and 120 in breadth. The chief rivers are the Suir, the Audluffe, the Lee, the Bande, the Leane, and the Caſhon. There are a great many bays and harbours, and many rich towns, and the air is mild and temperate. Some places are mountainous, but the valleys are embelliſhed with corn-fields. The moſt general commodities are corn, cattle, wood, wool, and fiſh. It contains the counties of Clare, Tipperary, Waterford, Cork, Limerick, and Kerry. The principal town of Cork.

MUNSTERBURG, a principality of Schweidnitz; and a town of the principality of Munſterburg; both in Sileſia.

MUNSTER-MEINFELT, a town of Treves, 12 miles WSW. of Coblentz.

MURANO, an iſland and town of Italy, about 1 mile from Venice, formerly a very flouriſhing place. The great manufactories of looking-glaſs, induce ſtrangers to viſit this place, which formerly ſerved all Europe with looking glaſſes. Inſtead of being caſt, as in England and France, the Murano mirrors are all blown in the manner of bottles.

MURCIA, a province, formerly a kingdom of Spain, on the coaſt of the Mediterranean. It is about 115 miles in length and 100 in breadth. It's principal river is Segura. The ſoil is dry, becauſe it ſeldom rains here, and therefore produces little corn or wine; but there is plenty of oranges, citrons, lemons, olives, almonds, mulberries, rice, pulſe, ſugar, ſilk, and grain. The air is very healthful, and the principal town is of the ſame name.

MURCIA, a large, handſome, and populous city of Spain, capital of a province of the ſame name. It was a Roman city, named Venus Myrtia. It has a ſuperb cathedral, the ſtairs of whoſe ſteeple are ſo contrived, that a man may ride up to the top either on horſeback or in a coach. The inns here, like thoſe in moſt of the great roads, &c. of Spain, afford but wretched lodgings and accommodations, being generally kept by Gitans, or Gypſies. It is ſeated in a plain, which abounds in fine gardens about the city, in which are the beſt fruits in Spain. It is ſeated on the river Segura, 96 miles SSW. of Valencia, and 212 SE. of Madrid. Lat. 38. 2. N. lon. 1. 14. W.

MUYDEN, a town of N. Holland.

MYCENE, formerly the capital of a famous kingdom in the Morea, but now reduced to a ſmall village.

MYCONI, an iſland of the Archipelago, about 24 miles in circumference. The harbour is very open, and deep enough for the largeſt ſhips, where they may ride ſecure from the N. wind. There are about 500 ſeafaring men in the iſland, who belong to about 150 veſſels, and are accounted pretty good ſailors. The ſoil is dry, but the mountains are of no great height. Water is very ſcarce in ſummer; but in the town there is a large well, which is the only one in the iſland. The iſland produces little wheat, but plenty of partridges, quails, woodcocks, turtle-doves, rabbits, and beccaficos; beſide which there are excellent grapes and figs. The inhabitants, who are about 3000, are almoſt all Greeks, and have fifty churches, chapels, or monaſteries. Two or three European nations have conſuls here, and yet very few ſhips frequent it. Lat. 37. 28. N. lon. 25. 51. E.

MYSORE, a town of Hindooſtan, anciently the capital of the kingdom ſo called, 10 miles S. of Seringapatam, the preſent capital.

MYSORE, a kingdom in the peninſula of Hindooſtan, ſubject to Tippoo Sultan, who ſtyles himſelf regent of the country. It includes generally, beſide the Myſore Proper, the countries of Bednore, Coimbettore, Canara, and Dindigul; beſide the conqueſts of his late father Hyder Ally (who uſurped the throne) to the northward; namely, Meritz, Soonda, Chitteldroog, Harponelly, Sanore Bancapour, Roydroog, Gooty, Condanore, Cunoul, and Cuddapah. The extent of Tippoo's territory, from N. to S. is near 500 miles; it's breadth, in the wideſt place (the N. part of the peninſula) 330 miles, but proceeding to the S. it diminiſhes, till it ends in a point. By the peace of 1782, Hyder Ally was to relinquiſh all but his ancient poſſeſſions. How far his ſucceſſor fulfilled the terms of that treaty, cannot eaſily be aſcertained; but, on the termination of the late war, that prince agreed, beſides paying a large ſum of money, to cede one half of his dominions to the Engliſh E. India Company, and their allies, the Mahrattas, and the nizam of the Deccan. The military eſtabliſhment of Tippoo is reckoned at 155,000 men, of whom about 70,000 are regular troops, of a claſs much ſuperior to any force ever before raiſed and diſciplined by a native of India. A deſcendant of the Hindoo king of Myſore, whom Hyder dethroned, is living, and is kept a ſtate priſoner at Seringapatam. The country, in general, is dry, rugged, mountainous, and barren; inſomuch, that ſuſtenance for men and animals cannot be raiſed upon it but by the moſt perſevering induſtry in it's inhabitants.

Myſſiſe, Yorkſhire, NW. of Rippon. Mythe, Glouceſ. in Tewkeſbury pariſh. Myton, Yorkſ. between Boroughbridge and Tenmile-Hill, where the Swale leaps into the Ure, as it were, from a precipice.

NAGOLD, in Wirtemburg, Suabia.

NAGPOUR, the capital of part of Berar, in Hindooſtan, ſubject to Moodajee Boonſlah, the chief of the Eaſtern Mahrattas. It is a city of modern date; but, though extenſive and populous, is poorly built; and, excepting a ſmall citadel of no ſtrength, is open and defenceleſs. The country around it is fertile and well cultivated. It is 488 miles W. by S. of Calcutta. Lat. 21. 8. N. lon. 79. 46. E.

NAHAR-MALEK, a town of Aſia, in Irac-Arabia, ſeated near the Euphrates.

NAHARVAN, a town of Aſia, in Irac-Arabia, 5 miles from Kufah.

NAJERA, a town of Old Caſtile.

Nailby, Weſtmorl. near Kirby Steven. Nailefworth, Glouceſterſhire, near Minching Hampton.

NAIRNE, a ſea-port of Nairneſhire, ſeated at the entrance of the Frith of Murray, 10 miles E. of Inverneſs, and 104 N. of Edinburgh.

NAIRNESHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by the Frith of Murray, and incloſed on every other ſide by the counties of Inverneſs and Murray. It's extent from N. to S. is about 15 miles, and it's breadth about 12. The ſoil, though rocky, is rich, and, in general, well cultivated. Nairne is the county town.

NAKSIVAN, a town of Perſian Armenia, capital of a province of the ſame name, with an archbiſhop's ſee, ſome conſiderable bazars, caravanſeras, public baths, and other buildings. It is ſuppoſed to have been the ancient Artaxata, and once contained 40,000 houſes. In the laſt century, here were 2000 houſes. It is 90 miles SE. of Erivan.

Nallers, Dorſetſ. in Aſkerwel-pariſh.

NAMPHIO. See NANFIO.

*NAMPTWICH, a large, well-built town of Cheſhire, ſeated on the river Weever, which runs through the middle of it. Here are ſalt-ſprings, which lie on the banks of a freſh-water ſtream, from which they make great quantities of white ſalt. The principal dairies of Cheſhire are about this town. It is 26 miles SE. of Cheſter, and 162 NW. of London. Market on Saturday.

NAMUR, a city and county of the Netherlands. It has a ſtrong caſtle built in the middle of the town, on a ſharp rock, and is defended by many other conſiderable forts. In 1692, it was beſieged by Lewis XIV. and the Duke of Luxemburg, with an army of 120,000 men, and ſurrendered in ſight of King William's army. Vauban and Cohorn, the two greateſt engineers Europe ever bred, exhauſted the whole ſcience of attack and defence in the ſiege of this place. Cohorn was dangerouſly wounded in the defence of Fort Cohorn. Namur was, however, retaken by King William, in 1695, after many dreadful attacks. The trenches were opened on July 11, and the citadel ſurrendered on the firſt day of September. The garriſon, conſiſting of 16,000 men, was commanded by Marſhal Boufflers. It is ſeated at the confluence of the Maeſe and Sambre, 25 miles SW. of Liege. Lat. 50. 29. N. lon. 4. 50. E.

NAMUR, a county of the Netherlands, lying between the rivers Sambre and Maeſe. It is pretty fertile; has ſeveral forelts, marble quarries, and mines of iron, lead, and coal, and is about 30 miles in length and 20 in breadth. Namur is the capital.

NANCI, a large and handſome city, alternately capital with Luneville, of the depart. of Meurthe. It contains about 34,000 inhabitants, and is divided into the Old and New Town, which are ſeparated by a canal. The firſt, though irregularly built, is rich and populous, and contains the palace of the ancient dukes of Lorrain. The New Town, whoſe ſtreets are as ſtraight as a line, was already one of the fineſt in Europe, before the magnificent works with which Staniſlaus I. titular king of Poland, and duke of Lorrain, enriched it. Before the revolution, it had an univerſity, an academy of ſciences, and a medical college. It is 10 miles E. of Toul, and 25 S. of Metz. Lat. 48. 41. N. lon. 6. 17. E.

Naneby, Leiceſterſ. NE. of Boſworth. Naneby, S. of Lincoln. Nanewarth, Weſtmorl. near Penrith.

NANFIO, an iſland of the Archipelago, a little to the N. of the Iſland of Santorino, 16 miles in circumference. It has no harbour; the mountains are nothing but bare rocks, and there are not ſprings ſufficient to water the fields. The inhabitants are all Greeks, an indolent ſort of people, whoſe trade conſiſts in onions, wax, and honey. There are vaſt numbers of partridges, whoſe eggs they endeavour to deſtroy every year, to preſerve the corn, yet there are ſtill great numbers of them. The ruins of the temple of Apollo are yet to be ſeen, and conſiſt chiefly of marble columns. Lat. 36. 27. N. lon. 26. 10. E.

NANGASAKI, a town of Japan, on the W. coaſt of the Iſland of Ximo, with a well-frequented harbour. It is the only port of Japan open to foreigners. The inhabitants carry on a great trade with the Chineſe and Dutch. The latter are never ſuffered to come into the city, unleſs when their ſhips arrive, and then they deliver up their guns, helms, and ſails, as pledges of their good behaviour. Lat. 32. 32. N. lon. 130. 52. E.

NANKING, a city of China, capital of the province of Kiangnan. It is the largeſt in China, being 17 miles in circumference, and about 3 miles diſtant from the great river Yang-tiſe-Chiang, from which canals are cut, ſo large, that veſſels may enter the town. This place is greatly fallen from it's ancient ſplendor; for it had a magnificent palace, which is quite deſtroyed, as well as many ancient monuments. A third part of the city is deſolate, but the reſt is well inhabited. The ſtreets are narrow, but handſome and well paved, and on each ſide are ſhops, neatly furniſhed. The public buildings are mean, except a few temples, the city gates, and the famous tower of porcelain, 200 feet high, and covered with green varniſhed tiles. They have ſeveral manufactures in ſilk and wool. The number of the inhabitants is ſaid to be 1,000,000, without comprehending the garriſon of 40,000 men.

men. Here the phyſicians have their principal academy. It is ſeated on the river Kiam, 500 miles SSE. of Peking. Lat. 32. 4. N. lon. 119. 25. E.

Nans, Cornwall, W. of Redruth.

NANTES, an ancient town in the dept. of Lower Loire. It is one of the moſt conſiderable places in the kingdom, and contains the richeſt merchants. The bridges over the river Loire, in which are ſome iſlands, are almoſt a league in length. The ſuburbs are ſo large, that they exceed the city. The inhabitants are computed at 80,000. Before the revolution, here was an univerſity, a ſociety of agriculture and arts, and a ſchool of anatomy and ſurgery; the merchants, alſo, had commonly, on their own account, more than 120 ſhips for Guinea, the French Weſt-India iſlands, Spain, and the Spaniſh colonies; indeed this port, in reſpect of the man-trade, might, before that time be conſidered as the Liverpool of France; but it's Guinea merchants piqued themſelves a little on their ſuperior humanity; 'for, while,' ſaid they, 'the Engliſh and Dutch, wanting to be quit of their negroes, (who N. B. were inſured like any other goods) make them walk the plank, or throw them overboard; we only drop a little corroſive ſublimate into their victuals, when they ſicken and die without knowing what hurted them.' Veſſels were fitted out here for the cod-fiſhery in N. America; and, Nantes has had a conſiderable ſhare in the commerce with the United States. A great quantity of ſalt is made in the territory of Nantes; both at the Bay of Bourgneuf, and in the ſalt-marſhes of Guerande and Croiſic. Large veſſels can come no higher than Paimbœuf, which is ſome miles below Nantes. It is 37 miles SW. of Angers, and 217 SW. of Paris. Lat. 47. 13. N. lon. 1. 28. W.

Nantenane, in Limerick, Munſter.

Nantgiſſel Cove, Cornw. at the Land's End. Nantglin, Denbighſh. N. Wales.

NANTUA, a town in the dept. of Ain, ſituated at the extremity of a great lake of the ſame name, 18 miles SSE. of Bourg.

NANTUCKET, an iſland of N. America, in the ſtate of Maſſachuſets, of which it is a county. It lies to the S. of Cape Cod, and had once the moſt conſiderable whale fiſhery on the coaſt; but it was almoſt ruined by the American war. It has begun, however, to revive lately; the greateſt part of the inhabitants being whalers and fiſhermen. As the iſland is low, ſandy, and barren, it is calculated for ſuch people only as are willing to depend almoſt entirely on the watery element for ſubſiſtence. It has but one town, called Sherburne. The inhabitants are moſtly quakers. Lat. 41. 0. N. lon. 70. 0. W.

NANTWICH. See NAMPTWICH.

NAPAUL, a province of Hindooſtan, between the NW. part of Bengal and the mountainous ridge of Himmaleh; it is ſubject to Thibet. Catmandu is the capital.

NAPLES, an ancient, large, rich, and trading city of Lavora, in Italy, one of the fineſt in the world, capital of a kingdom of the ſame name, with an univerſity. It is ſeated at the bottom of the Bay of Naples, and is built in the form of a vaſt amphitheatre, ſloping from the hills to the ſea. Although the ſtyle of architecture is inferior to what prevails at Rome, and it cannot vie with that city in the number or magnificence of the churches, palaces, and public buildings, the private houſes, in general, are better built, and the ſtreets are broader and better paved. No ſtreet in Rome equals in beauty the Strada di Toledo at Naples; nor can any of them be compared with the beautiful ſtreets which lie open to the bay, and here the exceſſive heat of the ſun is often tempered with the ſea-breezes, and with gales wafting the perfumes of the Campagna Felice. The houſes, in general, are five or ſix ſtories in height, and flat at the top; on which are placed numbers of flower-vaſes, or fruit-trees, in boxes of earth, producing a very gay and agreeable effect. On the mountain, St. Elmo, in a moſt pleaſant ſituation, is a convent of Carthuſians, on which much expence has been laviſhed, to render the building, the apartments, and the gardens, equal to the ſituation. Naples is admirably ſituated for commerce, and no kingdom produces the neceſſaries and luxuries of life in greater profuſion; and yet trade is but in a languiſhing condition. The beſt ſilks come from Lyons, and the beſt woollen cloths from England. The articles exported are ſilk and ſilk ſtuffs, oil, ſulphur, manna, roſemary, aniſe-ſeed, reſin, tartar, figs, ſoap, eſſences, ſilk waiſtcoats, ſnuff-boxes of tortoiſe-ſhell, and of the lava of Mount Veſuvius; tables, and ornamental furniture, of marble. They are thought to embroider here better than in France; and their macaroni is preferred to that of any made in any part of Italy. They excel alſo in liquors and confections; particularly in one kind of confection, called Diabolonis, which is ſold at a very high price, and of a very hot and ſtimulating nature. The inhabitants are computed to be 350,000, which is very probable; for though Naples is not one third of the size of London, yet many of the ſtreets are here more crowded than the Strand; and a great proportion of the pooreſt ſort are obliged to ſpend the night in them, as well as the day, for want of habitations. There is not a city in the world, perhaps, with the ſame number of inhabitants, in which ſo few contribute to the wealth of the community by uſeful and productive labour, as Naples; the number of prieſts and monks, of whom there are 10,000, fidlers, lawyers, of whom there are 8000, footmen, and lazzaronis, is immenſe; and the laſt alone are computed at 40,000. The king, it is ſaid, counts a hundred perſons with the title of prince, and ſtill a greater number with that of duke, among his ſubjects. Six or ſeven of theſe have eſtates from 10 to 13,000l. a year; a conſiderable number have poſſeſſions to about half that amount; and the annual revenue of many is not above one or two thouſand pounds. The inferior orders of nobility are much poorer; many counts and marquiſſes not having above three or four hundred pounds a year paternal eſtate; many ſtill leſs; and not a few enjoy the title without any eſtate whatever. Although the churches and convents of Naples are not to be compared with thoſe of Rome in point of architecture, they ſurpaſs them in rich jewels, and in the quantity of ſilver and golden crucifixes, veſſels, and other ornaments. The cathedral is a grand Gothic edifice, and of all the palaces, that of the king is not only the moſt magnificent, but in the beſt ſtyle of architecture. The monaſteries and convents of both ſexes are computed at 149; beſides which there are 34 houſes for poor boys, girls, and women; 11 hoſpitals, 5 ſeminaries for eccleſiaſtics, 4 capital churches; 32 pariſh churches; 70 other churches and chapels; and about 130 oratories, or chapels of religious fraternities. The harbour, which is ſpacious, is protected by a mole; and the Bay of Naples is one of the fineſt in the world, being almoſt of a circular figure, about 30 miles in diameter, ſhut out from the Mediterranean by the Iſland of Caprea, and three parts of it ſheltered by a circuit of woods and mountains. Naples is 110 miles SSE of Rome. Lat. 40. 55. N. lon. 14. 20. E.

NAPLES, a kingdom of Italy, bounded on the NW. by the pope's territories; on the S. and W. by the Mediterranean; and on the E. by the Adriatic. It's greateſt length, from NW. to SE. is upwards of 300 miles, and from NE. to SW. from 96 to 100. It is divided into 12 provinces; namely, Terra di Lavora, which was the ancient Campania Felix, and of which the city of Naples is the capital; Principato Citeriore and Ulteriore (hither and farther); Moliſe; Baſilicata; Calabria Citeriore and Ulteriore; Abruzzo Citeriore and Ulteriore; Capitinata; Terra di Bari; and Terra di Otranto; the laſt three forming the ancient Apulia, (now called Puglio) on the E. ſide of the kingdom. The climate is extremely hot in ſummer; but the moſt diſagreeable part of the climate is the ſirroc, or SE. wind, which is very common in ſpring, and is ſtill more relaxing. In winter there is ſeldom any ice or ſnow, except on the mountains. On account of it's fertility, the country has been termed a terreſtrial paradiſe: it abounds with all ſorts of grain, the fineſt fruits and vegetables of all kinds, with rice, flax, oil, wine, ſaffron, and manna. It affords alſo alum, vitriol, ſulphur, rock-cryſtal, marble, and ſeveral ſorts of minerals, together with fine wool and ſilk. Beſides theſe products, and the manufactures ſpoken of in the account of the city of Naples, waiſtcoats, caps, ſtockings, and gloves are alſo made of the hair or filaments of a ſhell-fiſh, which are warmer than thoſe of wool, and of a beautiful gloſſy green. The principal mountains are the Apennines, which traverſe it from S. to N. and the celebrated volcano, Mount Veſuvius. One of the greateſt inconveniences to which this kingdom is expoſed is earthquakes, (See CALABRIA) which the eruptions of Mount Veſuvius contribute in ſome meaſure to prevent. The eſtabliſhed religion is the Romiſh; and the clergy and convents poſſeſs two thirds of the whole kingdom; but the Jews are allowed to ſettle here. The inhabitants of this country have, at all times, borne but an indifferent character among other nations; gluttony is here a predominant vice, while inſtances of ebriety are ſaid to be comparatively rare. In the female ſex, the paſſion for finery is almoſt ſuperior to any other; and chaſtity is not accounted the characteriſtic virtue of the country. The breach of the conjugal vow ſometimes occaſions quarrels and aſſaſſinations among people of an inferior rank; and, in the metropolis, aſſaſſinations are often perpetrated from much leſs cogent motives. Theſe vices are attributed to the ſlavery and oppreſſion under which they groan, and to a radical defect in the adminiſtration of juſtice. In 1734, the Spaniards made themſelves maſters of Naples and Sicily, for the Infant Don Carlos, and in 1736, the emperor, by a formal inſtrument, ceded both theſe kingdoms to his heirs male and female, and in default thereof, to his younger brothers and ſiſters.

NAPOLI-DI-MALVASIA, a ſea-port of Turkey in Europe, in the Morea; ſeated on the promontory of Malvaſia, at the entrance of the Gulf of Napoli-di-Romania. It has a fine harbour, and a long wooden bridge, which joins it to Terra-Firma, and was formerly noted for a temple of Eſculapius. Lat. 36. 57. N. lon. 23. 22. E.

NAPOLI-DI ROMANIA, a ſea-port of Turkey in Europe, in the Morea; ſeated at the bottom of a bay of the ſame name. It has a large harbour, with a narrow mouth, through which one ſhip only can enter at a time. It is a large place inhabited by Greeks, Turks, and Jews; and is 56 miles SW. of Setines. Lat. 37. 36. NATOLIA, a country formerly called Aſia Minor; the moſt weſtern part of Turkey in Aſia, and is a large peninſula, extending from the river Euphrates, as far as the Archipelago, the Sea of Marmora, the Dardanelles, and the Strait of Conſtantinople, which ſeparate it from Europe on the W. It is bounded on the N. by the Black Sea, and on the S. by the Mediterranean. In it's modern diviſion it comprehends the provinces of Anatolia, Caramania, Amaſia, and Aleculia. Anciently it contained Bithynia, Paphlagonia, Galatia, Phrygia, Myſia, Eolia, Ionia, Lydia, Caria, Doris, Piſidia, Lycia, and Pamphylia. It is now governed by a bergieberg, who reſides at Kintaja, under whom are ſeveral ſangiacks. The air is temperate and wholeſome, the ſoil, in general, fertile, and the commerce conſiderable. It is croſſed by a chain of mountains, formerly called Taurus, from E. to W. and watered by a great number of rivers.

NATOLIA PROPER. See ANATOLIA.

NAVARINO, a large and populous town on the W. coaſt of the Morea, with an excellent harbour, the beſt frequented in the whole peninſula, and defended by a citadel. It is 8 miles NE. of Modon, and 17 NW. of Coron.

NAVARRE, a country of Europe, and formerly a kingdom, lying partly in France and partly in Spain, and divided into the Upper and Lower. The Upper belongs to Spain, and is about 54 miles in length and 45 in breadth. The air is more mild, temperate, and wholeſome, than in the neighbouring provinces of Spain; and, though a mountainous country, it is pretty fertile, abounding in game, and in iron-mines. The inhabitants are polite, hardy, lively, and laborious. It is divided into five juriſdictions, whoſe capital towns are Pampeluna, Eſtella, Tudela, Olita, and St. Gueſca. Lower Navarre is ſubject to France, and now forms the department of the Lower Pyrenees. It is ſeparated from Spaniſh Navarre by the Pyrenees, and is a mountainous, barren country, about 20 miles in length and 12 in breadth.

NAXKOW, a town of Denmark, in the Iſle of Laland, with a harbour commodious for trade, and a plentiful fiſhery. It is 60 miles SW. of Copenhagen. Lat. 54. 52. N. lon. 11. 31. E.

NAXOS, or NAXIA, the moſt fertile iſland in the Archipelago, about 50 miles in circumference. The whole iſland is covered with orange, olive, lemon, cedar, citron, pomegranate, fig, and mulberry-trees, and their wine ſtill maintains it's former excellence. It has no harbour, and yet they carry on a conſiderable trade in barley, ley, wine, figs, cotton, ſilk, flax, cheeſe, ſalt, oxen, ſheep, mules, and oil. They burn only oil of maſtick, though olive-oil is exceedingly cheap. It is inhabited both by Greeks and Latins, and contains about 8000 inhabitants, and between 40 and 50 villages. The higheſt mountain is Zia, which ſignifies the mountain of Jupiter. They have here a mine of emery, which is ſo common, and ſo cheap, that the Engliſh often uſe it for ballaſt. The female dreſs of this iſland has ſomething truly abſurd in it's appearance. The two wings of black velvet, which they fix behind to their ſhoulders, are altogether prepoſterous. The Greek women at Smyrna cover their breaſt with a ſingle gauze: at Naxia they wear a heavy ſtomacher or breaſt-piece of velvet, covered with embroidery and ſmall pearls; and they wear round their loins a ſort of circular ſhelf, calculated to ſupport the ends of a kind of laced lappets hanging down from their ſhoulders. They add to this romantic cumberous dreſs, all the coquetry of behaviour they can aſſume; they paint, blacken their eye-brows and eye-laſhes, and cover their face with patches, made of the leaves of a black ſhining talc which they find in the iſland; and in the form of their patches, or pretended blotch-covers, they betray a very great fickleneſs; they ſometimes cut them triangularly, ſometimes like a ſtar; but a patch like a creſcent, placed between the eyes, is thought to be irreſiſtibly beautiful. To finiſh the character of theſe fantaſtic creatures, it may may be added, that they are ſo vain, that when they return out of the country to their town-houſes, they will have perhaps 40 women in their train, ſome on aſſes, and ſome on foot; one of whom carries a napkin or two; a ſecond, a petticoat; a third, a pair of ſtockings, and ſo on: all which compoſes a very whimſical kind of proceſſion to ſtrangers.

NAXOS, or NAXIA, a conſiderable town, capital of the Iſle of Naxos, over againſt the Iſle of Paros, with two archbiſhop's ſees, the one Greek and the other Latin. It is one of the moſt beautiful places in the Grecian archipelago. Lat. 37. 8. N. lon. 25. 59. E.

NEGROLAND, or NIGRITIA, a vaſt extent of country in Africa, through which the river Niger is ſuppoſed to run. It has a great deſert, called Zahara on the N. and ſtretches far to the S. but little more is known of the inland parts than the names of ſome of the towns and kingdoms of which it is compoſed. However, the Europeans have many ſettlements on the coaſt, where they barter European goods for ſlaves, gold-duſt, elephants' teeth, gums, and drugs.

NEGROPONT, an iſland of Turkey, in Europe, near 100 miles long, and from 8 to 16 broad, with a harbour, which is commonly the ſtation of the Turkiſh ſhips. It abounds in corn, wine, fruits, fleſh, fiſh, and fowls. The walls of the town of the ſame name, in which the Turks and Jews reſide, are two miles and a half in circumference, but the ſuburbs, where the Chriſtians live, are much larger. The captain-baſhaw reſides here, who commands the whole iſland. The bridge reaches from the city to the continent, acroſs the Strait of Negropont. This ſtrait was formerly called Euripus, and was much celebrated for the ſtated irregularities of it's motions. This irregularity has baffled the reſearches of both ancients and moderns, to account for it ſatisfactorily. In the firſt 8 days of the month, from the 14th to the 20th, and alſo in the 3 laſt days, the tide is regular both in it's ebb and flood, but on the other days, the ebb and flood return 11, 12, 13, and 14 times within 24 or 25 hours. It has a Greek archbiſhop's ſee, and proviſions here are very cheap. It was taken from the Venetians in 1469, by the Turks, after a ſix months ſiege, at the coſt of 40,000 men. The Venetians attempted to retake it in 1688, without effect. It is 30 miles NE. of Setines, or Athens, and 260 SW. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 38. 30. N. lon. 24. 8. E.

NETHERLANDS, or the LOW COUNTRIES, a large country of Europe, anciently called Gallia Belgica. In the fifth century the Francs, a people of Germany, coming to ſettle in Gaul, founded a new kingdom, to which they gave the name of France. In the 9th century, the ſons of the emperor, Louis the Pious, having divided the dominions of their father, who poſſeſſed Germany, France, and Italy, a new kingdom was formed, comprehending Germany and France, which extended from the Mediterranean to the ocean, and contained a part of the Netherlands. It was called Lotharia, but did not long ſubſiſt; for it was ſoon divided into two; and that ſeated near the Mediterranean was called the kingdom of Burgundy; while the other, to the N. had the name of Auſtraſia. Neither did this laſt continue long, it being divided into ſmall provinces under different names, which ſtill depended on the empire of Germany, and were called Lower Germany. In proceſs of time, the houſe of Burgundy purchaſed many of them, and was about to form them, with Burgundy, into a kingdom; but Charles the Bold, the laſt duke of Burgundy, being killed by the Swiſs in 1477, his part of the Netherlands devolved on his only child and heireſs, Mary; by whoſe marriage with the emperor Maximilian, the Netherlands were an acquiſition to the houſe of Auſtria. The emperor Charles V. king of Spain, in 1555, abdicated the ſovereignty of the Netherlands, and, ſometime afterward, the Spaniſh crown, in favour of his ſon Philip. The tyranny of this cruel bigot, Philip II. who endeavoured to introduce the inquiſition into the Low Countries, with the barbarities exerciſed by the duke of Alva, exaſperated the people to ſuch a degree, that they threw off the Spaniſh yoke, and, under the conduct of William I. prince of Orange, formed the famous league of Utrecht, in 1579, which proved the foundation of the republic of the United Provinces. The provinces which compoſe this republic, are thoſe of Holland, Weſt Frieſland, Guelderland, Utrecht, Overyſſel, and Groningen. After a long and bloody war, the Spaniards agreed to a truce of 12 years, with the United Provinces, the very firſt article of which acknowledged them to be free and independent ſtates. The war was renewed in 1621, till at laſt, by the treaty of Weſtphalia, in 1648, Philip IV. of Spain expreſsly renounced all claim to ſovereignty over the United Provinces. The other 10 provinces, however, returned under the dominion of Spain, but with very favourable ſtipulations with reſpect to their ancient laws and liberties. On the death of Charles II. king of Spain, and the ſubſequent acceſſion of a branch of the houſe of Bourbon, to that monarchy, it was ſtipulated, by the treaty of Baden, in 1714, that the Spaniſh Netherlands ſhould return to the German branch of the houſe of Auſtria, in which they remained till the reign of Joſeph II. but not without diminution and diſmemberment; for ſome conſiderable parts were obtained by conqueſt, or ceſſion, by the French and Dutch. The only territories that belonged entirely to Auſtria, were thoſe of Namur and Mechlin. The Dutch had part of Brabant, Limburg, and Flanders. The French had Artois and the Cambreſis, and they had likewiſe part of Luxemburg, Flanders, and Hainault. But on the other hand, part of Guelderland, one of the Seven United Provinces, belonged to Auſtria, and another to Pruſſia. The emperor, Charles VI. left the Auſtrian Netherlands to his daughter Maria Thereſa, queen of Hungary and Bohemia, who married Francis, grand duke of Tuſcany, afterward emperor. During her reign, no ſovereign could be more beloved; no people more content and happy. But her ſon Joſeph II. having projected many innovations in the conſtitution, both in church and ſtate, and enforcing them with violence, an univerſal ſpirit of revolt broke out; an army of 40,000 men roſe, as if by magic, to ſupport the renunciation of all allegiance, which ſeveral of the provinces now openly made; a congreſs was formed from the different ſtates, in whom the ſupreme government was veſted; and by the end of 1790, the Auſtrian forces were entirely expelled from the Netherlands. The new government, however, was not of long duration. Leopold II. (the ſucceſſor of the capricious Joſeph, who died in the early part of 1790) partly by force of arms, partly by conciliatory meaſures, and partly by the mediation of the courts of London, Berlin, and the Hague, recovered the entire poſſeſſion of his authority in theſe provinces, and that, apparently, to the ſatisfaction of the people; the miniſters of the mediating courts having guaranteed the reſtoration of the ancient Belgic conſtitution, as enjoyed under the happy reign of the empreſs queen Maria Thereſa. But ſince the death of Leopold, his ſon Francis having joined the conſpiracy againſt the French, theſe countries have endured the the horrors and ravages of war, and been alternately in the poſſeſſion of the different parties. They are now entirely in the poſſeſſion of the French, who have reduced them into departments, and annexed them to their republic. The Netherlands in general, are 360 miles long, and 260 broad; and are bounded on the W. the N. and NW. by the German Ocean, and the Dutch United States; on the E. by Germany; and on the S. by France. The principal rivers are the Scheldt, Rhine, Maeſe, Moſelle, Sambre, and Lis; and there are many fine navigable canals, which are of great advantage to the commerce of the country. The air is temperate; but the mouths of the rivers and harbours are frozen up in winter. The ſoil is extremely fertile in corn and paſtures; and there are ſeveral fine manufactures of lace, lawns, cambricks, tapeſtry, &c.

NEUBURG, a town of Stiria.

NEUBURG, a town of Bavaria, on the Schwarza.

NEUBURG, a town of Bavaria, and capital of a duchy of the ſame name.

NEUCHATEL, a territory of Swiſſerland, which, with that of Vallengin, forms one principality, that ſtretches from the Lake of Neuchatel to the limits of the late province of French Comté in France, containing, in length, about 10 leagues, and 4 in breadth. By the death of the ducheſs of Nemours, in 1707, the ſovereignty of Neuchatel and Vallengin was claimed by Frederic I. king of Pruſſia, as heir to the prince of Orange; his right was acknowledged by the ſtates of the country, and from him it deſcended to his great grandſon, Frederick-William II. The conſtitution of this country is a kind of limited monarchy. The inhabitants are Proteſtants, except in the two diſtricts of Landeron and Creſſier, where the Romiſh religion is predominant. In 1529, this populous principality entered into a ſtrict alliance with the cantons of Bern, Friburg, Soleure, and Lucerne. The air is healthy and temperate, but the ſoil not every where equally fertile; however, there are large vineyards, which produce white and red wine, which laſt is excellent. The paſtures on the mountains feed a great number of all ſorts of cattle, and there are plenty of deer in the foreſt, beſide large trouts, and other good fiſh, in the lakes and rivers. The people are ingenious, polite, active and induſtrious.

NEUCHATEL, a lake of Swiſſerland, which ſtretches about 24 miles in length, from the town of Yverdun to that of Neuchatel, at which extremity it has a communication with the Lake of Bienne by a narrow outlet. It's ſhores, near Yverdun, are covered with country-houſes and cultivated farms.

Nevendon, Eſſex, SE. of Billericay. Nevern, a river in Pembrokeſhire.

NEUFCHATEL, a handſome town of Swiſſerland, capital of a principality of the ſame name; but it is a ſmall place, containing not more than 3000 people. It lies partly on the little plain between the Lake of Neuchatel and the Jura, and partly on the declivity of that mountain; and ſome of it's ſtreets, in courſe, are very ſteep. At the commencement of the preſent century, commerce was almoſt wholly unknown in this town, as the ridiculous pride of it's being deemed degrading, generally prevailed among the inhabitants. This ſenſeleſs prejudice is now, however, nearly extinguiſhed. The chief article of exportation is wine produced from the neighbouring vineyards, and much eſteemed. Manufactures alſo of printed linens and cottons have been eſtabliſhed with ſucceſs. Many public works have been lately executed at Neufchatel, at an expence far exceeding the revenues of this little ſtate; but for theſe they are indebted to a private citizen, Mr. David Pury, who, beſide contributions, in his life-time, to the amount of 40,000l. left his country heir to a ſum of 160,000l.; he himſelf, having none but diſtant relations. Among theſe public works, are the new town-houſe, and a ſuperb cauſeway leading toward the valley of St. Imier. Neufchatel has a grand and little council; the firſt is compoſed of 40 perſons; the ſecond conſiſts of 24 members, comprehending the mayor, who is preſident. Theſe two councils aſſemble regularly every month. The town is ſituated on the lake of the ſame name, 25 miles NNW. of Bern.

NEUFCHATEL, a town in the dept. of Lower Seine, noted for excellent cheeſe, and commodiouſly ſeated on the river Arques, 20 miles SE. of Dieppe, and 75 NW. of Paris.

Nevil's Croſs, near Durham; where, in 1346, David Bruce, king of Scots, was defeated and taken priſoner by the Engliſh.

NEVERS, a conſiderable town in the dept. of Nievre, formerly capital of the Nivernois. It contains ſeveral fine buildings, particularly the ancient ducal palace, and has about 8000 inhabitants. The principal manufactures are china, glaſs, and works of enamel. It is ſeated on the river Loire, over which there is a handſome bridge, and at the end of it a fine large cauſeway, reaching to the town. It is 24 miles NNW. of Moulins.

NEUFCHATEAU, a town of Luxemburg.

NEUFCHATEAU, a populous, trading town in the dept. of Voſges, ſeated in a fertile ſoil, on the river Mouzon, 30 miles NNW. of Epinal, and 150 E. by S. of Paris.

NEUHAUS, a town of Bechin, Bohemia; a town of Worms, Upper Rhine; and a town of Paderborn, Weſtphalia.

NEUHAUSEL, a town of Hungary.

NEVIN, or NEWIN, a town of Carnarvonſhire, ſeated on the Iriſh Sea, oppoſite to Pulhelly. Here Edward I. in 1284, on the conqueſt of Wales, held a round table, and celebrated it with a dance and tournament. The concourſe was prodigious: numbers of Engliſh nobility, and others from foreign parts, gracing the feſtival with their preſence. It is 20 miles SW. of Carnarvon, and 249 NW. of London. Market on Saturday.

NEVIS, a ſmall but very fruitful iſland of the Weſt Indies, divided from the E. end of St. Chriſtopher's by a narrow channel. It has but one mountain, which is in the middle very high, and covered with large trees up to the top. Here are ſprings of freſh water and a hot bath, much of the ſame nature as thoſe of Bath in England. It produces, on an average, one hogſhead of ſugar per acre, and 4000 hogſheads in the whole. The number of inhabitants is about 6000 whites, and about 10,000 negroes. It is ſubject to the Engliſh. Lat. 17. 14. N. lon. 62. 95. W.

NEWARK, a handſome flouriſhing town of N. America, in the ſtate of New Jerſey. It has one epiſcopal, and two preſbyterian churches, one of which, of ſtone, is the largeſt and moſt elegant in the ſtate. It has alſo a court-houſe and gaol. The town has the reputation of making the beſt cider in the world. It is 9 miles W. of New York.

*NEWARK-UPON-TRENT, a town of Nottinghamſhire, ſeated on the river Trent, over which is a bridge into a ſmall iſland, made by the river. The chief trade is making malt. It once had a handſome caſtle, now in ruins. Here, in the midſt of troubles, which his own folly and baſeneſs had excited, died the inglorious king John. Here too, the unfortunate Charles I. after his defeat at Naſeby, put himſelf into the hands of the Scotch army, then beſieging Newark, by whom he was afterward given up to his worſt enemies. It is 17 miles NE. by E. of Nottingham, and 124 N. by W. of London, on the York road. Market on Wedneſday.

NEWBERN, the largeſt town in the ſtate of of N. Carolina, in N. America, the county town of Craven county. It ſtands on a flat, ſandy, point of land, formed by the confluence of the Neus on the N. and the Trent on the S. the former being here a mile and a half wide, and the latter three quarters of a mile. It is 499 miles S. by W. of Philadelphia. Lat. 35. 20. N. lon. 77. 20. W.

NEWCASTLE, a ſmall town of Carmarthenſhire, in S Wales, ſeated on the river Tyvy, 17 miles NW. of Carmarthen, and 219 WNW. of London. Mark. on Frid.

*NEWCASTLE, or NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LINE, a conſiderable and well-built town in Staffordſhire, ſeated on a rivulet. It has a large manufactory of hats and cloth, and in the neighbourhood are many manufactures of ſtone ware, the ſale of which averages, annually, about 100,000l. It is 15 miles N. of Stafford, and 149 NW. of London.

NEWCASTLE, or NEWCASTLE-UPON TYNE, the largeſt and moſt populous town in Northumberland, ſituated among ſteep hills, on the Tyne, which is here a fine and deep river; ſo that ſhips of 3 or 4 hundred tons burden may ſafely come up to the town, though the large colliers are ſtationed at Shields. It is ſo ſecure a haven, that veſſels, when they have paſſed Tynemouth Bar, are in no danger either from ſtorms or ſhallows. It is defended by Clifford's Fort, which effectually commands all veſſels that enter the river. The town may be conſidered as divided into two parts, of which Gateſhead, on the Durham ſide, is one; and both were joined by a ſtrong bridge, which had ſtood above 500 years. It originally conſiſted of 12 arches, but by the embankment of the river for the purpoſe of forming the quays on the N. ſide, they were reduced to nine. On this bridge were houſes, which, in general, ſtood at ſome diſtance from each other. In 1771, a dreadful flood carried away four of theſe arches, with the houſes that ſtood upon them. This part of the bridge was rebuilt in 1779. The town riſes on the N. bank of the river, where the ſtreets, upon the aſcent, are exceedingly ſteep. Many of the houſes are built of ſtone: but ſome of them are of timber, and the reſt of brick. The caſtle, which is old and ruinous, overlooks the whole town. The exchange, churches, and other public buildings, are elegant; and the quay for landing goods is long and large. Here is a hall for the ſurgeons, a large hoſpital, built by the contribution of the keel-men, for the maintenance of the poor of their fraternity; and ſeveral charitable foundations, ſituated in the centre of the great collieries, which have for centuries ſupplied London, all the eaſtern, and moſt of the midland and ſouthern parts of the kingdom with coal. This trade has been the ſource of great opulence to Newcaſtle; which, beſides, exports large quantities of lead, ſalt, ſalmon, butter, tallow, and grindſtones; and imports wine and fruit from the S. of Europe, and timber, iron, hemp, &c. from the Baltic and Norway. Ships are ſent hence to the Greenland fiſhery. It alſo poſſeſſes manufactories of ſteel, iron, and woollen cloth; and in the town and neighbourhood are ſeveral glaſs-houſes. The ſtreets in the old part of Newcaſtle are unſightly and narrow, and the buildings greatly crowded together; but ſome of the newer parts are handſome and commodious. The ſuburbs are chiefly inhabited by keel-men; a rough and ſturdy race, employed in carrying the coal down the river in keels, or lighters, to the large ſhips. Newcaſtle was made a borough by William the Conqueror, and the firſt charter which was granted to the townſmen for digging coal was by Henry III. in 1239; but, in 1306, the uſe of coal for fuel was prohibited in London, by royal proclamation, chiefly becauſe it injured the ſale of wood for fuel, great quantities of which were then growing about that city; but this interdiction did not long continue, and we may conſider coal as having been dug and exported from this place for more than 400 years. Newcaſtle is 14 miles N. of Durham, 94 N. of York, and 271 N. by W. of London, on the great road to Edinburgh. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

NEWCASTLE, a town of N. America, in the ſtate of Delaware. It was ſettled by the Swedes, about the year 1627, and was called Stockholm. It was afterward taken by the Dutch, and called New Amſterdam. When it fell into the hands of the Engliſh, it was called Newcaſtle. It was the firſt town ſettled on the river Delaware, and was formerly the ſeat of government. It now contains about 60 houſes, which have the aſpect of decay, and is ſeated on the W. bank of the Delaware, 30 miles SSW. of Philadelphia.

NEW FOREST, a foreſt in Hampſhire, ſituated in that part of the county which is bounded on the E. by Southampton-Water, and on the S. by the Engliſh Channel. According to the plan taken of it in 1683 (the laſt on record) it extends from Godſhell on the NW. to the ſea on the SE. about 20 miles, and from Hardley on the E. to Ringwood on the W. about 15 miles. It contains within thoſe limits about 92,365 acres, ſtatute meaſure. Of theſe, however, only 63,845 acres are woods and waſte lands, the reſt are incloſed lands, held by the maſter-keepers and groom keepers, with their reſpective lodges, incroachments, &c. The are nine walks in it, and a keeper to every one, under a lord warden, beſides two rangers and a bow-bearer. King Henry VIII. built ſome caſtles in it, and it has now ſeveral pretty towns and villages. It has advantages of ſituation, with reſpect to conveyance by water carriage, and vicinage to Portſmouth dock-yards, ſuperior to every other foreſt, having, in its neighbourhood, ſeveral places for ſhipping timber. It was afforeſted by William the Conqueror, who expelled the inhabitants, and laid waſte the country for that purpoſe. His ſon, William Rufus, was killed in this foreſt by an arrow ſhot by Walter Tyrrel, a French knight, and which is ſaid to have accidentally glanced againſt a tree.

NEWFOUNDLAND, a large iſland lying on the eaſtern coaſt of N. America, between 47 and 52 deg. N. lat. It is 350 miles in length from N. to S. and 200 in breadth, at the baſe, from E. to W. It is a mountainous, barren country, and is much colder than England, being covered with ſnow five months in the year. It ſeems to have no inhabitants of it's own, but in the ſummer-time is viſited by the Eſkimaux Indians. It has ſeveral commodious bays and harbours, and there are about 500 Engliſh families who continue there all the year, beſide the garriſon of St. John's, Placentia, and other forts. In the fiſhing ſeaſon it is reſorted to by at leaſt 10,000 people, on account of the fiſhing-banks to the E. of this iſland, for here they cure the cod, which is carried not only to England, but to all parts of Europe. There is great plenty of veniſon, fiſh, and fowls, but very little corn, fruit, or cattle; upon which account the inhabitants have not only their clothes and furniture, but proviſions, from England. In 1785, 292 Britiſh fiſhing veſſels, and 85 Britiſh trading ſhips, carried off 591,276 quintals of fiſh for foreign markets. In 1787, 14,000 ſeamen were thought to be employed in theſe fiſheries.

NIGER, a river, ſuppoſed to be one of the largeſt in Africa. It's riſe and termination are unknown; but it's courſe is ſaid to be from E. to W. running S. of the kingdom of Caſſina toward Tombuctoo, in the ſands of which country it is ſuppoſed to be loſt; but others account the great rivers Senegal, Gambia, and Rio Grande, to be only ſo many branches, or mouths, whereby this vaſt river diſcharges itſelf into the Atlantic. The

Africans

Africans have two names for this river; namely, Neel il Abeed, or River of the Negroes, and Neel il Kibeer, or the Great River. They alſo term the Nile, Neel Shem; that is, the Egyptian River; ſo that the term Neel, whence our Nile, is nothing more than the appellative of River, like Ganges, or Sinde. So great is the rapidity with which the Niger traverſes the empire of Caſhna, that no veſſel can aſcend the ſtream; and ſuch is the want of ſkill, or of commercial inducements, among the inhabitants of it's borders, that even with the current, neither veſſels nor boats are ſeen to navigate. Even the food, which the bounty of the river would give, is in vain offered to their acceptance; for ſuch is the want of ſkill, or ſuch the ſettled diſlike of the people to this ſort of proviſions, that the fiſh are never diſturbed. In the rainy ſeaſon, the Niger ſwells above it's banks, floods the adjacent lands, and often ſweeps before it the cattle and cottages of the ſhort-ſighted, or too-confident inhabitants.

NILE, a great river of Africa, which riſes in the mountains of Abyſſinia, near the village of Geeſh, in lat. 10. 59. N. lon. 36. 55. E. It runs firſt NE. afterward turns directly E. and enters the great lake Dambia, or Dembia, running through it, and, paſſing among the rocks, the ſight of it is almoſt loſt. Then it croſſes the country of Nubia, and enters Egypt at Syene, which country it divides into two parts: a little below Cairo, it divides itſelf into two great branches, which, with the Mediterranean Sea, forms the Iſland of Delta. The ancients reckoned eleven mouths of the Nile, of which ſeven were conſiderable; but at preſent there are only two that are navigable at all times; and thoſe are at Roſetta and Damietta. In the middle of this river, between Old Cairo and Gize, is ſeated the Iſland of Raouda, which is almoſt as long as Old Cairo. It is 500 paces in breadth in the middle; and the front of the Mekias, or Nilometer, takes up all the breadth of the ſouthern part. This is the work of the Saracens, and derives it's name from it's uſe, for it ſignifies meaſure. Here they obſerve, every day, by means of a graduated column, (erected in the centre of a low chamber, it's bottom being on a level with the bed of the Nile) the increaſe or decreaſe of the waters of that river, and thence the public criers regulate the proclamations they make of theſe events, at different hours, through the city. In ſome parts of this river there are rocks, whence the water falls ſeveral feet, and theſe are called the cataracts of the Nile. It overflows regularly every year, from the 15th of June to the 17th of September, when it begins to decreaſe. The fertility of Egypt depends upon the overflowing of the Nile; and they reckon it will be a bad year when it is leſs than 14 cubits, and above 18; but that 16 cubits is the proper height; and when this happens, they make public rejoicings throughout the Delta. This river affords plenty of fiſh, and breeds a great number of crocodiles, which are very large and dangerous. The Delta, or Lower Egypt, is always overflowed; and when the waters are almoſt gone off, they ſow it with rice, which delights in watery grounds. During the inundation, the little towns, ſtanding upon eminences, look like ſo many iſlands; and they go from one to the other by boats. In Cairo there is a canal called Khalis, which is opened when the water is high enough; thence it is conveyed into reſervoirs and ciſterns, and is afterward diſtributed into the fields and gardens, as occaſion requires. This inundation of the Nile is cauſed by the periodical rains which fall every year between the tropics, and more particularly in Abyſſinia, which is full of high mountains.

NIMEGUEN, a town of the United Provinces, capital of Dutch Guelderland, and the chief town of Betewe, or Batavia, the country of the ancient Batavi. of penthouſes over the ſhops. The Chineſe merchants of Siam and Batavia go thither yearly to buy ſilks; and they have a great trade to Japan, it being but two days ſail diſtant from it. It is ſituated in a plain, which reſembles a garden for it's levelneſs and cultivation: it is full of towns and houſes, and divided by a great number of canals. Lat. 30. 0. N. lon. 120. 30. E.

NINOVE, a town of Flanders county.

Ninwick, Northumb. in Simondſburn pariſh.

NIO, an iſland in the Archipelago, S. of Naxia, about 30 miles in circumference. It is fertile in corn, but has very little wood or oil. "The regular manners and behaviour of theſe iſlanders one among another," ſays the Count de Choiſſeul Gouffier, "with their kind treatment of ſtrangers, revives an idea of ſimplicity of the primitive ages. Men, women, and children, appear eager to do any good offices for travellers, without permitting their ſervants to ſhare in their endeavours. This benevolent diſpoſition is without any mixture of impertinent curioſity or intereſt, but is the genuine remains of ancient hoſpitality. An ingenious gentleman, who was lately on the iſland, experienced the truth of this repreſentation. He could not prevail on any of them to accept the leaſt pecuniary recompence for their trouble; they only required an atteſtation of the welcome he received, their character in this reſpect ſeeming to be what theſe honeſt people chiefly prided themſelves in. It may be truly affirmed, that hoſpitality is the point of honour in the Eaſt: and that this virtue is conſtitutional in the Greeks; ſince we find it in modern, as well as in remote times, under their tyrannical government as well as in their republican ages; under the Chriſtian and Mahometan faiths, as well as under Paganiſm. The Greeks inherit hoſpitality from their anceſtors; the Turks derive it from their religion. The iſland was anciently called Ino, Ios, or Dios, and has ſome good harbours. Lat. 36. 43. N. lon. 25. 35. W.

NIORT, a conſiderable trading town in the dept. of the Two Sevres. They manufacture druggets, ſerges, and other coarſe woollen goods; and their dry ſweetmeats are much eſteemed. It is 28 miles NE. of Rochelle.

NIPHON, or HIPHON, an iſland of Aſia, and the largeſt of Japan, being 660 miles in length, and from 150 to 400 in breadth, containing 55 provinces. The principal cities in this iſland are Meaco, Jeddo, Oſacca, Gurunga, and Saccai.

NISHNEI NOVOGOROD, or NISHGOROD, a populous town of Ruſſia, with a conſiderable trade, capital of the government of the ſame name. As it was the appenage and place of reſidence of the ancient Ruſſian princes, many of them lie buried here. It is ſeated at the confluence of the Volga and the Occa, 220 miles E. by N. of Moſcow. Lat. 56. 18. N. lon. 46. 30. E.

NISIBEN, or NESBIN, an ancient and celebrated town of Diarbekir, in Aſia.

NISIDA, a ſmall iſland in the Gulf of Naples, very fertile, and would be more ſo but for the great number of rabbits. It has a ſmall harbour, called Porto Pavone, and on a neighbouring rock ſtands a lazaretto, where ſhips bound for Naples perform quarantine.

NISMES, an ancient, large, and flouriſhing town, capital of the dept. of Gard. There are ſeveral monuments of antiquity, a public fountain, a mauſoleum, and an amphitheatre, built by the Romans. The maiſon-quarrée, or the ſquare houſe, is a temple of the Corinthian order, in exquiſite taſte, raiſed by the inhabitants of Niſmes, in the year of Rome 754, to the memory of Caius and Lucius, ſons of Agrippa. The temple of Diana is, in part, gone to ruin. It was taken by the Engliſh in 1417. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of a biſhop, and contained a ſeminary, a college, an academy of ancient hiſtory and belles lettres, and about 40,000 inhabitants, of whom one third was ſuppoſed to be Proteſtants. It is ſeated in a fine plain, abounding in wine, oil, game, and cattle, 27 miles NE. of Montpellier.

NISSA, or NESSAVA, a town of Turkey, in Servia, on the river Morave.

NITH, a river of Dumfrieſſhire, which riſes in the mountains to the NW. and gives the name of Nithſdale to that part of the country through which it flows. A little above Dumfries, it joins the Cairn, and their united ſtreams form a fine eſtuary in Solway Frith.

NITHSDALE, a diſtrict of Dumfrieſſhire, in the NW. part of the county.

NITRIA, a famous deſert of Egypt, 37 miles in length, bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean, on the E. by the Nile, on the S. by the Defert of Seta, and on the W. by St. Hilarion. It had formerly a great number of monafteries, which are now reduced to four; and it takes it's name from a falt lake, out of which is got the natrum of the ancients, in which they carry on a great trade.

NIVELLE, a town of the late Auftrian Brabant, having a good manufacture of cambricks. It is 15 miles S. of Bruffels.

NIVERNOIS, a ci-devant province of France. It is pretty fertile, contains mines of iron, and is watered by a great number of rivers, of which the Loire, Allier, and Yonne, are the principal. It is now chiefly in the dept. of Nievre.

Nivegal, Pembrokef. in S. Wales.

NIXABOER, or IRAN, a town of Korafan, Perfia. The fword-blades made here are efteemed the beft in Perfia.

NORDKIOPING, a large inland town of Eaft

East Gothland, Sweden, next to Stockholm in extent. It contains 5 churches, and about 10,000 inhabitants, but the houſes are ſmall and ſcattered. It's ſituation on the Motala is exceedingly picturesque. That river flows through the town, forms a ſeries of cataracts, and is divided into four principal ſtreams, which encircle ſeveral rocky iſlands, covered with houſes and manufactories. At the extremity of the town is a new and commodious quay. Here are many fabrics of cloth, ſome ſugar-houſes, one of ſnuff, ſeveral paper-mills, 50 mills for grinding corn, 2 copper-mills, and a hammer-mill for braſs. Corn is exported hence in great quantities; and a ſalmon fiſhery gives employment and riches to many of the inhabitants. Nordkioping is 76 miles SW. of Stockholm.

NORDLAND, a province of Norway, included in the government of Drontheim.

NORDLAND, a large diſtrict of Sweden, containing 9 towns, and 7 provinces, viz. Geſtricia, Helſingia, Medelpadia, Jempterland, Angermania, Weſt Bothnia, and Herjedalia.

Nordy, or Northy Chapel, Suſſex, near Pevenſey-Haven. Nore, Surry, SE. of Godalmin.

Nore River, in Waterford, Munſter, falls into the Barrow, a little N. of Roſs.

NORFOLK, a county of England, bounded on the N. and E. by the German Ocean; on the W. by Cambridgeſhire, Lincolnſhire, and the Waſh; and on the S. and SE. by Suffolk. It extends about 60 miles from E. to W. and 40 from N. to S. It contains 33 hundreds, 1 city, 32 market-towns, and 660 pariſhes. The face of this county varies leſs than in moſt tracts of equal extent in England. Not one hill of any conſiderable height is to be ſeen in the whole county; yet, in moſt parts, it's ſurface is broken into gentle ſwells and depreſſions. The ſoil, however, is more various than that of any other county, comprehending all the ſorts that are to be found in the iſland; yet the worſt of them are far from being unprofitable. At the weſtern extremity, is a conſiderable tract of flat, fenny land; and, on the eaſt, a narrow tract of marſhes runs from the ſea, near Yarmouth, to ſome diſtance up the country. Several of the weſtern hundreds, from Thetford northward, are open and bare, conſiſting of extenſive heaths, the ſoil of which is a light ſand, or hungry gravel. The reſt of the county, in general, is arable land, varying in it's degrees of fertility. To the NE. the ſoil is a light ſandy loam, eaſy of tillage, and equal in value to the beſt parts of the Netherlands, to which it is ſimilar. The SE. has a richer and deeper ſoil. The middle and ſouth abound in clay; and various parts yield chalk and marl. The products of the county vary according to the ſoil and ſituation. The lighter arable lands produce barley in great plenty. Wheat is cultivated in the ſtronger ſoils. But turnips are more generally grown here than in any other part of the kingdom, and form the baſis of the Norfolk huſbandry. The peculiar excellence of this culture is, that the ground never lies fallow, as the turnips ſerve to prepare it for corn, beſide fattening great numbers of cattle. Much buck-wheat is alſo grown in the light ſoils, and uſed for feeding ſwine and poultry. The fenny parts yield great quantities of butter, which is ſent to London under the name of Cambridge butter. The ſheep are a hardy, ſmall breed, much valued for their mutton. Turkeys are reared here to a larger ſize than elſewhere. Rabbits are extremely numerous on the ſandy heath; and there is likewiſe abundance of game, eſpecially of pheaſants. On the ſea coaſt, herrings and mackrel are caught in great plenty; and Yarmouth, in particular, is noted for the curing of red herrings. The air of this county is ſharp and piercing, which throws the ſeaſons more backward than in other counties under the ſame latitude: but it is very wholeſome, particularly in inland parts. No county has a greater ſhare of river and ſea navigation. The manufactures of Norfolk are worſted, woollens, and ſilks. It's principal rivers are the Great Ouſe, Nen, Little Ouſe, Waveney, Yare, and Bure. Norwich is the capital.

NORFOLK ISLAND, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, lying E. of New South Wales, and ſettled by a colony of convicts, ſubordinate to that government. The number of men, by the laſt advices, amounted to 44, the women only to 16. It is a fertile ſpot, and is very hilly. Some of the valleys are tolerably large, but moſt of them are only deep hollows. Mount Pitt, the only remarkable hill, is 12,000 feet high. The whole iſland is covered with a very thick foreſt, choked with underwood. The timber trees are a ſort of ſpruce pine, reſembling the live oak, a yellow wood, a hard black wood, and a wood refembling beech. The ſpring is perceptible in our autumn, but the trees are in a conſtant ſucceſſion of flowering, and fruiting the whole year round. The flax-plant is more luxuriant here than in any part of New Zealand; but the chief produce is the pine, which grows in great abundance, and to a large ſize, many of the trees being as thick, breaſt high, as two men can fathom, and exceedingly ſtraight and tall. It is very uſeful in building, and ſeems to be durable. The ſoil is rich and deep. In ſummer the heat is exceſſive. All the grain and European plants ſeed in December. From February to Auguſt, may be called the rainy ſeaſon. The winter, from April to July, is very pleaſant: there is never any froſt; but when the SW. winds blow, the air is raw and cold. This iſland is well ſupplied with many ſtreams of good water, which abound with very fine eels. The cliffs round the coaſt are 240 feet high, and quite perpendicular. The want of a ſafe harbour is a great inconvenience; and the vaſt quantity of coral rocks render anchorage very inſecure. The ſettlement is formed in Sydney-Bay, on the S. ſide of the iſland. Lat. 29. 30. S. lon. 168. 12. E.

Norgill, Yorkſhire, NW. of Barnard's-Caſtle. Norgrave, Worceſ. near Upton. Norham, Northumb. on the Tweed, near the mouth of the Till.

NORMANDY, a ci-devant province of France, on the Engliſh Channel, about 150 miles in length, 80 in breadth, and 600 in circumference. It is one of the moſt fertile tracts in France, and abounds in all it's productions except wine, but they ſupply that defect by cider and perry. It contains iron, copper, and a great number of rivers and harbours. The Normans, a people of Denmark and Norway, having entered France, under Rollo, Charles the Simple ceded this country to them in 912, which, from that time, was called Normandy. Rollo, the firſt duke, having been baptized, Charles gave him his daughter Giſle in marriage. He held Normandy as a fief of the crown of France, and ſeveral of his ſucceſſors after him, till William, the ſeventh duke, conquered England in 1066, from which time it became a province of England, till it was loſt in the reign of King John, and reunited to the crown of France; but the Engliſh ſtill keep the iſlands on the coaſt of Normandy. Rouen was the capital. It now forms the departments of Calvados, Eure, the Channel, Orne, Lower Seine, with a ſmall part of Eure and Loir.

NORTH, DEPARTMENT OF THE, a department of France, adjoining that of Calais, bounded on the NW. by the German Ocean, and on the NE. by Flanders and the late Auſtrian Hainault. It is compoſed of the late French Flanders, French Hainault, and Cambreſis. Douay is the capital.

Northall, Middl. a village on the north ſide of Enfield-Chace, 3 miles N. of Barnet. Northall, Suffolk, near Benacre.

*NORTHALLERTON, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, in a diſtrict called Alvertonſhire, ſeated on a ſmall brook, which, a mile below, runs into the river Wiſk. It is a large, well-built, trading place, and is 30 miles NNW. of York, and 223 N. by W. of London. Market on Wedneſday. Fairs on Jan. 2d, and on St. Bartholomew's-Day.

Northam, Devonſ. between Barnſtaple-Bay and Biddeford.

*NORTHAMPTON, the county-town of Northamptonſhire, ſeated on the river Nen, which has been made navigable to Lynn. It's principal manufacture is that of boots and ſhoes, of which many are made here, and in other parts of the county, for exportation. Some ſtockings and lace are alſo made here. The horſe-fairs of this place are reckoned to exceed all others in the kingdom. It is a handſome, well-built town, and has a regular ſpacious market-place, one of the fineſt in England, a good free-school, and a county infirmary and gaol. Within half a mile of Northampton is a fine Gothic structure, called Queen's Cross, erected by Edward I. in memory of his queen Eleanor, who, at the hazard of her own life had saved his by sucking the poison from a wound which he received in the crusades. This town is a thoroughfare in the N. and W. roads, and is 50 miles W. of Cambridge, 30 SE. of Coventry, and 66 NW. by N. of London. Lat. 52. 11. N. lon. 1. 11. W. Markets on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs on Feb. 20, April 15, May 4, August 5 and 26, Sept. 19, Nov. 28, and Dec. 19.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the NW. by Leicestershire and Rutlandshire, on the N. by Lincolnshire, on the E. by the counties of Cambridge, Huntingdon, and Bedford; on the S. by Bucks and Oxfordshire, and on the W. by that county and Warwickshire. It is divided into 20 hundreds, containing 1 city, 13 market-towns, and 336 parishes. The air of this county is very healthy, except in the NE. part near Peterborough, which being surrounded and intersected by rivers, is very liable to inundations, and forms the commencement of the fenny tract extending to the Lincolnshire Washes. With this single exception, Northamptonshire is, in a manner, proverbially regarded as a fine and pleasant county; an opinion, confirmed by the number of seats of the nobility and gentry which it contains. It's greatest defect is a scarcity of fuel: this is but scantily supplied by it's woods, which, like those in all other parts of the kingdom, have been much diminished by agriculture; and though coal is brought into this county by the river Nen, it is at a very dear rate. Northamptonshire, however, possesses some considerable remains of it's old forests, particularly those of Rockingham on the NW. and of Salcey and Whittlebury on the S. In this last, that fiercest of British animals of prey, the wild cat, is still found. There is but one piece of waste ground in this county, and that is a barren heath near Whittering. The products are, in general, the same with those of other farming countries. It is, indeed, peculiarly celebrated for grazing land; that tract especially, which lies from Northampton northward to the Leicestershire border. Horned cattle, and other animals, are here fed to extraordinary sizes; and many horses of the large black breed are reared. Woad for the dyers is cultivated in this part; but the county is not distinguished for manufactures, excepting the trifling one of bone lace. The principal rivers are the Nen and Welland; beside which, it is partly watered by the Ouse, Leam, Cherwell, and Avon. The county-town is Northampton.

Northamsted, Herts, a mile S. of Barkway. Northaw, Middlesex; see Northal. Northborough, Northamp. S. of Market-Deeping. North Bovey, Devonsh. near Morton. North Bradley, Wilts. North Brook, Oxfords. W. of Bicester.

North-Rocks, in the Harbour of Donaghadee, in Down, Ulſter. From N. to S. they extend about 2 miles, but there is good clean ground between them. The ſouth rock is dangerous, many veſſels have been wrecked on it: it is above a mile from the ſhore.

North-Town, Staffordſ. near King's-Bromley.

NORTHUMBERLAND, a county of England, receiving it's name from being ſituated to the N. of the Humber. In the Saxon heptarchy it was a part of the kingdom of the Northumbrians, which contained not only the county now called Northumberland, but alſo Yorkſhire, Lancaſhire, Durham, Cumberland, and Weſtmorland. It is ſeated in the extremity of England next to Scotland, and is bounded on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the biſhopric of Durham, on the W. and SW. by Cumberland, and on the NW. and N. by Scotland. It extends about 70 miles in length from N. to S. and 50 in breadth from E. to W. and contains 6 wards, 13 towns, and 460 pariſhes, and about 100,000 inhabitants. The air is not ſo cold as might be imagined from the latitude in which it lies; for it's ſituation between two ſeas, in the narroweſt part of England, gives it the advantage of having the cold moderated by the temperate breezes of each; and for this reaſon, the ſnow ſeldom lies long in Northumberland, except on the top of high hills. The air is extremely healthful, and many of the inhabitants enjoy health to a great age. The ſoil is various; the eaſtern part being fruitful, having very good wheat, and moſt ſorts of corn, with rich meadows on the banks of the rivers; but the weſtern part is generally barren, it being moſtly heathy and mountainous. The SE. part abounds with pit-coal; the SW. angle has very rich lead-mines, but very little wood. The rivers abound with ſalmon, trout, &c. and the coaſts are rich in cod, ling, turbot, ſoles, &c. This county is well watered by rivers, the principal of which are the Tyne, Tweed, Coquet, and Alne. Alnwick is the county-town.

NORTHUMBERLAND ISLANDS, a chain of iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, near the NE. coaſt of New Holland. Lat. 21. 18. to 22. 26. S. lon. 149. to 150. 20. E.

Northway and Newton, Glouc. near Aſhchurch.

NORTHWICH, a town of Cheſhire, ſeated near the river Dane, is a handſome place, and chiefly noted for it's ſalt-mines, which were diſcovered in the beginning of the preſent century. Here are four deep brine-pits, from which immenſe quantities of ſalt are raiſed, partly to be purified on the ſpot by rediſſolving and boiling, and partly to be exported in it's crude ſtate. Moſt of the latter goes to Liverpool by the river Weever; and the plenty and cheapneſs of this commodity have been the principal cauſes of the great foreign commerce of that port. The ſalt-mines, when a perſon is let down into them by a bucket, to the depth of 150 feet, look very much like a ſubterraneous cathedral. They are ſupported by rows of pillars, having a cryſtal roof, all of the ſame rock, and tranſparent and glittering from the numerous candles burnt there to light the workmen, who dig it away with their ſteel pick axes. The clear annual duty received by government for Cheſhire ſalt amounts to 200,000l. Here is a large cotton manufacture. Northwich is 20 miles NE. of Cheſter, and 173 NW. of London. Market on Friday.

Northwick, Worceſ. near Campden in Glouceſterſhire. Northwick, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Henbury. Northwold, Norfolk, near Methwold. Northwood, Shropſ. NORTON SOUND, a large bay of the N. Pacific Ocean, on the W. coaſt of N. America, diſcovered by Captain Cook in his laſt voyage. Lat. 63. N. lon. 161. to 164. W.

NORWAY, a kingdom in the N. of Europe, the moſt weſterly part of the ancient Scandinavia. It is formed naturally into two neat diviſions; namely, Northern and Southern, or Proper Norway, ſeparated from each other by the ſmall Swediſh province of Herndahl. Northern Norway is a long and narrow ſlip of land, extending as far as Cape North, the moſt northern point of Europe, beyond 71. 0. deg. N. lat. and bounded on the W. and N. by the Northern Ocean, by Swediſh and Ruſſian Lapland on the E. and by Sweden on the S. It is divided into Nordland and Finmark, and comprehended in the government of Drontheim. Southern Norway is bounded on the E. by Sweden, and on the S. and W. by the Northern Ocean. It is divided into the four governments of Aggerhuys or Chriſtiania, Chriſtianſand, Berghen, and Drontheim. From it's rocky ſoil and northern poſition, Norway is not populous in proportion to it's extent. Mr. Coxe has calculated the number of inhabitants to be 750,000, who, like the Swiſs mountaineers, are eſteemed good ſoldiers, and are exceedingly attached to their country. The horſes are ſmall, but ſtrong, active, and hardy. In Norway they have a particular code, called the Norway Law, compiled by Grieffelfeld, at the command of Chriſtian V. the great legiſlator of this country. By this law, the palladium of Norway, peaſants are free, a few only excepted, on ſome ariſtocratic eſtates near Fredericſtadt; and the benefits of this code are viſible in the great difference, in their appearance, between the free peaſants in Norway, and the enſlaved vaſſals of Denmark, though both living under the ſame government. The Norwegian peaſants poſſeſs much ſpirit and fire in their manner; are frank, open, and undaunted, yet not inſolent; never fawning, yet paying proper reſpect. "Their principal mode of ſalute," ſays Mr. Coxe, "is by offering their hand; and when we gave or paid them any trifle, the peaſants, inſtead of returning thanks by words or by a bow, ſhook our hands with great frankneſs and cordiality." The ſame cauſes which affect the population of Norway, operate likewiſe on the ſtate of tillage; for, although in ſome places vegetation is ſo quick, that the corn is ſown and cut in 6 or 7 weeks, yet the country does not produce ſufficient corn for it's own conſumption. It is, however, exceedingly rich in paſture, and conſequently produces much cattle. The fiſheries, particularly on the weſtern coaſt, find employment and wealth to the natives. The principal fiſh, which dried and ſalted, furniſh a conſiderable article of exportation, are the cod, the ling, and the whiting: their their livers alſo yield train oil; and the ſmalleſt are given as winter fodder to the cattle. The extenſive foreſts of oak and pine produce timber ſpars, beams, and planks, beſide charcoal, turpentine, bark, fuel, and even manure; and the birch (the bark of which is uſed as a covering for the roofs of houſes) not only ſupplies fuel, but alſo a kind of wine, which is produced by boring a hole in the trunk, and the wine diſtils into a flaſk placed under it. The twigs of the birch alſo, as well as of the elder and aſpen, are given to horſes in ſcarcity of fodder. The general exports of Norway are tallow, butter, ſalt, dried fiſh, timber and planks, horſes and horned cattle, ſilver, alum, Pruſſian blue, copper, and iron. Norway abounds in lakes and rivers; the former ſo large, that they appear like inlets of the ſea; but the bays are ſo ſmall, that they appear like lakes. It was formerly governed by it's own hereditary ſovereigns, but is now united to the crown of Denmark. The capital is Chriſtiania.

*Norwich, an ancient, large, and populous city of Norfolk, ſeated on the river Yare, which runs through it, and is navigable hence to Yarmouth, without locks. Although it is 6 miles in circuit, the population is not ſo great as might be expected from that circumſtance, as it contains a number of gardens and orchards within the walls. It has a ſtately ancient caſtle, on a hill, which commands a fine view of the city: this caſtle is the ſhire-houſe for the county, and the county gaol; the aſſizes for the city being held at the Guildhall. Norwich has a good public library, a city and county hoſpital, a lofty market-houſe of freeſtone, and a bridewell built of flints, remarkable for being beautifully cut into regular little ſquares, without any viſible cement. It had formerly 58 parochial churches, beſides monaſteries; and has now 36 churches, beſides the cathedral, chapels, and diſſenting meeting-houſes. It had alſo a flint-ſtone wall, now much decayed, 3 miles in compaſs, which had 40 towers and was finiſhed in 1309. Here is a freeſchool, founded by Edward VI. and ſeveral other charitable foundations. Norwich long took the lead, in point of commercial conſequence among the inland towns. For this it was indebted to it's great manufactures of crapes, bombazines, and ſtuffs of various kinds, which are ſtill conſiderable, though ſomewhat declined, on account of the rivalſhip of the cotton branches, and in conſequence of prohibitions in foreign countries. The manufacture is confined to the city, but the operations of ſpinning and preparing the wool, employ the poor of moſt of the ſmall towns and villages in the county. It is computed that ſtuffs to the amount of 700,000l. have ſometimes been manufactured here in a year. It adds much to the trade of Yarmouth, by the vaſt cargoes of coals, and other heavy goods, which come to it from thence by the river Yare. Here are many good buildings, particularly a very ſpacious market-place; but the ſtreets (that of St. Giles excepted) are narrow and ill-diſpoſed. The market-place being on an aſcent, is very clean, and has a fine effect. This city has 12 gates, 6 bridges over the Yare, about 7500 houſes, and 45,000 inhabitants. It is well ſupplied with proviſions, and is 43 miles N. of Ipſwich, and 109 NE. by N. of London. Lat. 52. 40. N. lon. 1. 20. E. Markets on Wedneſday, Friday, and Saturday.

Norwich, a town of Connecticut, N. America, ſeated at the head of the river Thames, 12 miles N. of New London; at which place and Norwich the executive courts of law are held alternately. Here are manufactories for paper of all kinds, ſtockings, clocks, and watches, chaiſes, buttons, ſtone and earthen ware, wire, oil, chocolate, bells, anchors, and all kinds of forge work. The number of houſes is about 500.

Norwich, a town of Vermont, N. America.

Norwood, a village in Surry, ſituated on a fine hill, in the pariſhes of Croydon, Streatham, Lambeth, and Camberwell. It is a wildly-rural ſpot, and was, ſome years ago, a principal haunt of the gipſies. It is 5 miles S. of London. Norwood, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina. Norwood, Kent, near Ramſgate. Norwood Middl. a chapel of eaſe to Hayes. Norwood-Park, Nott. near Southwell. Noteley, Leiceſterſhire, NW. of Hallaton. Noſtol-Hall, Yorkſhire, SE. of Wakefield. Noſtrop, Yorkſhire, near Leeds.

Noteburg, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Peterſburgh, ſeated on an iſland in the lake of Ladoga, at the place where the river Neva proceeds from this lake. It was the capital of the province of Ingria, before Peterſburgh was built, from which it is 25 miles E.

Noteley, Black and White, Eſſex, near Braintree. Notgrove, Glouceſterſhire, 4 miles NW. of Northleach. Notley, Bucks, near Tame, in Oxfordſhire.

Noto, Nuovo, an ancient, large, and handſome town of Sicily, capital of the Val-di-Noto. It was entirely ruined by an earthquake in 1693, but the inhabitants built another town at some distance from it. It is 14 miles SW. of Syracuse.

Notozon, Nott. near Thurgarton and Blatcby. Nottar, Cornw. NW. of Saltash.

* NOTTINGHAM, the county-town of Nottinghamshire, takes it's name from the Saxon, Snottengaham, or House of Dens, so called from the spacious vaults dug in the rock, in which the ancient Britons resided. It is pleasantly seated on a rocky eminence, above the meadows bordering the Trent; on the highest part of which stands the castle, a large, elegant, and noble palace, belonging to the Duke of Newcastle, with a most extensive prospect. It is a large, populous, and handsome town, distinguished by it's spacious market-place, and noted as one of the principal seats of the stocking manufacture; particularly of the finer kinds, as those of silk and cotton. It has also a manufactory of coarse earthen ware, and a considerable trade in malt. It is remarkable for it's vaults or cellars, cut into the rock. Many of the houses in the market-place have their fronts supported by lofty stone columns, which make a very handsome appearance, and at the same time afford shelter in wet weather. The streets are well paved, and, from their situation on a rock, many of them are always clean. Heavy goods are brought hither from London by sea, and up the river Trent; and many coal pits, within 3 or 4 miles of the town, afford plenty of fuel at little expence. It is 16 miles E. of Derby, and 123 N. by W. of London. Lat. 53. 0. N. lon. 1. 5. W. Markets on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs on Friday after January 13th, May 7th, Thursday before Easter, and October 2d.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, on the E. by the latter county, on the S. by Leicestershire, and on the W. by Derbyshire. It's greatest length is 48 miles; it's greatest breadth above 20. It is divided into 8 hundreds, and contains 13 towns, 168 parishes, and 150,300 inhabitants. Being agreeably situated between the mountainous country of Derbyshire on the one hand, and the flat of Lincolnshire on the other, it enjoys such a temperature of soil and climate, as to render it one of the most fertile and agreeable counties in England. The principal rivers are the Trent and Idle. Almost the whole of the middle and western parts of the county were formerly occupied by the extensive forest of Sherwood, which is the only royal forest N. of the Trent; but the wood has in many parts been cleared, and the extent of the forest much contracted. A canal from Chesterfield in Derbyshire passes across the northern part of this county, and joins the Trent just as that river ceases to be it's boundary. The chief products of this county are corn, malt, pit-coal, of which there is great plenty; and a kind of stone somewhat like alabaster, but not so hard, which, when burnt, makes a plaster harder than that of Paris, with which the inhabitants generally plaster the floors of their upper rooms, instead of boarding them. Their other commodities are malt, wool, licorice, woad, fish, and fowl. Their manufactures chiefly consist of framework knitting, glass, and earthen ware. The principal town is Nottingham.

NOVALE, a small, rich, and populous town of the Trevisan, Italy.

NOVARA, a well-built town of Milan, capital of the Novarese.

NOVA SCOTIA, a peninsula of Acadia, about 240 miles in length, and from 30 to 60 in breadth, joined to the continent by a narrow isthmus at the NE. extremity of the Bay of Fundy. The whole province was formerly called Nova Scotia, but in 1784 it was divided into two governments, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Several new towns have been founded here, during and since the American war; and the country is in many parts cultivated and flourishing. The winter lasts here, with great severity, during, at least, 7 months in the year. The soil is tolerably fertile, though inferior to that in New England.

NOVELLARA, a town and principality of Italy, subject to Modena. It is 12 miles NE. of Reggio.

NOU-KIANG, the Chinese name of the river Ava.

NOVOGORODECK, a large town and a palatinate of Lithuania.

NOVOGOROD, one of the most ancient cities of Russia, in the government of the same name. It was formerly called Great Novogorod, to distinguish it from other

Russian

Ruſſian towns of the ſame appellation. It was the great mart of trade between Ruſſia and the Hanſeatic cities, and made the moſt rapid advances in opulence and population. It's territory extended to the N. as far as the frontiers of Livonia and Finland; comprifing great part of the province of Archangel, and a large diſtrict beyond the NW. limits of Siberia. At this period it's dominions were ſo extenſive, it's power ſo great, and it's ſituation ſo impregnable, as to give riſe to a proverb, "Who can reſiſt the gods and Great Novogorod?" But in 1477, this independent republic was obliged to ſubmit to the arms of Ivan Vaſſilivitch I. grand duke of Ruſſia. An enormous bell, denominated by the inhabitants eternal, and revered by them as the palladium of their liberty, was removed by their conqueror from Novogorod to Moſcow. It continued, nevertheleſs, the largeſt and moſt commercial city in Ruſſia, and contained at leaſt 400,000 people. It was firſt deſolated, in a manner, by the cruelties exerciſed here by Ivan Vaſſilivitch II. in 1570, but it's ſplendor was not totally eclipſed until the Czar Peter built Peterſburgh, to which favourite capital he transferred all the commerce of the Baltic that had before centered here. It now contains ſcarce 7000 inhabitants; but a vaſt number of churches and convents ſtand melancholy monuments of it's former magnificence. The town ſtretches on both ſides of the Volchova, a beautiful river, of conſiderable depth and rapidity, which ſeparates it into two diviſions; namely, the Trading Part and the quarter of St. Sophia. The cathedral of St. Sophia is one of the moſt ancient in Ruſſia: it was begun in 1044, by Vladimir Yaroſlavitch, duke of Novogorod, and completed in 1051. Several princes of the ducal family of Ruſſia are interred in this cathedral. Novogorod is ſituated near the Lake Ilmen, 92 miles SSE. of Peterſburgh. Lat. 58. 20. N. lon. 32. 45. E.

NOVOGOROD, once an independent republic, finally reduced by Ivan Vaſſilivitch II. in 1570, and united to the Ruſſian empire, of which it now forms a government. The capital is of the ſame name.

NUBIA, a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the N. by Egypt, on the E. by the Red Sea, on the S. by Abyſſinia, and on the W. by countries of Africa, of which hardly the names are known. The river Nile runs throught it, on the banks of which, and thoſe of the other rivers, it is uncommonly fertile, but in other places barren, ſandy, and in want of water. Money is of no uſe in this country in the way of trade, it being all carried on by way of exchange. Their bread and drink is made of a ſmall round ſeed, called doca, or ſeſſ, which is very ill taſted. Their houſes have mud-walls, being very low, and covered with reeds. The habit of the rich is a veſt without ſleeves, and they have no coverings for their heads, legs, and feet: others wrap a piece of linen cloth about them, and the children go quite naked. They profeſs to be Mahometans. Great part of the coaſt is under the power of the Turks. The exports of this country are gold, elephants' teeth, civet, ſandal wood, and ſlaves. Millet grows in great abundance; and the ſugar-cane is cultivated, but, for want of knowing well how to prepare it, the ſugar is black. The principal towns known to the Europeans are Dangala and Sennaar.

NUMANTIA, anciently a conſiderable town of Spain, in Old Caſtile, then called Celtiberia. The inhabitants were celebrated for maintaining this town 14 years, when beſieged by the Romans. The men, when they could hold out no longer, for want of proviſions, killed their wives, and children, and afterward themſelves, burning every thing that was valuable among them. After this, Scipio Africanus demoliſhed this place in the year of Rome 620. The ruins of it are ſtill to be ſeen at Puenta Guarar, on the river Duero, 4 miles above the town of Soria. Lat. 41. 42. NUREMBURG, one of the moſt handſome and flouriſhing places in Germany, capital of Franconia, and a free imperial city. It is ſeated in a ſandy, barren ſoil, and yet the inhabitants are ſo induſtrious, that they have brought this republic into a very flouriſhing ſtate. It is about 6 miles in circumference, ſurrounded by high walls, flanked with 365 towers, as alſo with a deep ditch. The river Pegnitz runs through the middle, and divides it into two parts, and over it are 12 ſtone bridges. Among the public buildings, two of the churches, the arſenal, and the very magnificent council houſe, are greatly admired. The townſmen are divided into eight quarters, or parts, and 131 captainſhips. The government is ariſtocratical. The great council is compoſed of 200 perſons, and the ſupreme council of 34 patricians, and of 8 of the moſt reputable tradeſmen. The burgeſſes are very induſtrious, and fine workmen in arts. Their maps, prints, paintings, and engravings are in high eſteem, as well as their muſical and mathematical inſtruments; nor are they leſs curious in clockwork, and in the ſeveral manufactures of metal, ivory, wood, and alabaſter. The trade in toys made here, and ſold in England by the name of Dutch toys, is conſiderable, though it does not bring in ſo much money to the town as formerly. Here is alſo a famous academy for painting. The anatomical theatre, and the public library, are alſo worth notice. Geography is much indebted to the celebrated ſhop for land charts, eſtabliſhed here by John Baptiſt Homann. In the cleanneſs of their ſtreets, and the neatneſs of their houſes, they imitate the Dutch; and though they formerly kept to their old habits, they now follow the moſt faſhionable modes. Though their religion is the Lutheran, on account of their having formerly received the interim, ſeveral Roman Catholic cuſtoms are ſtill retained in their divine ſervice. The building called the church of the Holy Ghoſt, has a variety of reliques, as alſo the imperial crown, the imperial ſceptre, the globe of the empire, the ſword of St. Maurice, the imperial mantle, the white robe of the emperors, called the Dalmatic, the golden ſurplice, the mantle of the choir, and the gloves, the ſlippers, and the hereditary crown of the Emperor Rodolph II. All theſe rarities are placed in a cheſt, which is ſuſpended by a rope in the dome, and they are never taken down but at the coronation of the emperor, or when any perſon of high diſtinction wants to ſee them. The ancient and ſuperb caſtle, or palace, which the inhabitants bought of the burgraves, is ſtill ſtanding at the extremity of the city. It was partly burnt down in 1420, and contains at preſent a granary, a pentagonal tower, and a priſon. Here are four Latin ſchools, beſide a famous college, or univerſity. No Jews are ſuffered to lodge a ſingle night here; nor can they they enter the city at all without paying a certain tax. They have, in proceſs of time, obtained a conſiderable territory, which is about 30 miles in diameter, and 100 in circumference, and in which are two large foreſts. Their manufactures are conveyed all over Europe by the means of two large fairs. The houſes are all built of freeſtone, and are four or five ſtories high. It is ſeated almoſt in the centre of Germany, 55 miles NW. of Ratiſbon, and 250 W. by N. of Vienna.

OHIO, in N. America, one of the moſt beautiful rivers in the world, has it's ſource in the Allegany Mountains, and is called the Allegany, till it's junction with the Monongahela, at Fort Pitt, when it firſt receives the name of Ohio. It runs a courſe of near 1200 miles, in a SW. direction till it joins the Miſſiſſippi, about 10 miles above new Madrid, forming the N. boundary of the ſtate of Kentucky, and receiving, in it's courſe, numbers of large and ſmall rivers. The only diſadvantage this river has, is a rapid, one mile and a half long, and a mile and a quarter broad, called the Falls of Ohio, in lat. 38. 8. N. In this place the river runs over a rocky bottom, and the deſcent is ſo gradual, that the fall does not, probably, in the whole exceed 20 feet. When the ſtream is low, empty boats only can paſs and repaſs this rapid; their lading muſt be tranſported by land; but, when high, boats of any burden may paſs in ſafety. Excepting this place, there is hardly a finer river in the world for navigation by boats. At a ſalt-ſpring, near this river, very large bones have been found, far ſurpaſſing the ſize of any ſpecies of animals now in America. The head appears to have been about three feet long, the ribs ſeven, and the thigh bones about four; one of which is depoſited in the library in Philadelphia, and is ſaid to weigh ſeventy-eight pounds. The tuſks are above a foot in length, the grinders above five inches ſquare, and eight inches long. Specimens of theſe bones have been ſent to France and England, where they have been found, upon compariſon, to be remains of the ſame ſpecies of animal that produce the foſſil bones which have been diſcovered in Tartary, Chili, and ſeveral other places, both of the old and new continent. What animal this is, and by what means it's ruins are found in regions ſo widely different, and where none ſuch exiſts at preſent, is a queſtion of difficult deciſion. The bones bear a great reſemblance to thoſe of the elephant. There is no terreſtrial animal now known, large enough to produce them. The tuſks, with which they are equally furniſhed, equally produce true ivory. But, from the form of the teeth, it has been obſerved, that they muſt have belonged to a carnivorous animal, whereas the habits of the elephant are foreign to ſuch ſuſtenance, and his jaws totally unprovided with the teeth neceſſary for it's uſe. From the whole, it has been concluded, to the ſatisfaction of naturaliſts, that theſe bones belonged to a quadruped, now unknown, and whoſe race is probably extinct, unleſs it may be found in the extenſive continent of New Holland, whoſe receſſes have not yet been pervaded by the curioſity or avidity of civilized man.

OODOOANNULLAH, a town of Hindooſtan Proper, in Bengal, ſeated on the W. bank of the Ganges, which is high and bold, and at the foot of a chain of hills. The ſituation is eſteemed unhealthy, on account of the foreſts in it's vicinity. It was the ſeat of the government of Bengal, under ſultan Sujah, till he fell in the conteſt for empire with his brother Aurungzebe. The numerous ruins here and in the neighbourhood, evince his paſſion for building; and the great extent of many of them affords a proof of his magnificence. There ſtill remains a part of the palace, which, in his time, was nearly deſtroyed by fire. The zananah, the part inhabited by the females, was totally conſumed; and a tradition prevails here, that more than 300 women feel a ſacrifice to modeſty on this occaſion; none of them daring to ſave themſelves, from the dread of being ſeen by the men. Here is an elegant bridge over the Ganges, built by the ſame prince; and famous for the victory gained over Meer Coſſim, in 1764, by the late Major Adams; 82 miles N. by W. of Moorſhedabad. OONALASHKA, one of the iſlands of the Northern Archipelago, viſited by Captain Cook in his laſt voyage. The native inhabitants of this iſland are, to all appearances, a very peaceable people, having been much poliſhed by the Ruſſians, who now keep them in a ſtate of ſubjection. As the iſland furniſhes them with ſubſiſtence, ſo it does, in ſome meaſure, with clothing, which which is chiefly compoſed of ſkins. The upper garment, which is made like a waggoner's frock, reaches down to the knees. Beſide this, they wear a waiſtcoat or two, a pair of breeches, a fur cap, and a pair of boots, the legs of which are formed of ſome kind of ſtrong gut; but the ſoles and upper-leather are of Ruſſia leather. Fiſh, birds, roots, berries, and even ſea-weed, compoſe their food. They dry quantities of fiſh during the ſummer, which they lay up in ſmall huts for their uſe in winter. They did not appear to be very deſirous of iron, nor to want any other inſtrument, except ſewing needles, their own being formed of bone. With theſe they ſew their canoes, and make their clothes, and alſo work very curious embroidery. They uſe, inſtead of thread, the fibres of plants, which they ſplit to the thickneſs required. All ſewing is performed by the females, who are ſhoe-makers, taylors, and boat builders. They manufacture mats, and baſkets of graſs, which are both ſtrong and beautiful. There is, indeed, a neatneſs and perfection in moſt of their works, which ſhows they are deficient neither in ingenuity nor perſeverance. Lat. 53. 5. N. lon. 165. 0. W.

Oosteborch, a town in the iſland of Cadſand, 4 miles NE. of Sluys.

Oostenby, a town of Sweden, in the iſland of Oeland, 27 miles S. of Borkholm.

Oporto, or Porto, a handſome city and ſea-port of Douro, in Portugal, with an excellent harbour. It is noted for it's ſtrong wines, upwards of 80,000 pipes of which are exported annually; whence all red wines that come from Spain or Portugal to England, are called Port wines. The road is ſpacious, and will contain a large fleet; that from Brazil ſometimes rides here. Next to Liſbon, it is the richeſt, moſt populous, and moſt commercial town in the kingdom. Here is an arſenal for fitting out ſhips of war, which are built in the docks. It is ſeated on the declivity of a mountain, about 3 miles from the mouth of the Douro, and 147 N. by E. of Liſbon. Lat. 41. 10. N. lon. 8. 21. W.

Oppeln, a town of Sileſia, capital of a principality of the ſame name, with a fine hoſpital. The chief tribunal of juſtice, and the firſt conſiſtory of Sileſia, were ſettled here in 1742. The principality contains 27 towns, and but few villages, it is fortified in the ancient manner, and is ſeated on the river Oder, 35 miles SE. of Breſlau.

Or, or Ore, a river in Suffolk, which runs into the ſea at Orford Haven.

Orach, a town of Turkiſh Boſnia.

Oran, a town of Tremeſen, in Barbary, with ſeveral forts, and an excellent harbour. It is ſeated partly on the ſide of a hill, and partly on a plain, almoſt oppoſite to Carthagena, in Spain. It is about a mile and a half in circumference, and is held by the Spaniards. On the 8th of October, 1790, this place was nearly deſtroyed by an earthquake, little but the exterior walls being left ſtanding; and 2000 perſons periſhed on this occaſion. It is 160 miles W. by S. of Algiers. Lat. 36. 2. N. lon. 0. 8. W.

Orange, an ancient and conſiderable town in the department of Drome. It was an important place in the time of the Romans. The triumphal arch, viſited by connoiſſeurs, and which is 200 paces from the town, was formerly within it's limits. This arch, which was much damaged in 1707 and 1709, was erected by Caius Marius and Luctatius Catulus, after the victory which they obtained over the Cimbri and the Teutones. Here are alſo the remains of a fine amphitheatre, ſome aqueducts, &c. which eſcaped the fury of the Goths and Saracens. The principality is about 10 miles long, and 7 broad, containing one city, two ſmall towns, and nine villages. The ſovereignty of it was lodged in the Houſe of Naſſau, from 1598 to 1702, when it reverted to Frederic William, king of Pruſſia, on the death of William III. king of England, and ſtadtholder of Holland. By the treaty of Utrecht, it was ceded to the houſe of Bourbon. Orange is ſeated in a fine plain, on the little river Aigues, 26 miles N. of Avignon. Lat. 44. 9. N. lon. 4. 49. E.

Orbassan, a town of Piedmont.

Orbe, an ancient handſome, and pleaſant town of Switzerland, in the Pays de Vaud, and capital of a bailiwick, whoſe ſovereignty is divided between the cantons of Bern and Friburg. It is ſeated on a river of the ſame name. It's romantic ſituation, the boldneſs of the ſingle-arched bridge projecting over the Orbe, the wild ſcenery on the banks of that river, it's frequent cataracts, and the various picturesque views views in the neighbourhood, are much admired by travellers, It is 24 miles SW. of Fribourg.

ORBITELLO, a ſea port of Sienna, with a good harbour, and well fortified, but ſubject to Naples.

ORBE, a river of France, which riſes in the mountains of the Cevennes, waters Beziers, and falls into the Gulf of Lyons, 5 miles below that town.

Orby, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Spilſby.

ORCADES, or ORKNEYS, a cluſter of iſlands on the N. of Scotland, from which they are ſeparated by a channel, 20 miles in length, and 6 in it's neareſt breadth. Their number has generally been reckoned 30, of which 26 are inhabited: the reſt are called holms, and are uſed only for paſturage. The principal one, called the the Main Land, or Pomona, greatly exceeds the others in extent. Beyond this iſland, to the NE. are ſeen, among others, Rowſay and Weſtra, Shappinſha and Edda, Stronſa, Sanda, and N. Ronalſha. To the S. appear the Iſles of Hoy and S. Ronalſha, with others of inferior note. The currents and tides, which flow between theſe iſlands, are extremely rapid and dangerous; and, near the ſmall Iſle of Swinna are two whirlpools, that have been known to ſnatch in boats and light veſſels, which were inſtantly ſwallowed up. The ſtrait, called Pentland Frith, which divides theſe iſlands from the county of Caithneſs, is likewiſe very dangerous to thoſe who are not well acquainted with the tides and currents; eſpecially in paſſing the Pentland Skerries, a cluſter of rocks that lie in the E. entrance of the Frith. Springs of pure water are found in all the mountainous parts of theſe iſlands; and there are numerous lakes and rivulets abounding in fiſh. The heath on theſe mountains ſhelters groufe, plovers, ſnipes, &c. but here are neither partridges, hares, nor foxes. There are numbers of ſheep and ſmall black cattle. The products of the valleys and plains are bear (an inferior kind of barley) and oats, but no other ſort of grain. The climate of theſe iſlands is unfavourable; although they do not ſuffer ſo much from froſt and ſnow, as might be ſuppoſed from their northerly poſition. In general, the air is moiſt; and they are often viſited by dreadful ſtorms of wind, rain and thunder. Their longeſt day is 19 hours and a half; their ſhorteſt four and a half. Thus, for about three weeks in midſummer, they enjoy the ſight of the ſun, almoſt without intermiſſion; but, for the ſame ſpace in winter, that luminary hardly riſes above the horizon, and is commonly obſcured by clouds and miſts. In this gloomy ſeaſon, the abſence of day is ſupplied partly by moon-light. But the radiance of the Aurora Borealis contributes ſtill more effectually to ſupply this want. The almoſt inceſſant corruſcations of theſe meteors, are, indeed, ſublimely beautiful; and we, who only ſee the extremities of theſe northern phænomena, have but a faint idea of their ſplendor and their motions, in the higher latitudes. The inhabitants are robuſt and hardy; the inferior claſſes are active and induſtrious, while thoſe of ſuperior rank are diſtinguiſhed for politeneſs and hoſpitality. The Teutonic, or Pictiſh, language was in general uſe here till the laſt century; but, except in Foula, where a few words are ſtill known by aged people, it is quite loſt. The Engliſh language, with a Norwegian accent, is now generally ſpoken in theſe iſlands, although many of the inhabitants uſe the Norſe. The principal trade of theſe iſlands is with Leith, Hamburg, and Bergen. Their chief exports are linen and woollen yarn, ſtockings, butter, dried fiſh, herrings, oils, feathers, and ſkins of various kinds, and kelp. The Orkneys contain about 23,000 inhabitants, who are divided into 3 preſbyteries, and 18 miniſteries.

ORLEANOIS, a ci-devant province of France, which, with the Blaiſois and Chartrain, is divided into the three departments of Loir and Cher, Loiret, and Eure and Loir. It is divided by the river Loire into the Upper and Lower, and is a very plentiful country. Orleans is the capital.

ORLEANS, a large, ancient, rich, and handſome city of France, capital of the dept. of Loiret. It is built in the form of an oval, and contains 6 principal gates, 22 pariſhes, and about 40,000 people. The ſtreets are ſpacious, but the houſes are generally ill-built. That of the Fauxbourg of Paris is of a prodigious length. The commerce conſiſts in wine, brandy, corn, grocery, and particularly ſugar, which is brought raw from Nantes and Rochelle. One year with another, 100,000 cwts. of loaf ſugar are ſent from Orleans; great part of which is taken by the merchants of Paris. Sheep-ſkins and ſtockings, both knit and woven, form alſo a conſiderable article of trade. This city has, or lately had, a ſociety of natural philoſophy, natural hiſtory, &c. and a public library. The environs are very pleaſant; particularly the fauxbourg, or ſuburb, of Olivet, which is on the left ſide of the Loire, which has a communication with the city by a bridge, the boldneſs and lightneſs of which are equally admired. It conſiſts of 9 arches; the centre one of which is 100 feet wide. Orleans is ſeated on the river Loire, and is 30 miles NE. of Blois, and 60 SSW. of Paris. Lat. 47. 54. N. lon. 1. 59. E.

ORMUS, an iſland at the entrance of the Gulf of Perſia, about 10 miles in circumference. Here is neither ſweet water nor graſs, it being, ſtrictly ſpeaking, no better than a rock of ſalt. The very duſt of the country, within land, is white and pure, as well as pungent to the taſte. It was formerly the greateſt mart in the Eaſt, being viſited by ſhipping from India, Africa, Egypt, and Arabia, as well as by caravans, who carried on a regular trade acroſs the country, and brought with them vaſt quantities of the richeſt and moſt valuable commodities. At certain ſeaſons of the year, there was a prodigious reſort of merchants from all countries, beſides factors who conſtantly reſided here, particularly Venetians. The houſes were then about 4000 in number, and contained 40,000 inhabitants. The Portugueſe conquered this iſland in 1507, and kept it till 1622, when the Perſians, by the aſſiſtance of an Engliſh ſquadron of 9 ſail, took the place and demoliſhed the houſes. The trade was then transferred to Gambron. It is now almoſt deſerted, yet is ſtill the key of the Perſian Gulf, on account of the commodiouſneſs of its harbour. Lat. 27. 20. N. lon. 56. 25. E.

* Oswestry, a town of Shropſhire, ſeated near the head of a ſmall river. It has ſome trade from Wales in flannels; and is 18 miles NW. of Shrewſbury, and 174 NW. of London. Market on Monday.

Oswicczen, a town of Poland, in Cracovia. It has a great trade in ſalt, and is ſeated on the Viſtula, 32 miles W. of Cracow.

Oſyth, St. Eſſex, ſituated near the ſea, 12 miles SE. of Colcheſter.

Otaha, one of the Society Iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean. It lies N. of Ulitea; and is divided from it by a ſtrait, which, in the narroweſt part, is not more than 2 miles broad. This iſland is ſmaller than Ulitea, and not ſo fertile, but it has two very good harbours.

Otaheitee, one of the Society Iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 90 miles in circumference, ſuppoſed to have been ſeen by Quiros in 1606. It was firſt diſcovered to the Engliſh by Captain Wallis, in 1767, who called it George the Third's Iſland. Bougainville next arrived at it in 1768, and ſtaid 10 days. Cook, in the Endeavour, came hither, in 1769, to obſerve the tranſit of Venus, ſailed round the whole iſland in a boat, and ſtaid 3 months. It has ſince been viſited twice by that celebrated navigator. It was viſited alſo, in 1774, by two Spaniſh ſhips from Lima. It conſiſts of two peninſulas, great part of which is covered with woods and forests, conſiſting partly of bread-fruit trees, palms, cocoa-nut trees, plantains, bananas, mulberries, ſugar-canes, and others peculiar peculiar to that climate, particularly of a kind of ananas, or pine-apple, caſuarinas, and dragon trees. The people have mild features, and a pleaſing countenance. They are about the largeſt ſize of the Europeans, of a clear olive or brunette complexion, with fine black hair and eyes, and wear a piece of cloth round their middle, of their own manufacture, and another wrapped about the head, in various picturesque ſhapes, like a turban. The women, who are accounted very handſome, wear a piece of cloth, with a hole in the middle, through which they paſs their heads, ſo that one part of the garment hangs down behind, and the other before, to the knees; a fine white cloth, like muſlin, paſſes over this, in various elegant turns, round the body, a little below the breaſt, forming a kind of tunic, of which one turn ſometimes falls gracefully acroſs the ſhoulder. "This dreſs," ſays Mr. Forſter, "appeared more advantageous to the human figure, than any modern faſhion we had hitherto ſeen. Both ſexes are adorned, or rather diſfigured by thoſe black ſtains, occaſioned by puncturing the ſkin, and rubbing a black colour into the wounds. This operation is performed upon the youth of both ſexes, when about 12 or 14 years of age. No language ſeemed eaſier to acquire than theirs, every harſh and ſibilant conſonant being baniſhed from it, and almoſt every word ending in a vowel. The only requiſite is a nice ear to diſtinguiſh the numerous modifications of their vowels." The houſes of the natives conſiſt only of a roof, thatched with the long prickly leaves of the palm nut tree, and ſupported by a few pillars made of the bread-fruit tree. As a roof is ſufficient to ſhelter the natives from rains and nightly dews, and as the climate of this iſland is one of the fineſt in the world, the houſes have ſeldom any walls, but are open on all ſides. Various little birds were found among the ſhrubs and trees, that had a very agreeable note, though common report among the Europeans, has denied the powers of harmony to the birds of warm climates. The birds moſt common are two ſorts of paroquets, one of a beautiful ſapphaire blue, another of a greeniſh colour, with a few red ſpots; a king's fiſher, of a dark green, with a collar of the ſame hue round his white throat; a large cuckoo; ſeveral ſorts of pigeons or doves, herons, and ducks. The cloth of the natives is made of the fibrous bark of the mulberry tree, which is beaten with a kind of mallet; and a glue made of the hibiſcus eſculentus, is employed to make the pieces of bark cohere together. Some of theſe pieces are 2 or 3 yards wide, and 50 yards long. The colours with which they dye this cloth are principally red and yellow. The red is exceedingly beautiful, and of a brighter and more delicate colour than any known in Europe. Their matting is alſo finer and better, in every reſpect, than any we have in Europe. They are alſo exceedingly neat in making baſket and wicker work. Their fiſhing lines are alſo the beſt in the world, made of a kind nettle which grows in the mountains, holding the ſtrongeſt and moſt active fiſh, ſuch as bonettas and albicores. It is remarkable, that though the natives of this iſland far excel moſt of the Americans in the knowledge and practice of the arts of ingenuity, yet they had not invented any method of boiling water; and, having no veſſel that could bear the fire, they had no more idea that water could be made hot, than that it could be made ſolid. The only quadrupeds found upon the iſland, are hogs, domeſtic dogs, and rats, which the inhabitants ſuffer to run about at pleaſure, without ever trying to deſtroy them. The ſea ſupplies them with a variety of excellent fiſh. Long nails on the fingers are a mark of diſtinction among the natives, as among the Chineſe, as they imply that ſuch perſons only as have no occaſion to work, could ſuffer them to grow to that length. The two ſexes here eat ſeparately, as in many other countries. Their burying places, called Morai, are built of ſeveral ranges of ſtones, like ſteps, each about three feet and a half in height, and covered with graſſes, ferns, and ſmall ſhrubs. At a little diſtance is an oblong incloſure round it, made of ſtone, about three feet high. The proviſions of the Otaheiteans are chiefly fiſh, pork, cocoanuts, bread-fruit, and bananas. Their pork is exceedingly delicious, and entirely free from that luſcious richneſs which makes it reſiſt the ſtomach ſo ſoon in Europe. The fat is ſaid to be little ſhort of marrow, and the lean to have the tender taſte of veal; the principal cauſe of which ſeems to be the vegetable diet they are uſed to. Beſides, they are much cleanlier than the European hogs, and have not their cuſtom of wallowing in the mire. They are of the ſmall breed, which is commonly called the Chineſe, and have the pendulous ears of oxen. The natives employ ſea-water as a ſauce both to fiſh and pork. A proof of the ſecurity in which they live, appears in this, that their houſes are left entirely open, without either doors or bars. Nothing can exceed their agility in ſwimming, diving, and climbing trees. Mr. Forſter is laviſh in his praiſes of the gentleneſs, good nature, and hoſpitality of this people; and alſo of the beauty, elegance, and graceſulneſs of the air, features, and perſons of many of them, particularly thoſe of the better ſort. On the coaſt are ſeveral excellent bays and harbours, with room and depth of water ſufficient for the largeſt ſhips. The whole iſland could furniſh about 6780 fighting men. The ſea affords them a great variety of fiſh, in every expedient for taking which they are exceedingly ingenious.

Otenby, Linc. NW. of Caſtor. Otes-Hall, Eſſex, 3 miles from Harlow. Otford, Kent, 3 miles N. of Sevenoaks. Otham, Kent, 2 miles SE. of Maidſtone. Otherton, Staff. near Penkridge. Otley, Shropſ. near Elleſmere. Otley, Suffolk, W. of Dallinghoe.

Otmore, Oxfordſ. near Iſlip.

OTOQUE, an iſland in the Bay of Panama.

OTRANTO, or TERRA D'OTRANTO, a province of the kingdom of Naples, bounded on all ſides by the ſea, except towards the NW. where it is joined to Bari. It is about 60 miles in length, and from 20 to 25 in breadth, and is a mountainous country, abounding in olives, figs, and wine; but it is often viſited by locuſts, and by Algerine pirates, who carry all the people they catch into ſlavery.

OTRANTO, a city of Naples, capital of Terra d'Otranto, is a large, handſome place, with a commodious harbour. It is ſeated on the Adriatic, 37 miles SSE. of Brindiſi.

OTRICOLI, a town of Spoleto.

OTTENWALD, a ſmall territory in the palatinate of the Rhine, between the rivers Maine and Necker, and on the confines of Franconia, and of Mentz.

OTTONE, a town of Genoa.

Otter, a river of Devonſhire, which falls into the ſea near Otterton, 8 miles below St. Mary Ottery. Otterburn, Hants, S. of Winchester. Otterburn, Northumb. near Elleſdon. A battle was fought here, in 1388, between the Engliſh, under the Earl of Northumberland and his two ſons, Henry and Ralph Percy, and the Scots, under Sir W. Douglas. The intrenchments, and a number of tumili, ſcattered over the adjacent ground, are viſible to this day. Otterburn, Yorkſ. S. of Settle. Otterden, Kent, 3 miles NE. of Lenham. Otterford Somerſ. OTTERY ST. MARY, or AUTRY, a town of Devonſhire, ſeated on the ſmall river Otter, 10 miles E. of Exeter, and 162 W. by S. of London. Market on Tueſday.

Ottery-Mohuns, Devonſ. on the Otter river, above Honiton. Ottery-Up, Devonſ. S. of Otterford.

OUDE, a ſoubah, or province of Hindooſtan, ſubject to a nabob, whoſe dominions lie on both ſides of the Ganges, occupying (with the exception of the diſtrict of Rampour) all the flat country between that river and the mountains of Thibet, as well as the principal part of that fertile tract, lying between the Ganges and Jumna, known by the name of Dooab, to within 40 miles of the city of Delhi. The dimenſions of Oude and it's dependencies are eſtimated, by Major Rennel, at 360 miles in length from E. to W. and in breadth from 150 to 180. The capital is Lucknow. The nabob is in alliance with the Britiſh power, and a brigade of the Bengal army is conſtantly ſtationed on the weſtern frontier, covering Oude as well as Bengal, and keeping the weſtern ſtates in awe. The whole expence of this eſtabliſhment is paid by the nabob of Oude, under the name of a ſubſidy.

OUDE, an ancient city of Hindooſtan Proper, in the ſoubah of Oude, the remains of which are ſeated on the Ganges, nearly adjoining Fyzabad. It is ſaid to have been the firſt imperial city of Hindooſtan, and to have been built by their hero Kriſhen. In Colonel Dow's tranſlation of Ferishta's hiſtory, it is mentioned, as the capital of a great kingdom, 1209 years before the Chriſtian era; and it is frequently mentioned in the Mahaberet, the famous Hindoo work in Shanſcrit, (the learned language of the Bramins) under the name of Ajudia. But whatever may have been it's former magnificence, ſcarcely any traces of it are left. It is conſidered as a place of ſanctity; and the Hindoos frequently come hither, in pilgrimage, from all quarters of India.

OUDENARD, a rich and ſtrong town of Flanders,

Flanders, on the river Scheldt. They have a manufacture of very fine linen, and of curious tapestry. This town was besieged by the French in 1708, but they were compelled to raise the siege by the Duke of Marlborough, who entirely routed their army, (commanded by the Dukes of Burgundy and Vendome) and took 5000 prisoners. It is 12 miles S. of Ghent.

OUDENBURG, a town of the late Austrian Flanders, 8 miles SE. of Ostend.

OUDIPOUR, or MEYWAR, a province of Hindoostan, belonging to the Rajpoots, 100 miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth. The rana, or prince of Oudipour, is a sort of head of the Rajpoot states, receiving homage from them by a long-established custom, but not claiming superiority in any other way.

OUDIPOUR, the capital of a circar in the country of Agimere, Hindoostan.

Ouſburn, Great and Little, Yorkſ. SE. of Boroughbridge. Ouſby, Cumberland, near Kirk-Oſwald.

OUSE, a river of Suſſex, riſing from two branches, one of which has it's ſpring in St. Leonard's Foreſt, near the ſource of the Arun; the other, in the Foreſt of Worth; but they ſoon unite to the S. by Lewes, into one ſtream, which, entering the Engliſh Channel, forms the harbour of Newhaven.

OUSE, GREAT, a river which riſes near Brackley, in Northamptonſhire, waters Buckingham, Stony Stratford, Newport-Pagnel, Olney, and Bedford, where it is navigable. Thence it proceeds to St. Neots, Huntingdon, St. Ives, Ely, and Lynn, below which it enters the Lincolnſhire Waſhes, or German Ocean.

OUSE, LITTLE, a river which riſes in the S. part of Norfolk, and divides that county from Suffolk, as it flows weſtward. It becomes navigable at Thetford, and falls into the Great Ouſe near Downham.

OUSE, NORTHERN, a river of Yorkſhire, formed by the junction of the Ure and Swale, which riſe near each other in the romantic tract, called Richmondſhire. Theſe, after collecting all the rills from this mountainous region, unite at Aldborough, and thence take the name of the Ouſe, which now forms a large river. It flows through York, where it is navigable for conſiderable veſſels, and afterward, receiving the Wharfe from the NW. the Derwent from the NE. and the Aire, formed by the united Aire and Calder, from the W. and joined, near it's termination in the Ouſe, by the Dun from the SW. it falls into the Humber.

OWERRA, OVEIRO, or OESE, a territory of Guinea, dependant on Benin, with a town of the ſame name, on the river Formoſa. The air is unwholeſome, and the ſoil dry and lean; however, there are ſeveral kinds of fruits, ſuch as bananas and cocoa-nuts. The inhabitants are ſtout, and are all marked with three inciſions; one on the forehead, and one on each temple.

Owerſey, Linc. NW. of Market-Raiſin. Owers Rocks, E. of the Iſle of Wight. Owghton-Head, Herts, the ſource of that river, near Hitchin.

OWHYHEE, the eaſternmoſt and largeſt of the Sandwich Iſlands. It's greateſt length, from N. to S. is 28 leagues, and it's breadth 24. It is divided into ſix diſtricts, two of which, on the NE. ſide, are ſeparated by a mountain, that riſes in three peaks, perpetually covered with ſnow, and may be ſeen clearly at 40 leagues diſtance. To the N. of this mountain, the coaſt conſiſts of high and abrupt cliffs, down which fall many beautiful caſcades; and the whole country is covered with cocoa-nut and bread-fruit trees. The peaks of the mountain, on the NE. ſide, appear to be about half a mile high, and are entirely covered with ſnow. To the S. of this mountain, the coaſt preſents a proſpect of the moſt dreary kind, the whole country appearing to have undergone a total change from the effects of ſome dreadful convulſion. The ground is every where covered with cinders, and interſected in many places with black ſtreaks, which ſeem to mark the courſe of a lava that has flowed, not many ages back, from the mountain to the ſhore. The ſouthern promontory looks like the mere dregs of a volcano. The projecting headland is compoſed of broken and craggy rocks, piled irregularly on one another, and terminating in ſhort points; yet, amid theſe ruins, are many patches of rich ſoil, carefully laid out in plantations. The fields are incloſed by ſtone fences, and are interſperſed with groves of cocoa-nut trees. There are ſuppoſed to be on this iſland about 150,000 inhabitants. It was here, on Feb. 14, 1779, that the celebrated Captain Cook fell a ſacrifice to a ſudden impulſe of revenge in the natives, with whom whom he unfortunately had a misunderstanding or dispute. Lat. 19. 28. N. lon. 156. 0. W.

*OXFORD, the capital of Oxfordfhire, is feated at the confluence of the Thames and Cherwell, on an eminence almoft furrounded by meadows, except on the E. fide. The whole town, with the fuburbs, is of a circular form, 3 miles in circumference. It conſiſts chiefly of two fpacious ſtreets, which croſs each other in the middle of the town. The origin of the univerſity is involved in obſcurity; a certain proof of it's great antiquity. Alfred, who reſided at Oxford, together with his three ſons, is ſaid to have founded three ſchools, or colleges here; one for philoſophy, another for grammar, and a third for divinity. It is generally ſuppoſed, however, to have been a ſeminary of learning before his time, although it owed it's revival and conſequence to his liberal patronage. About the middle of the 12th century, public lectures on the civil law were read here not more than ten years after a copy of Juſtinian's Inſtitutes had been found in Italy. In the reign of Henry III. there were ſaid to be 15,000 ſcholars, if they deſerve that name, the ſole object with many being only to read and write, while the greateſt number attained to neither, and the moſt learned acquired only bad Latin and logic. Here are 20 colleges and 5 halls, ſeveral of which ſtand in the ſtreets, and give the city an air of magnificence. It is thought, that there is not ſuch another group of buildings, nor ſuch another univerſity, at this day, in the world. The colleges are provided with ſufficient revenues for the maintenance of a maſter, fellows, and ſtudents. In the halls, the ſtudents live, either wholly or in part, at their own expence. The colleges are, Univerſity, Baliol, Merton, Exeter, Oriel, Queen's, New, Lincoln, All Souls, Magdalen, Brazen Noſe, Corpus Chriſti, Chriſt Church, Trinity, St. John Baptiſt's, Jeſus, Wadham, Pembroke, Worceſter, and Hertford. Of theſe, Baliol College is the firſt, according to Mr. Camden, that was endowed with a regular and permanent income, in 1269. The halls are, Alban, Edmund, St. Mary's, New Inn, and St. Mary Magdalen. Theſe laſt were anciently hotels, or inns, and were the only academical houſes originally poſſeſſed by the ſtudents of Oxford. Among the libraries in the univerſity, the moſt diſtinguiſhed is the Bodleian, founded by Sir Thomas Bodley; thoſe of All Souls College, Chriſt Church, Queen's, New College, St. John's, Exeter, and Corpus Chriſti. Among other public buildings, are the Theatre, the Aſhmolean Muſeum, the Clarendon Printing-Houſe, the Radcliffe Infirmary, and a fine Obſervatory. It is 20 miles SW. of Buckingham, and 58 W. by N. of London. Lat. 51. 45. N. lon. 1. 10. W. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

OXFORDSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the W. by Glouceſterſhire; on the N. by Warwickſhire and Northamptonſhire; on the E. by Bucks, and a part of Berks; and on the S. by Berks. It's extreme length is 48 miles; it's greateſt breadth 36. It contains 14 hundreds, 1 city, 12 market-towns, and 207 pariſhes, and about 450,000 acres. The air is ſweet, mild, pleaſant, and healthy.

The ſoil, though various, is fertile in corn and graſs. The ſouthern part of the county, eſpecially on the borders of Buckinghamſhire, is a hilly and woody country, having a continuation of the Chiltern Hills running through it. The north-weſtern part is alſo elevated and ſtony. The middle is, in general, a rich country, watered by numerous ſtreams, running from N. to S. and terminating in the Thames. Of theſe, the moſt conſiderable are the Windruſh, Evenlode, Cherwell, and Tame. The latter, although an inconſiderable rivulet, has obtained ſome celebrity from having been ſuppoſed to give name to the Thames, into which it flows above Wallingford. The products of Oxfordſhire are chiefly thoſe common to the midland farming counties. It's hills yield ochre, pipe-clay, and other earths, uſeful for various purpoſes. Corn and malt are tranſmitted from it, by the Thames, to the metropolis. Good cheeſe is made in the grazing parts. The greateſt want in this county is that of fuel; for the woods, with which it once abounded, being greatly diminiſhed, it is neceſſary to ſupply the deficiency of fire-wood with ſea-coal, brought, by a long and troubleſome navigation, from London. The junction of the Thames with the Trent and Merſey, by the canal from Braunſton to Hampton-Gay, and by another canal (for which an act of parliament was obtained in 1793) from Braunſton to Brentford, will greatly remedy this inconvenience. The moſt conſiderable foreſt now remaining in Oxfordſhire is that of Witchwood, between Burford and Charlbury. With reſpect to manufactures, the town of Witney, in this county, is famous for blankets.

PABBAY, one of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland. It is about 9 miles in circuit, and has corn, marl, and paſture.

PABLO, SAN. a lake of Quito, abounding with fiſh and wild fowl. On it's banks is a village of the ſame name.

PACAJES, a juriſdiction of La Paz, in Buenos Ayres. The air is temperate, and the paſtures are good.

PACEM, a town and kingdom on the N. coaſt of Sumatra, dependant on Achen. It is 120 miles SE. of Achen.

PACHACAMAC, a valley of S. America, in Peru, celebrated for a magnificent temple, built by the Incas of Peru, and dedicated to the Supreme Being. When Pizarro took this temple, he found an immenſe quantity of gold in it, beſides what the ſoldiers pillaged. It is about 12 miles S. of Lima.

PACHSU, a ſmall iſland near the coaſt of European Turkey, S. of Corfu.

PACIFIC OCEAN, otherwiſe called the SOUTH SEA, lies between Aſia and America, and is upward of 10,000 miles in breadth. This immenſe body of water may be ſaid alſo to ſtretch from pole to pole. When Magellan entered this ocean, through the dangerous ſtrait that bears his name, he ſailed three months and 20 days, in a uniform direction toward the NW. without diſcovering land. In the extreme diſtreſs which he ſuffered in this voyage, before he diſcovered the Ladrone Iſlands, he had the conſolation, however, of enjoying ſuch an uninterrupted courſe of fair weather, with favourable winds, that he beſtowed on this ocean the name of Pacific, which it ſtill retains. The Spaniards, having paſſed the Iſthmus of Darien, from N. to S. at the firſt diſcovery of this ocean, named it the South Sea, although, with reſpect to America, it is more properly the Weſtern Ocean. On one ſide of the equator it is called the N. Pacific Ocean; and, on the other, the S. Pacific Ocean.

PADERBORN, a conſiderable city of Weſtphalia, capital of a biſhopric of the ſame name. The rivulet Pader riſes here under the high altar of the cathedral. It has a celebrated univerſity, and is 37 miles SW. of Minden, and 43 ESE. of Munſter. Lat. 51. 46. N. lon. 8. 55. E.

PADERBORN, THE BISHOPRIC OF, is a ſmall diſtrict of Germany, in Weſtphalia, about 44 miles in it's greateſt length, and 36 in it's greateſt breadth. In the middle of it are high mountains, containing iron-mines; but the reſt of the country is fertile in corn and paſtures. It is moſt remarkable for it's bacon, or hams, and veniſon. The biſhop is a prince of the empire.

Padfield, Derbyſ. in the High Peak. Paddleſworth, Kent, 3 miles SE. of Elham. Paddleſworth, Kent, 3 miles N. of Weſt Malling. Padley, Derbyſ. in the High Peak, near Scarſdale. Padmore-Chace, Staffordſ. E. of Bloreheath. Padongre, Warwickſ. near Studley.

PADSTOW, a town in Cornwall, ſeated on the N. coaſt of the country, is a place of ſome trade to Ireland, Briſtol, and London. The harbour is capable of containing many large ſhips, but is of dangerous acceſs, without a ſkilful pilot, being rocky on the E. ſide, and barred with ſea-ſand on the W. The chief buſineſs here, and along this coaſt, next to the trade in ſlate-tiles, is fiſhing for herrings in October. It is 26 miles SSW. of Launceſton, and 243 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

PADUA, an ancient, large, and celebrated city of Italy, with an univerſity. It is capital of the Paduano, but is much leſs conſiderable than it was formerly; for great part of the circuit within the walls is unbuilt, and the town in general ſo thinly inhabited, that graſs is ſeen in many places, in the interſtices of the ſtones with which the ſtreets are paved. The houſes are built on piazzas, which, when the town was well inhabited, and in a flouriſhing ſtate, may have had a magnificent appearance; but they now rather give it a gloomy air. The ſtreets, alſo, in general, are narrow, dark, dirty, and ill-paved. The Franciſcan church is dedicated to St. Anthony, accounted the great patron of the city. "The body of this holy perſon," ſays Dr. Moore, "is incloſed in a ſarcophagus, under an altar in the middle of the chapel, and is ſaid to emit a very agreeable and refreſhing flavour. Pious Catholics believe this to be the natural effluvia of the ſaint's body; while heretics aſſert, that the perfume (for a perfume there certainly is) proceeds from certain balſams rubbed on the marble every morning, before the votaries come to pay their devotions. I never preſume to give an opinion on conteſted points of this kind; but I may be allowed to ſay, that if this ſweet odour really proceeds from the holy Franciſcan, he emits a very different ſmell from any of the brethren of that order whom I ever had an opportunity of approaching." The walls of this church are covered with votive offerings of ears, eyes, arms, legs, noſes, and every part almoſt of the human body, in token of cures performed by this ſaint; for whatever part has been the ſeat of the diſeaſe, a repreſentation of it is hung up in ſilver or gold, according to the gratitude or wealth of the patient. Near this building is a place, called the School of St. Anthony, where many of his actions are painted in freſco; ſome of them by Titian. The church of St. Juſtina, built from a deſign of Palladio's (reckoned by ſome one of the moſt elegant he ever gave) is remarkable, among many other things, for it's rich Moſaic pavement. The hall of the town-houſe is one of the largeſt in Europe, and contains the cenotaph of Livy, the hiſtorian, who was a native of Padua. The univerſity, formerly ſo celebrated, is now, like every thing elſe in this city, on the decline. Here is a cloth manufactory; and it is ſaid, that the inhabitants of Venice (the nobles not excepted) wear no other cloth than what is made here. The city, however, ſwarms with beggars, who do not aſk charity in the name of God, PAINSWICK, a town of Glouceſterſhire, has a manufacture of white cloths for the army, and for the India and Turkey trade; and hence is brought a ſtone, remarkable for it's beauty and neatneſs, for the pavement of floors. It is 7 miles SE. of Glouceſter, and 101 W. by N. of London. Market on Tueſday.

PAISLEY, a large manufacturing town or Renfrewſhire, in Scotland. It contains ſeveral broad and regular ſtreets, which have names deſcriptive of the various employments of the inhabitants; ſuch as Silk-Street, Cotton-Street, Lawn-Street, Gauze-Street, Incle Street, &c. in which are many good houſes. The principal manufactures are in ſilk and thread gauze, which are ſo neat and beautiful, that they have been diſplayed at court in the birth-day dreſſes. The extenſive cotton-works employ not only numbers of women, but even of very young girls. Some of the principal manufacturers here, who have become opulent, have built elegant houſes for their reſidence; and an idea of their great ſucceſs may be formed from this circumſtance, that they have been known to pay to the people they employ 500l. a week. "A fertile country," obſerves a late writer, "cheap labour, a ſober and ſteady people, abundance of coal, and water-carriage, were circumſtances that firſt invited Engliſh manufacturers to ſettle in this country; and the juſtneſs of their views has been fully evinced by the moſt proſperous ſucceſs." At preſent the ſilk branch, which for ſome years paſt out-did that of Spitalfields, is on the decline, but the muſlin has come in it's room, and the thread manufacture has conſiderably increaſed. Here are alſo conſiderable tan-works, ſome ſoap and candle-works, a manufacture of ribbons, and another of inkle or tape. According to a calculation made in 1784, the manufactures of Paiſley, in ſilk-gauze, lawn, linen-gauze, and white ſewing thread, amounted to the value of 579,185l. 16s. 6d. and 26,484 perſons were employed in carrying them on. The magnificent abbey for which Paiſley was once noted, is now partly in ruins; but there is a chapel entire, which is famous for a ſurpriſing echo. The flap of a door produces the effect of thunder; and a melodious tune delights the ear with the idea of celeſtial harmony. Paiſley is ſuppoſed to contain about one-third of the number of the inhabitants of Glaſgow; but it ſtands on nearly as much ground. It is 6 miles W. of that city.

PAITA, ST. MICHAEL DE, a town of Quito, in S. America, containing about 200 families. The bay or harbour is a ſecure anchoring place, the beſt on the coaſt, and is frequented by all veſſels coming from the north, which are bound to Callao, the port of Lima. Paſſengers alſo, from Acapulco or Panama, diſembark here, and travel by land to Lima, there being a tolerably good road parallel to the coaſt, with many towns and villages for the accommodation of travellers. Here is a ſmall fort, ſurrounded with a brick wall, and mounted with 8 pieces of cannon, but neither ditch nor out-work. Paita has been often taken by the Engliſh, and particularly by Commodore Anſon, in 1741, who plundered and burnt the town, becauſe the governor refuſed to ranſom it. Lat. 6. 12. S. lon. 81. 19. W.

PALENCIA, a town of Spain, in Leon.

PALERMO, anciently PANORMUS, a rich and beautiful city of Sicily, in the Val-di-Mazara; the ſeat of the viceroy, and capital of the iſland. It is ſituated near the extremity of a kind of natural amphitheatre, formed by high and rocky mountains; but the country that lies between the city and theſe mountains, is one of the richeſt and moſt pleaſant ſpots in the world; the whole appearing a magnificent garden, filled with fruit-trees of every ſpecies, particularly oranges, lemons, and Indian figs, and watered by clear fountains and rivulets, that form a variety of windings through this charming plain. From the ſingularity of this ſituation, as well as from the richneſs of the ſoil, Palermo has had many flattering epithets beſtowed upon it, particularly by the poets, who have denominated it the Conca d'Oro, the Golden Shell, which is at once expreſſive both of it's ſituation and richneſs. It has likewiſe been ſtyled Aurea Valle, Hortus Siciliæ, &c. The inhabitants of Palermo are eſtimated by Mr. Brydone, at 150,000. Two great ſtreets interſect each other in the centre of the city, where they form a handſome ſquare, called the Ottangalo, adorned with elegant uniform buildings. From the centre of this ſquare is ſeen the whole of theſe noble ſtreets, and the four great gates of the city which terminate them. Theſe gates are each at the diſtance of about half a mile, the diameter of the city being no more than a mile. They are elegant pieces of architecture, richly adorned; particularly the Porta Nuova, and the Porta Felice, terminating the great ſtreet called the Corſo, that runs from SW. and NE. The Porta Felice opens to the Marino, a beautiful walk, that conſtitutes one of the great pleaſures of the nobleſſe of Palermo. It has on one ſide the wall of the city, and on the other the ſea, whence there is always an agreeable breeze. In the centre of the Marino is an elegant kind of temple, which, in the ſummer, is made uſe of as an orcheſtra. The concert does not begin till the clock ſtrikes midnight; at which time the walk is crowded with carriages and people on foot; and there is an order, that no perſon, of whatever rank, ſhall preſume to carry a light. The flambeaux are extinguiſhed at the Porta Felice, where the ſervants wait for the return of the carriages; and the company generally continue an hour or two together in darkneſs, except when it is moon-light. The concert finiſhes about two in the morning. Many of the churches of Palermo are very rich and magnificent. The cathedral is a large, ancient, Gothic ſtructure, ſupported within by 80 columns of oriental granite, and divided into a great number of chapels, ſome of which are extremely rich, particularly that of St. Roſolia, the patroneſs of Palermo, who is held in great veneration. The relics of the ſilver, curiouſly wrought, and enriched with precious ſtones. Many miracles, it is pretended, are performed by them; and they are conſidered as the greateſt treaſures of the city. The monuments of their Norman kings, ſeveral of whom are buried here, as alſo of the emperors Henry V. and Frederic II. are of the moſt beautiful porphyry, ſome of them near 700 years old. The church of the late Jeſuits is equal in magnificence to moſt of the ſtructures in Italy. The Chieſa-del-Palazzo is entirely encruſted over with ancient Moſaic, and the vaulted roof is all of the ſame. "But it is endleſs," ſays Mr. Brydone, "to talk of churches: here are "upward of 300." Palermo is crowded with ſtatues of ſovereigns and tutelar ſaints, placed in ſmall courts and ſquares upon pedeſtals of coloſſal proportion and taſteleſs form. In the ſtreets the women hide their heads in black veils; a very ancient mode of dreſs in this iſland. The city is well lighted with reverberating lamps, and, in wet weather, moveable wooden bridges are provided for croſſing the kennels, which then become rapid torrents. The harbour is very dangerouſly open to the ſwell and ſea from the NE. quarter, and, even at the anchoring place, ſhips lie in peril whenever a weſterly wind blows, as it ruſhes with great impetuoſity through the valley of Colli between the mountains. In former times, the haven was within the town, compoſed of 2 long creeks, about 100 paces broad, and ſhut up with a boom. They were ſufficiently capacious for the ſlight tonnage then in uſe, but, about the year 1520, were choked with ſand thrown in by the ſea, or waſhed down by rain, and no poſſibility appearing of reſtoring a proper depth of water, they were quite filled up, and built upon. Indeed this city has ſuffered greatly at different periods, by earthquakes or inundations. About a mile from Palermo is a celebrated convent of Capuchins, in which is a vault made uſe of as a receptacle for the dead. It conſiſts of four wide paſſages, each about 40 feet in length, into which the light is admitted by windows at the ends. Along the ſides of theſe are niches, in which the bodies are ſet upright, clothed in coarſe garments, with their heads, arms, and feet bare. They are prepared for this ſituation by broiling them 6 or 7 months upon a gridiron, over a ſlow fire, till all the fat and moiſture are conſumed. The ſkin, which looks like pale-coloured-leather, remains entire, and the character of the countenance is in ſome degree preſerved. Except the bodies of two reputed ſaints, one of which had been there 150 years, and the other 100, they are all of modern date, as appears by an inſcription on a ſmall piece of paſteboard hung to the arms of every corpſe, ſignifying the name of the perſon, and the time of his deceaſe. In ſome of the higher niches they are laid out at full length, and at the top are children of 6 or 7 years of age. On the floors are handſome trunks, containing the bodies of perſons of diſtinction, the keys of which are kept by the relations. Here are ſome manufactures of ſilk and ſtuffs. Palermo is the ſee of an archbiſhop, and contains an univerſity. It is ſeated on the NW. ſide of the iſland, at the bottom of the bay of the ſame name, 162 miles S. by W. of Naples, and 235 S. by E. of Rome. Lat. 38. 15. N. lon. 13. 23. E.

PALESTINE, a country of Turkey in Aſia, ſo called from the Philiſtines, who inhabited it's ſea-coaſt. It is alſo called Judæa, from the Patriarch Judah; the Land of Canaan, and the Promiſed Land. From it's having been the ſcene of the birth, miniſtry, and death of Jeſus, it has been ſuperſtitiouſly denominated the Holy Land. It is divided from Syria on the N. by Mount Libanus, or Lebanon; from Arabia Deſerta on the E. by the mountains of Seir; and it has the deſerts of Arabia Petræa on the S. and the Mediterranean on the W. It is, in general, a fertile country, abounding, where cultivated, with corn, wine, and oil; and it might ſupply the neighbouring country with all theſe, as it anciently did, were the preſent inhabitants equally induſtrious. The parts about Jeruſalem, it's capital, are the moſt mountainous and rocky; but they feed numerous herds and flocks, and yield plenty of honey, with excellent wine and oil; and the valleys produce large crops of corn.

PALMERSTON'S ISLAND, an iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Cook, in 1774, and viſited by him in his laſt voyage. It conſiſts of a group of ſmall iſlands, about 10 in number, connected by a reef of coral rocks, and lying in a circular direction. This place admits of no anchorage, nor are there any inhabitants on it, though it abounds with cocoa-nuts, ſcurvy-graſs, and the wharra-tree. It does not exceed a mile in circumference, and is not elevated more than 3 feet above the level of the ſea. It conſiſts entirely of a coral ſand, with a ſmall mixture of blackiſh mould, which appeared to be produced from decayed vegetables. "Notwithſtanding this poor ſoil," ſays Cook, "it is covered with a variety of trees and buſhes. At one part of the reef, which looks into, or bounds the lake that is within, there was a large bed of coral, almoſt even with the ſurface, which afforded, perhaps, one of the moſt enchanting proſpects, that nature has any where produced. It's baſe was fixed to the ſhore, but reached ſo far in, that it could not be ſeen; ſo that it ſeemed to be ſuſpended in the water, which deepened ſo ſuddenly, that at the diſtance of a few yards, there might be 7 or 8 fathoms. The ſea was at this time, quite unruffled; and the ſun, ſhining bright, expoſed the various ſorts of coral in the moſt beautiful order; ſome parts branching into the water with great luxuriance, others lying collected in round balls, and in various other figures; all which were greatly heightened by ſpangles of the richeſt colours, that glowed from a number of large clams, which were every where interſperſed. But the appearance of theſe was ſtill inferior to that of the multitude of fiſhes, that glided gently along, ſeemingly with the moſt perfect ſecurity. The colours of the different ſorts were the moſt beautiful that can be imagined; the yellow, blue, red, black, &c. far exceeding any thing that art can produce. Their various forms, alſo, contributed to increaſe the richneſs of this ſubmarine grotto, which could not be ſurveyed without a pleaſing tranſport, mixed, however, with regret, that a work ſo ſtupendouſly elegant, ſhould be concealed in a place where mankind could ſeldom have an opportunity of rendering the praiſes juſtly due to ſo enchanting a ſcene." With reſpect to the animal creation, the moſt ſingular that Captain Cook obſerved, were ſome large eels, beautifully ſpotted, which, when followed, would raiſe themſelves out of the water, and endeavour, with an open mouth, to bite their purſuers. There was alſo a brown ſpotted rock fiſh, about the ſize of a haddock, ſo tame, that inſtead of ſwimming away, it would remain fixed, and gaze at them. Had they been in abſolute want, a ſufficient ſupply might have been had; for thouſands of the clams already mentioned, ſtuck upon the reef, ſome of which weighed 2 or 3 pounds. Lat. 18. S. Palmerſtown, in Dublin, Leinſter, 3 miles from the metropolis.

PALMYRA, formerly a magnificent city of Syria, capital of a kingdom, of which Zenobia was queen, who held it out a long time againſt the Romans, but was at length taken captive, and led in triumph through the ſtreets of Rome. The ſtupendous ruins of this city were viſited by Meſſrs. Wood and Dawkins, in 1751; and a ſplendid account of them, illuſtrated by plates,

the ſaint are preſerved in a large box of plates, was publiſhed by Mr. Wood, in 1753. This place, called likewiſe Tadmor in the Deſert, appears to have been built originally by Solomon, but the architecture of it's admired remains, is Grecian, in the opinion of the beſt judges, and thought to be coeval with the time of the Seleucidæ. The preſent inhabitants, conſiſting of 30 or 40 families, have erected their mud cottages within the ſpacious court of a magnificent temple of the ſun. Palmyra is ſituated in the midſt of a large ſandy plain, 90 miles E. of Damaſcus. Lat. 33. 20. N. lon. 38. 50. E.

PALNAUD, a diſtrict of Hindooſtan, included in the Carnatic, though ſituated between Golconda and the Guntoor Circar, S. of the river Kiſtna. It is about 70 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. Zimerycotta is the capital.

Pampocalta, Yorkſhire, SW. of Wetherby.

Pan, Iſle of Wight, in E. Medina.

PAN, or PAHAN, a ſea-port on the E. coaſt of Malacca, capital of a kingdom of the ſame name. It is remarkable for the great number of elephants, and for the plenty of pepper it produces. Lat. 3. 15. N.

PANAMA, a city of S. America, capital of a juriſdiction of the ſame name, with ſtraight and broad ſtreets, and elegant public buildings. The merchandiſe of Chili and Peru is brought to this place, particularly the gold and ſilver, and all the commodities brought up the river Chagre. The ſhips unload at a ſmall iſland, 3 miles from this place, becauſe the water is ſo ſhallow as not to admit them to come nearer. Old Panama was burnt by Captain Morgan, a buccaneer, in 1670, and the preſent town is 4 miles diſtant from it, in a more advantageous ſituation. The province contains 3 cities, 12 villages, and a great number of rancherias, or aſſemblages of Indian huts. Here are alſo ſeveral gold mines, but they are neglected for the ſake of the pearl fiſhery on the coaſt. It ſtands on a bay of the ſame name. Lat. 8. 48. N. lon. 80. 15. W.

PANARIA, one of the Lipari Iſlands, lying in the Tuſcan Sea. It is barren and very inconſiderable, being only 5 miles in circumference. It is 8 miles NNE. of Lipari, and 30 N. of Sicily; ſubject to the king of Naples.

PANAY, an iſland of the Philippines, of a triangular form, lying E. of Paragua. It is 180 miles in circumference, and is the moſt populous and fertile of them all. It is watered by a great number of rivers and brooks, and produces vaſt quantities of rice. The number of Indians tributary to the Spaniards is about 17,000.

Panborough, Somerſetſhire, W. of Wells.

Pancras, a village of Middleſex, a little to the NW. of London. The burying ground here, is remarkable for being the principal place of interment for the Romaniſts. At a public houſe, near it there is a medicinal ſpring. Here is an hoſpital for for inoculation, to which now is added the ſmallpox hoſpital formerly at Clerkenwell. Here alſo is the Veterinary College eſtabliſhed in 1791, for the improvement of farriery, and the treatment of cattle in general. The noble ſtables, and anatomical theatre, are finiſhed, but the preſent college is only a temporary building.

PANJAB, a country of Hindooſtan, being that which is watered by the 5 eaſtern branches of the Indus. It was the ſcene of Alexander's laſt campaign, and the ne plus ultra of his conqueſts. It forms a ſquare of about 250 miles, and includes the whole ſoubah of Lahore, and a great part of Moultan Proper. To the lower part of Moultan it is flat and marſhy, and inundated, like Bengal, by the periodical rains which fall during our ſummer.

Pannal, Yorkſ. near Knareſborough.

Pannanach Wells, a village of Aberdeenſhire, ſituated a little below the waterfall, called the Lin of Dee, in the valley of Glenmuick. It is noted for it's mineral waters, which are of a diuretic quality. A lodge has been erected for the accommodation of the company that frequent this place in ſummer.

PANNIPUT, a town of Delhi, in Hindooſtan. In a plain near this town, a battle was fought in 1761, between an army of 200,000 Mahrattas, and Abdallah, king of Candahar, at the head of 150,000 Mahometans, when the former were totally defeated. They loſt the flower of their army, with their beſt generals, and the number of Mahratta priſoners taken was almoſt incredible. From that period their power has been ſenſibly on the decline. Panniput is 50 miles NW. of Delhi.

Panſanger, 2 miles NW. of Hertford.

Panſton, Northumberland, S. of Learmouth.

Pant, a river in Eſſex, which falls into Blackwater-Bay.

PANTALARIA, an iſland in the Mediterranean, between Sicily and the coaſt of Tunis, about 25 miles in circumference, and containing 3000 inhabitants. PARA, or BELEM, a town, river, and juriſdiction in Braſil, on the N. ſide of the river Orellana. This government comprehends that part of Guiana which belongs to the Portugueſe, and extends 600 miles from E. to W. and 200 from N. to S. Lat. 1. 30. S.

Paracomb, Devonſ. near Comb-Martin.

PARAGUA, the moſt weſterly of the Philippine Iſlands, 180 miles in length, and 40 breadth. The Spaniards have a fort here, but the king is ſaid to be tributary to Borneo.

PARAGUAY, a large country of S. America, in the government of Buenos Ayres. It contains 6 provinces; namely, Paraguay Proper, Parana, Guaria, Uraguay, Tucuman, and La Plata, from which the whole country is alſo called La Plata, and has numerous lakes and rivers. Of the latter, the 3 principal are the Paraguay, Uraguay, and Parana, the united ſtreams of which form the celebrated Rio-de-la-Plata. Theſe rivers annually overflow their banks; and, on their receſs, leave them enriched by a ſlime, that renders the ſoil extremely fertile. This vaſt country is far from being wholly ſubdued, or planted by the Spaniards; many parts being ſtill unknown to them, as well as to every other European nation. The principal province of which we have any knowledge is that which is called La Plata, toward the mouth of the river of that name. This province, with all the adjacent parts, is one continued plain for ſeveral hundred miles; extremely fertile, and producing cotton in great abundance, tobacco, and the valuable herb called Paraguay, which is peculiar to this country, and the infuſion of which is drunk in all the Spaniſh provinces of S. America, inſtead of tea. They have alſo a variety of fruits, and very rich paſtures; but the country has but few woods or foreſts. The air is remarkably ſweet and ſerene. The Spaniards diſcovered this country, by ſailing up the Rio-de-la Plata in 1515, and founded the town of Buenos Ayres, on the S. ſide of the river. In 1580 the Jeſuits were admitted into theſe fertile regions, where they afterward founded, at the commencement of the 17th century, and with the permiſſion of Philip III. the famous miſſions of Paraguay; which were a number of colonies, each governed by two Jeſuits, one of whom was rector, and the other his curate. They undertook not only to make proſelytes to the church, but to open a new ſource of wealth to the mother country. To this end they repreſented, that they ought to be independent of the Spaniſh governors; and that as the vices of the Europeans might contaminate their new converts, and deſtroy the great objects of the miſſions, no other Spaniards ſhould be permitted to enter the country. To theſe terms the court agreed; they conſenting to a certain capitation tax on the natives, and to ſome other ſtipulations in favour of the crown. In proceſs of time, the Jeſuits, by the moſt wonderful addreſs and perſevering patience, and without the leaſt degree of force, acquired the moſt abſolute dominion, both eccleſiaſtical and civil, over the natives, whom they even inſtructed in military diſcipline. In 1757, the king of Spain exchanged the colonies on the E. ſhore of the river Uraguay for the Portugueſe colony of St. Sacrament, which cauſed that river to become the boundary of the reſpective poſſeſſions of the two crowns. This produced an inſurrection of the Indians, who were defeated by the Spaniſh governor, with the loſs of 2000 of them killed. In 1767, the court expelled the Jeſuits from S. America, and the natives, in courſe, were put upon the ſame footing with the other Indians of the Spaniſh part of that vaſt continent.

PARAIBA, a town and juriſdiction of Braſil, on the S. bank of a river of the ſame name, 9 miles from the ſea, and 60 miles N. of Fernambuco. The ſoil is pretty fertile, and produces ſugar-canes, and great number of trees of Braſil wood.

PARANA, a province of Paraguay, ſo named from a large river, which uniting with the Paraguay, and afterward with the Uraguay, forms the Rio-de-la-Plata.

Parham, Suffolk, on the river Ore, near Framlingham. Parham, Suſſex, near Amberley.

PARIA, or NEW ANDALUSIA, a country of Terra Firma, E. of Cumana, and NE. of the river Oronoko. Between the continent and the iſland of Trinidad, is a large bay, called the Gulph of Paria.

PARIA, a diſtrict of La Plata, in S. America.

PARILLA, or SANTA PARILLA, a town of Peru, in the audience of Lima, 50 miles S. of Truxillo.

PARIS, the capital of France, one of the largeſt, fineſt, and moſt populous cities of Europe. The river Seine, which croſſes it, forms 3 ſmall iſlands, called the Iſland of Louviers, the Notre Dame, and the Palace, which laſt is the ancient city of Paris. The iſland of the Palace takes it's name from a building which was formerly the reſidence of the kings, and afterwards was reſigned to the parliament. Clovis I. after the defeat of Alaric, made Paris the capital of his kingdom. It's circuit was much extended by Philip Auguſtus. It was greatly embelliſhed by Francis I. and his ſucceſſors. The inhabitants are computed to be 800,000. It is 2 leagues in diameter, and 6 in circumference, including the ſuburbs. It is ſuppoſed to contain 875 ſtreets, and 24,000 houſes, among which are many of five, ſix, and even ſeven ſtories. The rivers Yonne, Marne, and Oiſe, by their junction with the Seine, convey to Paris the commodities of Burgundy, Champagne, and Picardy; and this laſt river furniſhes it with the riches of Normandy, and the ſea, which is at the diſtance of 42 leagues. By means of the Loire, the Allier, and the canals of Orleans and Briare, and, by the Vienne, it has has communications with the other parts of the country. There are 9 principal bridges in Paris, 2 of which occupy the whole breadth of the Seine; namely, the Pont Neuf and the ci-devant Pont Royal; to which may be added the unfinished ci-devant Pont de Lewis XVI. begun in 1787. But it is here to be observed, that all the names of buildings, squares, streets, &c. in honour of their kings, and in compliment to royalty, have been totally changed, since the abolition of monarchy, toward the close of 1792. The Pont Neuf, the finest and most frequented of all the bridges, is 1020 feet long, by 72 broad, and has 12 arches; 7 of which are on the side of the Louvre, and 5 on the side of the street Dauphine. In the second arch of this bridge, on the side of the Louvre, is the Chateau de la Samaritaine (the Woman of Samaria) a small timber building of 3 stories, constructed, in 1712, on piles, and lately repaired. In the inside is a pump, which raises the water of the river, to distribute it by pipes to the Louvre, the Tuileries, &c. In the front, are two figures larger than the life, to represent Jesus at the well with the Woman of Samaria. A large shell, placed between these two figures, receives the water from the pump; and from this shell it falls, in a sheet, into a basin called Jacob's Well. Above is a sundial; and the whole is crowned by a leaden turret, which contains a set of chimes. The other bridges are Pont St. Michel, Pont-au-Change, le-Petit-Pont, Pont-Notre-Dame, Pont-de-la-Tournelle, Pont-Marie, and the Pont-Rouge. This last, which is a timber bridge, painted red, is the point of communication between the Isle-du-Palais and Isle St. Lewis. The public fountains are very numerous, and on some of them there is displayed very elegant sculpture. The public places, squares, &c. are also numerous and elegant. The finest are the Place-Dauphin, of a triangular form, built, and so named, by Henry IV. in memory of the birth of Lewis XIII.; the Place Royale, in which was the equestrian statue, of Lewis XIII. in bronze; the Place-Vendome, a square, with the angles truncated, in which was the equestrian statue, in bronze, of Lewis XIV. in a Roman habit; the Place-des-Victoires, of a circular form, in which was a statue of the same king, crowned by the heathen goddess Victory, with this arrogant inscription, Viro Immortali; and the Place-de-Lewis XV. of an octagon form, in which was an equestrian statue, in bronze, of that monarch. This square, which is now called the Place-de-la-Revolution, was the fatal scene of the execution of the unfortunate Lewis XVI. and afterward of his unhappy consort, Marie Antoinette, the former on the 21st of January, and the latter on the 16th of October, 1793. There are 3 triumphal arches, erected to Lewis XIV. and known by the names of Porte St. Bernard, Port St. Denis, and Porte St. Martin. The most interesting of the manufactures of Paris is that of the Gobelins (so called from a family of celebrated dyers, settled in this city in 1540) in which tapestries are made after the pictures of the greatest masters, to such perfection, that one, representing Lewis XV. a whole length, framed, and placed among the masterpieces of painting, was taken, for many days, by multitudes of visiters, for a finished piece. The manufacture of plate-glass likewise merits attention. The cathedral of Notre-Dame, a Gothic structure, is one of the largest in Europe, and contains 45 chapels. Next to the cathedral, the most distinguished churches were St. Sulpice, St. Eustache, St. Gervais, St. Etienne du-Mont, the old one of St. Genevieve, the new one of St. Genevieve (now called the Pantheon) those of St. Severin, St. Roch, and Val-de-Grace. The finest college in Paris was that of the Four Nations, called also Mazarin, from the name of the cardinal, it's founder. There were lately 6 academies in Paris; namely, the French Academy, founded by the cardinal Richelieu; that of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres, by Lewis XIV.; that of the Sciences; and those of Painting and Sculpture; Architecture; and Chirurgery. Among the public libraries, that lately called the king's, holds the first rank, in respect both to the extent of the buildings, and the number of the volumes. The other libraries are those of St. Genevieve, the College of Mazarin, St. Victor, of the Doctrinaires, of the Advocates, and of the faculty of Medicine. That of St. Germain-des-Prés, one of the richest in France, containing between 15 and 20,000 manuscripts, and near 100,000 volumes, is open every day to men of letters. The Royal (now National) Observatory is built of freestone, and neither iron nor wood formed a part of the erection. The Botanical Garden is extensive. The 4 principal palaces are the Louvre, the Tuileries, the Palais-Royal, now le Palais d'Egalité, and the Luxemburg. The Louvre is distinguished into the Old and New. The Old Louvre was begun by Francis I. in 1528; and the grand gallery, 1362 feet long and 30 broad, which joins it to the Tuileries, was begun under Charles IX. and finished by Lewis XIV. who likewise built, in 1665, the New Louvre. But it is still an unfinished structure. In some of the apartments, the ancient academies, viz. the French Academy, for the improvement of the French language; the Royal Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres; the Royal Academy of Sciences; and the Royal Academy of Paintings and Sculpture; have held their sittings; and in others are the work-shops and lodging-rooms of artists. The Tuileries, begun in 1564, by Catharine of Medicis, continued by Henry IV. and completed by Lewis XIV. takes it's name from it's situation in a place in which were formerly many tile-kilns (tuileries) which for three or four centuries, furnished the greatest part of the tiles used in Paris. The riding-house, belonging to it, is the place chosen by the national assembly for their sittings, when they removed from Versailles in 1789. The garden of the Tuileries, in front of the palace, and on the banks of the Seine, is unquestionably the finest public walk in Paris. From this palace, when attacked by the enraged populace on the 10th of August 1792, the unhappy Lewis XVI. went for an asylum to the hall of the national assembly, thence to a prison, and thence to the scaffold. The Palais Royal, in the interior, has been recently embellished with many beautiful buildings, with shops, coffee houses, and a garden, which render it like a perpetual fair, and one of the most pleasing walks in the city. The gardens of the palace of Luxemburg, also form a fine promenade. The Hotel-des-Invalides, for the wounded and superannuated soldiery, is a magnificent structure, built by Lewis XIV.; as is the Military School, in the Champ-de-Mars, which was founded by Lewis XV. Here are also grand theatres. The Monnoie, or Mint, is an elegant building, situated on that side of the Seine, which is opposite the Louvre. The Hotel-de-Ville, or Guildhall of the city, is an ancient structure, in the Place-de-Greve, which was heretofore the common place of execution. Before the revolution, Paris was the see of an archbishop, and contained 51 parish churches, 21 parochial, 17 collegiate churches; among which were 13 chapters, 40 chapels, 3 abbeys, 22 priories, and 50 convents for men, ecclesiastical and secular; 7 abbeys, 6 priories, and 53 convents for women; 12 seminaries, and 16 hospitals, 6 of which were appropriated to deserted children. Paris forms, with a small district round it, one of the departments of France, and is 245 miles SE. of London, 625 NW. of Vienna, and 630 NE. of Madrid. Lat. 48. 50. N. lon. 2. 25. E.

PARMA, an ancient, rich, populous, and handsome town of Italy, capital of the duchy of the same name, with a citadel and a university. It has a magnificent cathedral, and the largest and most beautiful opera-house in Italy, which will contain 12,000 spectators. The dome, and the church of St. John, are painted by the famous Corregio, who was a native of this place. Don Carlos, king of the Two Sicilies, carried away a library from this place to Naples, which contained 18,000 volumes, and a very valuable cabinet of curiosities, as also the rich collection of medals. In 1741, by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, the duchies of Parma, Placentia, and Guastalla, were given to Don Philip, brother to Carlos above mentioned. The number of inhabitants is estimated at 40,000. The principal trade of the place consists in stockings, and some other articles in silk. It is seated on the river Parma, 64 miles SSE. of Milan. Lat. 44. 50. N. lon. 10. 30. E.

PARMA, the duchy of, a province of Italy,

Italy, bounded on the N. by the Po, on the NE. by the Mantuan, on the E. by the duchy of Modena, on the S. by Tuſcany and Genoa, and on the W. by Genoa and the territory of Pavia. Under this name are commonly included the duchy of Parma Proper, the duchy of Placenza, and the duchy of Guaſtalla. The air is very wholeſome, and the inhabitants often live to a great age. The ſoil is fertile in corn, wine, oil, and hemp; the paſtures feed a great number of cattle, and the cheeſe is in high eſteem. Here are ſome conſiderable mines of copper and ſilver, and plenty of truffles. In 1345, the pope granted this duchy to his natural ſon, Peter Aloyſius, or Farneſe, the founder of the family of Farneſe. Elizabeth Farneſe, the only heireſs of the laſt duke, becoming queen of Spain, obtained Parma and Placenza for her ſons, and ſo it was ſettled at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle.

Parmſted, Kent, near Kingſton.

PARNASSUS, now called PARNASSO, a celebrated mountain of Livadia, in Greece. It has two heads, one of which was formerly famous for being conſecrated to Apollo and the Muſes, and the other to Bacchus. It is the higheſt in Greece, and from the top is a proſpect as far as Corinth. Here alſo is a fine fountain, ſuppoſed to be the ancient Caſtalia. It is 8 miles N. of Livadia.

Parndon, Great and Little, Eſſex, between Nettleſwell and Roydon. Parnham, Dorſetſhire, 5 miles N. of Bridport.

PAROS, an iſland of the Archipelago, one of the Cyclades, about 36 miles in circumference, and containing about 1500 families. The ſoil is well cultivated, and the paſtures feed a great number of flocks. Their trade conſiſts in wheat, barley, wine, pulſe, and calicoes; and in fine white marble alſo, which has long been in eſtimation for ſculpture. Before the war of Candy, it produced a great deal of oil, but the Venetian army burnt all the olive-trees. They have a great number of partridges and pigeons, which they ſell very cheap. Thoſe excellent ſtatuaries, Phidias and Praxiteles, were natives of this iſland, which was anciently dedicated to Bacchus, on account of it's excellent wines. The famous Arundelian marbles at Oxford, were brought from this iſland. It lies W. of Naxia, and Paros is the capital.

PAROS, a town of the Archipelago, capital of the Iſle of Paros, which was anciently the largeſt town of the Cyclades; but it is at preſent much reduced. The walls of the caſtle are built of ancient pieces of marble, and moſt of the columns are placed long-wiſe. Some of them that ſtand upright, ſupport cornices of amazing ſize. The natives build their houſes with marble, which they find ready cut to their hands, but they do not much trouble their heads about placing the pieces in a regular manner. Their fields likewiſe are incloſed with friezes, altars, and baſſo-relievos; however, the Engliſh, French, and Venetians have carried away the fineſt pieces they could meet with. The inhabitants are ſo ignorant now, that, inſtead of great ſculptors, and ſkilful architects, they have nothing but carvers of mortars and ſalt-cellars. It is ſeated on the ſouthern coaſt of the iſland. Lat. 37. 8. N. lon. 25. 44. E.

Parr, Lancaſhire, 3 miles from Preſcot.

PARRAMATTA, a town or ſettlement of Engliſh convicts, in New S. Wales. It is ſeated at the head of the harbour of Port-Jackſon, 11 miles W. of Sydney-Cove, between Roſe Hill and the landing-place in the creek which forms the head. In November 1791, near 1000 acres of land were either in cultivation, or cleared for that purpoſe. The ſoil, in moſt places, was found to be remarkably good, and to want cultivation only to be fit for any uſe, for the ground that has been the longeſt in cultivation bears the beſt crops. Lat. 33. 50. S. lon. 151. 39. E.

PARRET, a river of Somerſetſhire, which riſes in the ſouth part of the county, receives the Ordred, Ivel, and Thone, and enters the Briſtol Channel at Bridgewater-Bay. The tide ruſhes up this river with prodigious velocity and roaring.

Parton, Cumberland, a hamlet in Thurſby pariſh. Partridge-Green, Suſſex, in the parish of East Grinstead. Partrick, Derbyshire, in Ashborn parish.

PARYS, a mountain in the Isle of Anglesey, famous for a copper mine, probably the largest bed of ore of that metal hitherto discovered in the world. It is not wrought in the common manner of subterraneous mines, but, like a stone quarry, open to day; and the quantities of ore raised are prodigious. The ore is poor in quality, and very abundant in sulphur. The purest part is exported raw to the smelting works at Swansea and other places: the more impure is first calcined and deprived of most of it's sulphur on the spot. Quantities of nearly pure copper are obtained from the waters lodged beneath the bed of ore, by the intervention of iron. A lead ore, rich in silver, is also found in this mountain. The wealth and population of Anglesey have received a great increase from the discovery of this copper mine.

PAS, a town in the dept. of the Straits of Calais, 12 miles SW. of Arras.

PAS DE CALAIS, or STRAITS OF CALAIS, one of the departments of France, containing the late districts of Pays Reconquis, the Boulonnois, and part of Artois.

PASSAGE, in Cork, Munster, opposite Great Island, on which the town of Cove is situated. Large vessels are lightened here before they can go up to the city of Cork, the channel higher up admitting only those of 150 tons, when laden, though it stretches from shore to shore, above a mile.

PASSAGE, in Waterford, Munster, situated on the N. side of a steep hill. Here is an excellent road, where 500 sail of ships may ride safely, and which is the station of the packet-boats from Waterford to Milford-Haven.

PASSARO, a town of Noto, Sicily.

PASSARO, CAPE, anciently called PACHINUS, the SE. point of the Island of Sicily. It is not a peninsula, as represented in the maps, but a wretched barren island, about a mile round; with a fort, to protect the neighbouring country from the incursions of the Barbary corsairs, who are often very troublesome on this part of the coast. This island and fort are separated from the rest of Sicily by a strait about half a mile broad. Lat. 36. 35. N. lon. 15. 22. E.

PASSARO, a cape of Janna, in Greece, between the Gulfs of Arimiro and Zeton.

PASSARUAN, a town and kingdom of Java, on the NE. coast, 30 miles W. of Panarucan.

PASSAU, an ancient, handsome, and celebrated town in the circle of Bavaria. The houses are well built, and the cathedral is thought to be the finest in Germany. It is divided into four parts, namely, the town of Passau, Instadt, Iltzstadt, and the quarter wherein the bishop's palace is seated. It is seated on the Danube, at the confluence of the rivers Inn and Iltz, 62 miles E. by S. of Ratisbon, and 135 W. of Vienna. Lat. 48. 28. N. lon. 13. 37. E.

PASSAU, THE BISHOPRIC OF, a territory of Germany, in the circle of Bavaria, and lying between Lower Bavaria, Austria, and Bohemia. It's largest extent is no where above 20 miles; and it has no considerable place except Passau, the capital.

PASTRANA, a town of New Castile.

PATAGONIA, the most southern part of S. America, where a race of people have been discovered, who leading an unrestrained and savage life, are reported to be of a gigantic stature. "They are supposed," says Dr. Robertson, "to be one of the wandering tribes, which occupy that vast, but least known region of America, which extends from the river De-la-Plata to the Straits of Magellan. Their proper station is in that part of the interior country which lies on the banks of the river Negro; but in the hunting season they often roam as far as the straits which separate

Terra

Terra del Fuego from the main land. The firſt accounts of this people were brought to Europe by the companions of Magellan, who deſcribed them as going naked, notwithſtanding the inclemency of the climate, above eight feet high, and of ſtrength in proportion to their uncommon ſize. Some of the inhabitants ſeen by Captain Byron, in 1764, were about ſeven feet in height. Captains Wallis and Carteret, in 1766, found ſome of them to be from ſix feet, to ſix feet five and ſeven inches in height; but that of the greateſt part was from five feet ten inches to ſix feet. Mr. de Bougainville ſaw none below five feet ten inches, and none above ſix feet two inches; but the people of the Etoile had ſeen, in a preceding voyage, ſeveral that were ſix feet four inches and a half high. The leaſt of thoſe whom Giraudais ſaw, in 1766, were above five feet eleven inches high. M. Duclos Guyot, in the ſame year, ſaw none that wanted more than half an inch of meaſuring ſix feet. In the interior parts of the country, according to Mr. Falkner, there are tribes of a ſtill greater ſize. The great Cacique Cangapol was above ſeven feet high; and he had ſeen Indians of the tribe of the Puelches, more than an inch or two taller than Cangapol. Their colour is a kind of bronze. They are all painted, and clothed nearly in the ſame manner: the circles round the two eyes are ſome white and red, and ſome red and black. Their teeth are as white as ivory, remarkably even and well ſet. They have no other clothing than ſkins, which they wear with the hair inward, together with a piece of leather uſed as an apron. This ſeemingly barren country produces good paſtures; and numerous droves of wild horned cattle and horſes, firſt brought hither by the Spaniards, now cover the face of it. To the N. of La Plata it is covered with wood; but not a ſingle tree or ſhrub, fit for any mechanical purpoſe, is to be ſeen in all the country ſouthward of that river.

PATANE, a kingdom of Malacca, on the eaſtern coaſt, ſubject to Siam. The inhabitants are partly Siameſe, Chineſe, Malays, and Europeans; but they are all accounted very voluptuous. The air is wholeſome, though very hot, and they have no ſeaſons but the winter and ſummer; the former of which is more properly the rainy ſeaſon, and holds about 3 months, during the ſhorteſt of our days. The woods abound with elephants, and many wild animals. The Siameſe cultivate the land, and the Chineſe are artiſans. The principal town of the ſame name has a harbour, and contains between 7 and 8000 inhabitants. Lat. 6. 15. N.

PATAY, a town in the dept. of Loiret,

Patcham, Suſſex, E. of Arundel-Foreſt. Patcham, Suſſex, W. of Lewes. Patching, Suſſex, E. of Stening.

Patenham, Bedf. near Odehill. Pathhead, a manufacturing village of Fifeſhire, adjoining Kirkcaldy. Pathlow, Warwickſ. a hundred in the Conqueror's time, but now only a liberty, containing ſeveral towns, between Warwick and Alceſter. Patley-Bridge, Yorkſhire, W. Riding, over the Nid by Netherdale. Patmer-Hall, Herts, N. of Biſhop's Stortford.

PATMOS, an iſland of the Archipelago, now called Patino, ſituated on the coaſt of Natolia, between the Iſles of Samos and Nicaria; and about 20 miles in circumference. It is one of the moſt barren heaps of rocks in the Archipelago. A few valleys only are capable of ſome cultivation. It abounds, however, with partridges, rabbits, quails, turtles, pigeons, and ſnipes. In the midſt of the iſland riſes a mountain, terminated by the convent of St. John, which, with it's irregular towers and maſſy appearance, one might well imagine to be a citadel. The inhabitants of this convent are in reality the proprietors of the country; but their domains would be inſufficient for their maintenance, were it not for the poſſeſſion of ſome lands in the neighbouring iſles, and the certain tribute they derive from the ſuperſtition of the Greeks. The abbot pays annually 1000 crowns to the grand ſignior, beſides preſents to the captain pacha. Theſe monks, called Caloyers, are ſpread over all Greece. Scarce any of them can read, and yet they all underſtand how far the empire of ſuperſtition can extend over ignorant minds. They keep their credulous countrymen in the moſt abſolute ſubjection. They are even accomplices in their crimes, the profits of which they ſhare, and ſometimes engroſs. Not one of the piratical veſſels is without a Caloyer, in order to give them abſolution in the very inſtant of committing the moſt dreadful crimes. Cowardly and cruel, theſe wretches never fail to maſſacre the crews of the veſſels that fall into their power; and, after plundering them, they ſink the captured ſhip, that not a trace of their outrages may be left; then, inſtantly proſtrating themſelves before the prieſt, a few words preſently reconcile them to the Deity, quiet their conſcience, and encourage them to the perpetration of future crimes, in thus affording what they deem a certain remedy againſt future remorſe. Theſe abſolutions are rated, and every prieſt has a table of the ſins that may be forgiven. They do more; they relieve, by anticipation, the alarms that guilt excites in ſome flagitious wretches, who mingling the terrors of ſuperſtition with their ferocious paſſions, tremble with the dread of periſhing in the very act of crime, before the Caloyer can grant them abſolution. Theſe apprehenſions the prieſt endeavours to allay, exciting them to the perpetration of the moſt atrocious deeds, by ſelling the pardon to them beforehand. When theſe monſters return into port, they previouſly ſet apart the portion of the prieſt, who, in exchange, grants them the privilege of ſailing again on their piratical expeditions; and thus furniſhed with paſſports to heaven, and provided with anticipated abſolutions, they put to ſea again with a conſcience lulled into ſecurity, invoking Heaven, perhaps, for a rich cruiſe of plunder, adulteries, and aſſaſſinations. The inhabitants of Patmos are moſtly Greek Chriſtians, ſailors or ſhip-builders; they ſail as far as Venice, whither they carry cotton, &c. ſtockings of their own manufacture. The hermitage of the Apocalypſe is ſituated on the declivity of a mountain, between the convent and the port of Scala. It leads to their church, which is ſupported againſt a grotto in the rock; and, if we may believe the inhabitants, was the aſylum of John, during his exile at Patmos. Here, they ſay, he wrote the Book of the Revelation; and they pretend to ſhew the very chinks in the rocks through which the Holy Spirit breathed his inſpiration. The fragments of this rock they affirm to be a certain ſpecific againſt a thouſand diſorders, and particularly againſt evil ſpirits. The Greek monks do not fail to vend this remedy as well as the abſolutions, nor do they bluſh at this ſcandalous traffick. Tournefort, who viſited the Archipelago in 1700, repreſents the women of Patmos as naturally pretty, and with vanity innocent enough to render them agreeable to ſtrangers, were it not for their exceſſive uſe of paint, with which they perfectly diſfigured themſelves. A merchant of Marſeilles having married one of them, they imagined that not a ſtranger could land in their iſland but with ſimilar views; and when this great botaniſt declared, that he came not in ſearch of wives, but of plants, they appeared exceedingly ſurpriſed. Their behaviour to ſtrangers is now the reverſe of what it was in the time of Tournefort. The ſprightly aſſiduities of vanity have given place to a ſavage ſhyneſs; and a ſtranger no ſooner appears in a ſtreet, than every door is cloſely ſhut againſt him. It is 16 miles SW. of Samos. Lat. 37. 24. N. lon. 26. 24. E.

PATNA, a city of Hindooſtan Proper, capital of Bahar, and the reſidence of a governor. It is an extenſive and populous place, built on an eminence, on the S. bank of the Ganges; and is fortified in the Indian manner, with a wall and ſmall citadel. In this citadel were confined the priſoners taken by Meer Coſſim, nabob of Bengal, in 1764, by whoſe order they were maſſacred. Near Patna, in the ſame year, a battle was fought between the troops of Sujah Dowlah, nabob of Oude, and a diviſion of the Britiſh army, under Major Monroe, when the former were defeated. The Engliſh loſt 2 officers killed, 6 or 7 wounded, about 60 Europeans, and 600 ſeapoys. The enemy left full 7000 behind them, 130 pieces of cannon, all their tents, baggage, &c. together with ſome camels and elephants. Sujah Dowlah fled to one of his moſt diſtant cities. The buildings of Patna are high, but the ſtreets are narrow, and far from clean. It is a place of conſiderable trade, and is ſuppoſed to be the ancient Palabothra. It is 250 miles NW. of Calcutta. Lat. 25. 35. N. lon. 85. 21. E.

PEGU, a conſiderable kingdom of India, lying to the SE. of Bengal. It is bounded on the N. by Aracan and Ava, on the W. by part of Aracan and the Bay of Bengal, on the E. by the kingdoms of Laos and Siam, and on the S. by the Bay of Bengal. It has a town of the ſame name, 70 miles within land, above 20 miles in circumference; but at preſent not one-twentieth part is inhabited; for it was ruined by the king of Burmah, who, in 1751, reduced this, till then, independent kingdom, to the ſtate of a dependent province. The products of this country are timber for building, elephants, elephants' teeth, bees-wax, ſtick-lac, iron, tin, petroleum, troleum, rubies, diamonds, and ſapphires. The rubies are the beſt in the world, but the diamonds are ſmall. They have alſo ſaltpetre, and plenty of lead, of which they make their money. The country abounds with elephants, buffaloes, goats, hogs, and other animals; and deer and game are in great plenty. It is very fruitful in corn, roots, pulſe, and fruits. They wear no European commodities but hats and ribands; but they have cottons, ſilks, and ſilver from Bengal, and the neighbouring countries. The inhabitants are but thinly clad, and they wear neither ſhoes nor ſtockings. The women are much fairer than the men, ſmall, and ſhapely. If the wife prove falſe, the huſband may ſell her for a ſlave; and if he go aſtray, ſhe, not having redreſs, ſometimes contrives to diſpatch him by a doſe of poiſon. There are a vaſt number of temples in this country, but moſtly of wood, which are varniſhed and gilt. The inhabitants are partly Peguers, and partly Bramas, or Burmahs, who are at preſent maſters of the country; they are diſtinguiſhed from each other by their dreſs and features. The prieſts, who are called Talepoy, or Talapoins, obſerve celibacy, and eat but once a day. They wear a long frock, girt with a leather thong four inches broad, at which hangs a bag for receiving alms. They have no ſtipends, and in caſe the few acres, which every one who builds a temple beſtows for their maintenance, be not ſufficient, they ſend novices abroad to beg alms. They have idols in their temples, with very large ears, in a ſitting poſture, like taylors. They have various ſorts of muſic, but the pipe and tabor are eſteemed the beſt. In the low flat part of the country, which is liable to be overflowed, they build their houſes upon ſtakes, and in time of inundations, communicate with each other by boats. The city of Pegu, in 1600, was one of the largeſt and moſt populous in Aſia, but being beſieged, in 1592, by the kings of Aracan and Tangue, the king was obliged to ſubmit for want of proviſions. Since that time Pegu ceaſed to be the royal city, and fell to decay; ſo that, although 6 or 7 leagues in compaſs, not one-twentieth part of it is now inhabited. It is ſtill, however, the ſeat of the viceroy, governing for the king, who reſides now at Ava. Lat. 18. 5. N. lon. 96. 42. E.

Pehembury, Devonſ. NW. of Honiton.

PEINA, a town of Hildeſheim, Lower Saxony.

PEIPUS, or TCHUDSKOI, a large lake of Ruſſia, between the governments of Peterſburgh and Riga, 64 miles in length, and from 8 to 24 in breadth. It has a communication with the Lake of Wertzerwe; and the river Narova iſſues from this lake, by which it has a communication alſo at Narva, with the Gulf of Finland.

PEISHORE, or PITSHOUR, a conſiderable city of India, in the country of Cabul, 50 miles NNW. of Attock.

PEKIN, the capital city of the empire of China, ſituated in a fertile plain. It obtained this name, which ſignifies the Northern Court, to diſtinguiſh it from Nanking, or the Southern Court, where the emperors formerly reſided. It is an exact ſquare, and divided into two parts; namely, that which contains the emperor's palace, which is in the New City, or Tartar City, ſo called becauſe it is inhabited by Tartars, ever ſince they conquered the empire. The other, called the Old City, is inhabited by the Chineſe. The circuit of both together, is 52 Chineſe lays, each of which contains 240 geometrical paces. The gates of this city are lofty and well arched, ſupporting buildings of 9 ſtories high; the loweſt of which is for the ſoldiers, when they come off guard. The gates are 9 in number, and before each is an open ſpace, which ſerves for a parade. The ſtreets are as ſtraight as a line, moſt of them 3 miles in length, and about 120 feet wide, with ſhops on both ſides; but the houſes are poorly built, and have only a ground-floor. The concourſe of people in the ſtreets is prodigious; here are alſo vaſt numbers of horſes, camels, mules, aſſes, and carriages. It is ſingular, however, that no women are ever ſeen; although the number of women in China, as well as in every other country, is ſuperior to that of the other ſex. All the riches and merchandiſe of the empire are continually pouring into this city. There are always hackney horſes and chairs, in various parts, which ſtand ready to be hired for a trifle. All the great ſtreets are guarded by ſoldiers, who patrole night and day, with ſabres hanging from their girdles, and whips in their hands, to correct, without diſtinction, thoſe who excite quarrels, or make diſturbances. The little ſtreets have lattice-gates at their entrance into the great ſtreets, which are ſhut up at night, and guarded by ſoldiers, who ſuffer no aſſemblies in the ſtreets at that time. The emperor's palace is of vaſt extent, and ſurrounded by a brick wall, with pavilions at each corner, encompaſſed by galleries ſupported by columns. Thoſe who have computed the compaſs compaſs of this city a different way, obſerve, that the two cities, without the ſuburbs, are 18 miles in circumference, and that the number of inhabitants is, at leaſt, 2,000,000; that the walls of the Tartar city are ſo high, that they cover the town, and are broad enough for twelve horſemen to ride eaſily abreaſt; and there are ſtrong towers a bow-ſhot diſtance from each other. The walls of the immenſe palace of the emperor, including that and the gardens, are upwards of four miles in circumference, and the architecture of the ſtructures entirely different from that of the Europeans; they are covered with tiles of a ſhining beautiful yellow. The palace never fails to ſtrike beholders, by it's extent, grandeur, and the regular diſpoſition of it's apartments. It preſents a prodigious aſſemblage of vaſt buildings, extenſive courts, and magnificent gardens. The temples and the towers of this city are ſo numerous, that it is difficult to count them. Proviſions of all kinds are exceedingly plentiful, they being, as well as the merchandiſe, chiefly brought from other parts by means of canals, which are always crowded with veſſels of different ſizes. No police can be more active. It is rare, in a number of years, to hear of houſes being robbed, or people aſſaſſinated. An earthquake, which happened here in 1731, buried above 100,000 perſons in the ruins of the houſes. In this city a Ruſſian church is eſtabliſhed, with a ſeminary, in which the ſtudents are permitted to reſide, for the purpoſe of learning the Chineſe language. Since this eſtabliſhment, many intereſting publications have made their appearance at Peterſburgh, relative to the laws, hiſtory, and geography of China, tranſlated from the originals publiſhed at Pekin. Pele, Lancaſhire, N. of Wigan. Pele, Lancaſhire, W. of Warrington.

PELEGRINO, MOUNT, a promontory on the N. coaſt of Sicily, about two miles W. of Palermo. The proſpect from it is beautiful and extenſive. Moſt of the Lipari Iſlands are diſcovered in a clear day, and alſo a large portion of Mount Etna, although at the diſtance of almoſt the whole length of Sicily.

PELEW ISLANDS, a cluſter of iſlands in the N. Pacific Ocean, lying between 130. and 136. deg. E. lon. and 5. and 9. N. lat. They were probably firſt diſcovered by the Spaniards of the Philippines, and by them called the Paloo Iſlands, from the tall palm-trees that grow there in great numbers, and which, at a diſtance, have the appearance of maſts of ſhips; the word palos, in the Spaniſh language, ſometimes ſignifying a maſt. There is, however, ſome reaſon to ſuppoſe, that no European had ever landed upon them, before the Antelope, a packet belonging to the Eaſt-India Company, and commanded by Captain Wilſon, was wrecked there in 1783. The captain found the natives ſimple in their manners, delicate in their ſentiments, friendly in their diſpoſition, and, in ſhort, a people that do honour to the human race. The aſtoniſhment which thoſe, who firſt diſcovered the Engliſh, manifeſted on ſeeing their colour, plainly ſhowed, that they had never before ſeen a white man. The clothes of the ſtrangers alſo puzzled them exceedingly; for it ſeemed to be a matter of doubt with them, whether theſe and their bodies did not form one ſubſtance. When the captain's brother was deputed to wait upon the king, who reſided on an iſland at ſome diſtance from that on which they had ſaved their lives, he accidentally pulled off his hat, at which the gazing ſpectators were all ſtruck with aſtoniſhment, as if they thought it had formed a part of his head. They had no idea of the nature of powder and ſhot, and were exceedingly amazed on ſeeing it's effects. The weapons uſed in their battles were bamboo ſpears, about 12 feet long, with the pointed end exceedingly hard, and barbed tranſverſely. They had alſo bamboo darts pointed with the wood of the betel-nut tree, which is very hard and heavy; with ſhorter ones for diſtant marks, which are thrown by means of a ſtick, with a notch in it, wherein the head of the dart was fixed. With reſpect to property in theſe iſlands, a man's houſe, or canoe, is conſidered as his own, as is alſo the land allotted him, as long as he occupies and cultivates it; but, whenever he removes with his family to another place, the ground reverts to the king, who gives it to whom he pleaſes, or to thoſe who ſolicit to cultivate it. The country is well covered with timber-trees, the trunks of which furniſh the natives with canoes, ſome large enough to carry 30 men. Yams and cocoa-nuts, being their chief articles of ſubſiſtence, are attended to with the utmoſt care. The other trees were the ebony; a ſpecies of manchineel; a tree that, being pierced with a gimlet, there ran from it a thick liquid, of the conſiſtence of cream; and a ſingular tree, like a cherry-tree, but with leaves reſembling a myrtle, ſo extremely hard, that few of the tools which the Engliſh had could work it, the wood breaking their edges: the colour of the interior was like mahogany. They had alſo the cabbage-tree; a tree whoſe fruit nearly reſembled an almond; the wild bread-fruit tree; plantains, bananas, Seville oranges, and lemons. Their common drink was the milk of the cocoa-nut; on particular occaſions, adding certain ſweetmeats and a ſweet beverage obtained by the aid of a ſyrup, extracted either from the palm-tree or the ſugar-cane. No quadrupeds were ſeen, except ſome browniſh grey rats in the woods, and a few meagre cats in ſome of the houſes. They had plenty of common cocks and hens, which, though not domeſticated, yet loved to get near their houſes and plantations. The houſes are raiſed about three feet from the ground, the foundation beams being laid on large ſtones, whence ſpring the upright ſupports of their ſides, which are croſſed by other timbers grooved together, and faſtened by wooden pins, the intermediate ſpace being cloſely filled up with bamboos and palm-tree leaves; and the inſide is without any diviſion, forming one great room. As to domeſtic implements, they have little baſkets, very nicely woven from ſlips of the plaintain-tree, and wooden baſkets, with covers, neatly carved, and inlaid with ſhells. No one ever ſtirs abroad without a baſket, which uſually contains ſome betel-nut, a comb, knife, and a little twine. The beſt knives are made of a piece of the large mother-of-pearl oyſter, ground narrow, and the outward ſide a little poliſhed. The combs are made of the orange-tree, of which there are a few of the Seville kind; the handle and teeth are faſtened in the ſolid wood. The fiſhing-hooks are of tortoiſe ſhell; and twine, cord, and fiſhing-nets, are well manufactured from the huſks of the cocoa-nut. Of the plantain-leaf are formed mats, which ſerve the people as beds. They alſo uſe a plantain-leaf at meals, inſtead of a plate; and the ſhell of a cocoa-nut, which they poliſh very nicely, ſupplies the place of a cup. There are veſſels of a kind of earthenware, of a reddiſh-brown colour, in which they boil their fiſh, yams, &c. A bundle of cocoa-nut huſks, tied together, ſerves them for a broom, and thick bamboos, with bores five or ſix inches in diameter, are their buckets, or ciſterns. The ſhell of the tortoiſe is here remarkably beautiful; and the natives have diſcovered the art of moulding it into little trays, or diſhes, and ſpoons. Some of the women have alſo bracelets of the ſame manufacture, and ear-rings inlaid with ſhells. The natives, in general, are a ſtout people, rather above the middling ſtature, and of a very deep copper colour. Their hair is long, and generally formed into one large looſe curl round their heads. The men are without cloaths; the women wear two little aprons, one before, the other behind. Both men and women are tattooed, and their teeth are made black by art. The men had their left ear bored, and the women both; with beads or leaves wore in the perforated ear. The cartilage between the noſtrils was alſo bored, in both ſexes, through which they often put ſome ſprig, bloſſom, or ſhrub. Both ſexes are very expert at ſwimming, and the men are ſuch admirable divers, that they will readily fetch up any thing from the bottom of the ſea which attracts their notice. The conduct of theſe people toward the Engliſh was uniformly courteous and attentive, accompanied with a politeneſs which ſurpriſed thoſe who were the objects of it. Such an opinion had the king of the iſland entertained of the Engliſh, that, on their departure, he ſuffered his ſecond ſon, Lee Boo, to accompany them to England, where this amiable youth died of the ſmall-pox, in 1784, at about 20 years of age. Theſe iſlands are encircled on the W. ſide by a reef of coral.

* PEMBROKE, the capital of Pembrokeſhire, commodiouſly ſeated on the innermoſt creek of Milford-Haven, over which are two handſome bridges. It is well-built and well-inhabited, and next to Carmarthen and Brecon, is the richeſt town in S. Wales. Here are merchants who employ near 200 ſail on their own account. It is 10 miles SE. of Haverfordweſt, and 256 W. by N. of London. Market on Saturday.

PEMBROKESHIRE, the moſt weſtern county of S. Wales, 35 miles in length, 18 in it's mean breadth, and ſurrounded on all ſides by the ſea, except on the NE. and E. where it is bounded by Cardiganſhire and Carmarthenſhire. It is divided into 7 hundreds, which contain 7 market-towns, and 145 pariſhes. The principal rivers are the E. and W. Cledhue. A great part of the county is plain, and tolerably fertile, conſiſting of rich meadow and arable land. One part alone is mountainous, extending from the coaſt, near Fiſhguard, to the borders of Carmarthenſhire. This, however, yields good paſture for ſheep and cattle. There is probably more rain here than in any other part of the kingdom, brought by weſterly winds from the Atlantic Ocean. The only manufactures of the county conſiſt of a cotton-mill, near Haverfordweſt, which employs about 150 perſons; a forge at Blackpool, and ſome iron and tin works on the Tivy. The county-town is Pembroke.

PENMAEN-MAWR, a mountain of Carnarvonſhire, 1545 feet high, and overhanging the ſea at ſo vaſt a height, that few are able to look down the dreadful ſteep. On the ſide next the ſea, a road is cut out of the rock, which winds up a ſteep aſcent, and is ſecured by a ſubſtantial wall, breaſt high, along the brink of the frightful precipice. To this great and uſeful work the city of Dublin largely contributed, contributed, it being in the high road to Holyhead. Here the sea is seen dashing it's waves 40 fathoms below, while the mountain rises as high above the traveller's head. This road was long narrow, bad, and stony, but since 1772, it has been made better and wider, and defended from the precipice by the wall above-mentioned. The wall before was very slight, in some parts about a yard high, and in other parts there was only a bank, that scarcely rose a foot above the road.

PENNSYLVANIA, one of the United States of N. America, bounded on the E. by New York and Jersey; on the W. by states not settled; on the N. by several Indian nations; and on the S. by Delaware and Maryland. It extends 250 miles from E. to W. and 140 from N. to S. By means of the Delaware, and other navigable rivers, large ships come up into the heart of the country. The soil is, in some places, a yellow or black sand; in some, loamy gravel; and in others a fat and fruitful mould, easy to be cleared. It is well watered with rivers, and produces every thing which can render life agreeable, in the utmost plenty. The produce of this country is corn, cattle, timber, pot-ashes, wax, skins, and furs; and they export to the W. India Islands salted beef, pork, horses, pipe-staves, and fish; taking in return sugar, rum, and molasses. This country is now one of the most flourishing in the New World. It was granted to William Penn, son of Sir W. Penn, by King Charles II. in consideration of sundry debts due to him from the crown. When he went to America, he purchased the soil, at a very low rate, of the Indians, expending also large sums in transporting his followers, and supplying them with all necessaries. His lands also were sold at a very easy purchase, and he gave the settlers a noble charter of privileges. The Germans compose a quarter, if not a third part of the inhabitants of Pennsylvania; in 1787, the whole number of inhabitants were reckoned at 360,000: they are now much more numerous. Philadelphia is the capital.

PERSEES, a people of Perſia, now ſcattered into different parts, but chiefly in the E. Indies. They are worſhippers of fire, or at leaſt they look upon that as an emblem of the Supreme Being. They are otherwiſe called Guebres. On the conqueſt of Perſia, by the Mahometans, they removed to India. Zoroaſter was the founder of their ſect. They regard it as a great crime to extinguiſh fire of any kind; and have lamps in their temples, which, they aſſert, have burnt for many ages.

Perſendrove, Camb. W. of Wiſbeach.

PERSEPOLIS, ſuppoſed to be anciently the capital city of Perſia, properly ſo called. It was taken by Alexander the Great, who was perſuaded, when in liquor, by the courteſan Thais, to ſet it on fire. It is thought to be the ſame as is now called Kilminanar, of which there are magnificent ruins ſtill remaining. Some travellers that have ſeen them, think they far excel any thing of this kind in the world. There are inſcriptions, in characters, and in a language that now cannot be read, and which ſhow that this place muſt be extremely ancient; almoſt all parts of the ruins are full of ſculptures, repreſenting men and beaſts. It is 50 miles NE. of Schiras, and 200 SE. of Iſpahan.

Perſhal, Staffordſ. near Eccleſhal.

*PERSHORE, a neat old town of Worceſterſhire, with a manufacture of ſtockings. It is ſeated on the river Avon, 9 miles ESE. of Worceſter, and 102 WNW. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

PERSIA, a large kingdom of Aſia, conſiſting of ſeveral provinces, which, at different times, have had their particular kings. It's power and extent have greatly varied both in ancient and modern times, and it's preſent boundaries are not exactly known, eſpecially towards Ruſſia, Tartary, and India. In the general outline, it is bounded on the N. by Ruſſia, the Caſpian Sea, and Independent Tartary; on the E. by India; on the S. by the Arabian Sea and the Perſian Gulf; and on the W. by Georgia, Armenia, Curdiſtan, and Arabia. Perſia is divided into the following provinces: Schirvan; Adirbeitzan; Ghilan; Mezanderan, with Taberiſtan; Perſian Irak, or ancient Parthia; Chuſiſtan; Farſiſtan; Kerman, or Keriſtan; Mecran; Segeſtan; Sableſtan; and Chorasan; including Asterbat and Dagestan. Candahar is considered as a province of Persia, although it is now an independent kingdom. The chief rivers are the Tygris and Amuc. In the N. and E. parts it is mountainous and cold; in the middle and SE. parts sandy and desart; and in the S. and W. level and extremely fertile, though for several months very hot. The soil produces the various sorts of pulse and corn. They have cotton in great abundance, and, among other domestic animals, camels, buffaloes, and horses. In several places naptha, a sort of bitumen, rises out of the ground, and they have mines of gold, silver, iron, Turkey-stones, and salt; but the first two of these are not worked, on account of the scarcity of wood. They have a great deal of cotton cloth, some pearls, and a large quantity of silk, beside manufactures of silk, and very fine carpets. They have also the various sorts of fruits, fairer and better than the choicest European; excellent wine, and a great number of mulberry-trees, with the leaves of which they feed the silk-worms; likewise dates, pistachio-nuts, and trees which produce manna. Their horses are the finest in the East; and they have large flocks of sheep and goats; the tails of the former of which are of a monstrous size. They are generally Mahometans, of the sect of Ali. Ispahan is the capital.

Persian Gulf, a large gulf of Asia, between Persia and Arabia Felix. The entrance near Ormus is not above 30 miles over, but within it is 180 in breadth, and the length, near Ormus to the mouth of the Euphrates, 420 miles.

Persint, Hampsh. near Rumsey. Pertenhall, Bedfordsh. near Swineshead.

Perth, a town of Scotland, capital of a county of the same name. It is a very handsome place, agreeably seated on the river Tay, over which is an elegant stone bridge of nine arches. The tide comes up as far as this place, and the river is navigable for small vessels. The kings of Scotland before James II. in 1437, were crowned at Scone, and resided at Perth, as the metropolis of the kingdom. The town is supposed to have increased one third in buildings, since the year 1745. The number of inhabitants is about 20,000. The manufacture of linen and cotton is very considerable; 150,000l. being annually exported, with 50,000l. worth of salmon, and 10,000l. worth of wheat and barley. Perth is 30 miles N. of Edinburgh.

Perthneer Chapel, near Monmouth.

Perthshire, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by the shires of Inverness and Aberdeen; on the E. by Angusshire and the Frith of Tay; on the SE. and S. by the counties of Fife, Kinross, Clackmannan, and Stirling; and on the W. by Dumbartonshire and Argyleshire. It extends about 60 miles from N. to S. and upwards of 50 from E. to W. The northern district, called Athol, is uncommonly wild and mountainous; the others, viz. Braedalbane, Gourie, Monteith, Stormont, and Strathern, are more champaign, and fertile in corn and pasture.

Perth Amboy, a sea-port in the state of New Jersey, seated on a neck of land, included between the river Raritan and Arthur Kull Sound. It lies open to Sandy Hook, has one of the best harbours on the continent, and is 25 miles SW. of New York.

Perton, Staffordsh. near Wolverhampton.

Pertwood, Wilts, NW. of Hindon.

Peru, a large country of S. America, bounded on the N. by the river of Guayaquil, which divides it from New Granada; on the S. by the depopulated territory of Atacama, which parts it from Chili; on the E. by a horrible desart of more than 500 leagues in extent, which separates it from the provinces of Paraguay and Buenos Ayres; and on the W. by the Pacific Ocean. It's extent from N. to S. is from 420 to 450 leagues, and from E. to W. from 100 to 120 leagues. It was stripped of the kingdom of Quito, which has generally been considered as a part of it, in 1718, and of those provinces, at the distance of 40 leagues E. of Lima, which, towards the E. constitute the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, in 1778. It scarcely ever rains in this country, and they hardly know what lightning and thunder are, unless toward the top of the mountains; for when the mathematicians from France were there, to measure a degree of latitude, while they were making their observations, they not only saw it lighten, but heard the thunder below them, for they were above the clouds. All the tops of these mountains are covered with snow to a very great height, and there are several volcanoes, which burn continually; sometimes such torrents of water fall down from thence, as overflow the country for a considerable space. The best houses here are made of a sort of reeds, like bamboo-canes, and covered with thatch, or palm-leaves. They have a kind of galleries, or balconies, but there is no walking along the floors without making the whole ſtructure ſhrink, or ſhake. Here are large foreſts on the ſides of the mountains, which advance near the ſea; but the trees are different from thoſe in Europe. The birds are much ſuperior to the European for the beauty of their plumage; but their notes are very diſagreeable. There are few birds near the ſea, and the monkeys, alſo, keep at a diſtance from it. The bird called the toucan, which is remarkable for having a bill as large as it's body, is called the preacher by the Spaniards, though it is as mute as a fiſh. It has been generally ſaid there are lions here, but that which they call ſo is more like a wolf than a lion, and never attacks man. The tigers are ſaid to be as large and as fierce as thoſe of Africa, though not of the ſame colour; however, there are but very few of them. Serpents are very common, and ſeveral ſorts of them dangerous; particularly the rattle-ſnake, which does not get away from men like the reſt. There are ſeveral inſects like thoſe in Europe, but they are vaſtly larger. The earth-worms are as long as a man's arm, and as thick as his thumb; there are alſo ſpiders covered with hair, and as large as a pigeon's egg. The bats are of a monſtrous ſize, and will ſuck the blood of horſes, mules, and even of men who ſleep in the fields; and they have entirely deſtroyed the great cattle, which the miſſionaries had introduced into a country N. of Peru. The famous bird called a contor, or condor, as, perhaps, the largeſt in the world, for it is ſaid to make nothing of carrying off ſheep and heifers. The animal called the guanaco is peculiar to S. America, for none have ever been found in N. America, nor in any other country. It is commonly called a camel-ſheep, and has ſomething of the ſhape of a camel, but without any bunch on it's back. There are two ſorts of them, one covered with a very fine reddiſh wool, or hair, which is a valuable commodity. They are but ſmall in compariſon of a camel, and were uſed to carry burdens of about 50 pounds weight, before horſes were introduced. Peru is inhabited by the Spaniards, who conquered it, and the native Americans. The latter, who live among the foreſts, form, as it were, ſo many ſmall republics, which are directed by a Spaniſh prieſt, and by their governor, aſſiſted by the original natives, who ſerve as officers. They go naked, and paint their bodies with a red drug, called rocu. The ſame man is of all trades, for he builds his own hut, conſtructs his own canoe, and weaves his own cloth; but, if a large houſe is to be built for common uſe, every one lends a helping hand. Their ſkins are of a red copper colour; and they have no beards, nor hair on any part of their bodies except their heads, where it is black, long, and coarſe. Thoſe that are not much expoſed to the weather, are of a lighter colour than the reſt. Their garment is a ſort of a ſack, with holes to put their arms through; and this is given them by their employers as part of their wages. From a mixture of the native Americans and Spaniards ariſes a third kind, called Meſtics, who are accounted illegitimate; however, they have all the privileges of a Spaniard, and are the perſons who carry on all trades; for the Spaniards think it beneath them to meddle with any thing of this ſort: theſe behave in a more tyrannical manner over the real Americans, than even the Spaniards themſelves, inſomuch that the governor is obliged to repreſs their inſolence. They have a great number of fruits, plants, and trees, not known in Europe; the Spaniards alſo have introduced many herbs, plants, and trees from Europe, which thrive very well, and the fruits they produce are delicious. A great part of the territory of Peru is occupied either by barren and rugged mountains; ſandy plains, which reach from one extremity of the coaſt to another; or lakes of many leagues in extent, ſome of which are ſituated on the ſummits of the mountains. The breaks, however, and the valleys, which enjoy the benefit of irrigation, preſent an extenſive range of delightful plains, filled with cities and towns, the climate of which is highly ſalubrious and agreeable. It's commerce has been conſiderably augmented, ſince the arrival of merchant veſſels from Spain, by Cape Horn, has been permitted, and the removal of thoſe reſtrictions, by which it was oppreſſed in the time of the galleons, and the fairs of Porto-Bello and Panama. The manufactures conſiſt almoſt entirely of a few friezes, worn by Indians and negroes; and ſome manufactures of hats, cotton cloths, drinking-glaſſes, &c. inconſiderable in number. The mines are the only ſource of the riches of Peru. In 1790, 534,000 marks of ſilver, and 6038 of gold, were ſmelted and refined in the royal mint of Lima; and 5,162,239 piaſtres, in both materials, were coined there. About half of the ſilver, which is annually ſmelted and coined, is extracted from the mines of Gualgayoc and Paſco; the former in the district of Truxillo, and the latter situated at the northern extremity of the Pampas de Bombon. The mine of Guantajaya, in Arequipa, and that of Guarochiri, in Lima, do not flourish in proportion to the richness and abundance of their metals, in consequence of the difficulty of procuring necessaries for working, subsistence, &c. The fishery is exclusively in the hands of the Indians, but being unskilful, and unprovided with proper boats and fit instruments, they venture but a small distance out to sea. Hence a scarcity and dearness of fish is experienced in Lima, and in all the places along the coast. The bad and uneven roads, together with the delay and expence of carriage, almost entirely obstruct the internal commerce of this province, and render the subsistence of the inhabitants precarious, and dependant on foreign aid. Peru is governed by a viceroy, and is divided into the archbishopric of Lima, and the bishopries of Arequipa, Cusco, Guamanga, and Truxillo, each of which is subdivided into jurisdictions. Lima is the capital.

PERUGIA, a town in the pope's territories, capital of Perugiano. It is a handsome and populous city, with a university, and three academies. The churches, and many other buildings, public and private, are very handsome. It is 75 miles N. of Rome.

PERUGIA, a lake of Italy, 8 miles from the city of that name, in the province of Perugiano. It is almost round, about 10 miles in diameter, and contains three islands. It was formerly called Lacus Thrasimenus, near which the consul Flaminius was defeated by Hannibal.

PERUGIANO, a province in the pope's territories, E. of Tuscany, about 25 miles in length, and nearly as much in breadth. The air is very pure, and the soil fertile in corn and good wine. The capital is Perugia.

Peryton, Somersets. near Wellington.
Pery-Town, Kent, near Westwell.

PESCARA, a town and river of Abruzzo Citra.

PESCHIERA, a town in the Veronese.
Pescotter, a river in Cardiganshire.

PESENAS, a town in the dept. of Herault, seated on the river Herault, 12 miles NE. of Beziers.

Pesnall, Suffolk, W. of Yoxford.
Pessebury, Hertfordshire, near Sawbridgworth.

PEST, a town of Hungary, capital of a county of the same name, seated on the Danube, in a fine plain, opposite Buda.

Peston, Shropsh. near Chirbury.

PETAW, a town of Stiria, seated on the river Drave.

PETCHE-LI, a province of China, the chief in the whole empire; bounded on the E. by the Yellow Sea; on the N. by the great wall; on the W. by Chan-si; and on the S. by Chang-tong and Honan. It contains Pekin, the principal city in the empire, on which 140 towns depend, besides a vast number of villages. The air is temperate, unless when the wind blows from the N. and there is a rainy season in summer; but it seldom rains very long, or at any other time. The soil is fertile, and produces the various sorts of corn; and there is plenty of cattle, pulse, and fruits. They have also mines of coal, which is their only fuel. There is a great variety of animals, of which a sort of cat is most remarkable, it having long hair about it's neck and head, like the lion, and hanging ears. All the riches of China are brought into this province, particularly to Pekin.

Petches, Essex, by Tinchingfield.

PETER AND PAUL, ST. or PETROPAULOWSKOI, a town and port of Kamtschatka, in the Russian government of Irkutzk. The town consists of some miserable loghouses and a few conical huts. Capt. King places it in lat. 53. 0. 38. N. and lon. 158. 43. E.

*PETERBOROUGH, a city of Northamptonshire, seated on the river Nen, over which is a bridge that leads into Huntingdonshire, in marshy ground. It is not a large place, having but one parish-church, besides the cathedral, but the market-place is spacious, and the streets regular. It has a trade in corn, coal, and timber. The cathedral, formerly a monastery, is a majestic structure, full of curious work. It is 30 miles SSW. of Boston, and 81 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Peterborough, in Monaghan, Ulster.
Peter-Church, Herefords. on the river Doier, in the Golden Vale. Peterley, Bucks, in Missenden parish.

PETER-LE PORT, ST. a town in the SE. part of Guernsey, consisting of one long, narrow street. It is defended by two castles, the Old Castle and Gornet Castle; the latter is situated on a rock, separated from the land by an arm of the sea, fordable at low water. Here is a good road for shipping; and the pier, a great work, affords not only security to vessels, but a pleasant and extensive walk to the inhabitants, with a fine prospect of the sea and the neighbouring islands.

PETERHEAD, a handsome town of Aberdeenshire, situated near the mouth of the river Ugie. It has an excellent harbour, defended by a new pier. A conſiderable trade is carried on, both in the fiſhery, and to the Baltic for the productions of the North. Here is alſo a manufacture of ſewing thread. The mineral ſpring here, of a powerful diuretic quality, and the ſea-bathing, bring a great reſort of company. It lies a little to the N. of Buchanneſs, the moſt eaſtern promontory of Scotland.

Peter's, St. Kent, in Thanet Iſle. Peter's St. Suffolk, S. of Bungay. Peter's, St. Worceſ. near Droitwich. Peter's-Chapel in-the-Wall St. Eſſex, at the mouth of Blackwater river.

PETERSBURGH, a town of Virginia, ſeated on an unhealthy ſpot, on the S. ſide of the river Appamatox, 18 miles S. of Richmond.

PETERSBURGH, the metropolis of the empire of Ruſſia, in the government of the ſame name, is ſeated on the river Neva, near the Gulf of Finland, and is built partly upon ſome iſlands in the mouth of that river, and partly upon the continent. So late as the beginning of this century the ground on which Peterſburgh now ſtands was only a vaſt moraſs, occupied by two ſmall fiſhermen's huts. It is about 6 Engliſh miles in length, and as many in breadth, and has neither gates nor a wall. At firſt it was deſigned only for a place of arms, in the Swediſh war, and the public edifices and private houſes were built only with timber, the town had no other fortifications than a mean rampart of earth, nor were the ſtreets paved. But after the victory of Pultowa, and the conqueſt of Livonia, Peter determined to render this infant city the capital of his empire. Upon this, he ordered the citadel to be built with ſtone, the admiralty to be walled in with the ſame materials, and all the buildings to be erected in a handſome and more durable manner, and gardens to be laid out. In 1714, he removed the council to Peterſburgh, and handſome houſes were erected, in a ſtraight line, for the public offices, which, in 1718, were alſo tranſlated hither. In Peter's time, this city became large and ſplendid, and having received additional improvements under his ſucceſſors, it is now ranked among the largeſt and moſt elegant cities of Europe. The czar, Peter the Great, firſt began this city in the year 1703, building a ſmall hut for himſelf, and ſome wretched wooden hovels. The ſtreets, in general, are broad and ſpacious; and three of the principal ones, which meet in a point at the admiralty, are at leaſt two miles in length. Moſt of them are paved, but a few are ſtill ſuffered to remain floored with planks; and, in ſeveral parts of this metropolis, wooden houſes, ſcarcely ſuperior to common cottages, are blended with the public buildings. The brick houſes are ornamented with a white ſtucco, which has led ſeveral travellers to ſay, that they are built of ſtone. The manſions of the nobility are vaſt piles of building; furniſhed with great coſt, in the ſame elegant ſtyle as at Paris or London; and ſituated chiefly on the S. ſide of the Neva, either in the admiralty quarter, or in the ſuburbs of Livonia and Moſcow, which are the fineſt parts of the city. The views upon the banks of the Neva exhibit the grandeſt and moſt lively ſcenes imaginable. That river is, in many places, as broad as the Thames at London: it is alſo deep, rapid, and as tranſparent as cryſtal; and it's banks are lined on each ſide with a continued range of handſome buildings. On the N. the fortreſs, the academy of ſciences, and the academy of arts, are the moſt ſtriking objects. On the oppoſite ſide are the imperial palace, the admiralty, the manſions of many Ruſſian nobles, and the Engliſh line, ſo called becauſe (a few houſes excepted) the whole row is occupied by the Engliſh merchants. In the front of theſe buildings, on the S. ſide is the quay, which ſtretches for 3 miles, except where it is interrupted by the admiralty; and the Neva, during the whole of that ſpace, has been embanked, by order of the late empreſs, by a wall, parapet, and pavement of hewn granite. Peterſburgh, although it is more compact than the other Ruſſian cities, and has the houſes, in many ſtreets, contiguous to each other, yet ſtill bears a reſemblance to the towns of this country, and is built in a very ſtraggling manner. It has been lately incloſed within a rampart, the circumference of which is 14 miles. Notwithſtanding all the improvements it has received by ſucceeding ſovereigns, and particularly the late empreſs, who may, without exaggeration, be called it's ſecond founder, it is ſtill, as Mr. Wraxall obſerves, "only an immenſe outline, which will require future empreſſes, and almoſt future ages, to complete." From it's low and marſhy ſituation, it is ſubject to inundations, which have occaſionally riſen ſo high, as to threaten the town with a total ſubmerſion. The oppoſite diviſions of Peterſburgh, ſituated on each ſide of the Neva, are connected by a bridge on pontoons, which, on account of the large maſſes of ice driven down the ſtream from the Lake Ladoga, is usually removed when they first make their appearance; and, for a few days, till the river is frozen hard enough to bear carriages, there is no communication between the opposite parts of the town. The number of inhabitants is estimated at 126,700. The value of the exports, in British ships, in 1777, amounted to 1,508,782 sterling; and the goods imported in the same year were estimated at 423,942l. Petersburgh is 540 miles NNE. of Warsaw. Lat. 59. 56. N. lon. 30. 25. E.

*Petersfield, a town of Hampshire, seated on the river Loddon, 18 miles NE. of Portsmouth, and 53 SW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Pettycur, a harbour of Fifeshire, about a mile distant from Kinghorn, at the entrance of the Frith of Forth. It is the usual landing-place of the passengers from Leith, on the opposite shore. A basin has lately been constructed here.

*Petworth, a small town in Sussex. It is pleasantly seated near the river Arun, 12 miles NE. of Chichester, and 49 SW. of London. Market on Saturday.

Pevensey, or Pemsey, Sussex, SE. of Beachy-Head. It was anciently a famous haven, but is now accessible only by small boats, that crowd up a little rill to it. Pever, a river in Cheshire, which runs into the Weever, near Northwich. Peverel-Point, Dorsets. by Swanwich-Bay. Pevington, Kent, S. of Lenham, in Pluckley parish. Pewet-Island, Essex, between Harwich and Gunfleet.

Pewsey, Wilts, near Manningford.

Pewsham Forest, Wilts, near Chippenham. Pexhall, Cheshire, W. of Macclesfield. Peysmore, Berks, SW. of Ilsley. Peyton, Suffolk, in Boxford parish.

Pezaro, Pesaro, or Pesano, a large town of Urbino, at the mouth of the Foglia, on the Adriatic. The streets are paved with bricks, and the harbour is excellent. The environs produce figs and olives, which are in great estimation. It is 15 miles NE. of Urbino.

Pfafenhoffen, a town of Upper Bavaria, on the river Ilm; and a town of the Upper Palatinate; both in the circle of Bavaria: also a town of Wirtemburg, Suabia: and a town in the dept. of the Lower Rhine.

Pfirt, or Forette, a town in the depart. of Upper Rhine, 10 miles W. of Basil.

Pfortzheim, a town of Baden, Suabia.

Pfreimb, a town of Leuchtenburg, Bavaria.

Pfullendorf, an imperial town of Suabia.

Phanagora, a town of Asia, on the E. side of the Strait of Caffa, in Kuban, a district of the Russian government of Caucasus.

Pharaby,

Pharahy, in Cork, Munſter, 3 miles NW. of Glanworth.

PHAROS, a ſmall iſland in the Mediterranean Sea, oppoſite Alexandria, in Egypt, the ſpace between which and the continent forms a ſpacious harbour. It has a communication with the continent by a ſtone cauſeway and bridge. It formerly had an exceedingly high tower upon it, called the Pharos, whence the iſland took it's name. On the top of it were lights for the direction of ſhips.

PHARZA, anciently PHARSALIA, a town of Turkey, in Europe, in Janna, the ancient Theſſaly; famous for the deciſive battle fought in it's plains, between Julius Cæſar and Pompey. Hence Lucan's poem on the civil wars between theſe two great rivals was called Pharſalia. This town is ſeated on the river Enipeus, is an archiepiſcopal ſee, and is 10 miles S. of Lariſſa.

PHASIS, a large river of Aſia, which croſſes Mingrelia, and falls into the Black Sea.

PHEASANTS ISLE. See FAISANTS.

PHENICIA, a country of Turkey, in Aſia, extending from Arabia Deſerta to the Mediterranean; bounded on the N. by Syria Proper, and on the S. by Paleſtine. The principal towns are Tripoly, Damaſcus, and Balbec. It is but a ſmall territory, but has been greatly celebrated for being the inventor of navigation, and, according to ſome, of letters. It's inhabitants were the firſt, which we have any account of, that traded with England for tin. They frequently ſent colonies to different parts of Europe and Africa, where they founded conſiderable towns.

Philack, Cornwall, on St. Ives Bay.

PHILADELPHIA, an ancient town of Aſia, in Natolia, ſeated at the foot of the mountain Tmolus. The Greeks retain it's ancient name, but the Turks call it Allahijah. It contains about 11,000 inhabitants, among whom are about 2000 Chriſtians, who form four churches or congregations. It is 40 miles ESE. of Smyrna.

PHILADELPHIA, the capital of Pennſylvania, and at preſent, of all the United States of N. America, is ſituated on a neck of land at the confluence of the rivers Delaware and Schuylkill. The length of the city from E. to W. that is from the Delaware to the Schuylkill, upon the original plan, is 10,300 feet, and the breadth, N. and S. is 4837 feet. Not two-fifths of the plot covered by the city charter is yet built. The inhabitants, however, have not confined themſelves within the original limits of the city, but have built N. and S. along the Delaware, 2 miles in length. The circumference of that part of the city which is built, if, we include Kenſington on the N. and Southwark on the S. is about 5 miles. Market Street is 100 feet wide, and runs the whole length of the city from river to river. Near the middle of it, it is interſected at right angles by Broad Street, 100 feet wide, running nearly N. and S. quite acroſs the city. Between the Delaware and Broad Street are 10 ſtreets, nearly equidiſtant, running parallel with Broad Street; and between Broad Street and the Schuylkill are 9 ſtreets, equidiſtant from each other. Parallel to Market Street are 8 other ſtreets, running E. and W. from river to river, and interſecting the croſs ſtreets at right angles. All theſe ſtreets are 50 feet wide, except Arch Street, which is 65 feet wide, and all the ſtreets which run N. and S. except Broad Street, are alſo 50 feet wide. There were 4 ſquares of 8 acres each, one at each corner of the city, originally reſerved for public uſes; and in the centre of the city, at the interſection of Market Street and Broad Street, is a ſquare of 10 acres, reſerved in like manner, to be planted with rows of trees for public walks. Moſt of the houſes have a ſmall garden and orchard; and from the river are cut ſmall canals, equally agreeable and beneficial. The wharfs are fine and ſpacious; the principal one is 200 feet wide, and the water ſo deep, that a veſſel of 500 tons burden may lay her broadſide to it. The ware-houſes are large, numerous, and commodious; and the docks for ſhipbuilding are ſo well adapted to their purpoſes, that 20 ſhips have been ſeen on the ſtocks at a time. Philadelphia was founded in 1682, by William Penn, a Quaker, who, in 1701, granted a charter, incorporating the town under the government of a mayor, recorder, 8 aldermen, 12 common council-men, a ſheriff, and clerk. The Quakers, from this period, acquired a political conſequence in the weſtern hemiſphere; while their brethren in Europe were, and continue, excluded from ſharing in the full rights of citizenſhip, by partial and impolitic laws. Philadelphia, in 1749, numbered 2070 houſes, and 11,600 inhabitants. In 1792, it contained 5000 houſes, in general, handſomely built of brick, and 40,000 inhabitants. The ſtate-houſe is a magnificent building erected in 1735. In 1787, an elegant court-houſe was built on the left of the ſtate-houſe; and on the right a philoſophical hall. South of the ſtate-houſe is the public gaol, built of ſtone, and one of the moſt elegant and ſecure ſtructures of the kind in America. Here, likewiſe, is a public obſervatory, and ſeveral other public buildings. An univerſity was founded here during the war: it's funds were partly given by the ſtate, and partly taken from the old college. The places ſet apart for public worſhip, are 26 for Chriſtians of different denominations, and a ſynagogue for the Jews. In 1786, 910 veſſels were entered at the cuſtom-houſe in Philadelphia; and in 1787, the number was 780. The principal exports are wheat, flour, Indian corn, flax-ſeed, beef, and rice. Philadelphia is 97 miles SW. of New York, 356 SW. of Boſton, and 118 N. of the entrance of the Delaware into the Atlantic Ocean. Lat. 39. 57. N. lon. 75. 8. W.

PHILIP ISLANDS, two iſlands in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Hunter in 1791, and named after Arthur Phillip, eſq. governor of New S. Wales. They are about 5 miles aſunder; but almoſt joined together by a long ſandy ſpit, above water, which reaches, for about two thirds of the diſtance from the eaſternmoſt, or largeſt iſland, to the moſt weſterly, which is the ſmalleſt. They are covered with ſhrubs, have few tall trees on them, and the land is low. The eaſtern iſland is in lat. 8. 6. N. lon. 140. 3. E.

PHILIPPI, an ancient town of Macedonia, ſeated on the confines of Romania, 10 miles from the Gulf of Conteſſa, and 67 E. of Salonichi. It was enlarged by Philip, father of Alexander the Great, who gave it his own name. It was near this place, commonly called the plains of Philippi, where Caſſius and Brutus, two of the aſſaſſinators of Cæſar, were defeated by Mark Antony and Auguſtus. It is an archbiſhop's ſee, but greatly decayed, and badly peopled. An amphitheatre, and ſeveral other monuments of it's ancient grandeur remain. Lat. 41. 13. N. lon. 24. 25. E.

PHILIPPINE, or MANILLA ISLANDS, a very large cluſter, or group of iſlands in the Eaſtern Indian Sea, firſt diſcovered by Magellan in 1521. They are ſaid to be 1200 in number, of which 5 or 600 are of importance. The air is very hot and moiſt, and the ſoil fertile in rice, and many other uſeful vegetables and fruits. The trees are always green, and there are ripe fruits all the year. There are a great many wild beaſts and birds, quite unknown in Europe. The inhabitants are not all of one original. The principal of theſe iſlands are Magilla, or Luconia; Mindanao; Samar, or Tanday, ſometimes called Philippina; Maſbate; Mindoro; Luban; Paragoia, or Paragua; Panay; Leyta; Bohol; Sebu, Cibau, or Zebu; Negro's Iſland; St. John's and Xolo, or Sooloo. In 1564, Don Louis de Velaſco, viceroy of Mexico, ſent Michael Lopez Delagaſpes thither with a fleet from Mexico, and a force ſufficient to make a conqueſt of theſe iſlands, which he named the Philippines, in honour of Philip II. then on the throne of Spain. They have ever ſince remained ſubject to that crown. Lat. from 6. 30. to 18. 15. N. lon. from 113. 13. to 127. 13. E.

PILL, a ſmall town of Somerſetſhire, with a road for ſhipping, at the mouth of the Avon, about 4 miles below Briſtol. The moſt beautiful and romantic proſpects are preſented in continual and ſtriking changes, in navigating the intervening channel. Here rich plantations and beautiful lawns riſe upon the view; fertile fields and woods, in ſome parts clothe the hills to their very ſummits; while in others, the lofty rocks riſing at once from the oppoſite ſides of the river, preſent the awful appearance of the moſt tremendous precipices, and ſeem to mock every attempt of art to reduce their ſavage aſpect. Yet, at the baſes of theſe precipitous rocks, along the banks of this extraordinary channel, where the river and tide find their ſinuous way through chaſms and fiſſures of the mountains, and where the largeſt veſſels appear diminutive from the grandeur and ſublimity of the ſurrounding ſcenery, the ſeamen find the neceſſary accommodations for mooring, hauling, &c. in the maſſive bolts and rings, which have been fixed in the rocks.

In 1745, a part of Pilling-Moſs was obſerved to riſe to a ſurpriſing height; after a ſhort time it ſunk as much below the level, and moved ſlowly towards the S. ſide, and in half an hour's time it covered 20 acres of land. A man going over the Moſs, eaſtward, when it began to move, perceiving, to his great aſtoniſhment, that the ground under his feet moved ſouthward, he turned back ſpeedily, and eſcaped being ſwallowed up. A family was driven out of their dwelling houſe, which was quite ſurrounded and tumbling down. The improved land adjoining that part of the moſs which moved, was a concave, circular tract of nearly 100 acres; and this was well nigh filled up with moſs and water, to the depth, it was thought in ſome parts, of five yards.

*PLYMOUTH, a large and populous ſea port of Devonſhire, ſeated between the mouths of the rivers Plym and Tamar. There are properly ſpeaking, 3 harbours, called Catwater, Sutton Pool, and Hamoaze. The firſt is the mouth of the Plym, and affords a ſafe and commodious harbour for merchants' ſhips, but is ſeldom entered entered by ships of war. The second is frequented by merchant ships only, and is almost surrounded by the houses of the town. It is in itself well calculated to give complete protection to such ships as are moored in it, and has lately been farther secured by an extensive pier. The third is near the mouth of the Tamar, and is the harbour for the reception of the British navy, being fitted with moorings for near a hundred sail, and having good anchorage for a much greater number. It is defended by a fort on St. Nicholas Island, and other forts, mounted with near 300 guns, and particularly by a citadel, erected in the reign of Charles II. between the sea and the town, which contains a large storehouse, and 5 regular bastions. This last is situated on a hill, called the Haw, which overlooks the town, and is a good landmark for mariners. What is called THE DOCK, is a separate town, situated about 2 miles up the Hamoaze, and is now nearly as large as Plymouth itself. Here are two docks, the one wet, the other dry, built in the reign of William III. and two others, which have been built since, hewn out of a mine of slate, and lined with Portland stone. Plymouth Dock is furnished with large magazines, storehouses, &c. containing arms, stores, and all things necessary to equip a fleet. Here are also spacious and commodious barracks, for the marines, with houses for the officers, clerks, &c. The town is well supplied with fresh water, first brought hither, from a place 7 miles off, at the cost of Sir Francis Drake. It has a good pilchard-fishery, drives a considerable trade to the Straits, and to Newfoundland, and is 43 miles SW. of Exeter, and 216 W. by S. of London. Lat. 50. 22. N. lon. 4. 10. W. POITIERS, an ancient town, capital of the department of Vienne. It would be one of the most considerable places in France, were it's population in proportion to it's extent; but it includes a number of gardens and fields within it's circuit; and the inhabitants are estimated at 21,000. It has several Roman antiquities, particularly an amphitheatre, which is partly demolished.

molished. There is also a triumphal arch, which serves as a gate to the great street. The principal manufactures are stockings, woollen caps, gloves, and combs. Vipers are found in the environs in such numbers, that they are exported even to Venice, to make treacle. In 1356, a memorable battle was fought near this town, between the English and French, in which the latter were defeated. The English army, which amounted to only 16,000 men, was commanded by Edward the Black Prince; that of the enemy, commanded by King John, was estimated at 60,000. King John and his son Philip were both taken prisoners and brought to England. This town is seated on a hill, on the river Clain, 52 miles SSW. of Tours.

POITOU, a ci-devant province of France, lying S. of the Loire, fertile in corn and wine, and feeding a great number of cattle, particularly mules. POLANA, a town of Sicily.

POLAND, a large country of Europe, bounded on the W. by Pomerania, Silesia, and Moravia; on the S. by Hungary and Moldavia; on the N. by Prussia, Courland, and Russia; and on the E. by Russia. Poland, in it's utmost latitude, included 13 provinces; viz. Great Poland, containing the palatinates of Posnania, Kalish, Siradia, Leuczicz, and Rawa; Cujavia, containing the palatinates of Biesskic and Wladislaw; Massovia, containing the palatinates of Cracow, Sandomir, and Lublin; Podlachia, or the palatinate of Bielsk; Little, or Red Russia, containing the palatinates of Chelm, Belcz, and Lemburg; Podolia, containing the palatinates of Podolia and Bracklaw; the palatinate of Kiob; and Volhinia. Besides these, Lithuania has been considered as a part of Poland; as likewise Samogitia and Courland. The government is monarchical and aristocratical; all the acts of state being in the name of "the king and republic of Poland." The king is the only elective sovereign in Europe: he is chosen by a general diet, called together by the archbishop of Gnesna, who is the chief of the republic during the interregnum. After his coronation, he may dispose of the vacant benefices, and the offices both civil and military. He has a settled revenue of 140,000l. a year, and cannot, by his own authority, raise any new taxes, or change any law. The aristocracy consists in the senate and general diet. The senate is composed of the bishops, great officers, palatines, and governors of towns, who, with the king, regulate the affairs of the kingdom; and are to prevent him from doing any thing against the liberty of the country. The general diets, which are assemblies of all the nobility, ought to be held every two years; but they meet oftener when there is any important affair on the carpet. The Poles, or Polanders, are large and robust. The peasants are poor, miserable, clownish, and mere slaves to those called gentlemen. It is not said that they have so much a year, but that they have so many peasants. The Polish towns are mostly built of wood, and the villages consist of mean huts. The nobles have from time immemorial resided in their seats or castles, in their own villages, maintaining themselves by agriculture, breeding of bees, grazing, and hunting. Such was the state and constitution of Poland, before the memorable year 1772, when a partition of the country, projected by the king of Prussia, was effected by that monarch, in conjunction with the empress of Russia, and Maria Theresa, empress of Germany. By this partition, Great Poland, Polish Prussia, (the cities of Dantzic and Thorn excepted) and part of Lithuania, were annexed to Prussia; Little Poland and Red Russia, to Austria; and the remaining, and greater part of Lithuania, Courland, Polesia, Podolia, Volhinia, and the palatinate of Kiow, were seized by Russia, so that only Samogitia, Massovia, and Podlachia, were left to constitute the kingdom of Poland. Of these dismembered countries the Russian part is the largest, the Austrian the most populous, and the Prussian the most commercial. The population of the whole amounts to near 5,000,000; the first containing 1,500,000, the second, 2,500,000, and the third, 860,000. The three partitioning powers, moreover, forcibly effected a great change in the constitution. By this all foreign candidates for the elective throne of Poland, are excluded; none can be chosen king of Poland, and great duke of Lithuania, in future, but a native Pole; the son or grandson of a king cannot be elected immediately ately upon the death of his father or grandfather, nor be eligible till after an interval of two reigns; and the permanent council is eſtabliſhed, in which the executive power is vetted. By this change the houſe of Saxony, and all foreign princes, who might be likely to give weight to Poland by their hereditary dominions, are rendered incapable of filling the throne; the faineſt proſpect of an hereditary ſovereignty is removed; the exorbitant privileges of the equeſtrian order are confirmed in their utmoſt latitude; and the prerogatives of the crown, are ſtill further diminiſhed. In 1791, the king and the nation, in concurrence, almoſt unanimouſly, and without any foreign intervention, eſtabliſhed another conſtitution. By this the broils of an elective monarchy, by which Poland, on almoſt every vacancy of the throne, had been involved in the calamities of war, were avoided, the throne being declared hereditary in the houſe of Saxony. The rights and privileges of all orders in the republic, (the king, the nobles, the citizens, and the peaſants,) were alike equitably conſulted. In a word, it was not, on the one hand, the haughty deſpot dictating a conſtitution to his people, nor on the other, a proud ariſtocracy, or a mad democracy, that wreſted from their ſovereign his juſt prerogatives; but it was the univerſal wiſh of the nation, the ſentiment that inſpired which, was univerſal happineſs. A few of the nobility, however, diſcontented at the ſacrifices of ſome of their privileges, repaired to the court of Ruſſia; and their repreſentations concurring with the ambitious views of the empreſs, ſhe ſent an army into Poland, under pretence of being guarantee of the conſtitution of 1772. Her interference was too powerful to be reſiſted, and this new conſtitution was overthrown. But the principal object for which the Ruſſian army entered Poland was not yet attained. The empreſs had planned, in conjunction with the king of Pruſſia, a ſecond partition of this unhappy country, which actually took place in 1793. By this the empreſs obtained nearly the remaining part of Lithuania, with the palatinates of Podolia, Kiof, and Bratzlaw. Beſide the voiwodthips, or provinces of Poſen, Gneſen, Kaliſh, Siradia, Wielun, Lentſchitz, Cujavia, Doorzyn, Rawa, part of Plotſk, &c. with the city and monaſtery of Czentſtokow (the Loretto of Poland) and it's rich treaſures, the king of Pruſſia obtained the great object of his wiſhes, the cities of Dantzic and Thorn. Some attempts were made, by a few patriotic noblemen, to deliver their country from it's oppreſſors, and they were at firſt ſucceſsful; but the brave Koſciuſko being taken priſoner, and his army defeated, no farther efforts were made. Koſciuſko was carried into Ruſſia, and the king formally reſigned his crown at Grodno, in 1795. Since then the country has undergone a farther partition, and is now entirely ſwallowed up by the rapacity of the dividers of the ſpoil. Poland therefore is at preſent a country, but no nation; and the indignant Pole, in reviewing it's paſt hiſtory and preſent ſtate, may ſay with a ſigh, "Such things were."—By the conſtitution of 1772, the Romiſh religion is declared the eſtabliſhed; but although the Diſſidents continue excluded from the diet, the ſenate, and the permanent council, they are capable of ſitting in the inferior courts of juſtice, and enjoy the free exerciſe of their religion. The univerſities of Poland, are Cracow, Wilna, and Poſen. The air is generally cold, and they have but little wood; however, it yields ſuch plenty of grain, that near 4000 veſſels and floats, moſt of which are laden with corn, annually paſs down the Viſtula to Dantzic: 80 or 90000 oxen are alſo driven every year out of Poland. They have a large quantity of leather, furs, hemp, flax, ſaltpetre, honey, wax, and mines of ſalt of great depth, out of which they dig rock-ſalt. The principal rivers are the Dnieper, the Viſtula, the Bug, the Dniemen, the Dneiſter, and the Bog. Warſaw is the capital.

* POOL, a town of Dorſetſhire, ſituated upon a peninſula projecting into a capacious bay, branching into many creeks, and forming ſeveral iſlands. The harbour is one of the beſt in the Channel for merchant ſhips, admitting veſſels of 400 tons burden up to the quay, and the ground is every where ſoft. Pool roſe firſt into conſequence, when the ancient town of Wareham fell to decay. It now ranks pretty high among the Engliſh ſea-ports, and it's trade and population are rapidly increaſing. Two hundred and thirty ſail of ſhipping, burden 21,301 tons, and employing about 1500 men, belong to this port. Of theſe, about 140 ſhips are employed in the foreign trade, and the remainder in coaſting and fiſhing. The principal branch of buſineſs here is the Newfoundland fiſhery. It alſo ſends ſhips to the Baltic, Norway, America, Portugal, Greenland, &c. and has a fine coaſting trade, particularly in corn and coals. The cuſtoms, in 1770, amounted to 13,747l. Near the mouth of the harbour is an oyſter bank, from which vaſt quantities are carried, to be fattened in the creeks of Eſſex and the Thames. It is 40 miles WSW. of Wincheſter, and 105 SW. of London. Markets on Monday and Thurſday.

POPAYAN, a province of Terra Firma, waſhed on the W. by the South Sea, and bounded on the E. by New Granada, and by Quito on the S. It is about 440 miles long, and from 70 to 240 broad. The temperature and ſoil vary according to the ſituation of the country, in the plains, or on the ſides of the mountains. In ſome places it is rather cold than hot, and in others the reverſe; while at Popayan, the capital, there is a perpetual ſpring throughout the year. In general, the ſoil produces a great abundance of grain and fruits, and breeds vaſt numbers of cattle and ſheep, ſome of which are ſold in the towns, and others are driven to Quito. Popayan is one of the beſt trading countries in Terra Firma. It has a tranſitory commerce with Carthagena, when the galleons arrive there: as alſo with Quito, ſending horned cattle and mules, and receiving cloths and baize in return. It's active commerce conſiſts in dried beef, ſalted pork, roll-tobacco, hogſlard, rum, cotton, ribbons, and other ſmall wares.

POPAYAN, the capital of the province of the ſame name, is the conſtant reſidence of the governor, who is always chief magiſtrate or corregidor. The magiſtracy, or corporation, as in all other cities of this country, conſiſts of regidores, who are perſons of diſtinction, with the corregidor at their head; and from them are annually choſen two ordinary alcades, for maintaining order in the city. Popayan is the ſee of a biſhop, and contains ſeveral convents and a univerſity. The inhabitants are about 25,000. It is 190 miles NNE. of Quito.

POPE, DOMINIONS OF THE, or the ECCLESIASTICAL STATE, a country of Italy, bounded on the N. by the territories of Venice; on the E. by the Adriatic; on the SE. by the kingdom of Naples; and on the S. and SW. by the Mediterranean, Tuſcany, and Modena; extending from SW. to NE. 240 miles, and about 60 in it's mean breadth. It is divided into the following provinces: the Campagna of Rome; St. Peter's Patrimony; Umbria, or Spoleto; Ancona; Urbino; Romagna; the Bologneſe; the Ferrareſe; the Orvietan; Sabina; duchy of Caſtro; county of Caſtello; and territory of Perugia. Some authors have obſerved, that conſidering the pope's dominions generally conſiſt of a fertile and excellent ſoil; that his harbours, both on the Gulf of Venice and the Mediterranean, are advantageously situated for trade; that he receives considerable sums from Spain, Germany, &c. which might be supposed to be no small ease to his subjects; that his country is visited by foreigners of distinction, who cause much wealth to circulate; the pontifical government seems well calculated for the happiness, and the country might be supposed to be very flourishing. But the very reverse of this is the case. The country is ill cultivated, and thin of inhabitants, the Bolognese alone excepted. Trade and manufactures are but little encouraged; and were it not for the fertility of the soil, which furnishes the inhabitants with dates, figs, almonds, olives, and other fruits, which grow spontaneously, the indolence of the inhabitants is such, that they would be absolutely starved. This indolence is not wonderful, since they know, that the more they acquire, the more will be demanded of them. Their numerous holidays are great impediments to the exertions of industry; and the number of young sturdy beggars, who stroll about as pilgrims, instead of increasing the common stock by their industry, lie as a dead weight on their fellow-subjects. Various other causes might be mentioned, as the multitude of hospitals and convents; the inconceivable wealth which lies useless in these convents, and in the churches; the inquisition, and the rigour of the papal government. Hence it is, that in no part of Europe are to be found people more wretched than the pope's subjects. The pope, according to the ancient canon law, is the supreme, universal, and independent head of the church, and invested with sovereignty over all Christian sovereigns, communities, and individuals. His arrogant pretensions are so well known, that it is needless to expatiate upon them. The reformation begun by Luther dispelled the delusion in many parts of Europe; and the progress of learning, and the spirit of free enquiry, has enlightened many even of the Romish countries, where the papal political system is treated with contempt. The origin of this monstrous usurpation, which for ages held the Christian world in the most degrading subjection, belongs more properly to ecclesiastical history. The pope has the title of Holy Father and Holiness, and he is elected, at every vacancy, from among the cardinals, each of whom is styled his Eminence; and their number was fixed by Sixtus V. at 70, but this number is seldom complete. Every nation of the Roman Catholic religion has a cardinal for it's protector. Beside the ecclesiastical state, the pope is possessed of the duchy of Benevento, in the kingdom of Naples, worth about 6000 crowns a year. The annual revenue of the pope is computed to be 8,700,000 scudi, or upward of 2,000,000l. sterling. This pontiff bears arms, and, as an emblem of his pastoral office, the crozier, or crook, forms a part of the insignia. His military force is inconsiderable. His body-guard consists of 40 Swiss, 75 cuirassiers, and 75 light horse. His naval force consists of a few gallies, stationed at Civita Vecchia. Rome is the capital.

POPERINGUE, a town of Flanders county, on a river of the same name, 6 miles NNW. of Ypres.

Pope's, Herts, in the parish of Hatfield-Bishop's. Pope's-Hall, Kent, near Hartlip. Pope's-Hole, Surry, on the river Wey, in Frensham parish. Pophall, Sussex, W. of Haslemere. Popham, Hampshire, between Basingstoke and Oldstoke. Poplar, Middlesex, so called from the trees with which it once abounded, is situated on the Thames, E. of Limehouse, in the parish of Stepney.

POPO, or PAPA, a territory of Guinea, on the Slave Coast, about 8 leagues in extent. The soil is flat and sandy, without either hills or trees, and the inhabitants have scarce any houses to dwell in, beside the king's village, which is in an island in the midst of a river. They are so harassed by their neighbours that they cannot cultivate their lands in quiet, and therefore they would often be starved, if they did not get provisions from other places. Their chief trade is in slaves.

Poppleton, Upper and Nether, Yorkshire, E. of Hesley-Moor. Popyhall, Kent, near Coldred.

PORCAH, a town of Travancore, Hindoostan, on the coast of Malabar, held by the Dutch. It is 75 miles NW. of Travancore. Lat. 8. 11. N. lon. 74. 35. E.

PORCO, a town and jurisdiction of La Plata, in S. America, extending about 20 leagues. Here is the mountain of Porco, from whose mine the Yncas extracted all the silver for their expences and ornaments; it was accordingly the first worked by the Spaniards after the conquest. It is about 25 leagues from the city of La Plata.

Porke'lys, Cornwall, W. of Penryn. Porkington, Shropshire, NW. of Oswestry. Pork, Old, Durham, N. of Bishop-Auckland. Porkthorp, Yorkshire, W. of Kilham. Porlait, or Porloyd, a river in Carnarvonshire. Porland, alias Poringland, Great and Little, S. of Norwich.

PORLOCK, a town in Somersetshire, ſeated on the Briſtol Channel, where it has a commodious bay. It is 14 miles N. by W. of Dulverton, and 167 W. of London. Markets, only three in a year, on Thurſday before May 12th, ditto before October 9th, and ditto before November 12th.

PORRENTRUI, a neat and populous town of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, capital of the dominions of the biſhop of Baſle, and the principal place of his reſidence. The epiſcopal palace (which has been lately repaired and augmented) ſtands upon an eminence overlooking the town. It is 22 miles SW. of Baſle.

PORT GLASGOW. See GLASGOW PORT.

Port-Glenone, in Antrim, Ulſter, 105 miles from Dublin. It is pleaſantly ſeated on the river Bann, over which there is a bridge at the end of the town, which unites the counties of Antrim and Derry.

Portheathry, Angleſea, North Wales. Porthilly, Cornwall, a fiſhing harbour on the E. ſide of Padſtow-Haven. Betwixt this and Portkern, there is a great cave under a mountainous rock, through which, it is ſaid, the ſea ebbs and flows near half a mile in length. Porthilly, Cornwall, at the mouth of Trewardreth-Bay. Porthſini-kran, Monmouthſhire, between Caerleon-Bridge and Chriſtchurch.

PORT HUNTER BAY, a bay in the Duke of York's Iſland.

PORTICI, a town and royal palace of Lavora, Naples, 2 miles E. of the capital, in a charming ſituation on the ſea-ſide. It is enriched with a vaſt number of fine ſtatues, and other remains of antiquity, taken out of the ruins of Herculaneum and Pompeia.

Portington, Yorkſhire, NE. of Howden. Portinſhal, Cumb. in the pariſh of Kirkbride. Portiſſick-Haven, Cornw. NE. of Padſtow-Haven. Portkern, or Portquin, Cornwall, a fiſhing-cove E. of Portiſſick.

PORTLAND, a peninſula in Dorſetſhire, 3 miles S. of Weymouth, nearly 7 miles round, and exceedingly ſtrong both by nature and art. It is ſurrounded by inacceſſible rocks, except at the landing place, where there is a ſtrong caſtle, called Portland Caſtle, built by King Henry VIII. There is but one church in the iſland, and that ſtands ſo near the ſea, that it is often in danger from it. The whole peninſula is little more than one continued rock of white freeſtone, 9000 tons of which are exported annually. It was firſt brought into repute in the reign of James I. and is uſed in London, Dublin, and other places, for building the fineſt ſtructures. The inhabitants are about 1300.

PORTLAND, a ſea-port of N. America, capital of Cumberland county, in the province of Main. It is ſeated on a peninſula, on which formerly ſtood part of Falmouth, and has an excellent harbour.

PORTO. See OPORTO.

PORTO BELLO, a ſea-port of Panama, on the northern coaſt of the Iſthmus of Darien. It is a very unealthy place, and is inhabited chiefly by mulattoes. It conſiſts of one principal ſtreet, with others croſſing it; it has two ſquares, a great church, and two convents. At the time of the great fair, it is one of the moſt populous places in the world, the merchants often paying 1000 crowns for lodging in a middling chamber, with a cloſet, during the fair, and four, five, or ſix thouſand for a lodging in larger houſes. Columbus diſcovered the harbour in 1502, and, from it's extent, depth, and ſecurity, named it Porto-Bello, or the Fair Harbour. It's mouth is well defended by Fort St. Philip, or Iron Caſtle; and nearer the town, is another large caſtle, and a ſmall fort. All theſe were partly demoliſhed, and the town taken, by Admiral Vernon, with only ſix ſhips, in 1739. It is 60 miles N. of Panama. Lat. 9. 33. N. lon. 79. 45. W.

PORTO-CAVALLO, a ſea-port of Terra Firma, on the Caracca's coaſt. Lon. 64. 30. W.

Porton. Wilts, between Newton-Tony and Saliſbury. Porton, N. and S. Dorſetſ. near Poorſtock.

PORTO PEDRO, a ſea-port of Majorca.

PORTO-PRAYA, a town on the E. ſide of the Iſland of St. Jago, one of the Cape-de-Verds, ſituated on a ſharp rock, and with a good harbour. The outward bound Guinea and Indiamen, whether Engliſh, French, or Dutch, touch here for water and refreſhments, but few of them call on their return to Europe. While the mariners and paſſengers are on ſhore, the whole coaſt reſembles a fair, every place being filled with hogs, bullocks, fowls, goats, figs, plantains, and cocoa-nuts, which the natives exchange for ſhirts, drawers, handkerchiefs, breeches, hats, waiſtcoats, and all manner of clothing. There is a fort, on the ſummit of a hill, that entirely commands the harbour, which, were it properly mounted with cannon, and garriſoned, would be a place of great ſtrength. Lat. 14. 54. N. lon. 23. 37. W.

PORTO-RICO. See JUAN-DE-PUERTO RICO.

PORTO-SANTO, an iſland of the Atlantic, on the coaſt of Africa, the leaſt of the Madeiras. It is about 15 miles in circumference, and produces wheat and corn in abundance; alſo breeds oxen, wild hogs, and rabbits in incredible numbers. The moſt valuable articles of commerce are the gum, called dragon's blood, honey, wax, and fiſh. It has one good harbour, and good mooring in a bay, where ſhips going or returning from India ſtop to refit and refreſh. Lat. 32. 58. N. lon. 16. 20. W.

PORTO SEGURO, a government on the coaſt of Braſil, in the juriſdiction of Bahia. It is a fertile country, and the capital, of the ſame name, is built on the top of a rock, at the mouth of a river. The harbour is convenient and ſafe. Lat. 16. 45. S.

PORTO-VECCHIO, a ſea-port in a bay, on the E. coaſt of Corſica.

PORTO-VENERO, a ſea-port of Genoa.

*PORT-PATRICK, a ſea-port of Scotland, in Wigtonſhire, confined by the ſea on one ſide, and on the other by overhanging rocks and hills. Formerly the harbour was a mere inlet between two ridges of rocks, which ran into the ſea, and was only fit for flat-bottomed boats; but now there is one of the fineſt quays in Britain, with a reflecting lighthouſe, and above a dozen trading veſſels, from 40 to 60 tons burden, ſail and return regularly. A number of veſſels alſo come occaſionally from other ports. It is noted for it's ferry to Donaghadee, in Ireland, from which it is only 20 miles diſtant. It is computed that 12,000 head of cattle, and 2000 horſes are annually imported from Ireland to this place. Here are four elegant packet-boats for the conveyance of the mail, and the accommodation of paſſengers; and the mail coaches go regularly from London and Edinburgh to Port-Patrick on the one ſide, and between Dublin and Donaghadee on the other. The imports and exports have greatly increaſed of late years. The population of the pariſh amounts to upwards of 1000. It is about 107 miles SW. of Edinburgh, and 487 NW. of London.

Port-Raman, ſituated in one of the Copland Iſlands, in Down, Ulſter.

PORTREE, a town on the Iſland of Skye, one of the Scotch Hebrides. The inhabitants trade chiefly in black cattle, ſmall horſes, and kelp.

Port-Renard, in Limerick, Munſter.

PORT-ROYAL, a ſea-port of Jamaica. It was once one of the fineſt ſea-port towns in America, abounding in riches and trade; but in 1692, it was deſtroyed by an earthquake, which buried nine-tenths of the town 8 fathoms under water; in 1702 by a fire; in 1722 by an inundation of the ſea; and in 1744 it ſuffered greatly by a hurricane. Warned by theſe extraordinary calamities, the cuſtom-houſe and public offices were removed by an act of aſſembly, and no market ſuffered to be held here for the future. It contains at preſent about 200 houſes, a church, a navy-yard, an hoſpital, and barracks for a regiment of ſoldiers. It is built on a ſmall neck of land, which juts out ſeveral miles into the ſea, and is defended by a fort, which has a line of near 100 pieces of cannon. The harbour is one of the beſt in the world, and 1000 ſhips may ride therein, ſecure from every wind that can blow. It is 6 miles SE. of Spaniſh-Town, and as much by water SW. of Kingſton. Lat. 18. 0. N. lon. 76. 40. W.

PORT ROYAL, an iſland on the coaſt of S. Carolina, the ſpace between which and the neighbouring continent forms one of the moſt commodious harbours in thoſe parts. It is 12 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. The town on the N. ſhore is called Beaufort. Lat. 32. 24. N. lon. 80. 10. W.

PORT-ROYAL, in Nova-Scotia. See ANNAPOLIS.

PORT-SANDWICH, a harbour in the Iſland of Mallicollo, in the S. Sea.

Port St. Ana, in Down, Ulſter.

PORT ST. MARY'S, a ſea-port of Spain, in Andaluſia. The Engliſh made a deſcent here in 1702, with a deſign to beſiege Cadiz, but without ſucceſs. It is 10 miles NE. of Cadiz.

Portſdown, Hants, 4 miles from Portſmouth.

PORTSEA, an iſland of Hants, about 14 miles in circuit, between Portſmouth Harbour and Langſtone Harbour. It is a low tract, ſeparated from the main land by a ſhallow creek, over which is a bridge. At the SW. extremity of it, is ſituated the town of Portſmouth. Adjoining to which is the town of Portſea, built on Portſmouth Common, on condition, that if the enemy ſhould land, the houſes were to be thrown down without compenſation to the owners.

Portſham, Dorſetſh. 2 miles from Abbotſbury. Portſholm, or Portmead, near Huntingdon, encompaſſed with the Ouſe. Portſlade, Suſſex, E. of New Shoreham.

Port Slaty, ſituated in one of the Copland Iſlands, in Down, Ulſter.

*PORTSMOUTH, a town of Hampſhire, ſituated on the Iſland of Portſea. It was anciently defended by a wall of timber, covered with earth; a baſtion to the NE.; and two forts of hewn ſtone at the mouth of the harbour, begun by Edward IV. and finiſhed by Henry VI. Queen Elizabeth fortified it with new works. King Charles II. directed great alterations; eſtabliſhed new wet and dry docks, ſtore-houſes, rope-yards, &c. and raiſed ſeveral forts after the modern manner; which works were augmented in the reign of James II. Succeeding princes have made great additions ſince, and it is now the moſt regular fortreſs in Britain. Within theſe few years, government has bought more ground for additional works, and it may be made impregnable by land as well as ſea, ſince a ſhallow water may be brought quite round it. The leaſt number of men employed continually in the yard is 1000. The docks and yards reſemble diſtinct towns, &c. under a government ſeparate from the garriſon. Here is alſo a fine arſenal for laying up the cannon. The harbour is one of the fineſt in the world, as there is water ſufficient for the largeſt ſhips; and it is ſo very capacious, that the whole Engliſh navy may ride here in ſafety. The principal branch runs up to Fareham; a ſecond to Portcheſter; and a third to Portſea-Bridge. Beſides theſe branches, there are ſeveral rithes, or channels, where the small men of war ride at their moorings. Opposite the town is the road of Spithead, where the men of war anchor when prepared for actual service. It has one church and two chapels, one in the garrison, and one in a part of the town, called the Common, for the use of the dock. It is 20 miles SE. of Winchester, and 72 SW. of London. Lat. 50. 47. N. lon. 1. 1. W. Markets on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

PORTSMOUTH, a town of N. America, the largest in the state of New Hampshire, at the mouth of Piscataqua River. It's harbour is one of the finest on the continent, well defended by nature both against storms and an enemy, and it has a lighthouse at the entrance.

PORTSOY, a sea-port of Banffshire, in Scotland, about 6 miles E. of Cullen. It is a handsome town, and has several fishing and trading vessels, with manufactures of snuff and sewing thread.

PORTUGAL, the most western country of Europe, about 400 miles in length, and 130 in it's mean breadth, bounded on the W. and S. by the Atlantic Ocean, and on the E. and N. by Spain. Though Spain and Portugal are in the same climate, yet the air of the latter is much more temperate than that of the former, on account of the neighbourhood of the sea. Corn is not very plentiful in this country, because the inhabitants do not attend much to husbandry; for this reason they import Indian corn from Africa, which is made use of by the peasants instead of wheat. There is a great number of barren mountains; and yet they have plenty of olives, vineyards, oranges, lemons, nuts, almonds, figs, and raisins. They have some horned cattle, whose flesh is generally lean and dry. They also make a great deal of salt with the sea-water, especially in the Bay of St. Ubes, whence a great deal is exported. The Portuguese shipping little frequent the other countries of Europe or the Levant, their voyages lying rather to Brasil, and their different colonies on the coast of Africa, from which last they import negroes, gold, and ivory. They receive from their foreign settlements, sugar, tobacco, rum, cotton, indigo, hides, Brasil and other woods for dying, and many excellent drugs. Beside these, they have gold, silver, with diamonds and other precious stones from America. The annual produce of gold in Brasil, may be estimated, without exaggeration, at near two millions sterling. The fleet which goes every year to Brasil, sails and returns in 7 or 8 months. They trade likewise to their East India settlements of Goa, Diu, and Macao; but this traffic, once so important, is now greatly declined. The horses of Portugal were formerly in great esteem, but they are now so fond of mules, that horses are scarce. Towards the frontiers of Spain there are mountains in which they formerly got gold and silver; and the river Tajo was anciently noted for it's golden sands; but now the Portuguese do not think them worth minding. There are also mines of iron, tin, lead, quarries of marble, and some precious stones. The principal rivers are the Tajo, the Douro, the Guadiana, the Minho, the Mondego, and the Lima. Portugal is divided into six provinces, namely, Estramadura, Beira, Entre Minho e Douro, Tralos-Montes, Alentejo, and Algarva. The government is monarchical; but the royal authority is bounded by the fundamental laws of the kingdom; for the sovereign cannot raise any more taxes than were settled in 1674. Portugal was anciently called Lusitania; but by a writing now extant, dated 1069, it appears that the name of Portugal was then used for the whole kingdom. It is probably derived from a town on the river Douro, anciently called Cale, opposite to which the inhabitants afterwards built a town, naming it Portucale, now the flourishing city of Oporto. In Portugal are about 900 convents, mostly very rich; it also contains one patriarch, three archbishops, and ten bishops, besides others in America, Africa, the East Indies, &c. The Portuguese are indolent, and so fond of luxury, that they spend their wealth in the purchase of foreign merchandise. Lisbon is the capital.

Portumna, in Galway, Connaught, 74 miles from Dublin. It is seated on the river Shannon, where it falls into Lough Derg.

Portwood Hall, Cheshire, by Stockport. Poscomb, between Thame and Watlington.

POSEGA, a town and county of Sclavonia.

Poside, Derbys. in the High Peak. Posiers, Kent, near Borden. Postingford, Suffolk, N. of Clare.

POSNANIA, or POSEN, a town and palatinate of Great Poland. It contains several churches and convents, and has a considerable trade with Germany, being a staple town. The bishop's see is the most ancient in Poland. It is seated on the river Warta, 27 miles W. of Gnesna, and 145 WNW. of Warsaw.

POTOSI, a town of S. America, in the juriſdiction of La Plata, and government of Buenos Ayres, containing about 60,000 Indians, and 10,000 Spaniards, many of whom are poſſeſſed of immenſe fortunes. There is the beſt ſilver-mine in all America, in a mountain in form of a ſugar-loaf, the colour of whoſe ſoil is of a reddiſh brown. Silver has been as common in this place as iron is in Europe; however, it is almoſt exhauſted; at leaſt, they get but little from it, in compariſon of what they did formerly; and the mountain itſelf is ſaid to be little better than a ſhell. The country about this place is ſo naked and barren, that they are obliged to get their proviſions from the neighbouring provinces. It appears from the public accounts, that ſilver to the value of 9,282,382l. ſterling, has been annually taken from theſe mines. Here is always a great demand for European goods. It is ſeated at the bottom of the mountain of of Potoſi, 170 miles SSE. of La Paz.

PRAGUE, a city of Germany, in the circle of Schlan, capital of the kingdom of Bohemia. It comprehends three towns, namely, the Old, the New, and the Little Town, and is about 15 miles in circumference. It is built upon seven mountains, from the top of which is a very fine prospect. Here are 92 churches and chapels, with about 40 cloisters. The inhabitants are estimated at 83,000, of whom about 12,000 are Jews. The river Moldaw, or Muldaw, runs through the town, and separates the Old from the New. There is a handsome bridge of 18 arches over it, built with freestone, 1770 feet in length, and 35 in breadth, having a strong tower at each end, and five statues on each side. The Old Town is very populous; the houses are high, and the streets narrow. There are two large structures, one of which is the old palace, where the ancient kings resided. The finest ornament of this part is the university, frequented by a great number of students. The Jesuits had a magnificent college here; and it is here the Jews reside, where they have 9 synagogues. The New Town surrounds the Old, and contains fine structures, handsome gardens, and large streets. The Little Town was built on the spot where there was a forest; and there is a poplar-tree yet standing, which they affirm has grown there about 1000 years. The principal buildings are the Royal Castle, the Radshin, and the Strawhouse. The first of which contains a hall, 100 paces long, and 40 broad, without any pillar to support the roof. The country around it is fertile and pleasant. Prague was taken by storm, by the French, under Marshals Belleisle and Broglio, in 1741, but they were soon cooped up by the Austrian forces, and after enduring great hardships from famine, and making a brave defence, they partly found means to escape, and partly obtained a free retreat. In 1744, the Prussians made themselves masters of this capital, but quitted it again the same year. They besieged it again in 1757, but without success. It is 75 miles SSE. of Dresden, 158 SSE. of Berlin, and 235 NNW. of Vienna. Lat. 50. 5. N. lon. 14. 50. E.

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY'S ISLAND, an iſland in the Eaſtern Indian Ocean, lying WNW. of Tench's Iſland. It is pretty high, and ſeems to be about 70 miles in circuit. It is well wooded, and there were a number of clear cultivated tracts, on which ſomething was growing that had the appearance of Indian corn, or ſugar-cane. Several large and well-conſtructed houſes were ſeen among the trees. This iſland has a luxuriant and pictureſque appearance, and is ſuppoſed to be fertile and well peopled. The natives were quite naked, and ſeem to be the ſame ſort of people as thoſe on Tench's Iſland, and their canoes of the ſame conſtruction. It was diſcovered by Captains Ball and King in 1790. A high mountain, riſing in the centre of it, was called Mount Philip. Lat. 1. 32. S. lon. 149. 30. E.

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY'S ISLAND, an iſland of the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Captain Wallis in 1767. Lat. 19. 0. S. lon. 141. 6. W.

PRINCE WILLIAM'S SOUND, an inlet on the NW. coaſt of America, diſcovered by Captain Cook in 1778. The men, women, and children, are here all clothed alike. Their ordinary dreſs is a ſort of cloſe robe, which ſometimes reaches only to the knees, but generally down to the ancles. They are compoſed of the ſkins of various animals, and are commonly worn with the hairy ſide outward. The men often paint their faces of a black colour, and of a bright red, and ſometimes of a bluiſh or leaden hue; but not in any regular figure. The women puncture or ſtain the chin with black, that comes to a point in each of their cheeks. Their canoes are of two ſorts; the one large and open, the other ſmall and covered. The framing conſiſts of ſlender pieces of wood, and the outſide is compoſed of the ſkins of ſeals, or other ſea animals, ſtretched over the wood. Their weapons, and implements for hunting and fiſhing, are the ſame as thoſe uſed by the Eſquimaux. Our knowledge of the animals of this part of the continent is entirely derived from the ſkins that were brought by the natives for ſale. Theſe were principally of bears, common and pine martins, ſea otters, ſeals, racoons, ſmall ermines, foxes, and the whitiſh cat, or lynx. The birds found here were the halcyon, or great kingfiſher, which had fine bright colours; the white-headed eagle; the humming-bird; geeſe; ſmall ducks; and black ſea-pyes, with red bills, like thoſe they had ſeen at Van Diemen's Land and New Zealand. Few vegetables of any kind were obſerved; and the trees that chiefly grew about the Sound were the Canadian ſpruce pine, ſome of which are of a conſiderable ſize. Lat. 60. to 61. N. lon. 147. 0. W.

PROVENCE, a ci-devant province of France, on the Mediterranean, having Piedmont on the E.; and the Rhone, and the country of Venaiſſin on the W. The air is very different; for near the Alps it is cold, on the ſea-coaſt hot, and in the middle temperate. In that which was called Upper Provence, the ſoil is fertile in corn and paſtures; but in the lower dry and ſandy. It however produces wine, oil, figs, almonds, prunes, and pomegranates, along the ſea-coaſt from Toulon to Nice. There are orange and citron trees in the open fields; and many medicinal plants, mineral-waters, and mines of ſeveral kinds. It now forms the departments of Var, the Lower Alps, and the Mouths of the Rhone.

PROVIDENCE, the moſt flouriſhing town in the ſtate of Rhode Iſland, has a conſiderable manufactory of cloth, and a large foreign and domeſtic trade. It contains 700 houſes, and upwards of 4300 inhabitants. Here is a noble college, called Rhode Iſland College; alſo an elegant church for the Baptiſts; two for the Congregationaliſts; with others for other denominations. Providence is ſeated on both ſides of the river of the ſame name, about 36 miles SW. of Boſton.

PROVIDENCE, a river of N. America, which riſes in Maſſachuſets, and falls into Briſtol Bay a little below the town of Providence, in Rhode Iſland.

PROVIDENCE, one of the Bahama Iſlands, in the Atlantic Ocean, the ſecond in point of ſize, but the beſt of thoſe that are planted by the Engliſh. They import proviſions from Carolina, which they lay up in ſtore-houſes, for the uſe of ſuch ſhips as put in here. The iſland produces peas, Indian wheat, ſalt and Braſiletto wood; and fiſh of various kinds are found in the greateſt plenty on the coaſt. It is about 30 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. Lat. 25. 2. N. lon. 77. 20. W.

PROVIDENCE, a ſmall iſland in the Atlantic Ocean, which the Engliſh buccaneers formerly fortified, and defended againſt the Spaniſh guarda coſtas. It is about 150 miles E. of the Moſquito Shore. Lat. 13. 25. N. lon. 80. 44. W.

PROVINS, a town in the dept. of Seine and Marne, famous for it's mineral-waters, and excellent conſerves of roſes. It was of note in the time of Charlemagne; but, though large, it is not populous. It is 47 miles SE. of Paris.

PRUCK, a town of Stiria.

Pruddo-Caſtle, Northumberland, near the Tyne, 8 miles W. of Newcaſtle.
Prumſted, Norfolk, NW. of Hickling.

PRUSSIA, a large country of Europe, bounded on the N. by the Baltic and Samogitia, on the E. by Lithuania, on the S. by Poland, and on the W. by Pomerelia; about 180 miles in length, and near 100 in breadth, where broadeſt. It is a very fertile country, producing a great deal of flax, hemp, and corn; and the ſea, rivers, and lakes, ſupply them with great plenty of fiſh. Pruſſia alſo abounds with flocks, and herds, and fine horſes. It's chief commodities are wool, honey, wax, pitch, pit-coals, hops, and buck wheat. Here is plenty of game, as white and common hares, elks, deer, roe-bucks, and wild boars; but the foreſts are, at the ſame time, infeſted with lynxes, wolves, foxes, bears, wild aſſes, and uri, a ſpecies of buffalo. The hides of theſe laſt are extremely thick and ſtrong, and are ſold to foreigners at a great price. Here is neither ſalt, wine, nor minerals, but yellow amber (for the ſake of procuring which the Romans penetrated into and ſubdued this country) is found in great quantities on the Sam-land shore. There are several large lakes, besides the rivers Vistula, Pregel, Memel, &c. About 4 months of the year are temperate, warm, and pleasant; but the autumns are often wet, and the air in winter is cold, piercing, and severe. The manufactures in glass, linen, cloth, metals, &c. are increasing. The inhabitants are a mixture of native Prussians, who appear to be genuine Germans, Lithuanians, and Poles. The Teutonic order had sovereignty in Prussia about 300 years; after which Prussia was added to the dominion of the electoral house of Brandenburg, and in 1704 it was raised to a kingdom, by the Elector Frederick, who, with his own hands, put the crown on his head, and on that of his consort, at Konigsberg. Prussia is divided into three parts, Samland, Natangen, and Oberland. Konigsberg is the capital.

PURBECK, ISLE OF, a heathy tract of Dorſetſhire, to the S. of Poole Bay, about 10 miles long, and 6 over. It is inſulated by the ſea and rivers, and has been long famous for it's ſtone, which is in great demand for both paving and building. The principal quarries lie at it's eaſtern extremity, near Swanwick, whence the ſtone is exported. It is of the calcareous kind, diſtinguiſhed into numerous ſorts, the fineſt of which take a poliſh, and deſerve the name of marble. Theſe are nearly black; and ſome abound in ſhells, and are uſed for chimney-pieces, hearths, &c. Tobacco-pipe clay is dug up in ſeveral parts of this iſland; the fineſt near Corfe-Caſtle, of which much is exported, particularly for the Staffordſhire potteries. Purbeck contains 2 hundreds, 1 town, and 9 pariſhes.

Purbright, Surry, in Woking pariſh. Purfleet, Eſſex, on the Thames, 19 miles from London; has a conſiderable public magazine for gunpowder, depoſited in ſeveral detached buildings that are all bomb proof. Purford, Surry, near Byfleet and 2nd Newark. Purland, Somerſetſhire, near Heſtercomb. Purleigh, Eſſex, N. of Cold-Norton. Purley, Berks, NW. of Reading.

PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT, ſtructures formerly counted one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Theſe ſurpriſing monuments of antiquity, which baffle the reſearches of the deepeſt antiquary, to fix with preciſion their origin, are built upon a rocky bottom, at the foot of the high mountains which run along the ancient courſe of the Nile, and ſeparate Egypt from Lybia. Various have been the conjectures how and when they were built, yet no two authors agree exactly about them; however, this is certain, that they are extremely ancient, and that there is no account in any author of credit, when or for what reaſon they were founded: moſt imagine they were deſigned for tombs, though there is no diſcoverable entrance into two of them. There are many of theſe edifices at a greater diſtance in the deſert, of which very little notice is taken by travellers. The principal pyramids are ESE. of Gize, a village on the weſtern ſhore of the Nile. There are 4 of them that deſerve the attention of the curious; for though there are 7 or 8 others in the neighbourhood, they are nothing in compariſon of the former: the 2 largeſt pyramids are 500 feet in perpendicular height. The plain they ſtand on is a continual rock, almoſt covered with a moving ſand, in which are great numbers of ſhells and petrified oyſters. The moſt northern of theſe great pyramids is the only one that is open; and thoſe who enter it, and clamber up to a ſort of room, find a tomb, or ſarcophagus, which ſhews by it's dimenſions, that men were of the ſame ſize then as now. The external part is chiefly built of great ſquares ſtones, of an equal ſize, without either lime or cramps of any metal. This pyramid is three hours journey from Old Cairo, and the entrance into it is on the N. ſide. The opening leads ſucceſſively to five different paſſages, which, though running upward, downward, and horizontally, tend all toward the S. and terminate in two chambers, the one underneath, and the other in the centre of the pyramid. In the upper chamber is the ſarcophagus juſt mentioned; it is of granite, and if ſtruck with a key, ſounds almoſt like a bell. The aſcent to the top of the pyramid on the outſide is by ſteps, which are the height of each ſtone, the lowermoſt of which is 4 feet high, and 3 broad; but they were not originally deſigned for this purpoſe. The baſe at the N. ſide of it is 693 feet, and as the pyramid is exactly ſquare, the other ſides muſt be of the ſame length. If we imagine 4 equilateral triangles, mutually inclining till they all meet in a point at the top, we ſhall then have a true notion of the dimenſions and figure of this pyramid; the perimeter of each triangle comprehending 2079 feet, and the perimeter of the baſis 2772 feet. Whence the whole area of the baſe contains 480,049 ſquare feet, or 11 acres and ſomewhat more. However, the top does not end in a point, but in a little flat, or ſquare, where ſome imagine the Egyptian prieſts made their aſtronomical obſervations. One of the pyramids, about 150 feet high, is built with bricks of uncommon dimenſions, ſuppoſed by ſome to have been the work of the enſlaved Iſraelites; who, according to Joſephus, were obliged, under Pharaoh, to cut canals for the Nile, build walls, and erect pyramids.

PYRENEAN MOUNTAINS, or PYRENEES, mountains which divide France from Spain, and extend from the Mediterranean to the ocean, being about 212 miles in length. They have different names, according to the different places in which they ſtand. There are only 5 paſſages over them from one country to the other; the 3 principal of which are from St. Sebaſtian to St. Jean de Luz, from Pampeluna to St. Jean de Luz, and from Jonqueira to Perpignan. Theſe mountains yield great quantities of timber, with abundance of pitch and tar.

PYRENEES, EASTERN, a department of France, containing the late province of Rouſillon. Although great part of it is mountainous, it is fertile; producing corn, excellent wines, olives, oranges, and leather of a ſuperior quality. Perpignan is the chief town.

PYRENEES, LOWER, a department of France, compoſed of the provinces of Bearn, Navarre, and part of Gaſcony. Pau is the capital. See NAVARRE.

PYRENEES, UPPER, a department of France, compoſed chiefly of the late province of Bigorre. It produces excellent horſes and good partridges. It's valleys are very fertile; furniſhing rye, millet, Spaniſh nish corn, and flax. The mountains have mines of lead, iron, and copper, and quarries of slate, fine marble, and jasper. Tarbes is the capital.

PYRMONT, a town and county of Westphalia. At a little distance from it are mineral waters, of a vinous acid taste, well known throughout Europe, and much frequented. It is 12 miles SW. of Hameln, and 40 SW. of Hanover.

PYRNA, a town of Meissen, Upper Saxony. Near it is a very fine quarry of stone, which is transported to different places by the river Elbe, on which it is seated, 10 miles SE. of Dresden.

PYSECK, a town of Prachin, Bohemia.

Pyworthy, Devonshire, near Houlsworthy.

QUAKU, or QUAQUA, a district of Acambou, in Guinea, on the Gold Coast. The manufacture of cotton habits, called Quaqua gowns, forms a considerable branch of trade here.

Quaney, Camb. near Mildenhall-Fen.

QUANG-SI, an inland province in the S. of China, situated to the NE. of Tonquin. It produces plenty of rice, being watered by several large rivers. The southern part is a flat country, and well cultivated; but the northern is full of mountains covered with trees. It contains mines of all sorts; and particularly a gold mine. They have a particular tree, of whose pith they make bread; and there are little insects which produce white wax. A prodigious number of wild animals, curious birds, and uncommon insects are found here. The capital is Quicling, or Kouei-ling.

QUANG-TONG, QUAMTUM, or CANTON, a province of China, bounded on the E. by Kiang-Si and Fokien, on the S. by the ocean, and on the W. by Tonquin and Quang-si. It is diversified by valleys and mountains, and yields two crops of corn in a year. It abounds in gold, jewels, silk, pearls, tin, quicksilver, sugar, brass, iron, steel, saltpetre, ebony, and several sorts of odoriferous wood; beside fruits of all sorts. They have lemons of the size of a man's head; and another sort which grows out at the trunk of the tree, whose rind is very hard, and contains a great number of little cells full of an excellent yellow pulp. They have a tree, whose wood is remarkably hard and heavy, and thence called iron wood: and a prodigious number of ducks, whose eggs they hatch in ovens. A great number of small barks are loaded with these ducks, and carried to feed on the sea-shore, where, at low water, they find shrimps, oysters, and other shell fish. These small fleets generally go in companies, and the ducks mix together on the shore; but when night approaches, they are collected together by beating on a basin; they immediately form themselves into different flocks, and each returns to the vessel it belongs to. The mountains are covered with a sort of osiers, which creep along the ground, and are so tough that they make baskets, hurdles, mats, and ropes of them. Canton is the capital.

Quantock Hills, in Somersetshire. Quantock's-Head, E. and W. Somersetsh. near Watchet. Quarendon, Bucks, in Bearton parish, Aylesbury-Vale. Quarendon, Leic. 2 miles N. of Mountsorrel. Quarington, 4 miles SE. of Durham. Quarington, Lincolnsh. near Sleaford. Quarington, or Quatherington, Kent, in Mersham parish. Quarleston, Dorsetshire, SW. of Blandford. Quarley, Hants, NW. of the Wallops. Quarndon, near Derby. Quarnford, Staffordsh. in Alstonfield parish. Quarr, Dorsetsh. in Purbeck Isle, a little E. of Haycroft. Quarr, Isle of Wight, between Newport and St. Helen's. Quarry Hill, 4 miles from Durham.

QUARTEN, a town of Switzerland, near Wallenstadt-Lake, 5 miles E. of Glarus.

Quat, Shropshire, on the Severn, E. of Chelmarsh. Quatford, Shropshire, on the Severn, a mile below Bridgnorth.

QUEBEC, a large and handsome city of America, capital of Lower Canada, founded by the French in 1608. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers St. Lawrence and St. Charles. It is built on a rock, and is divided into the upper and lower town. The river, which, from the sea hither, is about 4 or 5 leagues broad, narrows all of a sudden to the breadth of a mile. The harbour is safe, spacious, and commodious, and about 5 fathoms deep. It is flanked by two bastions, that are raised 25 feet from the ground, which is about the height of the tides at the time of the equinox. The castle stands on the brow of a rugged hill, 40 fathoms above the town. The fortifications are irregular, yet the place, from it's situation, is capable of making a stout defence. The lower town is chiefly inhabited by merchants, whose trade is considerable. The noblest structure in the whole city is the palace where the governor resides. In 1711, a body of land forces, under Brigadier-general Hill, were sent with a design to conquer Canada; but the expedition failed through the rashness of the admiral in sailing too near the Seven Isles, several ships being lost, with a number of sailors. In 1755, it surrendered to the English, after a victory obtained by the brave General Wolfe, who fell in the engagement. Lat. 46. 55. N. lon. 70. 31. W.

QUEDA, a kingdom of Asia, on the W. coast of Malacca, tributary to Siam. The principal town is of the same name, and is subject to the Dutch. Here are mines of tin and lead, of which metal they export large quantities to Persia, Arabia, and India. It has a good harbour, and is 300 miles WNW. of the city of Malacca. Lat. 6. 40. N.

Quedgley, 3 miles S. of Gloucester.

QUEDLINGBURG, a town of Halberstadt, Upper Saxony, with a famous abbey, whose abbess is a princess of the empire. The inhabitants live by brewing, husbandry, and feeding of cattle. It is 7 miles SSE. of Halberstadt.

* QUEENBOROUGH, an ancient town of Kent, in the Isle of Shepey, at the mouth of the Medway. The chief employment of the inhabitants is oyster-dredging, oysters being here in great plenty, and of a fine flavour. It is 15 miles NW. of Canterbury, and 45 E. of London. Markets on Monday and Thursday.

Queen-Camel, Somersetshire.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S ISLAND, in the S. Pacific Ocean, discovered by Captain Wallis in 1767. It is 6 miles long, and 1 wide. Lat. 19. 18. S. lon. 138. 4. W.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S SOUND, a Sound at the N. extremity of the southern island of New Zealand, near Cook's Strait, lying in lat. 41. 0. S. and lon. 184. 19. E. The climate here is much more mild than at Dusky Bay; and though there is not such plenty of wild fowl and fish, that defect is amply compensated by a greater variety and abundance of excellent vegetables. Most of the hills about the Sound consist of an argillaceous stone, of a greenish grey, or bluish, or yellowish brown colour. A green talkous, or nephritic, which the jewellers call jadde, is likewise very common, together with hornstone, shingle, several sorts of flinty stones and pebbles, some loose pieces of basaltes, strata of a compact mica, or glimmer, with particles of quartz. So that Captain Forster thinks there is great reason to suppose, that this part of New Zealand contains iron ore, and perhaps several other metallic bodies. The country here is not so steep as at Dusky Bay, and the hills near the sea side are, in general, of an inferior height, but covered with forests equally intricate and impenetrable as those of Dusky Bay. The dogs here are of the long-haired sort, with pricked ears, and much resemble the common shepherd's cur, but they are very stupid.

QUEEN'S COUNTY, a county in Ireland, in the province of Leinster, about 25 miles square; bounded on the N. and W. by King's County and part of Tipperary, on the E. by Kildare and part of Carlow, and on the S. by Kilkenny. It was formerly full of woods and bogs, but is now much improved. It contains 50 parishes, 15,048 houses, and 82,000 inhabitants. Maryborough is the capital.

Queen-Court, Kent, near Ospringe. Queen-Hill, Worcest. by the Severn, S. of Upton. Queen-Lodge, or Manor, Wilts, in Clarendon-Park. Queen-Moor, Somersetshire, near Weston. Queen-Park, Warwickshire, W. of Kenilworth.

QUITO, a town of S. America, capital of an audience, ſeated in a pleaſant valley, between two chains of the Andes, on higher ground than the reſt of Peru that is habitable, being above 300 yards higher than the level of the ſea. It is a biſhop's ſee, and contains ſeveral convents and an univerſity. All ſorts of merchandiſe and commodities are exceedingly dear, principally on account of the difficulty of bringing them hither. The inhabitants amount to between 50 and 60,000. Lat. 0. 13. S. lon. 77. 50. W.

QUITO, an audience in the viceroyalty of Terra Firma, S. America, lying between two chains of the Andes. The lands are generally well cultivated, and there are a great number of towns and villages inhabited by the Spaniards, or native Americans. Every village is adorned with a large ſquare, and the church ſtands on one ſide of it. The ſtreets are generally ſtraight, and reſpect the four quarters of the world; and, indeed, all the roads are laid out in a line, croſſing each other; inſomuch that the aſpect of the country has the appearance of a large garden. It might be imagined this is a very hot country; but it ſtands ſo high, and ſo near the mountains covered with ſnow, that the air is very temperate. There are no noxious animals; for the tigers and ſerpents are below in the foreſts. They might have plenty of wine here, if the people of Lima had not an excluſive privilege of making it themſelves. They have no vicunas, or guanacoes here, but they have an animal of the ſame kind, called by the natives lamas, which is like a ſmall camel, and can carry 50 pounds weight. They have the various ſorts of materials proper for dying, and ſeveral ſorts of fruits and plants, which have been brought from Spain, beſide thoſe that naturally grow here. They have alſo imported beeves and ſheep. In the N. parts, they get a great deal of gold. The commerce is principally carried on by Europeans. This province conſiſts of 9 juriſdictions: Ibarra; Otabala; Quito; Latacunga; Riobamba; Chimbo, or Guaranda; Guayaquil; Cuenca; and Loja. After the conqueſt by the Spaniards, Quito was annexed to Peru; but a new government having been erected at Santa Fé de Bagoda, it was diſmembered from Peru and annexed to New Granada.

RIGA, a large, populous, and rich town of the Ruſſian empire, and capital of the government of Riga, or Livonia. Next to Peterſburgh, it is the moſt commercial town in the whole empire. The trade is chiefly carried on by foreign merchants, who are reſident in the town. The merchants of an Engliſh factory eſtabliſhed here enjoy the greateſt ſhare of the commerce. The principal exports are corn, hemp, flax, iron, timber, maſts, leather, tallow, &c.; it's principal imports are ſalt, cloth, ſilks, wine, grocery wares, and ſalted herrings. The maſts grow moſtly in tracts on the Dnieper, and are ſent up that river to a landing place, from which they are tranſported to the Duna. They are then formed into floats of from 50 to 200 pieces, and deſcend the ſtream to Riga. They are uſually from 70 to 80 feet in length. The hemp is brought from the Ukraine and Poland, and employs two years in it's paſſage to Riga. It is brought in barks from 2 to 300 tons burden. Within the fortifications there are 9000 inhabitants, and in the ſuburbs 15,000, beſide a garriſon of 1000 men. Here is a floating wooden bridge over the Dwina, or Duna, 40 feet in breadth, and 2600 in length. In the winter, when the ice ſets in, this bridge is taken to pieces and removed, and in the ſpring it is replaced. It was finally obliged to ſubmit to Peter the Great, in 1710. In the fifth century, it fell under the dominion of the Oſtrogoths, whoſe king, Theodorick, in 493, made Ravenna his uſual place of reſidence. In the following century, the Goths being driven out by Beliſarius and Narſes, generals of the emperors of the eaſt, Ravenna became the reſidence of the emperor's exarch, till the Lombards made themſelves maſters of it, and diſpoſſeſſed the laſt exarchs. In 755, Pepin, king of the Franks, having compelled Iſtulphus, king of the Lombards, to give up the whole exarchate, conferred it on the ſee of Rome. Ravenna is the capital.

ROME, a famous city of Europe, founded 748 years before the Chriſtian era. It was formerly three times as large as it is at preſent; and is now one of the largeſt and handſomeſt cities of Europe. It contains 81 pariſhes, 200,000 inhabitants, including ſtrangers, 2827 prieſts, 3847 monks, 1910 nuns, 1665 ſtudents, and 1470 paupers, and is divided into 14 quarters, or wards, called riones. The number of inhabitants has gradually increaſed during the whole of this preſent century. Some of the principal ſtreets are of conſiderable length, and perfectly ſtraight. That called the Corſo is the moſt frequented. Here the nobility diſplay their equipages during the carnival, and take the air in the evenings, in fair weather. The Strada-Felice, and the Strada-di-Porta-Pia, are alſo very long and noble ſtreets. There are no lamps lighted in the ſtreets at night; and all Rome would be in utter darkneſs, were it not for the candles which the devotees ſometimes place before the Madonas, or ſtatues of St. Mary; theſe appear glimmering, at vaſt intervals, like ſtars in a cloudy night. The footmen carry dark lanterns behind the carriages of people of the firſt diſtinction. Rome, at preſent, exhibits a ſtrange mixture of magnificent and intereſting, and of common and beggarly objects. The former conſiſt of palaces, churches, fountains, and, above all, the remains of antiquity. The latter comprehend all the reſt of the city. The church of St. Peter, in the opinion of many, ſurpaſſes, in ſize and magnificence, the fineſt monuments of ancient architecture. It's length is exactly 730 feet; the breadth 520; and the height, from the pavement to the top of the croſs, which crowns the cupola, 450. The Pantheon is the moſt perfect of the Roman temples which now remain. "In ſpite," ſays Moore, "of the depredations which it has ſuſtained from Goths, Vandals, and Popes, it ſtill remains a beautiful monument of Roman taſte. The pavilion of the great altar, which ſtands under the cupola of St. Peter's, and the four wreathed pillars of Corinthian braſs, which ſupport it, were formed out of the ſpoils of the Pantheon, which, after all, and with the weight of 1800 years upon it's head, has ſtill a probability of outliving it's proud, capacious rival." From the circular form of this temple, it has obtained the name of the Rotundo. It's height is 150 feet, and it's breadth nearly the ſame. There are no windows; the central opening in the dome admitting a ſufficiency of light. The rain which falls through this aperture immediately drills through holes, which perforate a large piece of porphyry, that forms the centre of the pavement. Being converted into a Chriſtian temple, the Pantheon, originally erected to the honour of all the gods, is now dedicated to Mary, and to all the martyrs and ſaints. As the Pantheon is the moſt entire, the Amphitheatre of Veſpaſian is the moſt ſtupendous monument of antiquity in Rome. About one half of the external circuit ſtill remains; from which a pretty exact idea may be formed of the original ſtructure. By a computation of Mr. Byres, it could contain 85,000 ſpectators. The Campidoglio is an elegant ſtructure, raiſed on part of the ruins of the ancient Capitol. But the antiquities of Rome are too numerous to be minutely deſcribed. The ancient Forum is now a cow-market; and on the top of the beautiful Column of Trajan, 120 feet high, is the ſtatue of St. Peter, inſtead of that of Trajan, &c. The Romans ſay, that the church of St. John Lateran is the moſt ancient of all the churches of Rome, and the mother of all the churches in Chriſtendom. To this temple every new pope conſtantly goes firſt, in a magnificent proceſſion, to take poſſeſſion of his ſee. The pope has three ſuperb palaces, of which the principal is the Vatican, near St. Peter's church, ſaid to contain upwards of 4400 apartments. The library of this palace is the largeſt and moſt complete in the world; rich, eſpecially in manuſcripts in all languages, and of all ages, of which there are ſaid to be about 4000. In Rome, the connoiſſeur, will meet with innumerable paintings by the greateſt masters, and with the chef-d'œuvres of sculpture, &c. The castle of St. Angelo is said to serve more to keep the city in awe, than to repel any foreign attack. Rome is seated on the river Tiber, which runs through a part of it, in lat. 41. 54. N. lon. 12. 55. E.

ROMHILD, a town of Henneburg, Franconia.

*ROMNEY, NEW, a town in Kent, once a very large place, containing five churches, a priory, and an hospital; but, since the sea has retired, it is much reduced. The two great meetings for all the Cinque Ports are held here on the Tuesday after St. Margaret's Day. It is seated in the marsh of the same name, 2 miles and a half NNE. of Lydd, and 71 SE. of London. Market on Saturday.

ROMNEY-MARSH, a tract of land, 20 miles long and 8 broad, which occupies the most southern part of Kent, between Dungeness and Rye Haven. It contains, in this compass, between 40 and 50,000 acres of firm, fruitful land, the richest pasture in England. Cattle are fattened here to an extraordinary size, and many bullocks are sent hence to the London market, but it is deemed a very unhealthy tract. It has two towns and 19 parishes, which were incorporated in the reign of Edward IV. by the name of a bailiff, 24 jurats, and the commonalty of Romney-Marsh.

ROSETTA, a town in Egypt, founded in the 8th century. It is ſeated on the weſtern branch of the river Nile, and called by the Egyptians, Raſchid. It is near two miles in length, has no ſtreets perfectly ſtraight, nor any remarkable ſquares, but the houſes, built with terraces, and ſtanding aſunder, have an air of neatneſs and elegance. They have a great manufactory of ſtriped and other coarſe linens; but it's chief buſineſs is the carriage of goods hence to Cairo: for all European merchandiſe is brought hither from Alexandria by ſea, and hence carried by boats to Cairo; as all the productions of Egypt are brought to the port of Alexandria: The Europeans have their vice-conſuls and factors here. The country to the N. has pleaſant gardens, full of orange, lemon, and citron-trees, and almoſt all ſorts of fruits, with a variety of enchanting groves of palm-trees, with flowers ſcattered among them; and when the fields are green with rice, it adds greatly to the beauty of the country. The rice ſown round it, is, by very rigorous laws, appropriated to the uſe and conſumption of Conſtantinople only. It is 25 miles NE. of Alexandria, and 90 NNW. of Cairo. Lat. 31. 22. N. lon. 30. 45. ROSS-SHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by Sutherlandſhire; on the W. by the ſea; on the S. by Invernesſhire; and on the E. by the Friths of Murray and Dornock, and the county of Cromarty. From N. to S. it is near 60 miles, and upward of 70 from E. to W. The NW. part of this county is desolate and dreary, presenting nothing to the eye but vast piles of rocky mountains, with summits broken, and aspiring into every form. The E. side feeds great numbers of black cattle, horses, goats, and deer, has woods of fir of great extent, and is fruitful in corn and herbs. It has also abundance of land and sea-fowl, and is well supplied with fish, particularly herrings, in the extensive lochs and bays found on the coasts. In the woods is the beautiful bird called Capercailzie, or Cock of the Wood; it is of a bright azure colour, and almost as large as a common turkey. On the tops of the mountains, is found the ptarmigan, a simple bird, not quite the size of a partridge. It is often indebted for it's safety to it's gray colour, which resembles the stones among which it lodges. In winter it's colour changes to a pure white like the snow, in which it often buries itself. The inhabitants of the W. and S. parts speak the Erse language, which is also understood on the E. coast, where, however, English is generally spoken. The principal towns are Tain, Dingwall, and Fortrose. The Island of Lewis is included in this county.

Rostellan, in Cork, Munster.

ROTTERDAM, a city and sea-port of Holland, seated on the river Rotter, an outlet of the Meuse. Next to Amsterdam it is the most considerable place in the United Provinces, for the size, beauty of it's buildings, trade, and riches. There are so many fine deep canals, that the largest ships may unload at the very doors of the warehouses. The town is governed by a regency, consisting of 24 counsellors, out of which are elected 4 burgomasters, a grand bailly, and 7 echevins. It is more frequented by the Britiſh merchants than Amſterdam, becauſe the ice goes away ſooner, and a ſingle tide, in two or three hours, will carry a veſſel into the open ſea. The principal public buildings, are the town-houſe, the bank, the Eaſt and Weſt-India Houſes, the arſenal, and the College of Admiralty. On the eaſt ſide of the city is a large baſon and dock, for building and launching veſſels employed in the ſervice of the admiralty, and the Eaſt-India Company. Here is an Engliſh Preſbyterian church, which being of the eſtabliſhed religion, the miniſter is paid by the States; and, which is not the caſe with the Preſbyterians in England and Scotland, they make uſe of an organ. Here is alſo an Engliſh epiſcopal church, whoſe miniſter is paid partly by a ſalary from the Engliſh government, and partly by a ſubſcription of the congregation. Some of the houſes are built in the old Spaniſh ſtyle, with the gable ends embattled in front; but there is a great number of modern brick houſes, which are very lofty and ſpacious, particularly on that magnificent quay called the Bomb-Tees. On this quay is a handſome Jewiſh ſynagogue. The ſtatue of Eraſmus, in bronze, ſtands in an open place, at the head of one of the canals; and in a narrow ſtreet, leading from the ſtatue to the great church, is ſtill ſhown the houſe in which he was born, with an inſcription in front, to his honour. Rotterdam is ſeated on the river Maeſe, 13 miles S. of the Hague, and 30 SSW. of Amſterdam. Lat. 51. 55. N. lon. 4. 26. E.

frequented

ROUEN, a city, the capital of the dept. of Lower Seine, ſeated on the river Seine, before the revolution the capital of Normandy, and the ſee of an archbiſhop. It contains upwards of 7000 houſes, and 36 pariſh churches. The ſtreets are narrow, crooked, and dirty, and the houſes are moſtly of wood. Notwithſtanding this diſagreeable appearance, it is one of the moſt opulent and important places in France. It is 2 leagues and a half in circuit; and (it's ſix ſuburbs included) is computed to contain 73,000 inhabitants. The principal public buildings are, the Great Hall of the Palace, in which the late Parliament of Rouen met; the Old Caſtle; and the principal church, near which is a public library. In the market place is a ſtatue of the celebrated Maid of Orleans, who was burnt here, by the Engliſh, for a witch. The linens of Rouen, particularly what are called the Siamoiſe, are much eſteemed. There are alſo manufactures of cloth, and a manufactory of oil of vitriol, the only one in France. The ſuburb of St. Sever, ſituated on the other ſide of the Seine, communicates with the city by a bridge of boats, which riſes and falls with the tide, and is made to open ſo as to admit the paſſage of ſhips. It is paved, and is 270 paces long. It is 50 miles SW. of Amiens, and 70 NW. of Paris. Lat. 49. 27. N. lon. 1. 10. E.

ROXBURGHSHIRE, a county of Scotland, ſometimes called Teviotdale, and containing the diſtricts of Teviotdale, Liddeſdale, Euſdale, and Eſkdale. It is bounded on the N. by Berwickſhire, on the E. and S. by the Engliſh counties of Northumberland and Cumberland, and on the W. by the ſhires of Dumfries and Selkirk. From N. to S. it extends near 30 miles, and about 18 from E. to W. The principal rivers are the Tweed, Teviot, and Liddel: the principal mountains are thoſe called the Cockiaw, whence a range of high hills runs weſtward, dividing Scotland from England, in many places impaſſable. The face of the country exhibits a rough, irregular appearance of moſſes, hills, and mountains, interſperſed with narrow valleys, well watered, and fertile in corn and oats. The hills feed great numbers of ſheep and cattle. On it's borders were the Battle, Battable, or Debateable Lands, claimed by the borderers of both nations. The principal towns are Jedburgh, Kelſo, Hawick, Melroſs, and Roxburgh.

RUSSIA, a large empire, partly in Aſia, and partly in Europe, bounded on the N. by the Frozen Ocean; on the S. by Great Tartary, the Caſpian Sea, and Perſia; on the E. by the N. Pacific Ocean; and on the W. by Sweden, Poland, and Lapland. There were three countries that had the name of Ruſſia; namely, Red Ruſſia; White Ruſſia, which comprehends Lithuania; and Black Ruſſia, which comprehends the governments of Kaluga, Moſcow, Tula, Rezan, Volodimir, and Yaroſlaf; and hence his imperial majeſty takes the title of emperor of all the Ruſſias.

This

This empire, excluſive of the late acquiſitions from the Turks and from Poland, may be likened to a ſquare, whoſe ſides are 2000 miles each. The ſeas of Ruſſia are, the Baltic, the White Sea, the Frozen Ocean, the Black Sea, and the Caſpian Sea. There are alſo five large rivers, namely, the Dnieper, Volga, Don, Duna or Dwina, and Oby. A country of ſuch vaſt extent muſt lie in different climates, and the ſoil muſt be as different. The moſt fertile part is near the frontiers of Poland; inſomuch that the inhabitants are able to ſupply their neighbours with corn: the N. part is not only more cold, but very marſhy, and over-run with foreſts, inhabited chiefly by wild beaſts. Beſide domeſtic animals, there are wild beeves, reindeer, martens, white and black foxes, weaſels, ermins, and ſables, whoſe ſkins make the beſt furs in the world. They had very few vines before Peter the Great cauſed them to be planted in different places. In Ruſſia are large quantities of cotton and ſilk, with which they make the various ſorts of ſtuffs; ſkins, furs, Ruſſia leather, talc, tallow, hemp, Ruſſia cloth, honey, wax, and almoſt all the merchandiſes of China, India, Perſia, Turkey, and ſome European countries. This vaſt empire has been divided by the late empreſs into 42 governments; namely, Peterſburgh, Olonetz, Wiburgh, Revel, Riga, Pſkof, Novogorod, Tver, Smolenſko, Polotſk, Mohilef, Orel, Kaluga, Moſcow, Tula, Rezan, Volodimir, Yaroſlaf, Vologda, Archangel, Koſtroma, Niſhnei Novogorod, Kaſan, Simbirſk, Penza, Tamboſ, Voronetz, Kurſk, Novogorod Severſkoi, Tchernigof, Kiof, Kharkof, Catharinenſlaf, Caucaſus, Saratof, Uſa, Viatka, Perm, Tobolſk, Kolyvan, Irkutzk, and the country of the Coſſacks. The inhabitants, in general, are robuſt, great eaters, and fond of brandy. They uſe bathing, but ſmoke no tobacco, leſt the ſmoke ſhould diſhonour the images of the ſaints, which they have in great veneration; however, they take a great deal of ſnuff, made of the tobacco brought from the Ukraine. They were formerly accounted the rudeſt, and moſt ignorant people in the world, and many of them are now little better. Formerly no Ruſſians were ſeen in other countries, and they ſeldom or never ſent ambaſſadors to foreign courts; but now they are more polite, and ſtudy the intereſts of different nations. They had no ſhips of war, or merchandiſe, before the reign of Peter I. but in the preſent reign, powerful Ruſſian ſquadrons, have appeared, not only in the Baltic, but in the Black Sea, and in the Mediterranean. They have images in their churches; and the prieſts give a paſſport to thoſe that are dying, addreſſed to St. Nicholas, who is deſired to entreat St. Peter to open the gates of heaven, as they have certified that the bearer is a good Chriſtian. The church is governed by a patriarch, under whom are the archbiſhops and biſhops. Every prieſt is called a papa, or pope, and of theſe there were 4000 in Moſcow only. Formerly he was thought a learned man who could read and write; but Peter undertook to introduce arts and ſciences, and, in 1724, the firſt univerſity was founded that ever was in Ruſſia; and there is alſo an academy of ſciences at Peterſburgh, ſupplied with eminent profeſſors. With reſpect to dreſs, a long beard is in high eſtimation with the people of Ruſſia, notwithſtanding the efforts of their monarchs to root it out; and it is only thoſe depending upon government, in the army and navy, who have yet complied with the cuſtom and the wiſh of the court. Thoſe who retain their beards, retain likewiſe the ancient dreſs; the long ſwadling coat, either of ſkins, or of coarſe cloth lined with ſkins, in winter, and in ſummer, of cloth only. About their middle they have a ſaſh of any colour; but what they moſt affect, is green or yellow. They wear trowſers inſtead of breeches and ſtockings; their limbs are, beſides, wrapped in many folds of woollen ſtuffs to keep them warm: and above all they wear boots. Their ſhirts are faſhioned as women's, and their necks expoſed to the cold, have become very hard and impenetrable, from this practice. Government continue to exert every nerve to compel the ſubjects to adopt the German dreſs. The clergy alone excepted, none can procure any place, any favour from court, upon other condition than baniſhing the Aſiatic ſheep ſkin robes. The dreſs of the women is the reverſe of the men, both in faſhion and colour; every part of it being as ſhort and tight as decency will allow, and very gaudy. It is exactly the ſame with that of the Highland women in Scotland; both have the ſhort jacket, the ſtriped petticoat, and the tartan plaid; and both too, in general, have a napkin rolled about their head. The Ruſſian women are, however, far more rich in their attire; nor is gold lace wanting, any more than the art of painting, to complete the Ruſſian belle. The young generation are modernizing theſe antique veſtments; the ſtiff embroidered napkin is ſupplanted by one of flowing ſilk; the jacket jacket and petticoat are of muſlin, or other fine ſtuffs; and the plaid is exchanged for a ſilk or ſatin cloak, in the cold ſeaſon, lined with fur. The richer claſs of females wear velvet boots. The dreſs of the higher ranks is after the French and Engliſh faſhion; and all muſt have a covering of fur ſix months of the year. Thus equipped, the prince and the peaſant are hurled in their chaiſes and ſledges through the dreary Scythian winter. The ſovereigns of Ruſſia are abſolute. They were formerly called Grand Dukes, which is ſtill the title of the heir apparent. They afterward aſſumed the title of czar, and, in the ſequel, that of emperor. The natives pronounce the word czar, like tzar, or zaar, and this, probably by corruption, from Cæſar, emperor; from ſome fancied relation to the Roman emperors; on account of which they alſo bear the eagle as a ſymbol of their empire. The firſt who bore the title of czar, was Baſil, ſon of Baſilides, who freed his country from it's ſubjection to the Tartars, about the year 1470.

SALISBURY PLAIN, in Wiltſhire, extends 25 miles E. to Wincheſter, and 28 W. to Weymouth, and in ſome places it is from 35 to 40 miles in breadth. There are ſo many croſs roads in it, and ſo few houſes to take direction from, that Thomas, the eighth earl of Pembroke, planted a tree at the end of each mile ſtone from hence to Shaftſbury, for the traveller's guide. That part of it about the city is a chalky down, like Eaſt Kent. The other parts are noted for feeding numerous flocks of ſheep, ſome of which contain from 3000 to 5000 each, and ſeveral farmers hereabouts have two or three ſuch flocks. By folding the ſheep upon the lands, after they are turned up with the plough, they become very fruitful, and bear very good wheat and other grain. In this plain, beſide the famous Stonehenge, are traces of many Romiſh and Britiſh camps, ſepulchres, &c.

Salkelds, Great and Little, Cumberland, N. of Penrith, are waſhed by the Eden. At the latter there is a circle of 77 ſtones, each 10 feet high, and one at the entrance 15 feet high: they are thought to have been a Druidical work, and are called, by the country people, Long Meg and her Daughters.

SALLINS, a neat and new-built town of Kildare, Leinſter. It is ſeated on the banks of the Grand Canal, 14 miles from Dublin.

SALLEE, an ancient and conſiderable town of Benhaſſen, in the kingdom of Fez. It was formerly one of the beſt harbours in the country, but now, on account of a bar that lies acroſs it, ſhips of 200 tons burden are forced to unload their guns and ballaſt before they can enter it. There are docks to build ſhips, but they are ſeldom uſed, for want of ſkill and materials; and as the ſand continues to accumulate, it is probable that, very ſoon, only veſſels with oars will be able to enter the river. The road can only be frequented from February to October with a SW. wind, the road is no longer ſafe, and the ſhifting of the ſands of the bar renders the paſſage extremely difficult. Here is a battery of 24 pieces of cannon, which commands the road, and a redoubt which defends the entrance of the river. It is a large place, divided into the Old and New Towns, by the river Guero. It has long been infamous for it's pirates, which make prizes of all the Chriſtians' ſhips that come in their way, except there is a treaty to the contrary. It is ſeated on the river Sallee, 42 miles W. of Mequinez. Lat. 34. 0. N. lon. 6. 31. W.

SALSETTE, an iſland of Hindooſtan, lying off the coaſt of Concan, 10 miles N. of Bombay. It is about 120 miles in circumference, and is fertile in rice, fruits, and ſugar-canes. It has ſubterraneous temples, cut out of the live rock, in the manner of thoſe of Elephanta. It is only ſeparated from Bombay by a channel half a mile over, which is fordable at low water. In 1750, the Mahrattas took it from the Portugueſe; and, in 1774, the Engliſh took it by aſſault from the Mahrattas, and have kept it ever ſince, agreeably to treaty. It is a moſt deſirable acquiſition to the Eaſt India Company, as the ſettlement of Bombay poſſeſſed no territory beyond the ſmall iſland on which it is ſituated, and depended on foreign ſupplies for ſubſiſtence.

SALSONA, a town of Catalonia.

It tinges the ſtones near it with a red colour, and when boiled, has produced a great quantity of bay ſalt. Saltwick, Northumberland, near Stannington. Saltwood, Kent, a mile NW. of Hithe.

SALTZBURG, a city of Bavaria, capital of a territory of the ſame name, under the archbiſhop of Saltzburg, who is a ſovereign prince. It is populous and well built, although the ſtreets are narrow and ill paved. The archbiſhop's palace is a ſuperb ſtructure, and has a magnificent garden, adorned with ſtatues, and planted with uncommon trees. This is his ſummer houſe; but that for winter contains 163 apartments, all richly furniſhed, without reckoning the halls and galleries. The univerſity depends on the Benedictine monks. In 1737, a college was built here for young gentlemen. The cathedral is built of freeſtone and marble, and contains 5 organs. Near Saltzburg are ſome conſiderable ſalt-works. It is ſeated on the river Saltz, 45 miles S. by W. of Paſſaw, and 140 WSW. of Vienna.

SALTZBURG, THE ARCHBISHOPRIC OF, a country of Germany, W. of Auſtria, S. of Upper Bavaria, and N. of Carinthia. It is a mountainous country, but pretty fertile, and contains mines of copper, ſilver, and iron. No manner of grain is ſown here, but hay of a peculiar goodneſs is produced in every part. Here are conſiderable manufactures of ſteel and braſs, as appears from the aſtoniſhing number of ſwords, fabres, muſkets, cannon, &c. which are to be ſeen in the armories all over the country. In the archbiſhopric are 6 cities and 25 market towns. It is near 100 miles in length, and 60 in breadth. The principal town is of the ſame name. In 1732, above 30,000 Lutheran Saltzburghers withdrew, with their effects, from the archbiſhopric, diſperſing themſelves in the other Proteſtant countries, and even in the Britiſh colonies in America.

SALVADOR, a town of Congo, capital of the country of Pemba, with a large palace, where the king reſides, and a Portugueſe biſhop. It is ſeated on a craggy mountain. It is full of forests and very high mountains, which feed a great number of cattle, and produce a large quantity of honey. There are also very active horses, in high esteem. The inhabitants are accounted clownish and honest; and a singular custom is said to prevail here, no young woman is allowed to go out in the night, without a candle in her hand, and two bells at her girdle. Rosienne and Medniki are the principal places.

SAMOS, an island or the Archipelago, on the coast of Natolia, about 24 miles in length, and 10 in breadth, and extremely fertile. The inhabitants live at their ease, their taxation by the Turks being moderate. They are clothed in the Turkish manner, except a red coif, and their hair hanging down their backs, with plates of silver, or block tin, fastened to the ends. They have abundance of melons, lentils, kidneybeans, and excellent muskadine grapes. They have white figs, four times as big as the common sort, but not so well tasted. Their silk is very fine, and the honey and wax admirable. This island abounds with partridges, woodcocks, snipes, thrushes, woodpigeons, turtledoves, wheaters, and excellent poultry. They have iron mines, and most of the soil is of a rusty colour: they have also emery stone, and all the mountains are of white marble. The inhabitants are about 12,000, who are almost all Greeks, and the monks and priests occupy most part of the island. They have a bishop who resides at Corea.

SANDULIET, a town of Brabant, 11 miles NNW. of Antwerp.

Sandwal, Staffordſhire, 5 miles from Wolverhampton.

* SANDWICH, a town of Kent, conſiſting of about 1500 houſes, moſt of them old and built with wood, though there are a few new ones built with brick and flints. The members belonging to it, as a Cinque Port, are Fordwich, Deal, Walmer, Ramſgate, Reculver, Stonar, and Sar. It was once a conſiderable ſea-port, but it is much decayed, on account of the river Stour, on which it is ſeated, being ſo choked up with ſand, as to admit only ſmall veſſels. By theſe it exports corn, malt, carrots, fruit, and garden ſeeds. It is 13 miles E. of Canterbury, and 67 E. by S. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

SANDWICH ISLANDS, in the N. Pacific Ocean, are 11 in number, and extend in latitude from 18. 54. to 22. 15. N. and in longitude from 150. 54. to 160. 24. W. They are called by the natives Owhyhee, Mowee, Ranai, Morotoi, Tahoorowa, Woahoo, Atooi, Necheeheow, Oreehoua, Morotinne, and Tahoora, all inhabited except the two laſt. The climate of theſe iſlands differs very little from that of the Weſt Indies in the ſame latitude, except that it is more temperate; and there are no traces of thoſe violent winds and hurricanes, which render the ſtormy months in the Weſt Indies ſo dreadful. There is alſo more rain at the Sandwich Iſles, where the mountainous parts being generally enveloped in a cloud, ſucceſſive ſhowers fall in the inland parts, with fine weather, and a clear ſky, on the ſea-ſhore. Hence it is, that few of thoſe inconveniences, to which many tropical countries are ſubject, either from heat or moiſture, are experienced here. The winds, in the winter months, are generally from ESE. to NE. The vegetable productions are nearly the ſame as thoſe of the other iſlands in this ocean; but the taro root is here of a ſuperior quality. The bread-fruit trees thrive not in ſuch abundance as in the rich plains of Otaheite, but produce double the quantity of fruit. The ſugar-canes are of a very unuſual ſize, ſome of them meaſuring 11 inches and a quarter in circumference, and having 14 feet eatable. There is alſo a root of a brown colour, ſhaped like a yam, and from 6 to 10 pounds in weight, the juice of which is very ſweet, of a pleaſant taſte, and is an excellent ſubſtitute for ſugar. The quadrupeds are hogs, dogs, and rats; the fowls are of the common ſort, and other birds beautiful and numerous, though not various. Goats, pigs, and European ſeeds, were left by Captain Cook; but the poſſeſſion of the goats ſoon gave riſe to a conteſt between two diſtricts, in which the breed was entirely deſtroyed. The inhabitants are undoubtedly of the ſame race that poſſeſſes the iſlands ſouth of the equator; and in their perſons, language, cuſtoms, and manners, approach nearer to the New Zealanders, than to their leſs diſtant neighbours, either of the Society or Friendly Iſlands. They are, in general, above the middle ſize, and ſtrong; they walk gracefully, run nimbly, and are capable of bearing great fatigue. Many of both ſexes are ſaid to have fine open countenances; and the women, in particular, have good eyes and teeth, with a ſweetneſs and ſenſibility of look, that render them very engaging. There is one peculiarity, characteriſtic of every part of this nation, that even in the handſomeſt faces there is a fulneſs of the noſtril, without any flatneſs or ſpreading of the noſe. They ſuffer their beards to grow, and wear their hair after various faſhions. The dreſs of both men and women nearly reſembles thoſe of New Zealand, and both ſexes wear necklaces of ſmall variegated ſhells. Tattowing the body is practiſed by every colony of this nation. The hands and arms of the women are alſo very neatly marked, and they have the ſingular cuſtom of tattowing the tip of the tongue. Like the New Zealanders, they have adopted the method of living together in villages, containing from 100 to 200 houſes, built pretty cloſely together, without much order, and having a winding path between them. They are generally flanked, toward the ſea, with detached walls, which are meant both for ſhelter and defence. Theſe walls conſiſt of looſe ſtones, and the inhabitants are very dexterous in ſhifting them ſuddenly to ſuch places as the direction of the attack may require. In the ſides of the hills, they have little caves or retreats, the entrance to which is ſecured by a fence of the ſame kind. Some of their houſes are large and commodious, from 40 to 50 feet long, and from 20 to 30 broad; while others are mere hovels. Their food conſiſts principally of fiſh and vegetables, to which they add the fleſh of dogs and hogs. The making of canoes, mats, &c. forms the occupations of the men; the women are employed in manufacturing cloth; and the ſervants are principally engaged in the plantations and fiſhing. They have various amuſements, ſuch as dancing, boxing, wreſtling, &c. Their agriculture and navigation bear a great reſemblance to thoſe of the South Sea iſlands. Their plantations, which are ſpread over the whole ſea-coaſt, conſiſt of the taro, or eddy-root, and ſweet potatoes, with plants of the cloth-tree ſet in rows. The bottoms of their canoes are of a ſingle piece of wood, hollowed out to the thickneſs of an inch, and brought to a point at each end. The ſides conſiſt of 3 boards, each about an inch thick, neatly fitted and laſhed to the bottom part. Some of their double canoes meaſure 70 feet in length, 3 and a half in depth, and 12 in breadth. They make ſalt in great abundance, and of a good quality. As the iſlands are not united under one government, wars are frequent among them. The ſame ſyſtem of ſubordination prevails here as at the other iſlands, the ſame abſolute authority on the part of the chiefs, and the ſame unreſiſting ſubmiſſion on the part of the people. The government is monarchical and hereditary. At Owhyhee is a regular ſociety of prieſts living by themſelves, and diſtinct, in all reſpects, from the reſt of the people. Human ſacrifices are here frequent; not only at the commencement of a war, or ſignal enterpriſe, but the death of every conſiderable chief calls for a repetition of theſe horrid rites. Yet, apart from theſe obſervances, they are acknowledged to be of the moſt mild and affectionate diſpoſition. They live in the utmoſt harmony and friendſhip with each other; and in hoſpitality to ſtrangers they are not exceeded even by the inhabitants of the Friendly Iſlands, when their reſentment is not kindled by injury. Their improvements in agriculture, and the perfection of their manufactures, are certainly adequate to the circumſtance of their ſituation, and the natural advantages which they enjoy.

SANTA-CLARA, an iſland of Peru, in the Bay of Guyaquil.

SANTA-CRUZ, a town on the SW. coaſt of the Iſland of Teneriff, defended by four ſmall forts, and ſeveral batteries. The town is very irregularly laid out, and contains about 300 houſes, built of ſtone. The principal ſtreet is broad, and has more the appearance of a ſquare than a ſtreet, with the governor's houſe at the upper end. Here is a church, and ſeveral convents. The road before the town is the principal one in the iſland for ſhelter, capacity, and the goodneſs of it's bottom. It lies entirely open to the SE. and S. winds; but theſe never continue long, and there is not an inſtance of a ſhip's driving from her anchors on ſhore. Lat. 28. 31. N. lon. 16. 31. W.

SANTORIN, or ST. ERINI, an island of the Archipelago, to the N. of Candia, and to the SW. of Nanphio. It is eight miles in length, near as much in breadth, and almost covered with pumice-stone, whence the soil, in general, must be dry and barren; it is, however, greatly improved by the labour and industry of the inhabitants, who have turned it into a garden. It affords little wheat, but a great deal of barley and cotton, and large quantities of wine, in which, and their cotton manufactures, their trade consists. Fruit is scarce, except figs, and they have neither oil nor wood. They kill their beeves but once a year, and then they put it in pickle, which makes it very hard. The inhabitants are all Greeks, and are about 10,000 in number. Pyrgos is the capital, besides which there are four towns and five villages. They have but one spring in the island, for which reason they preserve the rain-water in cisterns; and though they are subject to the Turks, they chuse their own magistrates. Lat. 36. 10. N. lon. 26. 1. E.

Santoste-Ferry, Lincolnsh. from Yorkshire to the Isle of Axholm.

SARACENS, a people celebrated some centuries ago, who came from the deserts of Arabia: Sarra, in their language, signifying a desert. They were the first disciples of Mahomet, and, within 60 years after his death, conquered a great part of Asia, Africa, and Europe. They kept possession of Spain till the year 1511, when they were finally expelled. They maintained a war in Palestine a long time, against the Western Christians, and, at length, drove them entirely out of it; but now there are no people known by that name, for the descendants of those who conquered Spain are called Moors.

SARAGOSSA, a city of Spain, in Arragon, with an archbishop's see, a university, founded in 1474, and a court of inquisition, It was originally built by the Phœnicians, who called it Salduba; and the Romans sent a colony here in the reign of Augustus, whence it had the name of Cæsar Augustus, which, by corruption, has been changed into Saragossa. It is large, handsome, and well built. The streets are long and broad, but ill paved, and dirty; and the houses are from three to six stories high. It is adorned with many magnificent buildings, and they reckon 17 large churches, and 14 handsome monasteries, not to mention others less considerable. The river Ebro runs across the place, dividing it in two; and on it's banks is a handsome quay, which serves for a public walk. The Holy-street is so large and broad, it may be taken for a square; and here they had their bull-fights. In this street are several noblemen's families, particularly that of the viceroy. The cathedral is a spacious Gothic building; but the finest is that of Nuestra Signora del Pilar, seated on the side of the Ebro, and is a place of the greatest resort for devotees in Spain. They exhibit a Madona here, or a supposed miraculous statue of Mary and the Infant, which stands on a marble pillar. The ornaments of this image are immensely rich; the crown being full of precious stones of an inestimable price; scarce any thing is to be seen but gold and jewels: and a vast number of people come in pilgrimage hither. The town-house is a sumptuous structure; in the hall are the pictures of all the kings of Arragon, and in the corner of it a St. George on horseback, with a dragon of white marble under him. Saragossa is seated in a large plain, with two bridges over the Ebro; one of stone, and the other of wood, which latter has been thought the most beautiful of it's kind in Europe. It is 130 miles W. of Barcelona, and 160 NE. of Madrid. Lat. 41. 53. N. lon. 0. 28. W.

SARATOF, one of the 41 governments of Russia, formerly a province of Astracan. It is divided into 12 districts, of which that of the same name is the principal.

SARATOF, a town of Russia, in the govern-government of the ſame name, ſeated on the Volga, 392 miles SE. of Moſcow. Lat. 51. 30. N.

SARATOGA, a town of New York, on the river Hudſon, where, in 1777, a Britiſh army, under General Burgoyne, ſurrendered to the Americans, under General Gates, on a capitulation.

SARBRUCK, a town of Treves.

SARBRUCK, or SARBOURG, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, ſeated on the river Saare, 33 miles E. of Nanci.

SARDAM, a ſea-port of North Holland, where formerly were vaſt magazines of timber for building ſhips, and naval ſtores, with a prodigious number of ſhipwrights. Here is ſtill ſeen the hut in which Peter the Great, czar of Ruſſia, reſided, while he worked as a ſhipwright in this town. It has been ſaid, that the ſhip-builders of Sardam would undertake, on two months notice, to build a ſhip of war every week during the year. Sardam is ſeated on the river Wye, 7 miles NW. of Amſterdam.

SARDINIA, an iſland of the Mediterranean, 142 miles in length from N. to S. and 60 in it's mean breadth from E. to W. It was originally peopled by the Phœnicians and Greeks, and called by the latter Ichnuſa, Sandialotis, and Sardo. The ſoil is fertile in corn and wine, and there are a great number of oranges, citrons, and olives. On the coaſt is a fiſhery for anchovies and coral, of which they ſend large quantities to Genoa and Leghorn. Beeves and ſheep are numerous, as well as horſes, which are very good for labour and the road. They are fed in the little iſlands about it, which abound in game; and in that of Aſnaria are great numbers of turtles. The air is very unhealthy, from the marſhy land. The inhabitants were formerly accounted rude and barbarous, and the Romans baniſhed their ſtate priſoners to this iſland; but they are much more civilized ſince, and enjoyed great liberty, till an inquiſition was eſtabliſhed at Saſſari. As the inhabitants are not very induſtrious, the land is not ſufficiently cultivated; nor do they pay much attention to trade. It contains mines of ſilver, lead, ſulphur, and alum; and they make a good deal of ſalt. In 1708, this iſland was taken by the Engliſh for Charles III. and allotted to the emperor by the treaty of Utrecht, in 1713; but, in 1720, it was ceded to the Duke of Savoy, as an equivalent for Sicily. The royal revenue is inconſiderable, after the charges of the army and civil officers are deducted. The king of Sardinia keeps his court at Turin, the capital of his Piedmonteſe territories; but he has a viceroy at Cagliari, which is the capital of this iſland.

SARDO, or SART, a decayed town of Turkey in Aſia, in Natolia. It was formerly called Sardis, and was capital of Lydia, and the ſeat of the famous king Cræſus. It now contains only a few poor huts. However, here is a large caravanſary, where there are handſome lodgings for travellers, it lying in the great road from Smyrna to Aleppo; and the Turks have a moſque, which was formerly a Chriſtian church. The inhabitants are now almoſt all ſhepherds, who feed their flocks in the neighbouring plains. There are alſo a few Chriſtians, who employ themſelves in gardening. It is 30 miles ENE. of Smyrna.

Sardon, Great and Little, Staffordſhire, SW. of Cank.

SARE, or SARRE, a river of France, which riſes in the dept. of the Voſges, and paſſing by Sarbruck, Sar Louis, Sarbruck in Treves, &c. falls into the Moſelle a little above Treves.

Sareſden, Oxfordſ. in Churchill pariſh.

SARGANS, a town of Zurich, capital of a county of the ſame name, about 15 miles in extent each way. It ſtands on the top of a hill, and near it are mineral ſprings. It is governed by a bailiff ſent by the eight cantons alternately.

SARGUEMINE, a town in the dept. of Moſelle, ſeated on the river Sare, 9 miles N. of Sarbruck.

SARK, or SERK, a little iſland lying 2 leagues E. of the Iſland of Guernſey, on which it is dependant. It is about two miles long, and nearly as much wide, and contains about 300 inhabitants. It is remarkably healthful, and affords all neceſſaries for it's inhabitants; particularly apples, turnips, carrots, with moſt kinds of grain. Ducks, mallards, woodcocks, teal, &c. abound here, and, at ſome ſeaſons, the cliff-pigeons almoſt cover the iſland. Of rabbits they have great plenty, and alſo a variety of ſea-fiſh. The only manufacture is knitting of ſtockings, gloves, waiſtcoats, with which they trade to Briſtol, &c. and return with neceſſaries, having ſeveral ſmall veſſels for that purpoſe.

SARK, LITTLE, a very ſmall iſland, ſituated to the S. of Sark.

SARK, a river which riſes in the E. part of Dumfrieſſhire, and, for ſeveral miles, forms the boundary between England and Scotland.

SARSANA, a town of Genoa.

SARSINA, a town of Romagna.

SARTE, a department of France, S. of that of Orne. It takes it's name from a river which riſes in this laſt department, and paſſing by Alençon, Frenay, Le Mans, &c. joins the Maine at Angers, and the Loire 4 miles below it. The capital is Mans.

SARUM, NEW. See SALISBURY.

SARUM, OLD, an ancient borough of Wilts, which, though now reduced to a ſingle farm-houſe, ſtill ſends two members to parliament; theſe are choſen by the proprietors of certain adjacent lands. It once covered the ſummit of a high ſteep hill; but there is nothing now to be ſeen of it but ſome ſmall ruins of a caſtle, with a double intrenchment, and a deep ditch. The tracks of the ſtreets and cathedral may be traced out by the different colour of the corn growing where once the city ſtood. It is about a mile N. of Saliſbury.

SARVERDEN, a town in the dept. of Moſelle, ſeated on the river Sarre, 10 miles NNW. of Sarbruck.

SARWAR, a town and county of Hungary, 48 miles SE. of Vienna.

SASERAM, a large town of Hindooſtan, in the country of Bahar, ſeated near a great lake, 55 miles SE. of Benares.

SASSARI, a city of Sardinia, capital of the territory of Logari, and occaſional reſidence of the viceroy. It contains near 30,000 inhabitants, and is famous for a fountain called Roſſel, which is ſaid to be much more magnificent than the beſt at Rome. The inhabitants have the following proverb, Chi non vidde Roſſel, non vidde mondo; he that has not ſeen Roſſel, has not ſeen the world. It is ſeated in a plain, 6 miles NNE. of Alghero. Lat. 40. 46. N. lon. 8. 39. E.

SAS-VAN-GHENT, a town of Dutch Flanders, ſmall, but regularly fortified. It has fine ſluices, and is ſeated on a canal, which communicates with the Scheld and with Ghent, 8 miles N. of that city.

SASSUOLO, a town of Modena.

SATABAGO, a province of Aſiatic Turkey, S. of Imiretta.

SATALIA, or ANTALIA, a ſea-port of Caramania, large, ſtrong, and divided into three towns. Here is a ſuperb moſque, which was formerly a Chriſtian church. The country about it is fertile; and the citrons and oranges are excellent. The inhabitants trade in wool, cotton, goat's-hair, agaric, gum tragacanth, opium, and bees-wax. It is 134 miles S. of Kiutaja, and 265 S. by E. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 37. 1. N. lon. 32. 21. E.

SAVENDROOG, a fortress of Mysore, in Hindoostan, situated on the top of a vast rock, rising half a mile in perpendicular height, from a base of above 8 miles in circumference; and divided at the summit by a chasm, which forms it into two hills. These, having each their peculiar defences, form two citadels capable of being maintained independently of the lower works. Walls, cross-walls, and barriers have also been erected at every accessible place. On Dec. 10th, 1791, Colonel Stuart encamped within three miles of the rock, and on the morning of the 21st, at 11 o'clock, the British soldiery made themselves masters of a fortress which had hitherto been considered as impregnable. It is 18 miles W. of Bangalore, and 47 NE. of Seringapatam.

SAVERDUN, a town in the dept. of Arriege, seated on the river Arriege, 15 miles NW. of Mirepoix.

* SCARBOROUGH, a large town of the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on a ſteepy rock, near which are ſuch craggy cliffs that it is almoſt inacceſſible on every ſide. On the top of this rock is a large green plain, with a little well of freſh water, ſpringing out of the rock. A noble large caſtle was erected here by King Henry II. which is now moſtly in ruins. It is greatly frequented on account of it's mineral waters, which are purgative and diuretic, and alſo for ſea-bathing; on which account it is much improved in the number and beauty of it's buildings. The ſpring was under the cliff, part of which fell down in December 1737, and the water was loſt; but, in clearing away the ruins, in order to rebuild the wharf, it was recovered, to the great joy of the town. Here are aſſemblies and balls, in the ſame manner as at Tunbridge. Scarborough has a good harbour, poſſeſſes a conſiderable ſhipping-trade, ſupplies York and other places with cod, mackarel, turbot, &c. and is the beſt port for veſſels to take to, in ſtreſs of weather, between Newcaſtle and the Humber. It is 36 miles NE. by E. of York, and 237 N. of London. Markets on Thurſday and Saturday.

SCHAFFHAUSEN, a town of Switſerland, capital of a canton of the ſame name, ſituated on the N. ſhore of the Rhine, near a celebrated cataract. It was formerly an imperial town, governed by an ariſtocracy; it was admitted a member of the Helvetic confederacy in 1501, and it's territory forms the twelfth canton in rank. The inhabitants of this town are computed to be 6000; but the number of citizens or burgeſſes (in whom the ſupreme power ultimately reſides) is about 1600. From theſe are elected 85 members, who form the great and little council; the ſenate, or little council of 25, being ing entrusted with the executive power, and the great council (including the senate) finally deciding all appeals, and regulating the more important concerns of government. The town is tolerably well built; and here is a famous wooden bridge over the Rhine. The river being extremely rapid here, had already destroyed several stone bridges of the strongest construction, when, in 1754, Ulric Grubenman, a carpenter of Tuffen, in Appenzel, offered to throw a wooden bridge of a single arch, over the river, which is near 400 feet wide. The magistrates, however, required that it should consist of two arches, and that he should, for that purpose, employ the middle pier of the old bridge. He has done so; but has contrived to leave it a matter of doubt, whether the bridge is supported by the middle pier. A man of the slightest weight feels it almost tremble under him; yet waggons heavily laden pass over it without danger. The sides and top of it are covered; and it is what the Germans call hængewerk, or hanging-bridge: the road, which is almost level, is not carried, as usual, over the top of the arch, but (if the expression may be used) is let into the middle of it, and there suspended. The architect was totally unacquainted with the theory of mechanics. Vessels that go down the Rhine pay a toll here. The inhabitants are about 7000. Schaffhausen is 22 miles N. by E. of Zurich. Lat. 47. 43. N. lon. 8. 41. E.

SCHAFFHAUSEN, the smallest canton of Switzerland, bounded on the N. and W. by Suabia; on the E. by part of Suabia, and the bishopric of Constance; and on the S. by the Rhine. It is 5 leagues in length, and 3 in breadth, and contains 17 parishes, and 10 bailiwicks. The revenues of the state are not very considerable, as will appear from the salary of the burgomaster, or chief of the republic, which barely amounts to 150l. a year. The reformation, was introduced here in 1529. The priesthood is supported by the state; but their income is barely sufficient for their maintenance; the greatest salary being only 100l. and the least 40l. per annum. The professors of literature also, who are taken from the clergy, are paid by government; and a school is supported at the public expence. Sumptuary laws are in force here, as well as in most parts of Switzerland; and no dancing is allowed except upon particular occasions. The pastures are good, and they export wine; corn is mostly procured from Suabia. The population of this canton is estimated at 30,000.

SCHWARTZBURG, a town in Thuringia, capital of a county of the ſame name. It is ſeated on the river Schwartz, 22 miles SE. of Erfurt.

SCHWEIDNITZ, a city of Sileſia, capital of a province of the ſame name, in which are 14 towns, with flouriſhing linen and woollen manufactures. It is the handſomeſt town of Sileſia, next to Breſlaw. The ſtreets are large, the church fine, and the houſes well built. The royal-palace is turned into a convent. All the magiſtrates are Romaniſts, and moſt of the inhabitants are Proteſtants, who have a church without the town, as alſo a public ſchool. It is 22 miles SW. of Breſlaw.

SCHWEINFURT,

SCHWEINFURT, an imperial town of Franconia, with a palace, where the senators meet, who are twelve in number. The environs abound in cattle, corn, and wine, and the inhabitants are Proteſtants. They are not very rich, however, they carry on a large trade in linen and woollen cloth, goose-quills, and feathers. It is ſeated on the river Maine, 25 miles NNW. of Bamberg.

SCHWEITZ, a canton of Swiſſerland, bounded on the N. by the canton of Zurich; on the E. by the bailiwick of Gaſter, and the canton of Glarus; on the S. by the canton of Uri; and on the W. by the cantons of Lucerne, Zug, and Zurich. This canton, with that of Uri and Underwalden, threw off the yoke of Auſtria, January 13, 1308. In 1315, having given the Auſtrians a total overthrow at Morgarten, they formed a perpetual alliance, which was the grand foundation of the Helvetic confederacy. The name of Schwetzerland, Switzerland, or Swiſſerland, which originally comprehended only the three cantons mentioned above, was afterward extended to all Helvetia. The governments of Schweitz and Uri contain, including their ſubjects, 50,000 people. The ſame kind of ſoil, and the ſame productions, are common to the two cantons. The whole country being rugged and mountainous, conſiſts chiefly of paſture, raiſes little corn, and has no wine: but this ſoil, naturally barren, has been improved by the natives to an aſtoniſhing degree of fertility. The government is democratic, every male 16 years old having a vote in the landeſgemeine; but the ordinary regency conſiſts of 60 counſellors, with a landgamman as preſident, viz. ten from each of the ſix quarters into which the country is divided. Out of this council the principal officers are elected. The Romiſh religion is here excluſively eſtabliſhed.

SCHWEITZ, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of the canton of the ſame name, with one church, and three convents. It is ſeated in a fertile country 10 miles ESE. of Lucerne.

SCHWERIN, a town of Germany, capital of the duchy of Mecklenburgh Schwerin, ſeated on a beautiful lake. It is divided into four parts; namely, Schwerin, the New Town, the Iſland of Schelf, and and the Moor. The cathedral is a fine Gothic pile, with a lofty ſpire. The ducal palace and gardens are pleaſantly ſituated on an iſland in the lake, and have a communication with the town by a drawbridge. It is 35 miles ESE. of Lubeck.

SCHWINBURG, a town of Denmark, on the SE. coaſt of Funen.

SCIATI, an iſland of the Archipelago, 18 miles N. of Negropont.

Scilly, a ſmall village in Cork, Munſter, near Kinſale. The inhabitants are the deſcendants of an Engliſh colony, who ſettled here after the defeat of the Spaniards, in the reign of Elizabeth. They have ſeveral fiſhing veſſels, and annually take great quantities of fiſh, which they cure for foreign markets and home conſumption. As they ſeldom marry out of the village, they are generally related to each other.

SCILLY, a cluſter of iſlands and rocks, which lie almoſt 10 leagues to the W. of the Land's-End, in Cornwall, and are eaſily diſcerned from it. Of theſe, only five or ſix are inhabited. They are ſuppoſed formerly to have produced much tin, but are now chiefly known as a reſort of ſea-fowl, and a place of ſhelter for ſhips in bad weather. They are ſaid to be 145 in number. The inhabitants principally ſubſiſt by fiſhing, burning kelp, and acting as pilots. They have wild-fowl of all ſorts, and tame-fowl, puffins, and rabbits in great number. The chief of the iſlands is St. Mary's, which is near 10 miles in circumference, and has a good port. This iſland is the largeſt and moſt cultivated, containing more, and richer inhabitants, than all the reſt put together. It is defended by a caſtle, built by Queen Elizabeth, and ſeveral ſtrong batteries, one of which, towards the ſea, is mounted with 64 pieces of cannon, ſome of them 18 pounders. Here is alſo a guard-houſe, barracks, a ſtore-houſe, with a company of ſoldiers, a maſter-gunner, and ſix other gunners. In Sampſon Iſland, which is the ſmalleſt, only one family lives, which goes to the place of worſhip in the other iſlands, the only communication being by means of a boat. In St. Mary's, and in two or three other of the largeſt iſlands, are various antiquities, particularly the remains of a temple of the Druids, and ancient ſepulchres; but the greateſt ornament of this iſland is the light-houſe, of 51 feet high, and the gallery is four. The faſh-lights are 11 feet 6 inches high, and 3 feet 2 inches broad. It ſtands on high land, and is a very fine column. The Scilly rocks have been deſtructive to numbers of ſhips entering the Channel. One of the moſt diſaſtrous events of this kind happened October 22d, 1707, when three men of war, under Cloudeſley Shovel, were loſt, with all their crews. Lat. 49. 56. N. lon. 6. 41. W.

SCILLY,

SCILLY, a group of islands or shoals in the S. Pacific Ocean, discovered by Captain Wallis, in 1767, and described as extremely dangerous. Lat. 16. 28. S. lon. 155. 30. W.

SCIO, or CHIOS, one of the most beautiful and pleasant islands of the Archipelago, near the coast of Natolia, to the S. of Metelin, and to the NE. of Samos. It is 32 miles in length, and 15 in breadth; a mountainous country, yet pleasant enough, there being fruits of various kinds growing in the fields, such as oranges, citrons, olives, mulberries, and pomegranates. Large quantities of pleasant wine are produced here, which they export to the neighbouring islands; but their principal trade is in silks manufactured into velvet, damask, and other stuffs, designed for Asia, Egypt, and Barbary. They have also some commerce in wool, cheese, figs, mastick, and turpentine. The women are accounted more polite than in other parts of the Levant; though the dress is odd, yet it is very neat. The partridges are tame, being sent every day into the fields to get their living, and in the evening they are called back with a whistle. The town called Scio is large, pleasant, and the best built of any in the Levant, the houses being beautiful and commodious; some of them are terraced, and others covered with tiles. The streets are paved with flint stones, and the Venetians, while they had it in their possession, made a great many alterations for the better. The French get a good deal of honey and wax off this island. The castle is an old citadel, built by the Genoese. The harbour of Scio is the rendezvous of all shipping, that go to or come from Constantinople, and will hold a fleet of fourscore vessels. They reckon only 10,000 Turks, and 3000 Latins, but 100,000 Greeks, on this island. Scio is a bishop's see, and is seated on the sea-side, 47 miles SSW. of Smyrna.

Sciredun, Devonshire, on the Dart, between Dartmore and Ashburton.

SCIROS, an island of the Archipelago, to the W. of Metelin. It is 15 miles in length, and 8 in breadth. It is a mountainous country, but has no mines. Their cheese is made of the milk of goats and sheep mixed together, and the wine is excellent. They have also wax and mastick. There is but one town, of the same name, and that is built on a rock, which runs up like a sugar-loaf, and is 10 miles from the harbour of St. George. The inhabitants are Greeks, the cadi being the only Turk among them.

SCLAVONIA, a country of Europe, situated S. of Hungary, and between the rivers Drave and Danube on the N. and Save on the S. It is divided into six counties and belongs to the house of Austria. It was formerly called a kingdom, and is about 150 miles in length, and from 25 to 45 in breadth, from the frontiers of Croatia to Belgrade. The eastern part is called Ratzia, and the inhabitants Ratzians. These form a particular nation, and are of the Greek church. The language of Sclavonia is the mother of four others, namely, those of Hungary, Bohemia, Poland and Russia.

Scoggerbar, Cumberland, in Bootle parish, near the sea. Scole, Norfolk. Scoles, Yorkshire, SW. of Halifax.

Scone, or Scoone, a village of Perthshire, seated on the E. side of the river Tay, N. by W. of Perth. Here is the ancient royal palace of Scone, in which the kings of Scotland were crowned, in the celebrated stone chair, which is now in Westminster Abbey.

SCOPOLO, an island of the Archipelago, at the entrance of the Gulf of Salonichi. It is about 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth, is very fertile, produces plenty of good wine, and contains 12,000 inhabitants, who are almost all Greeks.

SCOPIA, or USCAPIA, a town of Turkish Servia, on the confines of Bosnia.

Scornston, Norf. S. of Wurfted. Scorton, Yorkf. NE. of Catterick. Scoston, Nottingh. on the Ryton, NE. of Worksop. Scotby, Cumb. adjoining Kirkbride, near Carlisle. Scotfield, Bedfordf. NW. of Baldock. Scotfield, Staffordf. NE. of Tamworth. Scotford, S. of Lancaster. Scotgrove, Kent, by Ash. Scothorn, NE. of Lincoln. Scothorp, Yorkf. SE. of Settle.

SCOTLAND, or NORTH-BRITAIN, the most northern of the two kingdoms into which the island of Great Britain was formerly divided. It is bounded on all sides by the sea, except towards the S. and SE. where it is joined to England. The islands, also, on it's western coast, called the Hebrides, or Western Islands, and those to the NE. called the Orkney and Shetland-Islands, appertain to Scotland. From N. to S. Scotland extends about 270 miles, and from E. to W. in some parts 150 miles, but in others only 30. Exclusively of the islands, Scotland seems to be naturally divided into three large districts. The North division is formed by a chain of lakes, which cross the country from the Frith of Murray, to the island of Mull. The Midde division is bounded on the S. by the Friths of Forth and Clyde, and the great canal by which they are united; and, on the S. side of this boundary is the South division. The Northern division is chiefly an assemblage of vast dreary mountains; not, however, without some fertile valleys on the northern and eastern shores. The Middle division is traversed, in different directions, by many great ranges of mountains; and though cultivation here is also found, especially on the eastern shore, yet of this division, as well as of the former, it may be observed, that the arable land bears but a small proportion to the mountainous and barren tracks. However, the eastern coast of the Middle division, and the whole of the Southern, has a great resemblance to England, and with respect both to the general aspect of the country, and to the progress of cultivation, exhibits every kind of rural variety. The rivers of Scotland, are, in general, remarkable for their rapidity, and abundance of salmon, trout, and other excellent fish; the principal are the Spey, Don, Tay, Tweed, Clyde, Forth, the Northern Dee, the Esk, Annan, Nith, and Southern Dee; and the lochs, or lakes, are numerous and extensive. The climate is very various. The northern extremity, which is in the same latitude with some parts of Norway, is extremely cold; but the frosts are far from being so intense here as in parts of the continent equally as far to the north. For this advantage, Scotland is indebted to an insular situation. It's west coast is subject to frequent rains in the summer, and to sudden changes of weather. In many places on the eastern shore, and in the whole South division, the climate is not inferior to the north part of England; and, in general, the air of Scotland is very healthy. The products of the country are grain, flax, woods of oak and fir, coal, lead, iron, free-stone, lime-stone, slate, the most beautiful marble, fine rock-crystals, pearls, variegated pebbles, kelp, &c. It feeds vast herds of cattle and flocks of sheep; they are both small, but much valued for the delicacy of their flesh; and the fleece of the latter emulates the finest Spanish wool. It is in the high grounds that the cattle are so diminutive; for, in many parts of the country, the horses and cows are not excelled in size and beauty by those of the English breed. Among the wild animals are the roe, stag, fox, badger, otter, hedge-hog, rabbit, weasel, mole, and other small quadrupeds. Among the feathered race, are the capercailzie, or cock of the wood, the eagle, falcon, partridge, quail, snipe, plover, black-game, and grouse, &c. The fisheries in the surrounding seas are of great national importance, and will become a real source of wealth to the nation, when increasing commerce shall enable the inhabitants to form roads, erect villages, and open canals, in the remote parts of the country. The trade and population of most of the great towns have considerably increased of late. The western shores, however, are annually drained of inhabitants by the emigration of individuals. Scotland was an independent kingdom till James VI. was called to the throne of England; and in the reign of Queen Anne, one of his successors, both kingdoms were united under the general name of Great Britain. Sixteen peers are elected to represent the nobility, and 45 commoners, to represent the counties and boroughs, in the same parliament with that of England. There are five universities in Scotland, viz. St. Andrews, Glasgow, Edinburgh, New Aberdeen, and Old Aberdeen. Scotland is divided into 33 counties, namely, Shetland and Orkney, Bute, Caithness, Sutherland, Ross, Cromarty, Nairne, Inverness, Murray, Banff, Aberdeen, Kincardine, Angus, Perth, Fife, Kinross, Clackmannan, Stirling, Dumbarton, Argyle, Renfrew, Ayr, Wigton, Kirkcudbright, Dumfries, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, Lanerk, Linlithgow, Edinburgh, Haddington, and Berwick. The established religion is the Presbyterian, and the capital is Edinburgh.

Scrivelsby-Hall, Lincolnſ. by the river Witham, near Horncaſtle. This manor is held by grand ſerjeantry, viz. to attend on the coronation days, on a good war-horſe, in preſence of the ſovereign, to challenge any one that diſputes the right to the crown. Scroby, Nottinghamſhire, by Bautree, in the road from London to York. Scropton, SW. of Derby, by the Dove.

Scrotagliny, in Kerry, Munſter.

Scrotby, Norfolk, S. of Winterton-Neſs. Sculcoates, Yorkſhire, a ſuburb of Hull. Sculpius, Eſſex, in Finchingfield.

SCUTARI, a town of Turkey in Europe, capital of Upper Albania. It is ſeated on a lake to which it gives name, 53 miles SE. of Raguſa.

SCUTARI, a large and handſome town of Turkey in Aſia, in Natolia, with a well-frequented harbour, the reſidence of a bergleberg, a Greek archbiſhop, and a Latin biſhop. It is ſeated on the E. ſide of Conſtantinople, of which it is looked upon as a ſuburb, being directly over-againſt it. It contains a very handſome moſque, and is built on the ſide of a hill.

SCYLLA, a rock, near the Faro of Meſſina, on the coaſt of Calabria, oppoſite the celebrated Charybdis; which, though the terror of ancient mariners, and the theme of poets, on account of it's great whirlpool, is now no longer formidable. This rock is about a mile from the entrance of the Faro, and forms a ſmall promontory, which runs a little out to ſea, and meets the whole force of the waters as they come out of the narroweſt part of the Straits. The head of this promontory is the famous Scylla. "It muſt be owned," ſays Mr. Brydone, "that it does not altogether come up to the formidable deſcription that Homer gives of it; the reading of which (like that of Shakeſpeare's Cliff) almoſt makes one's head giddy. Neither is the paſſage ſo wondrous narrow and difficult as he makes it. Indeed, it is probable that the breadth of it is greatly increaſed ſince his time, by the violent impetuoſity of the current; and this violence too muſt always have diminiſhed, in proportion as the breadth of the channel increaſed. Our pilot ſays, there are many ſmall rocks that ſhow their heads near the baſe of the large ones. Theſe are probably the dogs that are deſcribed as howling round the monſter Scylla. There are likewiſe many caverns that add greatly to the noiſe of the water, and tend ſtill to increaſe the horror of the ſcene. The rock is near 200 feet high. There is a kind of caſtle, or fort on it's ſummit; and the town of Scylla, or Sciglio, containing 3 or 400 inhabitants, ſtands on it's S. ſide, and gives the title of prince to a Calabreſe family."

Seaborough, Somerſetſ. S. of Crewkern. Seabraham, or Sebergham, Highbound and Lowbound, Cumberland, near Wigton. Seachurch, Eſſex, near Canvey-Iſle. Seacroft, Yorkſhire, NE. of Leeds.

SEAFORD, a ſea-port in Suſſex, one of the Cinque Ports, 8 miles SSE. of Lewes, and 59 S. by E. of London. Market diſuſed.

Seaford, in Down, Ulſter.

E. of Okehampton. Seal, Kent, 2 miles N. of Sevenoaks. Seal, Surry, E. of Farnham. Seal, Suſſex, near Stening. Seales, Wiltſhire, near Mere. Seamelly, Linc. NE. of Horncaſtle. Seamer, a river in Yorkſ. Seamer, Yorkſ. NW. of Stokeſley. Seomer, Yorkſhire, SW. of Scarborough. Seamer-Hall, and Beacon, Yorkſhire, N. of Scarborough.

Seapatrick, in Down, Ulſter.

Sea-Salter, Kent, near the ſea, 4 miles NE. of Feverſham. Seaſcales, Cumb. in Gosforth pariſh. Seaſey, Yorkſ. SE. of Thirſk. Seaſin, Staffordſ. W. of Wolverhampton. Seathorn, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs. Seatmoorthow, or Seckmurthy, Cumberland, in the pariſh of Cockermouth.

SEATON, or PORT-SEATON, a ſea-port of Haddingtonſhire. Here is a ruinous palace, in which Mary Queen of Scots reſided, after her return from France. In the chapel are ſeveral curious marble monuments. It has a conſiderable trade in ſalt and coal, and is ſituated on the Frith of Forth, 9 miles E. of Edinburgh.

Seaton, a river in Cornwall. The town of the ſame name, at it's mouth, has, according to tradition, been ſwallowed up in the encroachments of the ſea. Seaton, Cumberl. near the ſea, S. of Ravenglaſs. Seaton, Cumb. in Bootle pariſh. Seaton, Cumb. near Workington. Here are very extenſive iron-works on the Derwent, and near it there is a conſiderable ſalmon fiſhery. Seaton, Durham, in Seham pariſh. Seaton, Northumberland, by the ſea, E. of Alnwick. Seaton, Northumberl. between Morpeth and the ſea. Seaton, Yorkſhire, NW. of Holm, in Spalding-Moor. Seaton, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, near Hornſey-Meer. Seaton Carey, Durham, by the ſea, S. of Hartlepool. Seaton Delaval, Northumberland, by the ſea, N. of Tinmouth. Seavenſhale, or Sheweſhield Caſtle, Northumberland, on the Pict's-Wall, near Buſy-Gap. Seawell, Staffordſhire, NE. of Wolverhampton.

SEBASTIAN, ST. a town of Guipuſcoa, in Spain, with a good and well frequented harbour. The harbour is ſecured by two moles, on which redoubts are planted, within which only one ſhip can paſs at a time. The ſtreets are long, broad, and ſtraight, and paved with white flag ſtones. The houſes are handſome, the churches neat, and the environs pleaſant. It carries on a great trade, and is ſo populous, that ſeveral families are obliged to live in the ſame houſe. Their greateſt trade conſiſts in iron and ſteel, which ſome take to be the beſt in Europe; they alſo deal in wool, which comes from Old Caſtile. On Auguſt 3d, 1794, it was inveſted by the republican troops of France, and capitulated on the following day. The garriſon, conſiſting of 2000 men, ſurrendered priſoners of war: 180 pieces of braſs cannon were taken, with conſiderable magazines and ſtores. It is 50 miles NNE. of Bilboa.

SEBASTIAN, ST. a large and handſome city of Braſil, in S. America, capital of the province of Rio Janeiro, and ſeated at the mouth of the river of that name, which forms a very extenſive and commodious harbour. The city is large, well-built, and populous; the houſes, in general, are of ſtone, two ſtories high; every houſe having, after the manner of the Portugueſe, a little balcony before it's windows, and a lattice of wood before the balcony. It ſtands upon low ground, which was formerly ſwampy, and ſurrounded by hills of vaſt height, which exclude the benefit of the refreſhing ſea and land breezes; ſo that it is of courſe, ſuffocatingly hot, and unhealthy, in the ſummer. The different mechanics carry on their buſineſs in diſtinct parts of the town; particular ſtreets being ſet apart for particular trades. On the S. ſide of a ſpacious ſquare is the palace of the viceroy. There are no manufactures here, but much gold is brought from the mines, and plenty of diamonds, topazes, and amethyſts. Forty thouſand negroes are annually imported, to work in the mines, on the king's account. This port is a very good place for ſhips to put into, that want refreſhment; all ſorts of proviſions, except wheaten bread and flour, may be eaſily procured; as a ſubſtitute for bread, there are yams and caſſada in plenty. Lat. 22. 54. S. lon. 42. 46. W.

SEBENICO, a ſea-port of Dalmatia, capital of a county of the ſame name, with a biſhop's ſee, defended by four citadels and a caſtle. It is ſeated near the mouth of the river Cherca, in the Adriatic, 25 miles NW. of Spalatto.

SEGORBA, a town of Valencia, ſeated in a ſoil, very fertile in corn and wine, and where there are quarries of fine marble. It is near the river Morviedro, 27 miles NW. of Valencia, and 150 E. of Madrid.

SEGOVIA, a city of Spain, in Old Caſtile, the ſee of a biſhop. Here the beſt cloth in Spain is made, from the fine Spaniſh wool, ſo much eſteemed in other countries. The manufacturing of this is one part of their trade, although, in 1785, the number of their looms, formerly ſo numerous, did not exceed 250; and another is very fine paper. The cathedral, which is a mixture of the Gothic and Mooriſh architecture, ſtands on one ſide of the great ſquare, and contains the ſtatue of Mary in maſſy ſilver. The alcazar is a well-preſerved edifice. and was formerly the reſidence of the Gothic kings. It is ſeated in the higheſt part of the town, is covered with lead, and has 16 rooms richly adorned with tapeſtry, a great deal of gilding, and fine ornaments of marble and porphyry. The royal chapel is magnificently gilded, and embelliſhed with fine paintings. The Mint is ſurrounded by a river, on which are mills employed in coining, and by which every thing is done almoſt inſtantaneouſly. This mint was for ſome time the only one in Spain; of late another has been eſtabliſhed at Seville. The aqueduct is one of the moſt aſtoniſhing and beſt preſerved of the Roman works; it is 3000 paces in length, and is ſupported by 177 arches of a prodigious height, conſiſting of two rows, riſing majeſtically one above the other. It's ſolidity, which has braved upwards of 16 centuries, ſeems inexplicable, on obſerving the ſimplicity of it's conſtruction, and comparing the ſlender baſe with the wonderful height. It is ſeated on a mountain between two hills, 45 miles NW. of Madrid.

SEGOVIA, a conſiderable town of Lucon, in the Manilla Iſlands, founded in 1598; the ſee of a biſhop, defended by a fort and garriſon. It is ſituated near the N. coaſt, 250 miles N. of Manilla.

Seighford, NW. of Stafford.

SEIKS, THE, a numerous nation of Hindooſtan Proper, conſiſting of ſeveral ſmall independent ſtates, that have formed a kind of federal union. They poſſeſs the whole of Lahore, the principal part of Moultan, and the W. part of Delhi. This tract extends about 400 miles from NW. to SE. and is from 150 to 200 broad, in general, although, in the part between Attock and Behker, (that is along the Indus) the extent cannot be leſs than 320. Their capital is Lahore. We know but little concerning the ſtate of their government, but it is repreſented as being mild. In their mode of making war, they are unqueſtionably ſavage and cruel. Their army conſiſts almoſt entirely of horſe, of which they are ſaid to be able to bring at leaſt 100,000 into the field. The Seiks, like the Hindoos, moleſt not others in matters of faith, and require only a conformity in certain ſigns and ceremonies; but, unlike the Hindoos, they admit proſelytes; although thoſe from among the Mahometans are the leaſt eſteemed.

SEINE, a river of France, which rises in the dept. of Côte d'Or, and, flowing by Troyes, Melun, Paris, and Rouen, falls into the English Channel at Havre-de-Grace.

SENEGAL, a kingdom of Africa, in Negroland, ſeated on a large river of the ſame name, which overflows like the Nile, and much about the ſame time of the year. It is 40 days before it comes to the height, when the river overflows it's banks, and the channel is difficult to find by thoſe who go up it in boats. The French once ſent 30 men up this river, who rowed 1000 miles, undergoing great hardſhips, inſomuch that only five returned back alive; their boat once ſtuck faſt on the tops of trees, and they got it off with a great deal of difficulty. The kingdom of Senegal was formerly very conſiderable, but it is now reduced into a very narrow compaſs; it is populous, and full of trees, but the ſoil ſandy and barren, for which reaſon they never ſow, till the rainy ſeaſon comes on, in June, and get in their harveſt in September The mouth of the river Senegal is laid down in lat. 15. 50. SENNAR, a large town of Africa, in Nubia, capital of a kingdom of the ſame name, which lies on the banks of the Nile, between Egypt and Abyſſinia. It is 5 miles in circumference, and very populous, containing near 100,000 inhabitants. The houſes are all one ſtory high, flat roofed, and very ill built, but the ſuburbs contain only cottages, covered with reeds. The king's palace is ſurrounded by high walls, of bricks dried in the ſun, but is only a confuſed heap of buildings. The heats are exceſſive, and in the rainy ſeaſon the air is extremely unwholeſome. There is a market every day in the week, in the middle of the town, where they ſell all ſorts of proviſions and goods. They have alſo a market near the king's palace, where ſlaves are ſold: the females ſit on one ſide, and the males on another, and the Egyptian merchants buy great numbers of them every year. Their horned cattle are the largeſt and fatteſt in the world, but the common meat ſold in the market is camel's fleſh. Their religion is Mahometaniſm. They are an ignorant, ſuperſtitious, and yet a cunning ſort of people. The women who can afford it, have ſlight garments of ſilk, and wear rings of various metals on their hair, arms, legs, ears, and fingers. Their legs are naked, and they have only a ſingle ſole faſtened to their feet with ſtrings. Other women and girls have clothes wrapped round them from the waiſt to the knees. The men go almoſt naked. According to Mr. Bruce, their trade is not great; they have no manufactures, and the principle article of conſumption is blue cotton cloth from Surat. Formerly, when they ways were open, and merchants went in caravans with ſafety, Indian goods were brought to Sennar from Jidda, and then diſperſed over the black country. The return was made in gold, in powder called tibbar, civet, rhinoceros' horns, ivory, oſtrich feathers, and, above all, in ſlaves and glaſs, more of which were exported from Sennar, than from all the reſt of Africa put together. But this trade is almoſt deſtroyed; ſo is that of the gold and ivory. However, the gold ſtill keeps up it's reputation of being the pureſt and beſt in Africa, and is therefore bought at Mocha, to be carried to India, where it all at laſt centres. Sennar is ſeated on an eminence, on the W. ſide of the river Nile, in lat. 13. 34. N. lon. 33. 30. E.

SEVERN, a river of England, which rises near Plynlimmon Hill, in Montgomeryshire, when taking a north-easterly direction it enters Shropshire. It is navigable in it's whole course through this county, and entering Worcestershire, runs through it's whole length. In it's course it waters Welsh Pool, Shrewsbury, Bridgenorth, Worcester, Tewkesbury, and Gloucester; and entering the sea, it's mouth is called the Bristol Channel. A communication between this river and the Thames, the Trent, the Dee, the Mersey, and other rivers, has been lately opened by a number of different canals.

SEVERN, THE VALE OF, a spacious and extensive vale in Gloucestershire, which borders both sides of the river Severn. It's fertile pastures furnish the kingdom with that cheese for which the county is so justly famous. In this vale, the air is so mild, even in winter, that it seems to enjoy a different climate from that of the Cotswold Hills.

SEVERUS' WALL, commonly called GRAHAM'S DIKE, in the W. of Scotland. It is a work of the Romans, and supposed to be done by the emperor whose name it bears, to prevent the incursions of the Picts and Scots. It began at Abercorn, on the Frith of Forth, 4 miles NE. of Linlithgow, and ran W. across the country to the Frith of Clyde, ending at Kirkpatrick, near Dumbarton.

SEVILLE, a district of Andalusia, called also Lower Andalusia, extending from Estramadura and Cordova to the Atlantic and the Straits of Gibraltar; about 120 miles in length, and from 70 to 110 in breadth.

SEVILLE, an ancient city, capital of Andalusia, one of the most considerable in Spain, and the see of an archbishop. It is seated near the river Guadalquivir, is of a round form, and takes up more ground than Madrid, although it has not so many inhabitants. The Moors built an aqueduct, still to be seen, 6 miles in length. The cathedral is the largest in Spain; the steeple is of very curious workmanship, and extremely high, consisting of three towers, one above another, with galleries and balconies. Of the convents, which are 77 in number, that of St. Francis is the most curious, adorned with a very handsome public square, in the midst of which is a fine fountain. It contains 160 monks, beside 140 lay brethren. The university of Seville consists of many colleges; the professors enjoying rich pensions. Near the cathedral is the royal palace, called Alcazar, which was partly built after the antique by the Moors, and partly in the modern taste by king Pedro; it is a mile in extent, and flanked by large square towers, built with stones taken from the ancient temple of Hercules, said to be the original founder of the city. The exchange is a square building, of the Tuscan order, each front 100 feet in length, and 3 stories high. The suburb stands on the other side of the river, over which is a long bridge of boats. In this suburb the house of the Inquisition is placed; and there are public walks where most of the inhabitants go to take the air. The town-house is adorned with a great number of statues, and there is a large square before it, with a fine fountain in the middle. There are 29 parish churches, and 24 hospitals richly endowed. An academy of the belles lettres was founded here in 1730. Under the Moors, this city contained 600,000 inhabitants, and in the time of Ferdinand and Isabella, 6000 looms were employed here; at present there are scarcely 400 manufacturers.

manufacturers. The pleasant situation of Seville, near the sea, renders it one of the most commercial towns of Spain. The E. and W. India companies have their houses here, where they are obliged to register themselves and their merchandise. Their ships, indeed, stop in the harbour of Cadiz, but their lading is carried thence to Seville; and there all the gold and silver is coined, there being above 600 men employed in the mint. The country about it is extremely fertile in corn, wine, &c. and there is abundance of oil; for to the W. of the river is a grove of olive trees, 30 miles in length. The Spaniards commonly say, Quen no ha visto Sevilla, no ha visto maravilla; He who has not seen Seville, has not seen a wonder. It is 45 miles from the sea, 112 W. of Granada, and 212 S. by W. of Madrid. Lat. 37. 32. N. lon. 5. 34. W.

*SHEFFIELD, a large and populous town in the W. Riding of Yorkshire, seated on the rivers Don and Sheaf. It has been noted several hundred years for it's various hardware manufactories, which consist particularly of steel cutlery wares, plated goods, and various tools. It has been a staple for knives, or whittles, and files, above 300 years. It is reputed to excel Birmingham in this sort of wares; as that does this town in locks, hinges, nails, and polished steel. By the Don, which is navigable within five miles of the town, it receives iron from Hull, and conveys thither it's manufactures for exportation. It's neighbourhood abounds with coal. Here are also lead-works and a silk-mill. It is in a hilly situation, and is chiefly supplied with water by pipes from the high ground. A new market-place has been lately erected by the Duke of Norfolk, on a commodious plan of shambles, &c.; and a large and elegant infirmary has been lately completed. In the old parts of the town the streets are narrow: the new parts are more commodious; and the surrounding country affords a rich and beautiful variety of landscape. It is 34 miles N. of Derby, and 161 NW. by N. of London. A large market on Tuesday, particularly for corn. Fairs on Tuesday after Trinity Sunday, and November 28th.

SHETLAND,

SHETLAND, the general name of a cluſter of iſlands, which lie about 100 miles NNE. of Caithneſsſhire, between 59. 56. and 61. 11. N. lat. They are reckoned to be 46 in number, beſides 40 ſmaller, called Holms, which produce paſture, and as many barren. The names of the principal are Mainland, Yell, Unſt, Fula, and Phedeſtroy. The deſcription already given of the largeſt, or MAINLAND, may be applied to the others, as to the particulars of the climate, inhabitants, &c. and the ſame may be ſaid of the ORCADES. In all theſe iſlands the Aurora Boreales, or Merry Dancers, as they are called by the inhabitants, are very remarkable. They are the conſtant attendants of clear evenings, and prove great reliefs amid the gloom of the long winter nights. They commonly appear at twilight near the horizon, of a dun colour, approaching to yellow; ſometimes continuing in that ſtate for ſeveral hours, without any apparent motion; after which they break out into ſtreams of ſtronger light, ſpreading into columns, and altering ſlowly into ten thouſand different ſhapes, varying their colours from all the tints of yellow, to the moſt obſcure ruſſet. They often cover the whole hemiſphere, and then make the moſt brilliant appearance. There is no lighthouſe in Shetland, nor is there any chart of the country extant, that can be depended upon. So many ſhips have been loſt on the E. coaſt of Shetland, eſpecially within the laſt 20 years, that it may be of eſſential ſervice to recommend the erection of a light-houſe, on Noſs, a ſmall iſland, E. of Breſſay. Of theſe, ſome of the moſt remarkable caſes are the following.—In 1775, a Liverpool ſhip, only 2 men ſaved out of 24. In 1776, the Ceres, of London, a Greenland ſhip, loſt with her whole crew. In 1779, a Dutch Greenland ſhip, loſt, only one of the crew ſaved. In 1780, a Ruſſian man of war, of 36 guns, only five men ſaved. In 1786, the Concordia, a Daniſh Eaſt-India ſhip, with a valuable cargo, outward bound, only 15 of the crew ſaved. In 1789, a Dutch Greenland ſhip, only five of the crew ſaved. Shetland, with Orkney, forms one of the counties of Scotland. Lerwick is the capital.

* SHREWSBURY, a town of Shropſhire, the capital of the county, ſo called from the Saxon word Scrobbeſberig, which ſignifies a town built on a woody hill. It is beautifully ſeated in a peninſula, formed by the Severn, and is the chief mart for a coarſe kind of woollen cloth made in Montgomeryſhire, called Welſh webs, which are bought up in the country, and dreſſed here, whence they are ſent for exportation, principally to America and Flanders. Much of the Welſh flannel is alſo bought at Welſhpool by the drapers of this place, which is indeed a common mart for all ſorts of Welſh commodities. It is alſo famous for it's excellent brawn, which is ſent to various parts of the kingdom. One great ornament of this town is the Quarry, one of the fineſt promenades in England. It takes in 20 acres, is ſhaded with a double row of lime trees, and has a fine double alcove in the centre, with ſeats. Here are about 2000 houſes, and 12,000 inhabitants; and about 20 veſſels are conſtantly employed on the river Severn, between Shrewſbury, Glouceſter, and Briſtol. Shrewſbury is well lighted and paved, and is 36 miles W. of Lichfield, and 160 NW. of London. Lat. 52. 43. N. lon. 2. 41. W. Markets for corn, cattle, and proviſions, on Wedneſday and Saturday; and Thurſday for Welch cottons, friezes, and flannels. Fairs, on Saturday after March 15th; Wedneſday after Eaſter week; Wedneſday before Holy Thurſday; July 3d; Auguſt 12th; October 2d; and December 12th.

SHROPSHIRE, or SALOP, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Cheſhire, and a detached part of Flintſhire; on the E. by Staffordſhire; on the SE. by Worceſterſhire; on the S. by Herefordſhire; on the SW. by Radnorſhire; and on the W. by the counties of Montgomery and Denbigh. It extends upwards of 40 miles in length from N. to S. and contains 15 hundreds, 16 market-towns, 170 pariſhes, and 615 villages. The air is ſalubrious, and not very ſharp, except on the hills. The ſoil is generally fruitful, eſpecially in the northern and eaſtern parts, which produce plenty of wheat and barley; but the ſouthern and weſtern being mountainous, are leſs fertile, yet yield ſufficient paſture for ſheep and cattle. There are mines of lead, copper, iron, limeſtone, freeſtone, pipe-clay, and inexhauſtible coal-pits. Over moſt of the coal lies a ſtratum of a blackiſh, hard, porous ſubſtance, containing great quantities of bitumen, which being ground to powder in horſe-mills, and boiled in coppers of water, a bituminous matter ſwims on the ſurface, that, by evaporation, is brought to the conſiſtence of pitch; or, by the help of an oil diſtilled from the ſame ſubſtance, and mixed with it, may be thinned to a ſort of tar; both theſe ſubſtances ſerve particularly for caulking of ſhips, as well, if not better, than pitch and tar, it being leſs liable to crack. The wool of many parts of this county is remarkably fine. The principal rivers are the Severn and the Tend. The capital is Shrewſbury.

Shroughton, Northamptonſhire, 2 miles E. of Ayno. Shroughton, or Ewrin Courtney, Dorſetſhire, E. of Stourminſter. Shrubb's Hill, Surry, in Egham pariſh.

SIAM, a kingdom of Aſia, bounded on the N. by that of Ava, on the E. by Cambodia and Laos, on the S. by a gulf of the ſame name and Malacca, and on the W. by the Bay of Bengal. It is 800 miles in length, and from 200 to 350 in breadth. It is divided into the Higher and Lower, and the ſoil produces plenty of rice, cotton, and a variety of fruits, different from thoſe in Europe. The animals are alſo particular to thoſe parts of the world. Some French authors have extolled it as the fineſt and richeſt country in the world.

The

The inhabitants, both men and women, go almoſt naked, except the wealthy, who wear rich garments. The king ſhows himſelf but once a year to the common people. He is proprietor of all the lands in the country, and no one can buy any merchandiſe till he has the choice of them. He generally keeps a numerous army, among which are 1000 elephants. It is a flat country, which, in the rainy ſeaſon, is overflowed; for which reaſon, moſt of the houſes are built on pillars, and they have no communication for ſome months but by boats. It conſiſts of cultivated and uncultivated land, moſt of it being of the latter, and covered with wood. There are mines of gold, ſilver, tin, and copper, and they have plenty of pepper, aloes, benjamin, and muſk. The moſt profitable trees are thoſe which produce cotton, oil, and varniſh. The women are the only merchants in buying goods, the men being generally maintained by the induſtry of their wives. The Europeans that come there to trade, it is ſaid, generally take wives for the time they ſtay, who are not leſs in eſteem when the men are gone. The mandarins, that is, the principal men who daily attend the palace, are 3000 in number, and are whipt very ſeverely with ſplit rattans for the leaſt fault. Even the ladies are not exempted from this puniſhment; and they are ſo far from being aſhamed of it, that they expoſe their backs as they go along the ſtreets, to ſhow what they have undergone, thinking it an honour to be taken notice of by ſo great a king. The inhabitants have large foreheads, little noſes, plump lips, and black ſparkling eyes. Both ſexes go bareheaded, and the men are of an olive colour, with little beards; but the women are of a ſtraw complexion, and ſome have their cheeks a little red. They have abundance of wild animals in the woods, as elephants, rhinoceroſſes, leopards, and tigers. Their tame cattle are beeves, buffaloes, and hogs, of which they have plenty about their farms. Beſide which, there are large and dangerous crocodiles, and ſerpents 20 feet long. Their temples and prieſts are very numerous: the latter are diſtinguiſhed from the laity by an orange-coloured garment, and they keep their heads, beards, and eyebrows, cloſe ſhaved. The roofs of their temples are gilded, and many of their ſtatues, and other caſt works, are of gold; yet they have ſought of late, in vain, for mines either of gold or ſilver. They have ſchools for the education of their children, and there is ſcarce any among them but what can read and write.

SIBERIA, a large country, comprehending, in it's moſt extenſive ſenſe, all the northern part of the Ruſſian empire, in Aſia; but originally it denoted only the S. part of the government of Tobolſki. It is bounded on the E. by the Eaſtern Ocean, on the S. by Tartary, on the W. by Ruſſia, and on the N. by the Frozen Ocean. It is about 3000 miles in length from E. to W. and 1200 in breadth from N. to S. The S. part produces all the neceſſaries of life; but the N. part is extremely cold, almoſt uncultivated, and thin of people. The principal riches of Siberia conſiſt of fine ſkins and furs. Tobolſki is the capital town, where the viceroy reſides. The inhabitants are of three ſorts, Pagans, or the natives of the country; Mahometans; and Ruſſians. The former dwell in foreſts in the winter, and in the ſummer, on the banks of rivers. Their garments are the ſkins of wild beaſts. They have bows, arrows, a knife, and a kettle, in which all their riches conſiſt. They make uſe of rein-deers and dogs, inſtead of horſes, to draw their ſledges. They have ſeveral idols, which they are ſometimes diſpleaſed with, and will either beat or burn them. They all live in huts, which they remove from place to place. Thoſe in the ſouthern parts are not much more polite; but they have horſes with which they go a hunting, and their houſes, though poor, are not ſhifted from place to place. The Ruſſians ſettled here are much the ſame as in their native country. It is through this vaſt tract of land the Ruſſian caravans travel every year, when they carry their merchandiſe to China. The principal rivers are the Oby, Lena, Irtyſh, Yeniſei, and Okota. The weſtern part of Siberia is compriſed in the Ruſſian governments of Tobolſk and Kolyvan: all the eaſtern part is contained in the government of Irkutzk; theſe are ſubdivided into ſmaller diſtricts. Siberia is the place to which criminals, as well as perſons under the diſpleaſure of the court, are commonly baniſhed from Ruſſia.

SICHEM, or RICHEM, a town of Brabant, 14 miles NE. of Louvain.

SICILY, an iſland of the Mediterranean Sea, almoſt in the form of a triangle, terminating in three points or capes; that which is neareſt Italy, is called Capo del Faro; that which regards the Morea, Capo Paſſaro; and the third, which points to Africa, Capo-di-Boco. Sicily is ſeparated from the kingdom of Naples by a narrow ſtrait, called the Faro, 7 miles acroſs; and as Meſſina is ſeated on it, it is called the Faro-di-Meſſina. The two kingdoms of Naples and Sicily have nearly the ſame climate, and the productions are much the ſame; but Sicily abounds much more in corn, particularly in the valleys of Noto and Mazara. The valley of Demona has more foreſts and fruit-trees than the two others. Sicily is divided into the valleys juſt mentioned, called Val-di-Demona, Val-di-Noto, and Val-di-Mazara. It is about 156 miles in length, and 85 in it's mean breadth. It's produce not already mentioned, is wine, oil, ſilk, and excellent fruits. Sicily was originally planted by different colonies from Greece, but the Romans became it's conquerors, and held it in ſubjection till the year 440, when the Vandals invaded this iſland. Theſe were driven away by Beliſarius, and it became a part of the eaſtern empire till the year 828. It was then conquered by the Saracens, who, in their turn, were driven out by Roger, the ſon of Tancred, a Norman prince, who took the title of Count of Sicily, in 1080. His ſon Roger united Sicily with Naples, and was crowned king of both Sicilies, in 1130. Charles, brother of St. Louis, conquered it from the Norman princes; but Peter, king of Arragon, claiming the kingdom, was received by the Sicilians with open arms, was crowned at Palermo, and tranſmitted Sicily to his deſcendants. Ferdinand V. united it with Naples. It is governed by a viceroy, who reſides at Palermo.

*SIDMOUTH, a ſea-port of Devonſhire, with a ſmall market, 12 miles SE. of Exeter, and 158 W. by S. of London. It is a ſmall fiſhing town, but was pretty conſiderable before it's harbour was choked up.

Sidney, Surry, near Awfold. Sidney, Suſſex, near Cuckfield.

SIDNEY COVE. See JACKSON, PORT.

SIDON, SAYD, or SEIDA, a ſea-port in Paleſtine. It was anciently a place of great note, had an extenſive trade, and is ſaid to be the place where glaſs was invented. It is now, however, like all the Turkiſh towns, ill-built, and full of ruins. It is, however, a place of conſiderable trade, and the emporium of Damaſcus and all the interior country. The French are the only Europeans here. The exports are ſilks, and raw and ſpun cottons. The inhabitants are about 5000. It is the reſidence of a Turkiſh baſhaw, and is 55 miles W. of Damaſcus.

SIDRA, an iſland of the Archipelago, lying between the Gulf of Napoli and that of Engia.

SIDRA, a ſmall iſland, and a ſpacious gulf on the coaſt of Tripoly, anciently called Syrtis.

SIEGEBURGH, a town of Berg, Weſtphalia.

SIEGEN, a town of Naſſau Siegen, Weſtphalia, ſeated on a river of the ſame name.

SIENNA, a celebrated city of Italy, in Tuſcany, capital of the Sienneſe, with a famous univerſity. It is upwards of 4 miles in circumference, and ſurrounded by an old wall. The Gothic cathedral is coated with black and white marble, within and without, and the pavement is of Moſaic work. The inhabitants are about 17,000; the houſes are of brick, and the ſtreets are paved with the ſame. It is adorned with a great number of palaces, fountains, and ſuperb churches, and with a magnificent hoſpital. The great area is round, and the houſes about it are of the ſame height, ſupported by piazzas.

under which the people may walk in all weather. In the middle is a baſin, which they can fill with water at any time, and repreſent a ſea fight with ſmall veſſels. The Italian language is taught here with ſuch purity, that a great many foreigners frequent it on that account. Sienna was formerly a free republic, till conquered by the emperor, Charles V. in 1554, whoſe ſon, Philip II. king of Spain, ceded all parts, except the State-de gli-Preſidii, to Coſmo I. duke of Florence. It is ſeated on three eminences, in a fertile ſoil, 36 miles S. of Florence, and 105 N. by W. of Rome. Lat. 43. 10. N. lon. 11. 11. E.

SIENNESE, a duchy in Italy, on the Tuſcan Sea, about 55 miles in length, and as much in breadth. The ſoil is pretty fertile, eſpecially in mulberry trees, and there are ſeveral mineral ſprings. Sienna is the capital.

SIERRA LEONE, a large and fruitful country on the W. coaſt of Africa, ſo named, according to ſome authors, by the Portugueſe, on account of the mountains on this coaſt abounding with a great number of lions. Some extend it's limits from the Grain Coaſt on the SE. to Cape Verga or Vega on the NW. that is, between 7 and 10 deg. N. lat. Others, however, confine the country between Cape Verga and Cape Tagrin.

SIERRA LEONE, called alſo RITOMBA and TAGRIN, a great river of Africa, in the country of Guinea. It's ſource is uncertain; but it's mouth, in lat. 8. 15. N. lon. 12. 30. W. is 8 miles wide. In the open and plain country, on the banks of this river, the heat of the ſun, before any breeze ariſes, is almoſt intolerable; but as a refreſhing gale conſtantly ſprings up about noon, it renders the country very ſupportable. In 1791, an act of parliament was obtained, incorporating a company, called the Sierra Leone Company, for the expreſs purpoſe of cultivating W. India and other tropical productions on the banks of this river, on land purchaſed of the prince of the country. The firſt ſettlers amounted to about 200 white perſons, beſide a number of free blacks from Nova Scotia. The natives appeared to be extremely friendly, and a few natives, in 1792, had come to work for the colony. On the ſetting in of the rains, about the latter end of May, the ſame year, a conſiderable degree of ſickneſs and mortality prevailed, occaſioned chiefly by the inſufficiency of the temporary habitations, which could not be completed before the rains ſet in. Thirty-five white perſons (of whom 14 were ſoldiers) and many of the blacks, died of this ſickneſs. The next year, the ſetting in of the rains was not productive of the ſame fatal effects. The coloniſts were in good health, were all put into poſſeſſion of ſmall lots of land, and a new town, on a regular and extended ſcale, was begun to be built. Beſide the Nova Scotia blacks, a large party of the natives were at work for the company, and the experiments in ſugar, cotton, &c. appeared to be promiſing. The native chiefs and people continue to be extremely friendly; and the company's ſchools were regularly attended by upwards of 300 children, who appear to have made full as much improvement as is common in European ſchools under ſimilar circumſtances. The rice, cotton, and other articles in the company's plantations thrive exceedingly. The colony appears to be gradually improving and advancing in every reſpect. The river abounds in fiſh, but is much infeſted with alligators. The adjacent country produces abundance of millet and rice; and the woods are filled with parrots of various kinds, and other beautiful birds; ſerpents are found, ſome of very large ſize; and numerous wild beaſts, ſuch as lions, tigers, elephants, wild boars, and monkeys.

SIERRA LEONE, or MOUNTAINS OF THE LIONS, mountains of Africa, which divide Nigritia from Guinea, and are ſaid to extend as far as Abyſſinia.

SIERRA MORENA, mountains of Spain, which divide Andaluſia from New Caſtile, and a ſmall part of Eſtramadura.

SIFANTO, anciently SIPHNOS, an iſland of the Archipelago, to the W. of Paros. The air is ſo good here, that many of the inhabitants live to the age of 120, and their water, fruits, wild fowl, and poultry, are excellent, but more eſpecially the grapes. It is covered over with marble and granite, and they have lead mines, and yet it is one of the moſt fertile, and beſt cultivated of theſe iſlands. The inhabitants employ themſelves in cultivating olive-trees and capers, and they have very good ſilk. They trade in figs, onions, wax, honey, ſtraw hats, ſeſamum, and calicoes. Here are 5 villages, and about 5000 inhabitants. Lat. 36. 37. N. lon. 25. 15. E.

SILESIA, a province of Germany, with the title of a duchy. It is bounded on the N. by the marquiſate of Brandenburg and Poland, on the S. by Moravia and Hungary, on the E. by Poland, and on the W. by Lower Luſatia and Bohemia. It is about 274 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. The principal rivers are, the Oder, Viſtula, Neiſſe, Bober, Queis, Oppa, and Elſe. A long chain of mountains ſeparates Sileſia from Bohemia. There are mines of gold and ſilver; but they have not been worked for many years. There are alſo ſome precious ſtones, but too much time is required to obtain them. The higheſt mountain of Sileſia is called Zotenberg, ſituated in the principality of Schweidnitz, and is 104 miles in circumference. The moſt conſiderable ſilver mines at preſent are at Reitſtein, in the principality of Brieg. There are alſo mines of lead, copper, and iron, and quarries of various ſtones, beſides antimony, ſaltpetre, ſulphur, alum, vitriol, quickſilver, &c. The principal manufacture is linen cloth; and they have alſo ſome woollen manufactories, and glaſshouſes. They feed a great number of cattle, have large ſtuds of horſes, and plenty of the animals called game in the woods. They have but few lynxes and bears, and fewer wolves, becauſe they give a ducat a head for every one that is killed. They have a great many lakes, full of pikes, carps, and other good fiſh; alſo plenty of bees, which produce a great deal of honey and wax. They have wheat, barley, oats, millet-ſeed, and turnips, ſufficient for the uſe of the inhabitants; in ſome places they cultivate ſaffron; and the culture of ſilk is likely to be carried to it's utmoſt extent. Their wine is very poor, and therefore they turn it moſtly into vinegar. Sileſia is divided into the Upper and Lower. In the Upper, the inhabitants are generally Romaniſts, ſpeaking the Poliſh language; and in the Lower, almoſt all Proteſtants, and ſpeak their mother tongue. Sileſia is divided into 19 principalities, and 7 free ſtates, without comprehending the county of Glatz. The greater part of this country was ceded to the king of Pruſſia, in 1742, by the treaty of Breſlaw, the empreſs reſerving to herſelf only the principality of Teſchen; the part of the principalities of Troppau and Jaggerndorf beyond the Oppa; the part of the principality of Neiſſe bordering on Moravia; and a ſmall diſtrict bordering on Moravia; with ſome frontier towns. Breſlaw is the capital of Pruſſian, and Troppau of Bohemian Sileſia.

SINAI, a mountain in Arabia Petræa, in a peninſula formed by the two arms of the Red Sea. The Mahometans have it in great veneration; and here the Chriſtians have a monaſtery, which formerly contained a great number of monks, and there were a great number of little chapels and cells for hermits. The monaſtery is ſurrounded by a high wall, and thoſe that go in and out, are let down or drawn up in baſkets. It is 144 miles ESE. of Suez.

SINCAPORA, a promontory at the S. extremity of the peninſula of Malacca, which, with the Malacca coaſt, form the Strait of Sincapore. Lat. 1. 10. N. lon. 103. 30. E.

SINDE. See INDUS and TATTA.

Sinderby, Yorkſhire, W. of Thirſk. Sindrop, Northumb. SW. of Hexham.

SINDY, a province of Hindooſtan, bounded on the W. by Makran, a province of Perſia; on the N. by the territories of the king of Candahar; on the NE. by thoſe of the Seiks; on the E. by a ſandy deſert; and on the SE. by Cutch. It extends along the courſe of the river Sinde, or Indus, from it's mouth to the frontiers of of Moultan. Reckoned that way, it is 300 miles long; and it's breadth, in it's wideſt part, is about 160. In many particulars of ſoil and climate, and in the general appearance of the ſurface, Sindy reſembles Egypt; the lower part of it being compoſed of rich vegetable mould, and extended into a wide delta; while the upper part of it is a narrow ſlip of country, confined on the Perſian ſide by a ridge of mountains, and on the other by a ſandy deſert, the river Indus, equal at leaſt to the Nile, winding through the midſt of this level valley, and annually overflowing it. During great part of the SW. monſoon, or our ſummer quarter, which is the rainy ſeaſon in moſt other parts of India, the atmoſphere is here generally clouded; but no rain falls, except very near the ſea. Indeed, very few ſhowers fall during the whole year; and, at the time when Captain Hamilton viſited Tatta, no rain had fallen for 3 years before. Owing to this, and the neighbourhood of the ſandy deſerts, which bound it on the E. and on the NW. the heats are ſo violent, and the winds from thoſe quarters ſo pernicious, that the houſes are contrived ſo as to be occaſionally ventilated by means of apertures on the tops of them, reſembling the funnels of ſmall chimneys. When the hot winds prevail, the windows are cloſely ſhut, by which the hotteſt part of the current of that air (that neareſt the ſurface) is excluded; and a cooler part, becauſe more elevated, deſcends into the houſe through the funnels. By this, alſo, vaſt clouds of duſt are excluded; the entrance of which would alone be ſufficient to render the houſes uninhabitable. The roofs are compoſed of thick layers of earth inſtead of terraces. Few countries are more unwholeſome to European conſtitutions, particularly the lower part of the delta. The prince is a Mahometan, tributary to the king of Candahar. He reſides at Hydrabad, although Tatta is the capital. This province was obtained, in 1739, by Nadir Shah from the Great Mogul, and retained by Abdallah, when he ſeized the other provinces which compoſe the empire of Candahar. The Hindoos, who were the original inhabitants of Sindy, and were reckoned, in Captain Hamilton's time, to outnumber the Mahometans ten to one, are treated with great rigour by their Mahometan governors, and are not permitted to erect any pagodas, or places of worſhip; and this ſeverity drives vaſt numbers of them into other countries. The inland parts of Sindy produce ſalt-petre, ſal-amoniac, borax, bezoar, lapis-lazuli, and raw ſilk. They have alſo manufactures of cotton and ſilk of various kinds; and they make fine cabinets, inlaid with ivory, and finely lackered. They alſo export great quantities of butter, clarified and wrapt up in duppas, made of the hides of cattle. The women wear hoops of ivory on both their arms and legs, and when they die, they are burnt with them. They have large black cattle, excellent mutton, and ſmall, hardy horſes. Their wild animals are deer, hares, antelopes, and foxes, which they hunt with dogs, leopards, and a ſmall, fierce creature called ſhiahguſh.

SINGANFOU, or SINGAN, a city of China, of the firſt rank, capital of the province of Chenſi. Next to Pekin, this is the largeſt, and moſt populous, and commercial city of China, and was for ſeveral ages the ſeat of the Chineſe emperors. They breed up mules here in great numbers, and ſend them to Pekin. Lat. 34. 46. N. lon. 108. 13. E.

SINTZHEIM, a town in the palatinate of the Rhine.

SION, or SITTEN, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of the Vallais, ſeated on a river of the ſame name, which ſoon after falls into the Rhone. Here are 3 epiſcopal palaces, one above another. The higheſt, called Tourbillon, is old, ruinous, and deſerted. Near the ſecond, denominated Valeria, are the remains of the old cathedral, and a few houſes belonging to the canons. De Marjorei, the third, is the preſent epiſcopal palace, an edifice of ſtone, built in 1547; the apartments furniſhed with great plainneſs and ſimplicity. Sion was formerly the capital of the Seduni, who inhabited this country in the time of Julius Cæſar; and ſome Roman inſcriptions ſtill remain to atteſt it's antiquity. It's biſhop is a prince of the empire. It is 50 miles E. of Geneva.

SION, a famous mountain of Judea, ſituated on the S. ſide of Jeruſalem.

Sion-Houſe, Middleſex, near the influx of the Brent into the Thames, between Brentford and Iſleworth. It is a noble, ſquare, ſtone building, finely finiſhed and furniſhed, now one of the ſeats of the Duke of Northumberland.

SIOUT, OSIOT, or SCIOT, a large and populous town in Egypt, with a lake dug near it, which ſerves to water the grounds. It has ſeveral moſques, and is the ſee of a Copti biſhop. It's ſituation on an artificial mount, denotes it's occupying the ſite of an ancient city, thought to be Nicopolis, where the wolf was accounted a ſacred animal. Here are, accordingly, the ruins of an ancient amphitheatre, and ſome Roman ſepulchres. It is ſurrounded by pleaſant gardens, and fine palm-trees that bear the beſt dates in Egypt. This place is the rendezvous of thoſe that go in the caravan to Sennar, in Nubia. It is about 2 miles W. of the river Nile, and 157 S. of Cairo.

SMOLAND, or SMALAND, a province of Sweden, in which are 21 lakes, immense forests of pine and fir, and some iron-mines. The approach to the village is announced by groves of oak, beech, and birch, and numerous plots, or parterres, of arable land among pastures and rocks. An acre of land has been frequently observed to be laid out with alternate slips of rye, barley, flax, and hemp; the intervals between, and around, sown with grass. In many parts, the trees are cut down, and burnt in order to manure the soil. This province is 100 miles long, and 60 broad, and was formerly governed by kings of it's own. It was formerly included in E. Gothland.

SMOLENSKO, a city of Russia, capital of the government of the same name. It is situated on the Dnieper, and extends over two mountains and the valley between them. It is surrounded by walls 30 feet high and 15 thick: the lower part of them is built of stone, the upper of brick, and their circumference is four miles and three quarters. They are surmounted by towers three stories high, placed at the angles, between which are others of a smaller size; and in the plain, the walls are surrounded by a deep ditch and covered way. The houses, are mostly of wood, and only one story. The city is divided through it's whole length by one straight, paved street, the others are circular, and floored with planks. The alternate rising and sinking of the walls, from the inequality of the ground, their Gothic architecture, and grotesque towers, the steeples rising above the trees, which conceal the houses from the sight, the gardens, meadows, and corn fields, within the walls, all together form a singular, picturesque, and varied prospect. Notwithstanding it's extent, it contains only about 4000 inhabitants, and has no manufactures, but carries on, with Dantzic, Riga, and the Ukraine, a pretty considerable traffic in linen, hemp, honey, wax, leather, furs, timber, hides, hog's bristles, &c. It is 197 miles NE. of Novogrodeck, and 230 NNE. of Kiow. Lat. 54. 50. N. lon. 31. 22. E.

SMYRNA, or ISMIR, a city and seaport of Natolia, situated on a spacious bay of the Mediterranean. The commodiousness of the harbour has caused it to be rebuilt several times, after having been destroyed by earthquakes. It is the common rendezvous of merchants from all parts of the world, especially of English, and the staple of their merchandise. The whole town is a continual bazar, or fair, where nothing is wanted for clothing, sustenance, tenance, or pleaſure, as all the beſt commodities of Europe and Aſia are brought hither, and ſold at cheap rates. The Turks have 19 moſques, the Greeks form 2 churches, the Jews 8 ſynagogues, the Armenians 1 church, and the Latins have 3 convents. There are 3 biſhops, one Greek, another Latin, and the third Armenian. The ſtreets are more open, better paved, and the houſes better built, than in other towns of this part of the continent. The ſtreet of the Franks is the fineſt in Smyrna, ſtretching along the harbour, and the European conſuls live in great ſtate and magnificence. It is eight days journey from Conſtantinople by land, 25 days from Aleppo by the caravans, and 6 from Saſalia. The caravans of Perſia often bring 200 bales of ſilk in a year, beſide drugs and cloth. The other commodities brought here, are thread made of goat's hair, cotton, yarn, cotton in bags, various kinds of drugs, and all ſorts of carpets. Moſt of the trade here, as well as in all Turkey, paſſes through the hands of the Jews, the Turks never tranſacting any bargain with Chriſtians. The Engliſh and Dutch factories have Proteſtant chapels; and taverns are as open here as in Europe. The territory about Smyrna is fertile, with fine olive trees and vines; and the wine is excellent. It 176 is miles SSW. of Conſtantinople. Lat. 38. 28. N. lon. 27. 25. E.

SNOWDON, a famous mountain of Carnarvonſhire, in N. Wales. It's name ſignifies literally the Hill of Snow, from ſnow and down. Eryri, the Welſh name, is derived from Mynyd Eryrod, the Hill of Eagles. This is the moſt noted eminence in the whole region of the Welſh hills: it's top, by way of eminence, is termed y Wyddfa; that is, the conſpicuous. On the top there are bogs, and two lakes that abound with fiſh, particularly the char and the guinard. Mr. Pennant ſays, "that the height of the mountain, reckoning from the quay of Carnarvon to it's higheſt peak, is 3568 feet. It was held ſacred by the ancient Britons, as Parnaſſus was by the Greeks, and Ida by the Cretans." He found pieces of lava on this mountain, and, on the ſummit, groups of columnar ſtones, of vaſt ſize, lying in all directions. From the ſummit may be ſeen a part of Ireland, of Scotland, and of Cumberland, Lancaſhire, Cheſhire, and all North Wales, the Iriſh and Britiſh ſeas, and a vaſt number of lakes. Such a beautiful diſplay of nature, at once aſtoniſhes and charms the beholder.

SOBIESLAU, a town of Bechin, Bohemia.

SOCHEU, a town of China, in the province of Chenſi. Here is a temple dedicated to a blind man, ſaid to have been one of the greateſt politicians in China.

SOCIETY ISLES, a cluſter of iſles, diſcovered by Captain Cook, in 1769, and ſo named by him, becauſe they lie contiguous to each other. They are ſituated between the latitudes of 16. 10. and 16. 55. S. and between longitudes of 150. 57. and 152. W. They are ſix in number; namely, Huaheine, Ulietea, Otaha, Bolabola, Maurooa, and Toohaee. The ſoil, productions, people, their language, religion, cuſtoms, and manners, are nearly the ſame as at Otaheite. The ſoil is equally bountiful and fertile, and the inhabitants are as luxurious and indolent. A plantain branch is the emblem of peace, and changing names the greateſt token of friendſhip. Their dances are more elegant, their dramatic entertainments have ſomething of plot and conſiſtency, and they exhibit temporary occurrences as the objects of praiſe or ſatire; ſo that the origin of ancient comedy may be diſcerned among them. The inhabitants ſeemed to be ſtouter than thoſe of Otaheite, and the women were in general fairer and handſomer, though none were equal to ſome individuals. Thoſe of Ulietea, however, were ſmaller and blacker, and much leſs orderly. Mr. Banks found only eleven new plants; but he obſerved ſome inſects, and a ſpecies of ſcorpion he had never ſeen before. Captain Cook put on ſhore a Cape ewe at Bolabola, where a ram had been left by the Spaniards; and alſo an Engliſh boar and ſow, with two goats, at Ulietea. If the valuable animals, which have been tranſported thither from Europe, ſhould be ſuffered to multiply, no part of the world will equal theſe iſlands in variety and abundance of refreſhments for future navigators. Among theſe iſlands are ſeveral excellent harbours, the entrances into them, indeed, are but narrow, yet, when a ſhip is once in, nothing can hurt her.

Sock, Somerſetſhire, 3 miles from Yeovil. Sockburn, Durham, on the Tees, 4 miles SE. of Darlington. Sockbridge, Weſtmorland, on the Eimot, near Penrith. Sockneys, Suſſex, near Burwaſh and Salehurſt. Sockſbury-Hill, Suſſex, NE. of Rotherfield. Socomb, Kent, NW. of Wye.

SOCONUSCO, a diſtrict of Guatimala, Mexico, S. of the diſtrict of Chiapa, on the N. Pacific Ocean. It is about 88 miles in length, and almoſt as much in breadth. It is ſheltered from the N. winds by high mountains, which renders the air exceedingly hot, and the country is not very healthful or fertile. The few Spaniards who are ſettled here are very rich. Great quantities of indigo and cocoa-nuts, however, are raiſed here, which are ſent to all the other parts of Mexico.

SOCOTARA, an iſland in the Arabian Sea, about 50 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. The capital, of the ſame name, is ſituated on a river near the ſea, in lat. 15. 24. N. The natives are Mahometans, with a mixture of Paganiſm. They trade to Goa, with the produce of their iſland, viz. fine aloes, known by the name of Socotrine aloes; frankincenſe; ambergreaſe; dragon's blood; rice; dates; and coral; which are tranſported from thence to many parts of India, and all parts of Europe. The ſultan is tributary to the princes of Arabia. The ſhore every where affords ſafe anchorage and good ports, and there are, in particular, two fine harbours, where ſhipping ride ſecure from every wind that blows. Lat. 12. 15. N. lon. 54. E.

SODA, a town of Hedjas, Arabia.

Sodbury, Durham, near Darlington.

SODBURY, CHIPPING, a town of Glouceſterſhire, with a conſiderable market for corn, and the greateſt cheeſe market in England, except Atherſtone in Warwickſhire. It is 15 miles ENE. of Briſtol, and 112 W. of London. Market on Thurſday. Fairs on May 23d and June 24th.

Sodor, a little village in Icolmkill, one of the Weſtern Iſles of Scotland, near that of Mull.

SOEST, a town of Mark, Weſtphalia. It was formerly imperial, and one of the Hanſe Towns, but ſince 1752 has belonged to the king king of Prussia. Several of the successors of Charlemagne resided here. It is 27 miles SE. of Munster.

SOFALA, or QUITERVE, a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the E. by the Mosambique Sea, on the S. by Sabia, and on the N. and W. by the states of Monomotapa. The inhabitants cultivate rice and millet, and eat the flesh of elephants, large and small cattle, and fish. They also make beer of rice and millet, and other liquors of honey, palm, and fruits. Honey is in such plenty, that a great part of it lies neglected. All the coasters are descended from the Arabians, yet are commonly black, there being few tawny or brown among them. Many learned men affirm, that Solomon had his gold from the mines in this country, and that the country of Sofala is the Ophir of the ancients, the gold here being allowed to be finest and purest in all Africa. It is governed by a king, tributary to the Portuguese, who built a fort at the principal town, which is of the same name, and of great importance for their trade to the E. Indies. It is seated in a small island, near the mouth of a river. Lat. 20. 20. S. lon. 37. 30. E.

SOFIA, or SOPHIA, a city of Turkey in Europe, capital of Bulgaria, built by the Emperor Justinian, on the ruins of the ancient Sardica. It is 164 miles WNW. of Adrianople.

SOFROY, a town of Chaus, in Fez, noted for a handsome mosque: the principal commerce is in oil. It is 12 miles E. of Fez.

SOGNO, a maritime province in Congo, S. of the river Zaire. It is a dry, sandy country, abounding in salt. The inhabitants are Christians, converted by the Portuguese. The capital is Banza Sogno, a small place; the Capuchins, however, form a church here.

SOHAM, a town of Cambridgeshire, seated on the river Cam, near Soham Meer, which takes up 1000 acres of land. It is celebrated for it's cheese, and is 5 miles SSE. of Ely, and 70 N. by E. of London. Market on Saturday.

SOIGNIES, a town of Hainault, on the Senne, near a forest to which it gives name, 6 miles NNE. of Mons.

Soilwell, Gloucestersf. in Lidney parish.

SOISSONS, an ancient city in the dept. of Aisne, so named from the Suessiones. It contains about 12,000 inhabitants, and was lately a bishop's see, and the capital of a district called the Soissonois. The environs are beautiful, but the streets are narrow, and the houses ill-built. Under the kings of the first race, it was the capital of a kingdom of the same name. The castle, however, here, though ancient, is not that in which those princes resided. It is seated on the river Aisne, 30 miles W. by N. of Rheims, and 60 NE. of Paris.

Solbe, Selby, or Selbe, a river in the Isle of Man.

SOLEBAY. See SOUTHWOLD.

Soles, Kent, in Barfriston parish. Solesby, Lincolnshire, N. of Alford.

SOLEURE, or SOLOTHURNE, a town of Switzerland, capital of the canton of the same name. It contains about 4000 inhabitants, and is seated on the Aar, which here expands into a spacious river. It was a principal town in the kingdom of Burgundy, and frequently the residence of it's kings. Among the most remarkable objects of curiosity in this town, is a new church, which was begun in 1762, and finished in 1772. It is a grand and elegant building, of the Corinthian and Composite orders, and cost at least 80,000l. though the revenues of the republic scarcely exceed 12,000l. a year. Soleure is the usual residence of the French ambassador to the cantons, and is 18 miles N. of Bern. Lat. 47. 15. N. lon. 7. 20. E.

SOLEURE, a canton of Switzerland, which holds the eleventh rank in the Helvetic confederacy, into which it was admitted in the year 1481. It is situated between the canton of Bern, and the canton and bishopric of Basil, and contains about 50,000 inhabitants. It is 35 miles in length, and from 12 to 24 in breadth. The soil, for the most part, is exceedingly fertile in corn; and the districts within the Jura abound in excellent pastures. The inhabitants export some corn, horses, cattle, and skins. The sovereign power resides in the great council, which, comprising the senate or little council of thirty-six, consists of 102 members. The government is a complete aristocracy, and the inhabitants are almost all Roman Catholics.

Soley, Wilts, in Chilton-Foliot parish.

SOLFATARA, or LAGO-DI-BAGNI, a lake of Italy, in the Campagna-di-Roma, near Tivoli, formerly called Lacus Albulus. In this lake are floating islands, which, however, are nothing but bunches of matted sedge and herbage, adhering together by the bitumen which swims on the surface of the lake, and the sulphur with which it's waters are impregnated. Some of these islands are 12 or 15 yards long; the soil is strong enough to bear five or six people, who, by a pole, may move to different parts of the lake, as if they were in a boat. The water is chalky and and sulphureous; towards the surface scarcely luke-warm, but deeper, very hot, and continually boiling. Anciently the waters of this lake had a high medical reputation, and now, bathing in it is recommended for cutaneous diseases.

SOLFATARA, a mountain S. of the city of Naples, in the Terra di Lavora, with a cavity above a mile in length and breadth, which smokes in the day, and flames in the night. The king derives a considerable revenue from the manufactures of sulphur, alum, and vitriol in this neighbourhood. The ground is almost every where full of sulphur, and in digging ever so little a way into it, the soil will smoke. If opened to a considerable depth, the earth will be intu, portable from the heat and exhalations. Here is also a lake full of black, thick water, which seems always to be boiling.

SOLFWITZBURG, or SYLVISBORG, a sea-port of Blekingen, Sweden.

SOLIHULL, a town in Warwickshire, 6 miles W. of Coventry, and 107 NW. of London. Market disused.

SOLWAY FRITH, a large arm of the sea, between Cumberland and Kirkcudbrightshire. The narrow part of it, at Boulness, is safely forded at low-water, with a guide, although the current be extremely rapid.

SOLWAY MOSS, a large black morass, in Cumberland, near the river Esk, on the borders of Scotland. It consists of 1600 acres of thin, peaty mud, with a crust too weak, in the driest summer, to support a man's weight. In December, 1769, being swoln by rains, it burst through the shell of turf which covered it, and spread a black stream, filled with masses of peat, over 400 acres of cultivated land in the neighbouring valley, which it entirely filled up. On this occasion, large horns of deer, and other substances were ejected.

Somborn, Upper and Lower, Hampshire, near Stockbridge.

SOMBRERE CHANNEL, a channel between the Nicobar Islands.

SOMERSETSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the NW. by the Bristol Channel; on the N. by Gloucestershire, from which it is divided by the Avon; on the E. by Wiltshire; on the SE. by Dorsetshire; and on the SW. by Devonshire. It's length, from NE. to SW. is 65 miles, and it's breadth, from E. to W. between 30 and 40. It contains 40 hundreds, 3 cities, 33 market-towns, and 482 parishes. The air, in the lower grounds, is universally mild, and generally wholesome. The soil is various. The NE. quarter is in general stony, and possesses a lofty tract, called the Mendip Hills. Toward the centre of the county, where it's principal rivers unite, are fens and marshy moors of great extent. On the W. side is the ridge of the Quantock-Hills, with many downs and open heaths; and in the NW. corner, lies the black, steril region of Exmoor. The S. part, toward Dorsetshire, is high, but well cultivated; and throughout the county, especially in it's SW. quarter, vales of the greatest fertility are interspersed. The principal rivers are the Parret, Ivel, Chew, Thone, Brent, Frome, and Avon. The Mendip-Hills afford abundance of coal and minerals.

Cheddar

Chedder is celebrated for it's cheeſes. Cattle, nearly equal in ſize to the Lincolnſhire, are fed in the fine meadows about the head of the Parret. The beſt gooſe feathers for beds come from the Somerſet marſhes; the unfeeling inhabitants, however, often pluck the poor birds while yet living. Red and yellow ocher are found here, and cider is a common product of this county; it has alſo a conſiderable ſhare in the manufacture of fine cloths, druggets, ſhalloons, knit ſtockings, &c.

Somerſham, Huntingdonſ. among the fens, NE. of St. Ives. Somerſham, Suffolk, S. of Needham.

*SOMERTON, a town of Somerſetſhire, formerly a conſiderable place, from which the county took it's name. The Weſt Saxon kings had a caſtle here, the conſtableſhip of which was a conſiderable truſt, for King John of France, who was removed from Hertford-Caſtle, and priſoners of the higheſt rank were committed to it. There is one county-jail at Ilcheſter, and another at Somerton, and the aſſizes are held at Wells, although generally in the ſummer, alternately with Taunton and Bridgewater. It contains, at preſent, 250 houſes, and about 1500 inhabitants in the whole pariſh. It is 13 miles S. by W. of Wells, and 123 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday for corn and cattle, and on every other Monday for lean cattle. The beaſt markets are conſiderable. SOUND, THE, or ORESOUND, a ſtrait between Sweden and Denmark, through which ſhips uſually ſail between the ocean and the Baltic. It is about 4 miles broad, and here the Danes take toll of the merchant-ſhips that paſs.

SOUR, or SUR, a ſea-port of Syria, in the pachalic of Saida, or Acre, near the remains of the ancient and celebrated Tyre. It is now a village, ſituated on a peninſula, which projects from the ſhore into the ſea. This head of land is a ſolid rock, covered with a brown, cultivable earth, and forming a plain 800 paces long, by 400 broad. The iſthmus joining the plain to the continent is of pure ſea-ſand; this difference of ſoil renders the ancient inſular ſtate of the plain, before Alexander joined it to the ſhore by a mole, very viſible. On this iſthmus, the village of Sour is ſituated. In one point of the peninſula is a baſon, which was evidently a port formed by art, but now ſo choked up, that children paſs it without being wet above the middle. Here are only 50 or 60 poor families, who live on the produce of their little grounds and gardens, and a trifling fiſhery. At the SE. corner are the ruins of a Chriſtian church. It is 18 miles S. of Saida, and 80 NNW. of Jeruſalem.

* SOUTHAMPTON, formerly called HANTUN, a town of Hampſhire, ſituated on a fine inlet of the ſea, called Triſſanton-Bay, or Southampton-Water, deep enough for the largeſt ſhips. The two principal rivers that flow into it (the Itchen and the Teſt, Teſe, or Anton) admit ſmall craft ſome way up the country. The town is ſituated between theſe two rivers. It was formerly a port of great commerce, and ſtill poſſeſſes a trade in French and Port wines, and in the Newfoundland fiſhery, having a particular connection, moreover, with Guernſey and Jerſey. The veſſels employed in foreign commerce are about 30, and in the coaſting-trade upwards of 100. Here are manufactures of ſilk and carpets. It is a faſhionable place of reſort for ſea-bathing; and it was on this beach that the Daniſh king Canute gave that ſtriking reproof to his flattering courtiers; when the diſobedient tide waſhed his feet. Two miles from this town is Woodmills, where there is a curious manufactory of ſhip-blocks, from which the royal dock-yards are ſupplied. Southampton is 12 miles SSW. of Wincheſter, and 75 WSW. of London. Markets on Tueſday, Thurſday, and Saturday.

Southwark is alſo one of the city wards, named Bridge Ward Without, and an alderman is choſen to govern it. It is called the Borough, by way of diſtinction, and is a large and populous place, participating conſiderably in the commerce of London. The biſhop of Wincheſter had formerly a palace here, with a park; when there were 18 brothels along the Bankſide, licenſed by that prelate, under certain regulations confirmed by parliament. The proſtitutes kept here were commonly called Wincheſter geeſe. It is divided into two parts, the Borough Liberty, governed by the lord mayor; and the Clink, or Manor of Southwark, under the juriſdiction of the biſhop of Wincheſter, who, by his ſteward, keeps a court-leet and a court of record on the Bank-ſide. A court of conſcience is eſtabliſhed here, as well as in London. Southwark contains 6 pariſhes, a new Romiſh chapel, many places of worſhip for the Diſſenters of various denominations; ſeveral charitable foundations, particularly thoſe two noble endowments, St. Thomas's Hoſpital and Guy's Hoſpital, together with the Magdalen Hoſpital; the Aſylum for Female Orphans; the Freemaſon's School, a lately-erected building, for the ſame purpoſe; the Philanthropic Reform, &c. Beſide the King's Bench and Marſhalſea priſons, and the county Bridewell, a new county-gaol, with a ſeſſion-houſe adjoining, has been lately built. SPA, a town of Liege, Weſtphalia, ſeated in a romantic valley, ſurrounded by woody mountains, contains about 300 houſes, and is famous for it's mineral waters. That called the Old Spa conſiſts of miſerable cottages, and is properly nothing but the ſuburb to the other. The houſes of the New Spa are moſtly of wood, old-faſhioned, dark, and ſmall, and yet, it is affirmed, they can make 1200 beds for ſtrangers. The inn, called the Court of London, is very large, the beſt in the place, and moſt frequented. The chief ſprings are called Pouhon, Saviniere, Groiſbeeck, and Geronſter, to which Dr. Lucas has added the Pouhon Pia, and Barriſar. The inhabitants are much employed in making toys for ſtrangers, as the town reſembles a fair, during the water-drinking ſeaſon. There are beautiful and healthful rides on every ſide, with great variety of pleaſant walks. There are public rooms for aſſemblies every night, and balls two or three times a week. The waters were diſcovered in 1326. It is 17 miles SE. of Liege.

SPAIN, a conſiderable kingdom of Europe, bounded on the N. by the Bay of Biſcay; on the NE. by the Pyrenean Mountains, which ſeparate it from France; on the E. S. and SE. by the Mediterranean, and the Straits of Gibraltar; on the SW. by the Atlantic; and on the W. by Portugal and the Atlantic. It is about 700 miles long and 500 broad. It contains the provinces of Old and New Caſtile, Andaluſia, Arragon, Eſtramadura, Galicia, Leon, Catalonia, Granada, Valencia, Biſcay, the Aſturias, Murcia, and Upper Navarre; ſome of which have been ſeparate kingdoms. The air of Spain is dry and ſerene, except during the equinoctial rains, but exceſſively hot in the ſouthern provinces in ſummer. The vaſt mountains, however, that run through Spain, are very beneficial to the inhabitants, by the refreſhing breezes that come from them in the ſouthernmoſt parts, tho' thoſe in the N. and NE. are, in the winter, very cold. The ſoil is very fertile; but there are large tracts of uncultivated ground. The produce of the country is fine wheat, barley, ſaffron, exquiſite honey, ſilk, ſaltpetre, ſalt, barrillas, (a ſpecies of potaſh) and even ſugar-canes. It produces the richeſt and moſt delicious fruits that are to be found in France and Italy, oranges, oranges, lemons, prunes, citrons, almonds, raisins, figs, dates, pomegranates, olives, &c. Their wines are in high esteem. Wolves are the chief beasts of prey that infest Spain. Their wild bulls, which are caught in Andalusia, have so much ferocity, that their bull fights were the most magnificent spectacle the court of Spain could exhibit; this barbarous amusement, however, is now, in part, exploded. Their domestic animals are horses that are remarkably swift, mules, horned cattle, which are but few, sheep, &c. The wool of the latter is superior to any in Europe; the best is that of Old Castile. Spain abounds in minerals and metals, cornelian, agate, jacinth, loadstones, turquoisstones, quicksilver, copper, lead, sulphur, alum, calamine, crystal, marbles of several kinds, porphyry, the finest jasper; and even diamonds, emeralds, and amethysts, are found here. Anciently it was celebrated for gold and silver mines, but, since the discovery of America at least, no attention has been paid to them. The principal rivers are the Duero, Tajo, Guadiana, Guadalquiver, Ebro, Guadalaviar, and Segura. Spain, which, in the times of the Goths and Moors, contained between 20 and 30 millions of people, is now but thinly inhabited, to which various causes have contributed; as the impolitic expulsion of the Moors, the emigrations to the colonies, the vast numbers and celibacy of the clergy, and the indolence of the natives. It is supposed to contain 7,500,000 of inhabitants. The greatest part of the necessary artisans are French, as the natives disdain to stoop to handicrafts. The persons of the Spaniards in general, are tall; their complexions swarthy; their countenances expressive. The women are small and slender, and possess little of that beauty which reigns in their novels and romances. The established religion of Spain is popery, and here the inquisition once reigned in all it's horrors; but, although it still exists, it has been lately rendered, by the humane intervention of the royal authority, comparatively harmless. Spain has 44 episcopal sees, and 24 universities. It was once the most free, but is now one of the most despotic kingdoms in Europe. They had once their cortes, or parliaments, which had great privileges; but, though not absolutely abolished, they have no part in the government. They are assembled indeed, occasionally, (as at the accession of the monarch) but merely as an appendage to the royal state, without power, or any other consequence than what results from their individual rank. Madrid is the capital.

Stockholm, the capital of Sweden, in a situation remarkable for it's romantic scenery. It is built on seven rocky islands, from one of which the city takes it's name. Between these a communication is formed by 12 bridges. A variety of contrasted and beautiful views are formed by numerous rocks of granite, rising boldly from the surface of the water, partly bare and craggy, and partly dotted with houses, or feathered with wood. The harbour is an inlet of the Baltic: the water is of such depth, that ships of the largest burden can approach the quay. At the extremity of the harbour, several streets rise one above another, in the form of an amphitheatre; and the palace, a magnificent building, crowns the summit. The arsenal contains many curiosities. Except in the suburbs, where some houses are of wood, painted red, the buildings are mostly of stone, or of brick, stuccoed white, and driven on piles. A royal academy of Sciences was instituted here in 1741: here is also a Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture. In Stockholm are manufactures of gloves, china, woollen, silk, linen, &c. The inhabitants are about 60,000. The court formerly resided at Upsal, but removed here in the last century.

STONEHAVEN, or STONEHIVE, a fiſhing-town of Kincardineſhire, with a good harbour ſecured by a ſtone pier. Near it is a precipitous cliff, called Fowl's Cleugh, which is remarkable for the reſort of the birds called kittiwake, the young of which are eſteemed a great delicacy. Here is a manufacture of canvaſs, and ſome trade in dried fiſh oil. This oil is obtained chiefly from the dogfiſh, great quantities of which are caught on this coaſt. Stonehaven is 14 miles S. by W. of Aberdeen.

STONEHENGE, ſituated in Saliſbury Plain, in a circular area of 4 or 5 miles diameter, encompaſſed by the river Avon, and other ſtreams. This antiquity ſtands on the ſummit of a hill, which riſes with a very gentle aſcent. At the diſtance of half a mile, it has a ſtately and auguſt appearance, and advancing nearer, eſpecially up the avenue on the NE. ſide, where the remains are moſt perfect, it fills the eye in an aſtoniſhing meaſure. It is encompaſſed with a circular ditch; after this is paſſed, there is a ſpace of 108 feet to the work itſelf, which is 108 feet in diameter. It conſiſts of ſeveral ſtones of enormous ſize, placed upon one another in a circular form: many of them are really ſtupendous, and cannot fail of filling the beholder with ſurpriſe. The exterior circle, in it's perfection, conſiſted of 60 ſtones, 30 uprights, and 30 impoſts, of which 17 uprights are left ſtanding. About 8 feet from the inſide of this outer circle is another of 40 ſmaller ſtones, without impoſts, forming, as it were, a circular portico. Of theſe 19 are left, of which 11 only are ſtanding. Beſides this outer portico, which is 300 feet in circumference, there is an inner one, which originally compoſed two-thirds of an oval. On the inſide of this oval, there is a leſſer one of 19 ſtones, of a pyramidical form; theſe are 2 feet 6 inches in breadth, 1 foot and a half thick, and about 8 feet high, riſing in height as they approach the upper end of the incloſure. The ſpace within it has been called the Adytum, or Sanctum Sanctorum, where it is ſuppoſed the prieſts entered, to offer their ſacrifices on the altar at the upper end. This altar is compoſed of a kind of blue, coarſe marble, 20 inches thick, 4 feet broad, and 16 feet in length. All the ſtones added together, with which this whole temple was built, make juſt 140. One ſtone at the upper end, which is fallen down and broken in half, meaſures, according to Dr. Hales, 25 feet in length, 7 in breadth, and at a medium 3 and a half in thickneſs. The ſtones are ſuppoſed to be brought from the Grey Weathers, upon Marlborough Downs, but the difficulty in bringing them hither, and eſpecially in laying them one upon another, is inconceivable, as no mechanical powers now known, are ſufficient to raiſe thoſe that lie acroſs, to their preſent extraordinary ſituation. Stonehenge is 2 miles W. of Ameſbury, and 6 NNW. of Saliſbury.

Strokeſtown, in Roſcommon, Connaught.

STROMA, a ſmall iſland on the coaſt of Caithneſsſhire, in Scotland, once uſed as a place of interment by the inhabitants of ſeveral of the neighbouring iſlands. In caverns of this iſland, entire uncorrupted human bodies, that had been dead 60 years, or more, were formerly to be found.

STROMBERG, a town of Munſter; and a town in the palatinate of the Rhine.

STROMBOLO, or STRONGOLI, one of the Lipari Iſlands, anciently STRONGYLE. It is a volcano, which riſes in a conical form, to the height of above 500 fathoms. On the eaſt ſide, it has three or four little craters ranged near each other, not at the ſummit, but on the declivity, nearly at two-thirds of it's height. The common chimney is alſo on the declivity, although always in the centre of the whole baſe. It is inhabited, although thinly, notwithſtanding it's fires; but care is taken to avoid the proximity of the crater, which is yet much to be feared. "I was aſſured," ſays M. De Lue, "by an Engliſhman, who, like me, had the curioſity to viſit theſe iſles, that the fine weather having invited him and his company to land at Strombolo, they aſcended a volcano, whoſe craters at that time threw out nothing; but that while they were attentively viewing them, unapprehenſive of any danger, they were ſuddenly ſaluted by ſuch a furious diſcharge, as to be obliged to retreat with precipitation, and not without one of the company being wounded by a piece of the ſcoria. Of all the volcanoes recorded in hiſtory, Strombolo ſeems to be the only one that burns without ceaſing.

Etna

Etna and Vesuvius often lie quiet for many months, and even years, without the least appearance of fire; but Strombolo is ever at work, and, for ages past, has been looked upon as the great light-house of these seas. The island is fertile, and produces much cotton. Lat. 38. 50. N. lon. 15. 45. E.

STROMNESS, a town on the W. side of the island of Orkney, with an excellent harbour, 9 miles W. of Kirkwall.

STRONGOLI, a town of Calabria Citra, seated on a very high rock.

STRONSA, one of the Orkney Isles, with two safe harbours, or road steads.

Stroud, Devonshire, near Modbury.

*STROUD, a town of Gloucestershire, seated on the Stroud, a small stream, whose properties are peculiarly adapted to the dying of scarlet and grain colours. It's banks are crowed with the houses of clothiers; and a navigable canal accompanies it's progress to the Severn. This canal has been lately extended to join the Thames at Lechlade. See THAMES. Stroud is 11 miles SE. of Glouceſter, and 102 W. by N. of London. Market on Friday.

Stroud, a village of Kent, oppoſite Rocheſter, being parted from it by the river Medway. Stroud, Surry, NW. of St. Ann's Hill. Stroud End, Glouceſterſ. in Painſwick pariſh. Stroud-Green, Middl. in Hornſey pariſh. Stroud Green, Surry, NE. of Croydon. Stroway, a river in Monmouthſhire. Stroxton, Lincolnſ. near Grantham. Strubby, Lincolnſ. between Saltfleetby and Alford. Strumpſhaw, Norfolk, S. of Blowfield. Strutton, Surry, near Croydon. Stubbington, Surry, near Farnham. Stubby Lane, Staffordſhire, S. of Marchington.

STUBEN, a town of Hungary, with hot-baths, and mines of copper and ſilver in the neighbourhood.

Stubham Lodge, Yorkſ. near Ilkley. Stubhampton, Dorſetſhire, near Eaſtbury. Stubley, Derbyſ. near Dronfield. Stubley, Lancaſ. NE. of Rochdale. Stubton Heath, 4 miles from Lincoln Heath. Stuckley, Bucks, between Winſlow and Leighton. Studdy, Norfolk, near Holt. Studham, Bedfordſ. near Market Street. Studham, Herts, adjoining Kenſworth. Studholm, Cumb. in Kirkbanton pariſh. Studland, Dorſetſhire, on Pool Bay. Studland Bay, Dorſetſ. E. of Studland, is reckoned a ſafe harbour to anchor in. Studley, Bucks, in Ockley pariſh; but part of it is in Oxfordſhire. Studley, Devonſhire, NW. of Tiverton. Studley, Oxfordſhire, NE. of Wood Eaton. Studley, Warwickſhire, SE. of Ipſley. Studley, Wilts, near Calne. Studley, Yorkſhire, a mile from Rippon. Stukeley, Great and Little, Huntingd. NW. of Huntingdon. It was anciently called Stivecle, or Stiff Clay, from the nature of the ſoil. Stukeley, or Stivicle, Bucks, near Monks Riſborough. Stukeſwold, Lincolnſhire, NW, of Tatterſhall Chace.

STULINGEN, a town of Suabia.

STULWISSENBURG, a town of Hungary, 24 miles SW. of Buda.

Sturby, Yorkſhire, near Flamborough. Sturmer, Eſſex, near Haverill, in Suffolk.

STURMINSTER, or STOURMINSTER-NEWTON, a town in Dorſetſhire, ſeated on the river Stour, 20 miles NNE. of Dorcheſter, and 111 W. by S. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Sturminſter Marſhal, on the Stour, 4 miles E. of Sturminſter. Sturry, Kent, by the river Stour, 2 miles NE. of Canterbury. Sturſton, Derbyſ. NE. of Aſhborn. Sturſton, Norfolk, 4 miles SW. of Watton. Sturſton, Suffolk, N. of Yaxley. Sturtlow, Huntingd. in Bugden pariſh. Sturtmarſh, Kent, in Sheppey Iſle. Sturton, Lancaſ. N. of Garſtang. Sturton, Nott. SW. of Gainſborough. Sturton, or Stourton, Wilts, W. of Mere, Sturton, and Sturton Caſtle, Staffordſ. on the river Stour. Sturton, Yorkſ. SW. of Otley. Stourton, Yorkſ. W. of Skipton. Sturton, Great, Lincolnſhire, NW. of Horncaſtle. Stutfall Caſtle, Kent in Limme pariſh.

STUTGARD, a city of Suabia, capital of the duchy of Wirtemberg. The ſtreets are narrow in the town, and the houſes generally of wood; but, there are fine houſes, and wide ſtraight ſtreets, in one of the ſuburbs. Here are the duke's palace; an orphan-houſe, with rich cabinets of curioſities, and handſome gardens; an academy of painting, ſculpture, and architecture, eſtabliſhed in 1701; and manufactures of ſtuffs, ſilk-ſtockings, and ribbons. It is ſeated near the river Neckar, 40 miles NW. of Ulm.

Stutteſbury, Northamptonſhire, NW. of Brackley. Stutton, Lincolnſhire, NE. of Louth. Stutton, Suffolk, near Brantham.

SUABIA, a circle of Germany, bounded on the N. by the circle of Franconia, and the palatinate of the Rhine; on the W. by the circle of the Lower Rhine and Alſace; on the S. by Swiſſerland, and the Tyroleſe; and on the E. by Bavaria. It comprehends the duchies of Wirtemberg, the margravate of Baden, the principalities of Hoven-Zollern, Oetringen, and Mindelheim; the biſhoprics of Augſburg, Conſtance, and Coire, with ſeveral abbeys and free towns. The Duke of Wirtemburg is director.

SUANA. See SOANA.

SUANES, SUANI, or SUANETI, a poor and ſimple people of Aſia, who inhabit one of the four diviſions of the kingdom of Imeritia. They ſubſiſt by raiſing cattle, and by a little agriculture. Major Rennel ſuppoſes them to be the deſcendants of a people of the ſame name and country, who are mentioned by Strabo. They were in his time, a formidable and numerous nation, governed by a king, with a national council of 300 perſons. They are ſaid to have collected a conſiderable quantity of gold, by means of fleeces, which they ſunk in their torrents; a practice from which Strabo derives the fable of the Golden Fleece. It is reported, that this mode of collecting gold ſtill ſubſiſted when the Turks were in poſſeſſion of Mingrelia, and that the produce of a river, called the Zgenis-ſkald, was farmed by certain Jews of Conſtantinople.

SUAQUEM, a ſmall iſland in the Red Sea, near the coaſt of Nubia, with a ſea-port of the ſame name, anciently called THEON SOTER. The iſland is ſituated in a bay, the entrance of which is narrow, and well ſecured from every wind, with five, ſix, and ſeven fathoms water. A Turkiſh baſhaw reſides here. Lat. 19. 20. N.

Stubberton, Hampſhire, near Biſhop's-Waltham.

SUBBIACO, a town in the Campagna-di-Roma, 33 miles E. of Rome.

Suckholm, Nott. near Wirkſop. Sucklebridge, Somerſ. Suckley, SW. of Worceſter. Sudborn, Suff. by Orford. Sudborough, Northamp. NW. of Thrapſton. Sudbroke, NE. of Lincoln. Sudbroke, Monm. near Caldicot. Sudbroke, Surry, 2 miles from Kingſton. Sudbury, Berks, near Windſor. Sudbury, Derbyſ. 6 miles from Uttoxeter. Sudbury, Devonſ. near Sudmouth. Sudbury and it's Green, Middleſex, at the foot of Harrow-Hill. Sudbury, Glouceſ. in Tiddenham pariſh.

*SUDBURY, a borough of Suffolk, ſeated on the river Stour, was one of the firſt ſeats of the Flemings, who were brought over by Edward III. to teach the Engliſh the art of manufacturing their own wool. It became, in conſequence, very populous and opulent. It's trade is now diverted, in great part, into other channels, however, many kinds of thin ſtuffs are ſtill made here, ſuch as ſays, perpetuanas, bunting for ſhips' colours, burial crapes, &c. The river was made navigable from this place to Maningtree many years ago. It is 14 miles SSE. of St. Edmundſbury, and 56 NE. of London. Market on Saturday.

Sudbury Tenements, Glouceſterſhire, in Winchcomb pariſh. Sudcote Steel, Yorkſ. near Hull. Sudden, Dorſetſhire, 2 miles S. of Owre Moigne. Suddington, Glouceſterſhire, near Cirenceſter.

SUDERMANIA, or SUDERMAN LAND, a province of Sweden, S. of Upland and Weſtmanland, about 62 miles in length, and 42 in breadth. It is the moſt populous and beſt cultivated part of Sweden, having alſo a fertile ſoil, with fiſheries, and mines of divers metals. Nicoping is the capital.

SUDEROE, one of the Ferro Iſlands, in the Northern Ocean, remarkable for a dangerous whirlpool near it, which is occaſioned by a crater, 61 fathoms deep in the centre, and between 50 and 55 at the ſides. The danger at moſt times, eſpecially in ſtorms, is very great; ſhips are irreſiſtibly drawn in; the rudder loſes it's power, and the waves beat as high as the maſts, ſo that an eſcape is almoſt miraculous; yet, at the reflux, and in very ſtill weather, the inhabitants venture in boats, for the ſake of fiſhing.

Sudgrove, or Southgrove, Glouceſterſ. Sudick, Durham, N. of Monk-Wearmouth. Sudley, Glouceſterſhire, a mile S. of Winchcomb. Sudmead, near Glouceſter.

SUEZ, a town of Egypt, ſeated at the N. end of the W. gulf of the Red Sea, called the Gulf of Suez, with a harbour. This gulf is ſeparated from the Mediterranean by an iſthmus, 120 miles over, which joins Aſia to Africa. The town is ſurrounded by a ſandy country, and is without water. It is very much crowded with people, when the Turkiſh galleys arrive there. However, at other times, it is almoſt deſerted, and the harbour is too ſhallow to admit ſhips of great burden. The commerce of Suez with Cairo is carried on only by means of caravans, but ſeveral veſſels ſail annually between this port and Jidda. It is 60 miles ESE. of Cairo. Lat. 30. 2. N. lon. 32. 45. E.

Suffield, Norf. NW. of North Walſham. Suffield, Yorkſhire, NW. of Scarborough.

SUFFOLK, an Engliſh county, bounded on the W. by Cambridgeſhire, on the N. by Norfolk, on the S. by Eſſex, and on the E. by the German Ocean. It extends 58 miles from E. to W. and 28 from N. to S. It is divided into 22 hundreds, containing 31 towns, and 575 pariſhes. The air is very clear and healthy, even near the ſea-coaſt. The ſoil is of various qualities, but the country in general level. That near the ſhore is ſandy and full of heaths, yet abounds in rye, peas, turnips, carrots, and hemp, with numerous flocks of of sheep. Copious beds of petrified shells, called shell-marl, which are found in various parts between Woodbridge and Orford, have for many years been made use of for improving light land, and have liberally rewarded the agricultural labours in those parts. High-Suffolk, or the Woodlands, which is the inland part of the county, has a rich, deep clay and marl, that yields good pasture-grounds, on which feed abundance of cattle. That part which lies on the confines of Essex and Cambridgeshire, affords also excellent pasture; and about Bury St. Edmund's, and to the N. and NW. it is fruitful in corn, except towards Newmarket. It's principal produce is butter and cheese; but as the latter is only supplementary to the former, it has gained, almost proverbially, the character of the worst in England. Grain of all sorts, beans, and hemp, are grown in this county, and a few hops not far from Sudbury. They have an excellent breed of draught horses: the farmers are skilful; and on the whole, this county, with respect to agriculture, is one of the most thriving in England. The principal rivers are the Stour, the Waveney, Little Ouse, Larke, Deben, Alde, and Orwell. Ipswich is the principal town, but the assizes are held at Bury St. Edmund's.

Suston, E. of Hereford.

SUGARLOAF-HILL, GREAT and LITTLE, two high conical mountains, in Wicklow, Leinster. They are situated near Bray, between Wicklow and Dublin, about 12 miles from each of these ports.

SUGELMESSA, or SIGELMESSA, a town of Morocco, capital of a district about 100 miles in length. It abounds in corn, dates, and other fruits; and has mines of iron, lead, and antimony. It is 72 miles NNE. of Tafilet.

Sugnel, Great and Little, Staffords. NW. of Eccleshall. Sugwas, near Hereford.

SUIR, a large river of Munster, which rises in Tipperary, is navigable for barges, from Clonmel to the sea; and for vessels of considerable burden, from Carrick on Suir. At Waterford it forms a deep and spacious harbour, and below that city it unites with the Nore, and passes on to the sea, 8 miles below Waterford, forming a commodious haven, deep enough for the largest vessels.

Sulbury, Bucks, E. of Winslow. Sulby, Northamptons. NW. of Naseby. Sulford, Northamptons. near Haddon. Sulgrave, Northamptons. near Weedon. Sulham, Berkshire, 4 miles W. of Reading. Sulhamsted Abbots, Berks, on the Kennet, opposite Inglefield. Sullemacha, Hertfordshire, near Elstree.

SULLY, a town in the dept. of Saone and Loire; and a town in the dept. of Loiret.

SULMONA, a town of Abruzzo Citra.

SULTANIA, a town in Irac-Agemi, built on the ruins of the ancient Tigranocerta.

Sulton, Sussex, W. of Arundel Forest.

SULTSBACH, a town of Bavaria.

SULTZBURG, a town of Suabia; and a town of Bavaria.

SUMATRA, an island of Asia, the most western of the Sunda Islands, about 700 miles in length, and 120 in it's greatest breadth. On the SE. it is separated from Java by the Straits of Sunda. It's general direction is nearly NW. and SE. The equator divides it into almost equal parts, the one extremity being in 5. 33. N. and the other in 5. 56. S. lat. No account had been given of this island, by any Englishman, till the year 1778, when Mr. Charles Miller published an account of the manners of a particular district, in the 68th volume of the Philosophical Transactions. These were the Bettas, a people who live in the interior parts, called the Cassia country. They differ from all the other inhabitants in language, manners, and customs. They eat the prisoners whom they take in war, though only in terrorem, and not as common food, and hang up their skulls as trophies in their houses. From this country, the greatest part of the cassia that is sent to Europe is procured. It abounds also with the camphire trees, which constitute the common timber in use; and in these trees the camphire is found native, in a concrete form. It is remarkable, that in this state it is sold to the Chinese, at the price of 250l. or 300l. per cwt. but these dexterous artists contrive to furnish the Europeans with it, at about a quarter of that price. In 1783, Mr. Marsden, who had been secretary to the president and council of Fort Marlborough, published a history of Sumatra, with very copious particulars of the island. He represents it as surpassed by few in the beautiful indulgencies of nature. A chain of high mountains, in some of which are volcanoes, runs through their whole extent; their altitude, though great, is not sufficient to occasion their being covered with snow during any part of the year. Between these ridges are extensive plains, considerably elevated above the surface of the maritime lands. In these, the air is cool; and, from this advantage, they are esteemed the most eligible portion of the country, are the beſt inhabited, and the moſt cleared from woods, which elſewhere, in general, throughout Sumatra, cover both hills and valleys with an eternal ſhade. Here too are found many large lakes, that facilitate much the communication between the different parts. The heat of the air is far from being ſo intenſe as might be expected from a country occupying the middle of the torrid zone; and it is more temperate than many regions without the tropics, the thermometer, at the moſt ſultry hour, about two in the afternoon, generally fluctuating between 82 and 85 degrees. Mr. Marſden divides the inhabitants into Malays, Acheneſe, Battas, Lampoons, and Rajangs; and he takes the latter as the ſtandard of deſcription, with reſpect to the perſons, manners, and cuſtoms of the inhabitants. They are rather below the middle ſtature; their bulk in proportion; their limbs, for the moſt part ſlight, and particularly ſmall at the wriſts and ancles; and, upon the whole, they are accounted gracefully formed. Their hair is ſtrong, and of a ſhining black. The men are beardleſs; great pains being taken to render them ſo, when boys, by rubbing their chins with a kind of quick lime. Their complexion is properly yellow, wanting the red tinge that conſtitutes a copper or tawny colour. They are, in general, lighter than the Meſtees, or half-breed, of the reſt of India; thoſe of the wealthier claſs, who are not expoſed to the rays of the ſun, and particularly their women, approaching to a degree of fairneſs. Some of the inhabitants of the hilly parts are obſerved to have the ſwelled neck, or goiter; but they attempt no remedy for it, as theſe wens are conſiſtent with the higheſt health. The rites of marriage among the Sumatrans, conſiſt ſimply in joining the hands of the parties, and pronouncing them man and wife, without much ceremony, excepting the entertainment which is given upon the occaſion. But little apparent courtſhip precedes their marriages. Their manners do not admit of it; the young people of each ſex being carefully kept aſunder, and the girls being ſeldom truſted from under the wing of their mothers. The opportunities which the young people have of ſeeing and converſing with each other, are at the public feſtivals. On theſe occaſions, the perſons, who are unmarried, meet together, and dance and ſing in company. The men, when determined in their regards, generally employ an old woman as their agent, by whom they make known their ſentiments, and ſend preſents to the female of their choice. The parents then interfere, and the preliminaries being ſettled, a feaſt takes place. At theſe feſtivals, a goat, a buffalo, or ſeveral, according to the rank of the parties, are killed to entertain, not only the relations and invited gueſts, but all the inhabitants of the neighbouring country, who chuſe to repair to them. The greater the concourſe, the more is the credit of the hoſt, who is, generally on theſe occaſions, the father of the girl. The cuſtoms of the Sumatrans permit their having as many wives as they can purchaſe, or afford to maintain; but it is extremely rare, that an inſtance occurs of their having more than one, and that only among a few of the chiefs. The children are nurſed but little, not confined by any ſwathing or bandages; and being ſuffered to roll about the floor, ſoon learn to walk and ſhift for themſelves. When cradles are uſed, they ſwing ſuſpended from the ceilings of the rooms. The Sumatrans are fond of the barbarous diverſion of cock-fighting, taking great pains in rearing and feeding cocks, and never matching the ſame colours; but a grey againſt a pile, a yellow againſt a red, and the like. It rarely happens that both cocks ſurvive the combat. The wild beaſts of Sumatra are tigers, elephants of a ſuperior ſize, rhinoceroſſes, bears, monkeys, and even cats. The tigers prove to the inhabitants, both in their journeys, and even their domeſtic occupations, moſt deſtructive enemies. The number of people annually ſlain by theſe rapacious tyrants of the woods, is almoſt incredible. Whole villages have been depopulated by them. Yet, from a ſuperſtitious prejudice, it is with difficulty they are prevailed upon, by a large reward which the India Company offers, to uſe methods of deſtroying them; till they have ſuſtained ſome particular injury in their own family or kindred. Their traps, of which they can make variety, are very ingeniouſly contrived. Sometimes they are in the nature of ſtrong cages, with falling doors, into which the beaſt is enticed by a goat or dog incloſed as a bait; ſometimes they manage that a large timber ſhall fall in a grove, acroſs his back; ſometimes he is nooſed about the loins with ſtrong rattans; ſometimes he is led to aſcend a plank, nearly balanced, which turning when he is paſt the centre, lets him fall upon ſharp ſtakes prepared below. Inſtances have occurred of a tiger being caught by one of the former modes, which had many marks in his body of the partial ſucceſs of this laſt expedient. The ſize and ſtrength of the the ſpecies which prevails on this iſland is prodigious. They are ſaid to break, with a ſtroke of their fore paw, the leg of a horſe or a buffalo; and the largeſt prey they kill is without difficulty dragged into the woods by them. This they uſually perform on the ſecond night, being ſuppoſed, on the firſt, to gratify themſelves with ſucking the blood only. Time is by this delay afforded to prepare for their deſtruction; and to the methods already enumerated, beſide ſhooting them, may be added that of placing a veſſel of water, ſtrongly impregnated with arſenic, near the carcaſe. The tiger having ſatiated itſelf with the fleſh, is prompted to aſſuage his thirſt with the tempting liquor at hand, and periſhes in the indulgence. Their chief ſubſiſtence is moſt probably, the monkeys with which the woods abound. They are deſcribed as alluring them to their fate, by a faſcinating power, ſimilar to what has been ſuppoſed of the ſnake; and, ſays Mr. Marſden, "I am not incredulous enough to treat the idea with contempt, having myſelf obſerved that when an alligator or crocodile, in a river, comes under an overhanging bough of a tree, the monkeys, in a ſtate of alarm and diſtraction, crowd to the extremity, and chattering and trembling, approach nearer and nearer to the amphibious monſter that awaits to devour them as they drop, which their fright renders almoſt unavoidable." Theſe alligators likewiſe occaſion the loſs of many inhabitants, frequently deſtroying the people as they bathe in the river, according to their regular cuſtom, and which the perpetual evidence of the riſk attending it, cannot deter them from. A ſuperſtitious idea of their ſanctity, alſo, preſerves them from moleſtation, although with a hook of ſufficient ſtrength, they may be taken without much difficulty. The other animals of Sumatra are buffaloes, a ſmall kind of horſes, goats, hogs which run wild in the mountains, deer, bullocks, and hog-deer. This laſt is an animal ſomewhat larger than a rabbit, the head reſembling that of a hog, and it's ſhanks and feet like thoſe of the deer. The bezoar-ſtone found on this animal has been valued at ten times it's weight in gold; it is of a dark brown colour, ſmooth on the outſide, and the coat being taken off, it appears ſtill darker, with ſtrings running underneath the coat: it will ſwim on the top of the water. If it be infuſed in any liquid, it makes it extremely bitter: the virtues uſually attributed to this ſtone are cleanſing the ſtomach, creating an appetite, and ſweetening the blood. Of birds they have a greater variety than of beaſts. The coo-ow, or Sumatran pheaſant, is a bird of uncommon beauty. They have ſtorks of prodigious ſize, parrots, dunghill fowls, ducks, the largeſt cocks in the world, woodpigeons, doves, and a great variety of ſmall birds different from ours, and diſtinguiſhed by the beauty of their colours. Of their reptiles, they have ſerpents, lizards, flying lizards, and cameleon. The iſland ſwarms with inſects, and their varieties are no leſs extraordinary than their numbers. The principal ſeeds ſown are rice and millet. They have ſugar-canes, beans, peas, radiſhes, yams, potatoes, pumpkins, and ſeveral kinds of pot-herbs unknown to Europe; and here are found moſt of the fruits to be met in other parts of the E. Indies in the greateſt perfection. Indigo, Braſil wood, two ſpecies of the bread-fruit tree, the beſt pepper in the E. Indies except that of Cochin-China, and the moſt important article of commerce here; benjamin, coffee, and cotton, are likewiſe the produce of this iſland. Here alſo is the cabbage tree and ſilk cotton tree; and the foreſts contain a great variety of valuable ſpecies of wood, as ebony, pine, ſandal, eagle, or aloes, teek, manchineel, and iron wood, and alſo the banyan tree. Gold, tin, iron, copper, lead, ſulphur, arſenic, and ſaltpetre, are alſo produced at Sumatra. Bees wax is a commodity of great importance here; and they have likewiſe edible birds-neſts. There is plenty of fiſh in their rivers. The Engliſh and Dutch have factories on this iſland; the principal one of the former being Fort Marlborough, on the SW. coaſt. Sumatra is divided into many petty kingdoms. The original natives of Sumatra are Pagans; but it is to be obſerved, that when the Sumatrans, or any of the natives of the eaſtern iſlands, learn to read the Arabic character, and ſubmit to circumciſion, they are ſaid to become Malays; the term Malay being underſtood to mean Muſſalman.

SUMBI, a province of Angola, in Africa, lying in about 11 deg. S. lat. and but little known.

Sumbridge, Devonſhire, near Barnſtaple. Summerby, Leiceſterſhire, near Cold-Orton. Summer Court, Cornwall.

* SUMMER-HILL, a town of Meath, in Leinſter, 20 miles from Dublin.

Summerley, Suſſex, S. of Burdham. Summers, Bedf. E. of Luton. Summerton, Oxf. near Fritwell. Summerton, Suffolk.

SUNART, a diſtrict of Argyleſhire, remarkable markable for numerous veins of lead, which, however, are not very productive.

SUNART LOCH, an inlet of the ſea, in Argyleſhire, which ſeparates the Iſland of Mull from the diſtrict of Morven.

Sunbiggin, Weſtmorl. S. of Croſby-Ravenſworth. Sunbrick, Lancaſhire, W. of Ken Sands. Sunbury, Middleſex, between Hampton-Court and Shepperton.

SUNBURY, a town of Georgia, in N. America, with a ſafe and convenient harbour. It is a pleaſant, healthy town, and is the reſort of the planters from the adjacent places of Midway and Newport, during the ſickly months. It is 30 miles SSW. of Savannah.

SUNDA ISLANDS, in the Indian Ocean, near the Straits of Sunda. The chief of them are Borneo, Java, and Sumatra.

SUNDERBUNDS, a tract of country, conſiſting of that part of the Delta of the Ganges, in Hindooſtan, in Bengal, which borders on the ſea. It is compoſed of a labyrinth of rivers and creeks, all of which are ſalt, except thoſe that immediately communicate with the principal arm of the Ganges. In extent it is equal to the principality of Wales. "It is ſo completely enveloped in woods, and infeſted with tigers," ſays Major Rennell, "that if any attempts have ever been made to clear it (as is reported) they have hitherto miſcarried." Here ſalt, in quantities equal to the whole conſumption of Bengal and it's dependencies, is made and tranſported with equal facility; and here alſo is found an almoſt inexhauſtible ſtore of timber for boat building.

SUNDERBURG, a ſea-port of the Iſle of Alſen, Denmark.

SUNDERDOO, a ſmall iſland and ſea-port of Hindooſtan, on the Concan coaſt.

*SUNDERLAND, a ſea port in the county of Durham, ſeated at the mouth of the river Wear, where it empties itſelf into the German Ocean, is a populous, thriving, well-built town. It's inhabitants are eſtimated at 30,000. Coal is the ſtaple commodity, of which 280,000 chaldrons, Newcaſtle meaſure, are exported annually. In one year, (1791) 4905 veſſels cleared coaſtways, and 703 overſea, in all 5608. Glaſs, bottles, lime, ſalt, grindſtones, coperas, and pottery-ware, are alſo exported. It has a handſome church, a large and elegant chapel of eaſe, a neat and large chapel for the Methodiſts, five Diſſenters' meeting-houſes, an hoſpital for old ſeamen or their widows, another for eight poor women, a diſpenſary, and other public buildings. For a long time the navigation of this port was conſiderably impeded, from the want of a ſufficient depth of water, to admit ſhips of any conſiderable burden to put to ſea with their whole lading; to remedy which, ſuch veſſels were obliged to take part of their cargo in the open road; by which, the keel-men, who bring down the coals, were often expoſed, in ſudden ſtorms, to danger, by venturing out to ſea with the remainder of their lading; to obviate which inconvenience, and the danger to which the veſſels are there often expoſed, many of the largeſt ſhips belonging to this port were obliged to take in their lading at Shields. But this inconvenience is now very much remedied, by recent improvements in the harbour, and particularly the addition of a north pier, by which the ebbing tide gains greater force to ſcour the ſand which forms a bar at the entrance of the harbour; the tide now flows 16 feet, and admits veſſels of 300 and 400 tons burden. A bridge, has been lately erected acroſs the river Wear, thought to be the greateſt curioſity of it's kind in the world. It is not leſs remarkable for it's prodigious height and extreme ſpan, than for the peculiarity of it's conſtruction, being formed of ſmall ſegments of caſt iron, joined in ſuch a manner as to form a complete arch, the ſpan of which is 236 feet, and will admit of veſſels ſailing under it of 400 tons burden, by only ſtriking their top gallant maſts. It is 13 miles NE. of Durham, and 264 N. by W. of London.

Sunderland, Cumberl. 4 miles NE. of Cockermouth. Sunderland, Durham, by Braniſpeth-Caſtle. Sunderland, Northumb. by the ſea, N. of Dunſtaburgh Caſtle. Sunderland, High, Yorkſ. near Halifax. Sunderland Point, Lancaſhire, on the coaſt SW. of Lancaſter. Sunderland-Wick, Yorkſhire, near Great and Little Driffield.

SUNDI, a province of Africa, in Congo, which lies along the river Zaire. It's rivers render it extremely fertile, and in the mountains are mines of ſeveral metals. The capital is of the ſame name. Lat. 4. 50. S. lon. 17. 55. E.

Sundon, Upper and Lower, Bedfordſhire, SW. of Stretley. Sundridge, Kent, 2 miles and a half NE. of Weſtram. Sundridge, Kent, in Bromley pariſh.

SUPERIOR, the largeſt lake of North America, and ſuppoſed to be the largeſt body of freſh water on the globe. According to the French charts, it is 1500 miles in circumference. There are many iſlands in this lake: two of them are very large, eſpecially Iſle Royale, which is 100 miles long, and in places 40 broad. The ſurrounding coaſt is rocky and uneven. Upward of 30 rivers enter this lake, ſome of which are of conſiderable ſize. It abounds with trout and ſturgeon; the former weighing from 12 to 50 pounds. Storms affect this lake as much as they do the Atlantic Ocean. It diſcharges it's waters from the SE. corner, through the Straits of St. Marie, into Lake Huron.

SUPINO, a town of Moliſo, Naples.

SURAT, a ſea port of Hindooſtan, encompaſſed on the land ſide with two brick walls, and ſaid to contain 300,000 inhabitants. It's trade is very conſiderable, it being the great ſtore-houſe of the moſt precious productions of India: and in the city are as many different profeſſions of religion as in Amſterdam; for there are Mahometans of ſeveral ſects, and many ſorts of Gentoos. Mr. Niebuhr ſays, that the Mahometans at Surat are not, by far, ſo ſtrict as they are in Arabia, or in other Turkiſh countries, nor are the diſtinction of tribes among the Hindoos who reſide here ſtrictly obſerved. "Theſe Hindoos," he continues, "are a ſet of induſtrious ſober people, and of ſuch ſurpriſing honeſty, that no Europeans have ever had cauſe to repent the entruſting, even their whole fortune, to the Banians, who being born to trade, are employed here as brokers, as the Jews are in Turkey. The Hindoo women aſſiſt their huſbands in earning their bread, and keep themſelves ſo clean, that the European women, who come to India, are obliged to follow their example, or run the riſk of loſing their huſband's affections. When a child is born, a Bramin is to declare, by aſtrological rules, whether the child is come into the world in a lucky hour or not. This done, he hangs a thin ſtring over the ſhoulder of a boy, who wears this diſtinctive mark of his nation all his lifetime. The Bramins fix the time for the celebration of weddings; and alſo order and announce the holy-days. Every Banian is obliged, every morning, after waſhing and bathing himſelf, to have a kind of ſeal impreſſed on his forehead, by a Bramin; though this is the office of inferior Bramins only. I ſaw, one morning, a great number of them ſit on the river ſide, under the caſtle, where a number of girls and women reſorted to bathe, and to ſay their morning prayers. Every one of them gave the clean clothes, which they intended to wear for that day to one of theſe prieſts, and then went into the river. They afterward exchange their wet clothes for the dry ones, publicly on ſhore, but with ſuch a dexterity, that the moſt curious obſerver could ſee nothing inconſiſtent with decency. The Bramin, afterward, dipped his thumb into ſome red colour, and impreſſed it on the forehead of the women, who reciprocally marked the prieſt again, though ſlightly, leſt his face ſhould be daubed all over, by the great number of markers. Laſtly, the perſon that is ſigned, and in this manner conſecrated for the day, keeps the colour-box in one hand, ſays a ſhort prayer, gives the Bramin one or two handfuls of rice, and then, with her wet clothes on the other hand, returns home."—Beſides the Mahometans and Gentoos, there are Jews and Chriſtians of various denominations, at Surat. The ſurrounding country is fertile, except towards the ſea, which is ſandy and barren. Here is a fine garden, the property of the Dutch Eaſt India Company, the aſpect of which is rich and charming. Before the Engliſh Eaſt India Company obtained poſſeſſion of Bombay, the preſidency of their affairs on the coaſt of Malabar was held at Surat; and they had a factory eſtabliſhed there. Even after the preſidency was transferred to Bombay, the factory was continued. The Great Mogul had then an officer here, who was ſtyled his admiral, and received a revenue called the tanka, of the annual value of three lacks of rupees, ariſing from the rents of adjacent lands, and the taxes levied at Surat. The tyranny of this officer towards the merchants, induced the E. India Company, in 1759, to fit out an armament, which diſpoſſeſſed the admiral of the caſtle; and, ſoon after, the poſſeſſion of this caſtle was confirmed to them by the court of Delhi. They obtained, moreover, the appointment to the poſt of admiral, and were conſtituted receivers of the tanka, ſo that the Engliſh are, at preſent, the actual ſovereigns of Surat, and engroſs nearly the whole trade of the city. They keep the nabob of Surat in a ſtate of dependance, allowing him only an income on which he may live ſuitably to his dignity. The Indians are content with their new maſters, and the merchants are no longer in danger from the avaricious extortions of the nabobs.

Surgowny, in Armagh, Ulſter.

Suridlington, Lincolnſhire, SW. of Market-Raiſin.

SURINAM, a country of S. America, in Guiana. It extends along the river Surinam, 150 miles in length, and 60 in breadth; abounds in fruits, fiſh, game, and ſingular animals of various kinds. The ſoil is, in general, abundantly fruitful in ſugar, cotton, tobacco, indigo, cocoa, gums, wood for dying, &c. The woods are full of monkeys, and there are likewiſe tigers, with parrots, ſcorpions of an amazing ſize, and a great variety of inſects. In 1674, this ſettlement, which had been partly planted by the Engliſh, was ceded to the Dutch by King Charles II. in exchange for the province of New York. Paramaribo is the chief town. Lat. 4. 45. to 6. N. lon. 53. 40. to 56. 25. W.

SURINGIA, or SUISJU, a ſea-port of Niphon, in Japan, capital of a province of the ſame name, with a caſtle, where the emperors formerly reſided. It is 170 miles SSE. of Meaco.

Surlby, Nottinghamſhire, N. of Blythe. Surlingham, St. Mary's and St. Saviour's, SE. of Norwich. Surrendon, Kent, NW. of Aſhford.

SURRY, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Middleſex and a point of Buckinghamſhire, on the E. by Kent, on the S. by Suſſex, and on the W. by Hampſhire and Berks. It's greateſt length is about 37 miles, and it's breadth 26. It is divided into 13 hundreds, containing 11 market towns (including Southwark) and 140 pariſhes. It is a healthy pleaſant county, and the value of eſtates in it has advanced, of late years, beyond any other part of England. The ſoil is very different in the extreme parts from that in the middle, whence it has been compared to a coarſe cloth with a fine border: for the edge of the county on all ſides has a rich ſoil, extremely fruitful in corn and graſs, particularly on the N. and W. toward the Thames; but it is far otherwiſe in the heart of the county, where are wide tracts of ſandy ground and barren heath, and in ſome places are long ridges of hills, with warrens of rabbits and parks for deer. However, we meet here and there with ſome pleaſant ſpots interſperſed in the middle of Surry, and it is not to be doubted that a great deal of the waſte ground might, by proper management, be greatly improved. This county produces corn, box-wood, walnuts, hops, and fullers-earth; and near Darking grows a wild black cherry, of which a very pleaſant wine is made, little inferior to French claret. Beſides the products in common with the neighbouring counties, Surry is noted for the fineſt hops near Farnham, aſparagus at Batterſea, and a large breed of fowls at Darking. The manufactures in ſtarch, tobacco, gunpowder, paper, vinegar, calico printing, wax bleaching, &c. are conſiderable. The principal rivers beſide the Thames (which is the boundary of this county on the N.) are the Mole, Wey, and Wandle. The lent aſſizes are held at Kingſton, and the ſummer aſſizes at Guilford and Croydon alternately.

SURSEE, a town of Lucerne, in Swiſſerland, ſeated near the Lake of Sempach, 13 miles NW. of Lucern.

SUS, SOUS, or SUEZ, a diſtrict of Morocco, bounded on the W. by the ocean, on the N. by Mount Atlas, on the E. by Darah, and on the S. by Nun. It is a flat country, moſt of which produces corn, ſugar-canes, dates, indigo, alum, calamine, and red copper; and alſo abounds with cattle and camels. In the mountainous part the inhabitants are entirely free, and are governed by their own ſcheiks. The principal towns are Tarudant, Aguadir, Toma, Teceut, and Mella.

SUSA, an ancient and ſtrong town of Piedmont, capital of the marquiſate of Suſa. Here is a rich convent, called the Abbey of St. Juſt, and a triumphal arch erected to the honour of Auguſtus Cæſar. It is ſeated on the river Dora Repaira, and is called the key of Italy, becauſe it is the principal paſſage out of France into Italy. It is at preſent ſmall and poor, and is 25 miles WNW. of Turin.

SUSA. See SOUSE.

SUSDAL, a town of Hadimir, in Ruſſia, capital of a duchy of the ſame name. It is built of wood, as are moſt towns in theſe parts, and is 90 miles NE. of Moſcow.

SUSQUEHANNAH, a river of N. America, which riſes in two branches, the eaſternmoſt in the Mohawks country, New York; and the weſternmoſt in the N. part of Pennſylvania. Theſe branches unite at Sunbury; after which it runs in a SE. direction, enters Maryland, and being joined by ſeveral other rivers, forms the Cheſapeak.

SUSSEX, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Surry, on the NE. and E. by by Kent, on the S. by the Engliſh Channel, and on the W. by Hampſhire. It is about 70 miles in length, and 24 in it's mean breadth. It is divided into 6 rapes, and ſubdivided into 61 hundreds, containing 1 city, 16 market-towns, and 312 pariſhes. The air of this county is very various: along the ſea-ſhore it is thought agueiſh; but it has a much greater effect on ſtrangers than on the natives, who are generally very healthful. In the Weald, which is a rich deep ſoil, it is apt to be foggy, yet not unwholeſome; but upon the Downs the air is extremely ſweet and healthy. The ſoil is likewiſe various; that of the Downs, and thence to the ſea, is very fertile, both in corn and graſs, the latter feeding large flocks of ſheep, whoſe wool is remarkably fine. The middle of the county abounds with meadows and rich arable ground, and the N. ſide is ſhaded with extenſive woods, that uſed to ſupply fuel for the iron-works when they were in a flouriſhing ſtate. This plentiful county, therefore, ſupplies numerous commodities, the chief of which are corn, malt, cattle, wool, wood, iron, chalk, glaſs, fiſh, and fowl. It is particularly famous for it's wheaters, a ſmall bird, of the ſize of a lark, not much inferior to an ortolane, which is taken on the SE. Downs in the following manner: a turf is cut up, about a foot long, and half a foot broad; in the cavity is placed a ſnare of horſe-hair, and the turf turned with the graſs downward to cover the greateſt part of the hole. Theſe birds are naturally ſo timorous, that the ſhadow of a cloud, or any thing that moves on the ground, makes them fly into theſe little pits for ſhelter, where they are taken. With reſpect to manufactures, Suſſex is not diſtinguiſhed for any but that of gunpowder, at Battel, and of needles and coarſe cloths at Chicheſter. The principal rivers are the Arun, Adur, Ouſe, and Rother. Chicheſter is the capital.

Suſſed, Norfolk, SW. of Cromer.

SUSTER, SCHOUSTER, or SUSA, ſuppoſed to be the ancient SHUSHAN, where the kings of Perſia had a palace for their winter reſidence. Here are ſome manufactures of ſilk, ſtuffs, and rich cloth. It is 150 miles SSW. of Iſpahan.

SUSTEREN, a town of Juliers.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. and W. by the North Sea, on the E. by Caithneſsſhire and the German Ocean, and on the S. and SW. by the Frith of Dornoch and Roſsſhire. It's greateſt extent from E. to W. is about 47 miles, and from N. to S. ſomewhat more. Some parts of this county, ſtill called foreſts, were anciently covered with wood, but are now trackleſs deſerts, deſtitute of trees; or bleak mountains, abounding with wild roes. In theſe parts there are few inhabitants, and no villages; but to the SE. along the Frith of Dornoch, the country is populous and well cultivated. Dornoch is the county town.

SUTHERLAND PROPER, a diviſion of Sutherlandſhire, containing all the ſouthern part, as Strathnaver does the northern.

Here, it is ſaid, the Kentiſhmen, with boughs in their hands, like a moving wood, ſurpriſed William the Conqueror, and throwing down their boughs, threatened battle, if they had not their ancient cuſtoms and franchiſes granted to them, to which he immediately conſented. But the fact is doubted, as it is firſt mentioned by Thomas Spot, a monk, who lived two centuries after William's arrival. It is certain, however, that many peculiar cuſtoms are to be found in Kent; one of which is that of gavelkind, or the equal diſtribution of landed property among all the ſons of a family.

*SWANSEY, or ABERTAW, a populous town of Glamorganſhire, in South Wales. It has a good port at the mouth of the river Tawy, and exports great quantities of coals to Ireland and the ſouthern coaſt of England; it has alſo a great correſpondence with Briſtol and Worceſter. Here are potteries, and great works for the ſmelting of copper and lead ore. Many ſhips have been built here, and it is reſorted to for ſea bathing. It is 24 miles WNW. of Cowbridge, and 205 W. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

SWEDEN, a large kingdom, in the N. part of Europe; bounded on the N. by Norway and Lapland; on the E. by Ruſſia; on the S. by the Baltic and the Gulf of Finland; and on the W. by Norway, the Sound, and the Categate. It is the largeſt ſtate in Europe, next to Ruſſia, though geographers are not agreed reſpecting it's ſuperficial contents. The whole kingdom is divided into five general parts; namely, Sweden Proper, Gothland, Norland, Lapland, and Finland; and each of theſe is ſubdivided into ſeveral provinces. Sweden Proper contains Upland, Sudermania, Nericia, Weſtmania, and Dalecarlia. Gothland contains Oſtrogothia, or Eaſt Gothland, Smoland, Weſtrogothia, or Weſt Gothland, the Iſles of Gothland and Œland, Wermland, Bohus, Dalia, Scania, or Schonen, Hailand, and Blekingen. Norland includes Geſtrike, or Geſtrikeland, Helſingland, Medelpadia, Jemtland, Herjedalia, Angermania, and W. Bothnia. Swediſh Lapland compriſes Aſela, Hiemtland, Umeo, Pitheo, Luleo, Torneo, and Kemi. Finland contains Finland Proper, Eaſt Bothnia, Tavaſteland, Nyland, Savolax, and that part of Kymene and Carelia, which Sweden has preſerved. On the S. the longeſt day is 18 hours 30 minutes; but toward the N. there is continual day in ſummer, and continual night in winter, for ſeveral weeks ſucceſſively. In the province in which Stockholm is ſeated, the ſpring and autumn are ſcarcely to be perceived; for the winter continues nine months, and the ſummer during the remaining three. In winter the cold is exceſſive, and in ſummer the heat is almoſt inſupportable, the air being generally ſerene all that time. Notwithſtanding this, the Swedes live to a great age. Thoſe places that are fit for cultivation have ſcarce a foot of good earth, for below it is all gravel; for which reaſon they till the ground with a ſingle ox, and one perſon may readily manage the plough. All their rocks are quite covered with flowers in the ſummer time, and their gardens have plenty of fruits. The trees are early in bloſſoming, becauſe the ſoil is fat and ſulphureous, which contributes greatly to the vegetation of plants; but the apples, pears, cherries, apricots, melons, and grapes, have not ſo good a taſte as in the more ſouthern countries. Their domeſtic animals are horſes, cows, hogs, goats, and ſheep. The wild beaſts are bears, wolves, foxes, wild cats, and ſquirrels. There are alſo elks and reindeer. They have ſeveral ſorts of fowls; and partridges, woodcocks, and falcons, in great plenty. They have rich ſilver, copper, and iron mines. They export boards, gunpowder, leather, iron, copper, tallow, ſkins, flax, hemp, pitch, roſin, and maſts; and import ſalt, brandy, wine, linen cloth, ſtuffs, tobacco, ſugar, ſpice, and paper. The inhabitants are of a robuſt conſtitution, and able to ſuſtain the hardeſt labour; and they have ſeveral public ſchools and colleges, where arts and ſciences are taught. Their houſes are generally of wood, with very little art in their conſtruction. The roofs, in many places, are covered with turf, on which their goats often feed. There is ſcarcely any country in the world where the women do ſo much work; for they till the ground ground, thraſh the corn, and row the boats on the ſea. Sweden was formerly an elective monarchy, and afterwards the moſt limited one in Europe, till the year 1772, when the late king gained the moſt eſſential royal prerogatives, without, however, being an abſolute monarch. This prince was aſſaſſinated March 16th, 1792, leaving his ſon Guſtavus heir, and his brother, the Duke of Sudermania, regent of the kingdom. The inhabitants are about 3,000,000. The eſtabliſhed religion is the Lutheran. The capital is Stockholm.

SWISSERLAND, or SWITZERLAND, a large and populous country of Europe, bounded on the E. by the Tirol and Auſtrian Suabia; on the W. by France; on the N. by the Black Foreſt and a part of Suabia; and on the S. by Savoy and Italy. It's greateſt extent, from E. to W. is about 180 miles, and from N. to S. 140. Here are many lakes and rivers, and ſome very fertile plains, which plentifully afford the neceſſaries of life, although the greateſt part of it may juſtly be conſidered as the moſt elevated land in Europe. Swiſſerland is divided into 13 cantons, excluſively of their allies; their names are, Lucern, Uri, Schweitz, Underwalden, Zug, Friburg, Soleure, which are Romaniſts. The Proteſtant cantons are Zurich, Bern, Baſle, and Schaffhauſen. Glarus and Appenzel contain both profeſſions of religion. The mountains of Swiſſerland are commonly called the Alps, over which there are four paſſages to go into Italy from Swiſſerland. The principal lakes are thoſe of Conſtance, Geneva, Lucern, Zurich, Neufchatel, and Bienne. The moſt conſiderable rivers are the Rhine, the Rhone, the Aar, the Reuſs, and the Inn. The principal riches of Swiſſerland conſiſt of excellent paſtures, in which they breed and fatten their cattle. As they leave out their cattle night and day on the mountains, one would think they would be devoured by the wild beaſts, and yet it is quite otherwiſe; for, when the beeves perceive a bear or a wolf, at a diſtance, they form themſelves into a circle, and are ready to receive the enemy with their horns. As for the goats, and chaumois, they feed in flocks on the mountains, and in the woods, and they place centinels on all ſides: and when any dangerous animal draws near, a ſignal is given, and they all get into a place of refuge, where the ſavage beaſts dare not come. The inhabitants are ſtrong, robuſt men, and form mercenary troops, for which reaſon they are hired by ſeveral nations for the military ſervice; and even the pope has his Swiſs guards. The women are tolerably handſome, have many good qualities, and are, in general, very induſtrious. The peaſants retain their old manner of dreſs, and are content to live upon roots, herbs, milk, butter, and cheeſe; and there are ſome of the mountaineers who never have any bread. The manufactures of Swiſſerland are conſiderable in linen, ſilk, cotton, and woollen, leather, hats, gloves, paper, pottery, clocks, watches, hardware, toys, &c.; beſides which, they export butter, cheeſe, cattle, ſheep, horſes, and ſome wine, conveyed by packhorſes, as the roads are often impracticable for carriages. The imports are principally grain, hemp, flax, wine, ſalt, and ſome manufactures. The inhabitants are eſtimated at 2,000,000. See the Cantons under their reſpective names, and alſo GLACIERS and SCHWEITZ.

SYDNEY COVE, the town or ſettlement of convicts, begun to be erected in Port Jackſon, on the coaſt of New South Wales, in 1788. The ground about it was then covered with a thick foreſt; but in 1790, ſome good buildings had been erected. The governor, lieutenant-governor, judge-advocate, and greateſt part of the civil and military officers, were comfortably lodged. The governor's houſe is built of ſtone, and has a very good appearance, being 70 feet in front. The lieutenant-governor's houſe is of brick, as are alſo thoſe belonging to the judge and the commiſſary. The reſt of the houſes are built with logs and plaſtered, and all the roofs are either covered by ſhingles, or thatched. The hoſpital is a good temporary building. The ſoldiers were in barracks, and the officers had comfortable huts, with gardens adjoining to them. The cove lies open to the NE. and is continued in a SW. direction for near 1000 yards, gradually decreaſing from the breadth of 1400 feet, till it terminates in a point, where it receives a ſmall ſtream of freſh water. It is perfectly ſecure from all winds, with anchorage extending 2000 feet up the cove, and ſoundings, in general, of four, five, ſix, and ſeven fathoms, ſo that ſhips can lie cloſe to the ſhore, for a conſiderable way, on both ſides. Metals of various kinds abound in the neighbouring ſoil. Lat. 33. 50. S. lon. 151. 28. E.

TARTARY, a country of Asia, which, taken in it's utmost limits, reaches from the Eastern Ocean to the Caspian Sea, and from Corea, China, Hindoostan, and Persia, to Russia and Siberia. It may be considered under three grand divisions; namely, Eastern, Western, and Independent Tartary. The different tribes which inhabit Eastern Tartary were formerly called Mongul Tartars, a warlike nation, who, on the one hand, conquered Hindoostan, under Jenghis Khan, and on the other subdued China, in the 13th century, and reigned there for 100 years. Chinese Tartary is divided into two parts, Eastern and Western. The greatest part of this country either belongs to the emperor of China, is tributary to him, or is under his protection. Independent Tartary includes all the country between Chinese Tartary and the Caspian Sea, and contains Turkestan, Great and Little Bukharia, Turcomania, Charasin, Thibet, and some countries inhabited by the Usbecks and Kalmucks. Western Tartary includes the remainder; most or all of which has been conquered by the Russians. For various interesting particulars concerning them, see, in their respective places, the articles Abkas, Circassia, Crimea, Cossacks, Georgia, Imeritia, Kalmucs, Kisti, Lesguis, Mingrelia, Monguls, Ossi, Samoyedes, Turkomans, and Usbecs.

TASSAUSUDON, a city of Bootan.

TATE'S ISLAND, an island in the S. Pacific Ocean, first discovered June 29th, 1793, by Captains Bampton and Holt, of the Hormazier and Chelterfield, vessels employed in the service of the East-India Company, and so named, in honour of Mr. Tate of Bombay. The inhabitants are stout, well made, and woolly headed, and resemble the people of New Guinea in stature and complexion. A party from the ships, having landed, for the sake of procuring water, and to make observations on the soil, produce, inhabitants, &c. was at first received very kindly, to all appearance, but afterwards, the natives, watching their opportunity, murdered Captain Hill, of the New South Wales corps, and some of the seamen, cutting their throats from ear to ear, and mangling their bodies in a shocking manner. It was with difficulty that the survivors made a shift to get on board their boat, by frequently discharging their musquets, at the report of which the natives fled into the woods. Those voracious cannibals were afterwards seen dragging the dead bodies towards large fires prepared on the occasion, yelling and howling hideously at the same time. Lat. 9. 28. S. lon. 146. 57. E.

TATTA, or SINDE, a town of Hindoostan Proper, capital of the province of Sindy. It is seated on a branch of the river Sinde, or Indus, called the Ritchel River. In the last century, it was extensive and populous, and was a place of great trade, possessing manufactures of silk, wool, and cotton; and it was celebrated for it's cabinet ware. Little of these now remain, and the limits of the city are much reduced. On the shores of the Indus, above the Delta, considerable quantities of saltpetre are made; and within three miles on the NW. are mines of iron and salt. The Indus, and it's branches, admit of an uninterrupted navigation from Tatta to Moultan, Lahore, and Cashmere, for vessels of near 200 tons; and a very extensive trade was carried on between those places, in the time of Aurungzebe; but, at present, very little of this trade remains, owing, it is said, to a bad government in Sindy, and probably to a hostile disposition of the Seiks, the present possessors of Moultan and Lahore. Tatta is 340 miles SSW. of Moultan. Lat. 24. 50. N. lon. 67. 37. E.

It has been the principal ſeat of the manufacture of coarſe woollen goods, ſuch as ſerges, duroys, druggets, &c. though ſomewhat decayed of late years. A ſilk manufacture was introduced here in 1780. Large quantities of malt liquor are alſo ſent from this town to Briſtol for exportation. It is a handſome, well-built place, conſiſting chiefly of four principal ſtreets, with a noble ſpacious market-place. The election of members of parliament here is very ſingular; every pot-walloper, i. e. that dreſſes his own victuals, is entitled to vote; ſo that the inmates, or lodgers, to qualify themſelves, a little before the election comes on, make a fire in the ſtreets, and there boil their victuals. It is 31 miles NE. of Exeter, and 140 W. by S. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

TAY, LOCH, a lake of Perthſhire, in Scotland, through which flows the river of the ſame name. It is 15 miles long, and in many parts above one broad. On the 12th of September, 1784, this lake was ſeen to ebb and flow ſeveral times in a quarter of an hour, when, all at once, the waters ruſhed from the E. and W. in oppoſite currents, ſo as to form a ridge, leaving the channel dry to the diſtance of almoſt a hundred yards from it's uſual boundary. When the oppoſing waves met, they burſt with a claſhing noiſe, and much foam: the waters then flowed out at leaſt five yards beyond their ordinary limits. The flux and reflux continued gradually decreasing for about two hours. A similar motion was observed for several days, but not to the same degree as on the first day. The banks of this lake are finely wooded; and it has a tufted island, on which are the ruins of a priory, built by Alexander I.

TENCH'S ISLAND, a well-inhabited iſland in the S. Pacific Ocean, diſcovered by Lieutenant Bail, in 1790. It is about 2 miles in circumference: it is low, but entirely covered with trees, many of which are the cocoa-nut. The natives obſerved in the canoes, that ventured to come ſomewhat near the ſhip, were remarkably ſtout and healthy-looking men; their ſkin per-feftly fmooth, and free from any diſorder. They were quite naked, and of a copper colour: their hair reſembling that of the New Hollanders. Some of their beards reached as low as the naval, and there was an appearance of much art having been uſed to form them into long ringlets, ſo that it ſeemed to be the prevailing faſhion on this iſland to keep the beard well combed, curled, and oiled. Two or three of the men had ſomething like a bead, or bone, ſuſpended to a ſtring, which was faſtened round the neck. The largeſt of their canoes appeared to be about 28 feet long, and made out of a large tree, with a long outrigger. Lat. 1. 39. S. lon. 151. 31. E.

TENERIFF, one of the Canary Iſlands, the ſecond in dignity, but the firſt in point of extent, wealth, and fertility. It lies to the W. of the Grand Canary, and is about 45 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. It abounds in wine, different ſorts of fruits, cattle, and game. One part of this iſland is ſurrounded by inacceſſible mountains, and there is one in particular, called the Pike of Teneriff, which, according to Sir Thomas Herbert, may be ſeen 120 miles off, in a clear day. Dr. Heberden eſtimates the height at 15,396 feet above the level of the ſea. The vertex, which appears ſharp, and the exact reſemblance to a cone, is flat for the extent of an acre of ground, in the centre of which is a dreadful volcano. Though it frequently breaks out into flames, and ſmoke conſtantly iſſues from it, there has been no eruption from this mountain, ſince the year 1704, when the port of Garrachica was deſtroyed, and the harbour filled up by the lava. Nothing can be more delicately rich than the ſoil, if the Spaniards would take the trouble to cultivate it properly, communicating to grains, fruits, roots, &c. a peculiar elegance of flavour, unknown in other countries. Wine is the only conſiderable article of foreign commerce, 40,000 pipes being annually made here. The Spaniſh cuſtom of dreſſing in black continues amongſt the inhabitants. The laborious works in this iſland are chiefly performed by mules, horſes being ſcarce. Oxen are alſo much employed here, to drag their caſks along upon pieces of wood. Hawks and parrots are natives of the iſland, as alſo ſwallows, ſea-gulls, partridges, blackbirds, and large flocks of canary birds. There are alſo lizards, locuſts, and three or four ſorts of dragon flies. The air and climate are remarkably healthful, and particularly adapted to afford relief in phthiſical complaints. Tettenhall, Clericorum and Regis, Staff. NW. of Wolverhampton. Tetton, Cheshire, near Sandbach and Middlewich.

TETUAN, a town of Fez, in Africa. The houses have no windows toward the streets, except little holes to look out at; for the windows are on the inside toward the court-yard, which is surrounded by galleries; and in the middle is generally a fountain. They are two stories high, flat at the top, and the streets very narrow. The dress of both sexes is much alike; but nothing of the women is to be seen in the streets, except their eyes and naked legs, which are never covered in this country. When they are at home, they visit each other from the tops of their houses. They wear bracelets on their arms and legs, and large ear-rings in their ears. The shops in the city are very small, being without doors; and the owner, when he has opened the shutters, jumps in, and sits cross-legged on a counter, the goods being disposed in drawers round about him, and all the customers stand in the street. It is seated on the river Cus, 3 miles from the sea, and has a castle, which commands the town. It is 108 miles N. by W. of Fez, and 28 SE. of Tangier. Lat. 35. 27. N. lon. 5. 26. W.

Tetsworth, Huntingd. W. of Granssden.

TEVERONE, a river of Italy, which rises in the Apennines, 50 miles above Tivoli, glides through a plain till it comes near that town, when it is confined, for a short space, between two hills, covered with groves. These were supposed to be the residence of the Sibyl Albunea, to whom a temple here was dedicated. The river moving, with augmented rapidity, as it's channel is confined, at last rushes, at once, over a lofty precipice; the noise of it's fall resounds through the hills and groves of Tivoli; a liquid cloud arises from the foaming water, which afterward divides into numberless small cascades, waters several orchards, and, having gained the plain, flows quietly on till it loses itself in the Tiber. The elegant form of the Sybil's temple, indicates it's having been built when the arts were in the highest state of perfection at Rome. It is seated on a point of the mountain, fronting the grand cascade.

Teversall, Nottinghams. near Mansfield. Teversham, Cambridges. near Fen-Ditton.

TEVIOT, a river which rises in the mountains in the SW. of Roxburghshire, and passing almost through the centre of that county, meanders beautifully through wide and fertile valleys, and unites with the Tweed, near Kelso.

THAME, or TAME, a town of Oxfordſhire, with a well-furniſhed market on Tueſday. It is 13 miles E. of Oxford, and 45 NW. of London.

THAMES, the fineſt river in Great Britain, which takes it's riſe from a copious ſpring, called Thames-Head, 2 miles SW. of Cirenceſter, in Glouceſterſhire. It has been erroneouſly ſaid, that it's name is Iſis, till it arrives at Dorcheſter, 15 miles below Oxford, which, being joined by the Thame, or Tame, it aſſumes the name of the Thames, which, it has been obſerved, is formed from a combination of the words Thame and Iſis. What was the origin of this vulgar error cannot now be traced, but poetical fiction has perpetuated it. "It plainly appears," ſays Camden, "that the river was always called Thames, or Tems, before it came near the Thame; and in ſeveral ancient charters granted to the abbey of Malmſbury, as well as that of Enſham, and in the old deeds relating to Cricklade, it is never conſidered under any other name than that of Thames." He likewiſe ſays, that it occurs no where under the name of Iſis. All the hiſtorians, who mention the incurſions of Ethelwold into Wiltſhire, in the year 905, or of Canute, in 1016, concur likewiſe in the ſame opinion, by declaring, that they paſſed over the Thames at Cricklade, in Wiltſhire. It is not probable, moreover, that Thames Head, an appellation by which the ſource has uſually been diſtinguiſhed, ſhould give riſe to a river of the name of Iſis; which river, after having run half it's courſe, ſhould reaſſume the name of Thames, the appellation of it's parent ſpring. About a mile below the ſource of the river, is the firſt corn-mill, which is called Kemble Mill. Here the river may properly be ſaid to form a conſtant current; which, though not more than nine feet wide in the ſummer, yet, in the winter, becomes ſuch a torrent, as to overflow the meadows for many miles around. But, in the ſummer, the Thames-Head is ſo dry, as to appear nothing but a large dell, interſperſed with ſtones and weeds. From Somerford the ſtream winds to Cricklade, where it unites with many other rivulets. Approaching Kemsford, it again enters it's native county, dividing it from Berkſhire at Ingleſham. It widens conſiderably in it's way to Lechlade; and being there joined by the Lech and Coln, at the diſtance of 138 miles from London, it becomes navigable for veſſels of 90 tons. At Enſham, in it's courſe NE. to Oxford, is the firſt bridge of ſtone; a handſome one of three arches. Paſſing by the ruins of Godſtow nunnery, the river reaches Oxford, in whoſe academic groves, it's poetical name of Iſis has been ſo often invoked. Being there joined by the Charwell, it proceeds SE. to Abingdon, and thence to Dorcheſter, where it receives the Tame. Continuing it's courſe SE. by Wallingford to Reading, and forming a boundary to the counties of Berks, Bucks, Surry, Middleſex, Eſſex, and Kent, it waſhes the towns of Henley, Marlow, Maidenhead, Windſor, Eton, Egham, Staines, Laleham, Chertſey, Weybridge, Shepperton, Walton, Sunbury, Eaſt and Weſt Moulſey, Hampton, Thames-Ditton, Kingſton, Teddington, Twickenham, Richmond, Iſleworth, Brentford, Kew, Mortlake, Barnes, Chiſwick, Hammerſmith, Putney, Fulham, Wandſworth, Batterſea, Chelſea, and Lambeth. Then, on the north bank of the river, are Weſtminſter and London, and, on the oppoſite ſide, Southwark; forming together one continued city, extending to Limehouſe and Deptford; and hence the river proceeds to Greenwich, Erith, Greenhithe, Gray's-Thurrock, Graveſend, and Leigh, into the ocean. It receives, in it's courſe from Dorcheſter, the rivers Kennet, Loddon, Coln, Wey, Mole, Wandle, Lea, Roding, Darent, and Medway. Though the Thames is ſaid to be navigable 138 miles above bridge, yet there are ſo many flats, that in ſummer, the navigation weſtward would be entirely ſtopped, when the ſprings are low, were it not for a number of locks. But theſe are attended with conſiderable expence; pence; for a barge from Lechlade to London pays for paſſing through them, 13l. 15s. 6d. and from Oxford to London 12l. 18s. This charge, however, is in ſummer only, when the water is low; and there is no lock from London Bridge to Balter's-Lock; that is, for 51 miles above bridge. The plan of new cuts has been adopted, in ſome places, to ſhorten and facilitate the navigation. There is one near Lechlade, which runs nearly parallel to the old river, and contiguous to St. John's Bridge; and there is another, a mile from Abingdon, which has rendered the old ſtream, toward Culham Bridge, uſeleſs. But a much more important undertaking has lately been accompliſhed, namely, the junction of this river with the Severn. A canal has been made, by virtue of an act of parliament, in 1730, from the Severn to Wall-Bridge, near Stroud. A new canal now aſcends by Stroud, through the Vale of Chalford, to the height of 343 feet, by means of 28 locks, and thence to the entrance of a tunnel near Sapperton, a diſtance of near 8 miles. This canal is 42 feet in width at top, and 30 at the bottom. The tunnel (which is extended under Sapperton Hill and Haley-Wood, making a diſtance of 2 miles and 3 furlongs) is near 15 feet in width, and can navigate barges of 70 tons. The canal, deſcending hence 134 feet, by 14 locks, joins the Thames at Lechlade, a diſtance of above 20 miles. In the courſe of this undertaking, the canal from the Severn, at Froomlade, to Inglefham, where it joins the Thames, is a diſtance of more than 30 miles. The expence of it exceeded the ſum of 200,000l. of which 3000l. is ſaid to have been expended in gunpowder alone, uſed for the blowing up of the rock. This new canal was completed in 1789, in leſs than ſeven years from it's commencement. Several canals are made, or making, to open a communication between this river and ſeveral parts of the kingdom; from London to Hertford and Biggleſwade; from Brentford, by Uxbridge, Rickmanſworth, &c. to join the Oxford canal at Braunſton; from Weybridge, by Guilford, Godalmin, Petersfield, &c. to the ſea, between Goſport and Southampton; to Baſingſtoke, and from thence to Southampton-Water; by the Kennet, to Hungerford; from Abingdon to Lechlade; from Oxford to Coventry; from Lechlade to Stratford-upon-Avon; and from Lechlade to the Severn, below Glouceſter. The tide flows up the Thames as high as Richmond, which, following the winding of the river, is 70 miles from the ocean; a greater diſtance than the tide is carried by any other river in Europe. The water is eſteemed extremely wholeſome, and fit for uſe in very long voyages, in which it will work itſelf perfectly fine.

THAMES, a river of N. America, in the ſtate of Connecticut, which enters Long-Iſland Sound, 4 miles below New London.

THIBET, or GREAT THIBET, a large country of Aſia, conſidered by moſt geographers as part of Tartary, and extending from the ſource of the Indus to the borders of China, and from Hindooſtan to the deſerts of Cobio. The length from E. to W. is about 1500 miles, and the breadth unequal and not known. This country is one of the higheſt in Aſia; it being a part of that elevated tract which gives riſe not only to the rivers of India and China, but alſo to thoſe of Siberia and Tartary. It is divided into three parts, Upper, Middle, and Lower Thibet. The Upper lies toward the ſources of the Ganges and Burrampooter; the Middle is that in which Laſſa, the capital, is ſituated; and the Lower, that which borders on China. Little Thibet is ſituated between Upper Thibet and Caſhgur, and is rather a dependency of the latter than of Great Thibet. Conſidering the exceedingly rough and ſteril ſtate of the country of Thibet, and the ſeverity of it's climate, from it's wonderful elevation; it is aſtoniſhing, Major Rennel obſerves, to find it's inhabitants in a high ſtate of civilization; their houſes lofty and built of ſtone; and the uſeful manufactures in ſome degree of improvement. All theſe advantages they probably owe to their vicinity to the Chineſe. The Thibetians are governed by the grand lama, or delai lama, who is not only ſubmitted to by them, but is alſo the ſovereign pontiff of numberleſs tribes of Tartars, in Chineſe and independent Tartary. They are perſuaded that Fo lives in him; that he knows, ſees, and underſtands all things, without aſking any queſtions, or receiving any information; and that if at any time he does ſo, it is merely for form's ſake, and in order to leave the infidel and ill-deſigning no room to complain. In a word, they believe him to be immortal, and endowed with all knowledge and virtue. Every year they come from different parts to worſhip, and make rich offerings at his ſhrine. Even the emperor of China, who is of a Tartar race, does not fail to acknowledge the lama, in his religious capacity, although, as a temporal ſovereign, the lama himſelf is, in ſome reſpects, tributary to that emperor. The opinion of the moſt orthodox Thibetians is, that when the grand lama ſeems to die, either of old age or infirmity, his ſoul, in reality, only quits a crazy habitation, to look for another younger or better; and it is diſcovered again in the body of ſome child, by certain tokens known only to the lamas or prieſts, in which order he always appears. In 1774, the grand lama was an infant, who had been diſcovered ſome time before by the tayoſhoo lama, who, in authority and ſanctity of character, is next to the grand lama, and, during his minority acts as chief. The lamas, who form the numerous, as well as the moſt powerful body in the ſtate, have the prieſthood entirely in their hands; and moreover, they fill up many monaſtic orders, which are held in great great veneration among them. The reſidence of the grand lama is at Pateli, or Putala, a vaſt palace, on a mountain, near the banks of the Burrampooter, about 7 miles from Laſſa. The religion of Thibet has, in ſome reſpects, a great affinity to that of the Indian Bramins. The Thibetians have a great veneration for the cow, and highly reſpect alſo the waters of the Ganges, the ſource of which they believe to be in heaven. The Sunniaſſes, or Indian pilgrims, often viſit Thibet as a holy place; and the lama always maintains a body of 2 or 300 of them in his pay. The temporal government of Thibet has not been always poſſeſſed by the great lama. At the beginning of the laſt century, Thibet was ruled by a king, and the territories ſubject to the great lama were not very large. The fort of Dellamacolla, which commands the principal paſs through the Bootan Mountains, being taken by ſtorm by Captain Jones, in 1773; the fame of this exploit made the Thibetians ſend an embaſſy to the Bengal government, and in 1774, the Engliſh Eaſt India Company made a treaty with the lama.

THOMAS, ST. an iſland of Africa, lying under the equator in 8 deg. E. lon. It was diſcovered in 1460, and belongs to the Portugueſe. It is almoſt round, and is about 30 miles in circumference. It is an unwholeſome country for Europeans, although the natural inhabitants often complete a century. The ſoil is well-watered and amazingly fertile, producing the fruits of every denomination of the warm climates, in the utmoſt perfection, with little labour or expence. It abounds alſo with a variety of animals, tame and wild; and an infinity of the feathered kind. The rivers, as well as the ſurrounding ſea, are ſtocked with an incredible variety of fiſh. It conſiſts chiefly of hills intermixed with valleys, which are conſtantly filled with a thick fetid fog. However, it agrees very well with the cattle, which are larger and finer here than on the Gold Coaſt of Guinea.

TIERRA DEL ESPIRITU-SANTO, the moſt weſtern and largeſt iſland of the New Hebrides, in the S. Pacific Ocean, being 60 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It was diſcovered by Quiros, and viſited by Captain Cook, in 1774. The land is exceedingly high and mountainous, and in many places the hills riſe directly from the ſea. Except the cliffs and beaches, every part is covered with wood, or laid out in plantations. Beſide the Bay of St. Philip and St. Jago, on the north ſide of it, the iſles which lie along the S. and E. coaſt, form ſeveral good bays and harbours. Lat. 16. 0. S. lon. 166. 0. E.

TIERRA-DEL-FUEGO, ſeveral iſlands at the ſouthern extremity of America, ſeparated from the main land by the Straits of Magellan. They take their name from a volcano on the largeſt of them. They are all very barren and mountainous; but from what Mr. Foſter ſays, in his voyage to the South Sea, the climate does not appear to be ſo rigorous and tempeſtuous as it is repreſented in Anſon's Voyage. Upon the lower grounds and iſlands, that were ſheltered by the high mountains, he found ſeveral ſorts of trees and plants, and a variety of birds. Among the trees was Winter's bark-tree, and a ſpecies of arbutus, loaded with red fruit of the ſize of ſmall cherries, which were very well taſted. In ſome places there is alſo plenty of celery. Among the birds was a ſpecies of duck, of the ſize of a gooſe, which ran along the ſea with amazing velocity, beating the water with it's wings and feet. It had a gray plumage, with a yellow bill and feet, and a few white quill feathers. At the Falkland Iſlands it is called a loggerhead-duck. Among the birds are alſo plenty of geeſe and falcons. The rocks of ſome of the iſlands are covered with large muſcle-ſhells, the fiſh of which is well flavoured. The natives of this country are ſhort in their perſons, not exceeding 5 feet 6 inches at moſt, their heads large, their faces broad, their cheek bones prominent, and their noſes flat. They have little brown eyes; their hair is black and lank, hanging about their heads, in diſorder, and beſmeared with train-oil, On the chin they have a few ſtraggling ſhort hairs. Thoſe which Mr. Foſter ſaw had no other clothing than a ſmall piece of ſeal-ſkin, which hung from their ſhoulders to the middle of the back, being faſtened round the neck with a ſtring: the reſt of their body was perfectly naked. Their natural colour ſeems to be an olive brown, with a kind of gloſs, reſembling that of copper; but many of them diſguiſe themſelves with ſtreaks of red paint, and ſometimes, though ſeldom, with white. Their whole character is a ſtrange compound of ſtupidity, indifference, and inactivity. Their inſtruments for fiſhing are a kind of fiſh-giggs. They live chiefly on ſeals' fleſh, and like the fat oily part moſt. There is no appearance of any ſubordination among them; and from their indifference and inactivity, they ſeem rather content than very happy.

Tiffield, Northamp. NE. of Towceſter. Tighe, Rutland. W. of Market-Overton.

TIGRE, a province in Abyſſinia, 200 miles in length, and 120 in breadth.

TIGRIS, a river of Aſia, which riſes in the mountains of Armenia, and paſſing by Diarbekir, Moſul, and many other cities and towns, unites with the Euphrates, when both together fall into the Perſian Gulf below Baſſora.

Tikeford, Bucks, near Newport. Tilbrook, Bedf. NW. of Kimbolton. Tilbury, Eſſex, near Clare-Hall and the Yealdams. Tilbury, Wilts, near Wardour-Caſtle. Tilbury, Eaſt, Eſſex, by the Thames, to the E. of Tilbury Fort. It is ſuppoſed to be the place where the emperor Claudius croſſed the Thames, in purſuit of the Britons. In this pariſh is a field, called Cave Field, in which is a horizontal paſſage to one of the ſpacious caverns in the neighbouring pariſh of Chadwell. Of theſe Camden has given a ſketch in his Britannia; and he deſcribes them as in a chalk cliff, built very artificially of ſtone, to the height of ten fathoms. Denham meaſured three of the moſt conſiderable of them, and found the depth of one of them to be 50 feet, of another 70 feet, and of a third 80 feet. Their origin is too remote for inveſtigation. Tilbury Fort, lies more weſt, oppoſite Graveſend. It is a regular fortification, planned by Sir Martin Beckman, chief engineer to Charles II. with baſtions, the largeſt of any in England. It has a double moat, the innermoſt of which is 180 feet broad, with a counterſcarp, covered way, ravelines, and tenailles. On the platform are mounted 106 cannon, from 24 to 46 pounders each, beſides ſmaller ones planted between them; the baſtions and curtines are alſo planted with guns. On the land ſide are two redoubts of brick; and here it is able to lay the whole country under water. The foundation of this fort is laid upon piles driven down in two ranges, one above the other, which reach below the channel of the river, and the lowermoſt being pointed with iron, enters the ſolid chalk rock which extends under the Thames to the chalk hills in Kent. Tilbury, Weſt, Eſſex, ſituated on the Thames, N. of Tilbury Fort, where the four Roman proconſular ways croſſed each other. In 630, this was the ſee of Biſhop Ceadda, or St. Chad, who converted the Eaſt Saxons. It is ſituated by the marſhes, which are generally ſtocked with Lincolnſhire and Leiceſterſhire wethers, which are ſent hither in autumn, and fed here till Chriſtmas, and this is what the butchers call right marſh mutton. In this pariſh is a celebrated ſpring of alterative water, diſcovered in 1727. Tilehurſt, Berks, W. of Reading. Tilesworth, Bedford. near Chalgrave. Tiley, Dorſetſhire, in Great Mintern pariſh. Tiley, Dorſetſhire, near Coſmore Common. Tilford, Surry, SE. of Farnham. Tilgate and it's Foreſt, Suſſex, between Crawley and Slaugham.

TINIAN, an iſland in the Indian Ocean, and one of the Marians. It is about 12 miles in length, and 6 in breadth. The ſoil is every where dry and healthy; and, being ſomewhat ſandy, is the leſs diſpoſed to rank and over-luxuriant vegetation. The land riſes in gentle ſlopes from the ſhore to the middle of the iſland, intermixed with valleys of an eaſy deſcent, and beautifully diverſified with woods and meadows. There are at leaſt 10,000 cattle here, that are all milk white, except their ears, which are brown or black. There are alſo a vaſt number of fowls which are eaſily caught, and the fleſh of both are exceedingly good, beſide plenty of large, fierce, wild hogs, whoſe fleſh is delicate food. In the woods are prodigious quantities of cocoa-nuts, cabbage-trees, as alſo guavoes, limes, ſweet and ſour oranges, water-melons, and bread-fruit. It grows on all parts of the branches, is more long than round, being covered with a rough rind. It is about ſeven or eight inches long, and is fitteſt for uſe when full grown, but not quite ripe. There are alſo vegetables proper for the ſcurvy; ſuch as water-melon, dandelion, creeping purſlain, mint, ſcurvy-graſs, and ſorrel. This iſland produces alſo cotton and indigo, and would certainly be of great value if it were properly cultivated. There are now no inhabitants, but there were 30,000, who were taken away by the Spaniards to other iſlands, and particularly Guam, a little before the arrival of Commodore Anſon, in 1742. The climate is extremely healthful, according to the author of Anſon's voyage, from whom this deſcription is chiefly taken; but according to Commodore Byron, who viſited this iſland in 1765, it is unhealthful in the rainy ſeaſon. There are no ſtreams, but the water of the wells and ſprings is extremely good. The principal inconvenience ariſes from the number of muſkitoes, and other kinds of flies; and there are likewiſe inſects called ticks, which faſten upon the limbs and bodies of men, and bury their heads under their ſkins; with other venomous reptiles and inſects without number. But the worſt of all is, that the road is inconvenient, and, in ſome ſeaſons, there is little ſecurity for a ſhip at anchor. Lat. 15. 0. N. lon. 146. 0. E.

Tinkleton, Dorſetſhire, SW. of Bere. Tinkley, Glouceſterſhire, in Nimpſfield pariſh. Tinmore, Staffordſhire, NW. of Tamworth.

TINMOUTH, a ſea-port of Northumberland, ſeated at the mouth of the river Tyne, 9 miles E. of Newcaſtle. It has a caſtle ſeated on a very high rock, inacceſſible on the ſea-ſide, and well mounted with cannon. There is a bar acroſs the mouth of the river, which is not above ſeven feet deep at low-water. There are dangerous rocks about it, called the Black Middins; but to guide the ſhips by night, there are light-houſes ſet up, and maintained by the Trinity-Houſe. Here are ſeveral ſalt-works, but the principle article of trade is coals. This place is now much reſorted to as a watering place during the ſummer months.

TINOS, an iſland of the Archipelago, to the S. of Andros, 17 miles long, and 8 broad. The riches of this iſland conſiſt in ſilk, of which they have 16,000 pounds yearly; and the ſilk ſtockings and gloves they make of it are remarkably neat. It was lately ſubject to the Venetians. St. Nicolo is the principal town.

TINTO, a river of Seville, Andaluſia, whoſe waters are of a yellow colour, and petrifying quality. No animals, except goats, will drink out of this river, nor any fiſh live in it's ſtream. It withers all plants and trees on it's banks.

TINZEDA, a town of Darah, in Africa.

TIPERA, or TIPRA, a country E. of Bengal, and bordering on Meckley; partly independent, and partly ſubject to Aracan.

TIPPERARY, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munſter, 52 miles in length, and from 12 to 31 in breadth; bounded on the NE. and NW. by King's County and Galway; on the E. by Queen's County and Kilkenny; on the S. by Waterford and a part of Limerick; and on the W. by Galway, Clare, and Limerick. The ſouth parts are exceedingly fertile, and well furniſhed with good buildings; but the north is inclinable to be barren, and terminates in a row of twelve mountains, the higheſt in Ireland, and called Phelem-dhe-Madina. It contains 147 pariſhes, 30,700 houſes, and 169,000 inhabitants. The river Suir runs through all the length of it, from N. to S. The moſt conſiderable places are Clonmel, which is the county town, Caſhel, and Carrick.

TIPPERARY, a town in the county of Tipperary, Munſter, 9 miles SSW. of Caſhel.

Tipton, Staffordſ. N. of Dudley Caſtle. Tiptrey Houſe, Eſſex, SE. of the Braxteds.

TIRANO, a town of the Griſons, in the Valteline, capital of the Upper Terzere, and reſidence of the podeſta. From the narrowneſs of the ſtreets, and number of ruinous houſes, it's general appearance is deſolate. The river Adda divides it into two parts. The chief trade is in wine and ſilk. It is 17 miles SW. of Bormio.

Tiraavley, in Mayo, Connaught.

TIREE, a ſmall but fertile iſland of Scotland, one of the Hebrides, lying to the SSW. of the Iſle of Col, and noted for it's marble quarry, and for a handſome breed of little horſes. The number of inhabitants, who make annually about 245 tons of kelp, is eſtimated at 2416. Here are 24 lakes, great and ſmall, which cover about 600 acres.

TIRLEMONT. See TILLEMONT.

TIRNAU, a town of Hungary, 20 miles ENE. of Preſburg.

TIROL, or UPPER AUSTRIA, a country of Germany, in the circle of Auſtria, and part of the hereditary dominions of that houſe. It is 150 miles in length, and 120 in breadth, and contains 12 towns, and 10 villages, which have markets. There are a great many mountains in this country, and yet it produces as much corn and wine as the inhabitants have occaſion for. They have rich mines of gold, ſilver, lead, and ſeveral ſpecies of precious ſtones. The hunting of the chamois here is ſomewhat dangerous, on account of the rocks which they take to. In this country are included the county of Tirol Proper, the biſhopric of Trent, and the biſhopric of Brixen. Here are alſo profitable ſalt-pits, and medicinal ſprings and hot baths. It is bounded on the N. by Bavaria, on the E. by Carinthia and Saltzburg, on the S. by part of the late territory of Venice, and on the W. by Swiſſerland and the country of the Griſons. Inſpruck is the capital.

Tirrels-Hall, Eſſex, by Dunmow. Tirringham, Bucks, on the Ouſe, NW. of Newport. Tirthington, Northumberl. in Bothall manor. Tiſehurſt, Suſſex, N. of Echingham. Tiſted, E. and W. Hants, between Alresford and Selborn. Tiſſington, Derbyſhire, N. of Aſborn.

TIUMEN, a town of Siberia, in the government of Tobolſk.

TIVIOT. See TEVIOT.

TIVOLI, a town of Italy, in the Campagna di Roma. It is now wretchedly poor; it is however, of greater antiquity than Rome itſelf, being the ancient Tibur, or Tobur, which Horace ſays, was founded by a Grecian colony. It was the favourite country reſidence of the ancient Romans, as Freſcati is of the moderns. Near the bottom of the eminence on which Tivoli ſtands, are the ruins of the vaſt and magnificent villa built by the emperor Adrian. Horace is thought to have compoſed great part of his works in this favourite retreat. In the market place are two images of oriental granite, repreſenting Iſis, an Egyptian deity. Near Tivoli is a celebrated caſcade, a Sibyl's temple, a magnificent villa belonging to the duke of Modena, and the remarkable Lake of Solfatara. Tivoli is ſeated on the river Teverone, 17 miles N. by E. of Rome, and 10 NE. of Freſcati.

Tixall with it's Heath, 2 miles E. of Staffordſ. Tixover, Rutlandſhire, in Ketton pariſh.

TLASCALA, a town of Mexico, formerly capital of a province of the ſame name. When the Spaniards firſt arrived here, it contained, according to Acoſta, 300,000 inhabitants, with a market-place large enough to hold 30,000 buyers and ſellers; but Gemelli, who was here in 1698, ſays, it was then become an ordinary village. It is 62 miles SE. of Mexico.

TLASCALA, a province in the government of Mexico, bounded on the N. by Guaſteca, on the NE. and E. by the Gulf of Mexico and Guaxaca, on the S. by the Pacific Ocean, and on the W. by Mexico Proper. It is the moſt populous country of Spaniſh America, the inhabitants being exempted from all ſervices and duties to the crown, in conſequence of having been originally allies to Cortez in the conqueſt of Mexico. The climate, ſoil, and produce reſemble thoſe of Mexico Proper.

TOBAGO, the moſt ſouthward of the iſlands in the Weſt Indies, and the moſt eaſtward except Barbadoes. It is 32 miles long from SW. to NE. and about 9 broad. The climate is not ſo hot as might be expected from it's ſituation ſo near the equator; nor does it lie in the track of thoſe dreadful hurricanes which frequently deſolate the other iſlands. It is agreeably diverſified with hills and vales, and is equal in richneſs of ſoil and produce to any of the iſlands in theſe ſeas. It was ceded to the Engliſh by the treaty of 1763, and to the French by that of 1783; but it was taken by the Engliſh, April 13th, 1793. Lat. 11. 10. N. lon. 60. 30. W.

TOBAGO, LITTLE, an iſland near the NE. extremity of Tobago. It is 2 miles long, and a mile broad.

TOBOLSK, a conſiderable town of the Ruſſian empire, capital of Siberia, and of the government of Tobolſk. It is ſeated at the confluence of the Irtyſh and Tobol. It is inhabited by Mahometan Tartars and Bucharians, who drive a great trade on that river. The houſes are low; the Tartars that live round this town for ſeveral miles are all Mahometans, and their muſti is an Arabian: in general, they behave very quietly, and carry on ſome commerce, but practiſe no mechanic trades. There are alſo a great number of Calmuck Tartars, who ſerve as ſlaves. All the Chineſe caravans paſs through this town, and and all the furs furnished by Siberia, are brought here, and thence forwarded to Moscow. The Russians commonly send their state prisoners hither. It is 800 miles E. of Moscow. Lat. 57. 30. N. lon. 68. 18. E.

TOBOLSK, a government of Russia, which comprehends the most considerable part of Siberia, including near 40 degrees of longitude, and 23 degrees of latitude.

Tobridge, Somersetsh. W. of Taunton.

TOCAT, a considerable city of Amasia, in Natolia, the residence of a cadi, a waywode, and an aga, commanding a thousand janizaries, and some spahis. The houses are handsomely built, but generally stand on uneven ground. The streets are pretty well paved, which is an uncommon thing in these parts. There are so many streams, that each house has a fountain. There are about 20,000 Turkish families, 4000 Armenian families, and 400 families of Greeks. Beside the silk of this country, they manufacture eight or ten loads of that of Persia, and make it into sewing-silk. Their chief trade is in copper vessels, such as kettles, drinking-cups, lanterns, and candlesticks. They also prepare a great deal of yellow Turkey leather. Tocat is the centre of trade in Natolia; for here the caravans arrive from Diarbekir in 18 days, from Sinop in 6, from Bursa in 20, from Smyrna in 27, &c. It's territory abounds in fruit and excellent wine, and it is 180 miles NW. of Ezerum, and 250 E. of Constantinople.

TOKENBURG, or TOGGENBURG, a county of Switzerland, depending on the abbot of St. Gal, as territorial lord, yet with a reservation of their rights and liberties. It lies among high mountains, between Zurich and Appenzel, is fertile in corn and fruit, and is divided into the Upper and Lower.

Tokenham, Wiltshire, SW. of Wotton-Basset.

TODI, a town of Spoleto.

TOLEDO, a considerable city of Spain, in New Castile, of which it was formerly the capital, and anciently a Roman colony. It is seated on a mountain near the river Tajo, and has an ancient wall built by a Gothic king, flanked with 100 towers. It's situation renders the streets uneven; they are also narrow, but the houses are fine, and there are a great number of superb structures, beside 17 public squares, where the markets are kept. The finest buildings are the royal castle, and the cathedral; which last is the richest and most considerable in Spain. It is seated in the middle of the city, joining to a handsome street, with a fine square before it. Several of the gates are very large, and of bronze. There is also a superb steeple extremely high, whence there is a very extensive prospect. The Sagrariro, or principal chapel, is a real treasury, in which are 15 large cabinets let into the wall, full of prodigious quantities of gold and silver vessels, and other works. There are two mitres of silver gilt, set all over with pearls and precious stones, with three collars of massy gold, enriched in like manner. There are two bracelets and an imperial crown, dedicated to Mary the mother of Jesus, consisting of large diamonds and other jewels. The weight of gold in the crown is 15 pounds. The vessel which contains the consecrated water is of silver gilt, as high as a man, and so heavy, that it requires 30 men to carry it; within it is another of pure gold, enriched with jewels. Here are 38 religious houses, with a great number of churches belonging to 27 parishes, and some hospitals. Without the town are the remains of an amphitheatre, and other antiquities. It has an archbiſhop's ſee, a famous univerſity, and ſeveral manufactories of ſilk and wool. The ſecret of hardening ſword blades, for which Toledo was formerly ſo famous, has been loſt, but is ſaid to be again recovered. When one of theſe underwent the operation of tempering, if it was in the leaſt notched by ſtriking with it ſeveral violent blows on an iron headpiece, it was rejected. Two centuries ago, the inhabitants were about 200,000, but now are ſcarcely 30,000. Toledo is 32 miles SSW. of Madrid. Lat. 39. 50. N. lon. 3 45. W.

Tombuctou, a populous kingdom of Africa, in Negroland, repreſented as lying to the SE. of the deſert of Zahara, and W. of the empire of Caſhnah. The houſes in this country are built like bells, with walls of hurdles plaiſtered with clay, and covered with reeds. They are the ſame in the city of Tombuctou, except a magnificent moſque of ſtone, and the royal palace, both of which were built after the deſign of a Moor, who was baniſhed from Granada in Spain. Here are great numbers of weavers of cotton cloth; and hither the cloth, and other European merchandiſe, are brought by caravans from Tripoli, Barbary, &c. and exchanged for ivory, ſlaves, ſena, gold-duſt, dates, and oſtrich feathers. The women have their faces covered, their religion being Mahometaniſm. They have great plenty of millet, wheat, barley, cattle, milk, and butter. Inſtead of money, they make uſe of ſhells and ſmall bits of gold. The king has a guard of 3000 horſemen, armed with bows and poiſoned arrows, beſides foot ſoldiers, who wear ſhields and ſwords. He generally rides on an elephant. In the proceedings of the African Aſſociation, this place is mentioned as a luxurious, opulent, and flouriſhing city, ſubject to a ſevere police, and, as ſuch, attracting the merchants of the moſt diſtant ſtates of Africa. It is ſeated near the river Niger, in lat. 19. 59. N. lon. 0. 8. E.

TONQUIN, a kingdom of Aſia, bounded on the N. by China, on the E. and SE. by China and the Bay of Tonquin, on the S. by Cochin-China, and on the W. by the kingdom of Laos. It is about 350 miles in length, and 220 in it's greateſt breadth, and is one of the fineſt and moſt conſiderable kingdoms of the Eaſt, as well on account of the number of inhabitants and the trade they carry on, as the excellency of the ſoil, and mild temperature of the climate. The country is thick ſet with villages, and the natives in general are of a middling ſtature, and clean-limbed, with a tawny complexion. Their faces are oval and flattiſh, and their noſes and lips of a neat form. Their hair is black, long, lank, and coarſe; and they let it hang down their ſhoulders. They are at great pains to dye their teeth black. The country is ſo very populous, that many labour under extreme poverty for want of employment. The money and goods brought hither by foreign ſhips, particularly the Engliſh and Dutch, put them in action; but one third at leaſt of the money muſt be advanced before-hand by the merchants; and the ſhips ſtay here till the goods are finiſhed, which is generally five or ſix months. They are ſo addicted to gaming, that, when every thing elſe is loſt, they will ſtake their wives and children. The garments of the Tonquineſe are made either of ſilk or cotton; but the poor people and ſoldiers wear only cotton of a dark tawny colour. Their houſes are ſmall and low, and the walls either of mud, or hurdles daubed over with clay. They have only a ground-floor, with two or three partitions, and each room has a ſquare hole to let in the light. They have ſtools, benches, and chairs; and on the ſide of a table is a little altar, with two incenſe pots thereon, which no houſe is without. The villages conſiſt of 30 or 40 houſes, ſurrounded by trees, and in ſome places are banks to keep the water from overflowing their gardens, where they have oranges, betels, pumkins, melons, and ſalad herbs. In the rainy ſeaſon they paſs from one houſe to another, by wading through the water, or by help of boats. In the only city in the kingdom, called Cachao, are about 20,000 houſes, with mud walls, and covered with thatch; a few built with brick, and roofed with pantiles. In each yard is a ſmall arched building, like an oven, about ſix feet high, made of brick, which ſerves to ſecure their goods, in caſe of fire. The principal ſtreets are very wide, and paved with ſmall ſtones. The king of Tonquin has three palaces in it, ſuch as they are; and near them are ſtables for his horſes and elephants. They buy all their wives, of which the great men have ſeveral; but in hard times the men will ſell both their wives and children, to buy rice to maintain themſelves. When a man dies, he is buried in his own ground, and if he was maſter of a family, they make a great feaſt. The firſt new moon in the year, that happens after the middle of January, is a great feſtival; when they rejoice for 10 or 12 days together, and ſpend their time in all manner of ſports. Their common drink is a kind of tea, like Chineſe bohea; but they make themſelves merry with arrack. At their great entertainments, they give their viſitants arek, folded up in a betel leaf, daubed over with lime made into mortar. They have another great feaſt in May, or June, when their firſt harveſt is got in. Their religion, which is founded on that of China, is Pagan, and yet they own a Supreme Being; their idols have human ſhapes, but in very different forms. They have likewiſe ſome reſembling elephants and horſes, placed in ſmall, low temples built of timber. The Chriſtian religion was eſtabliſhed here in 1626, by the Jeſuit, Baldi-dinoty; and in 1639, there were 80,000 convents, who had built 200 churches at their own charge: it was utterly proſcribed, however, in 1721, after ſeveral dreadful perſecutions, attended with the impriſonment, torture, and death, of the miſſionaries and their catechiſts. The language is ſpoken very much in the throat, and ſome of the words are pronounced through the teeth; it has a great reſemblance to the Chineſe. They have ſchools of learning, and their characters are the ſame, or like thoſe of China; and like them they write with a hair pencil. They have ſeveral mechanic arts, or trades, and export great quantities of their manufactures, at which they are very dexterous and ingenious. Their fruit-trees are ſaid to excel all the reſt of Aſia, in the flavour and beauty of their fruit; and their elephants are reckoned the largeſt and nimbleſt in the world. The commodities are gold, muſk, ſilks, calicoes, drugs of many ſorts, woods for dying, lackered wares, earthen wares, ſalt, aniſeed, and wormſeed. The lackered ware is ſcarcely inferior to that of Japan, which is accounted the beſt in the world. With all their merchandiſe, one would expect the people to be very rich; but they are, in general, very poor, the chief trade being carried on by the Chineſe, Engliſh, and Dutch. The goods imported, beſide ſilver, are ſalt-petre, ſulphur, Engliſh broad-cloth, pepper, ſpices, lead, and guns. Tonquin, about ſeven centuries ago, was ſubject to China, till Din, a famous robber, threw off the yoke of ſervitude, and placed the crown on his own head. This independence has been the ſource of many cruel wars and miſeries, and the families on the throne have been already changed ſix times. The iſſue of the laſt civil war was a treaty, by which it was agreed, that the chouah, or competitor of King Le, and his deſcendants, were to have the abſolute command of the armies, with the greateſt part of the revenues, while the lua, or ſovereign, was to enjoy all the honours and external ſplendor of royalty.

TONSBERG, a ſea port of Aggerhuys, 42 miles S. of Chriſtiania.

TOOBOUAI, one of the Society Iſlands, diſcovered by Captain Cook, about 5 or 6 miles over. Small as it appears, however, there are hills in it of a conſiderable elevation, covered with herbage, except a few rocky cliffs, with patches of trees interſperſed to their ſummits. This iſland is plentifully ſtocked with hogs and fowls, and produces ſeveral kinds of fruits and roots. Lat. 23. 25. S. lon. 149. 23. W.

TORTOLA, an iſland of the Weſt Indies, and the principal of the Virgin Iſlands. It is about 18 miles long from E. to W. and 7 in it's greateſt breadth. It produces excellent cotton, ſugar, and rum, and, within the laſt 17 years, has undergone conſiderable improvements. Their fruits, of which they have no great variety, are but indifferent, apples excepted. The entrance into the harbour is at the E. end of the iſland. Tortola was firſt ſettled by a party of Dutch buccaneers; theſe, in 1666, were driven out by others, who took poſſeſſion in the name of the king of England. Protection being afforded them, Tortola was ſoon after annexed to the government of the Leeward Iſlands. Lat. 18. 30. N. lon. 63. 40. W.

Torton, Suſſex, between Tortington and Arundel.

TORTONA, a town of Milan, capital of the Tortoneſe, 9 miles E. of Alexandria.

TORTOSA, a large town of Catalonia, with a univerſity, ſeated on the Ebro, about 15 miles from it's mouth. The cathedral, the royal college of Dominicans, and the convent of the Carmelites, are the moſt remarkable public buildings. The caſtle is a mile ſquare, but in a ſtate of decay, and only ſerving as a place of reſidence for a governor. In it's neighbourhood are quarries, and mines of ſilver, iron, alabaſter, jaſper of divers colours, and ſtones with veins of gold. They have a great deal of ſilk and oil, and very fine potters' ware, which reſembles porcelain. It is 77 miles SW. of Barcelona.

TORTUGA, an iſland in the W. Indies, about 36 miles in circumference, and uninhabited. The E. end is full of bare, rugged, broken rocks, which ſtretch a little way out to ſea. Near this end is a large ſalt-pond, within 200 paces of the ſea, where the ſalt begins to kern in ſpring. There have been 20 ſail of merchantmen here at a time for ſalt, who come hither from May to Auguſt. At the W. end is a ſmall harbour, with ſome freſh water; this part is full of ſhrubby trees. There are a few goats on it, which live on the coarſe graſs at the E. end; and the turtles, or tortoiſes, come upon the ſandy bays to lay their eggs, whence this iſland has it's name. They are of divers colours, as blackiſh, bark brown, light brown, dark green, light green, yellow, and ſpeckled.

ſpeckled. This iſland was formerly much frequented by the buccaneers. It lies near the coaſt of Terra Firma, 40 miles W. of the Iſland of Margaretta. Lat. 11. 30. N. lon. 64. 50. W.

TORTUGA, an iſland of the Weſt Indies, about two leagues from the NW. end of the Iſland of St. Domingo. It is about 40 miles in circumference, and has a very ſafe harbour, but difficult of acceſs. Lat. 20. 10. N. lon. 72. 48. W.

TOTNESS, a town of Devonſhire, ſeated on the river Dart, 8 miles from the Engliſh Channel, with a manufactory of ſerges. It is 27 miles SSW. of Exeter, and 196 W. by S. of London. Markets on Tueſday and Saturday.

Tottenham High Croſs, a large village of Middleſex, 5 miles N. of London. It is ſo called from a croſs, which was erected here on the place where Queen Eleanor's corpſe was reſted. It was formerly a column of wood, raiſed upon a hillock; but was taken down about 200 years ago, and the preſent ſtructure erected in it's ſtead, by Dean Wood. In this pariſh are three almſhouſes. Of one of them, for eight poor people, it is remarkable, that it was erected by Balthazar Zanches, a Spaniard, who was confectioner to Philip II. of Spain, with whom he came over to England, and was the firſt that exerciſed that art in this country. He became a Proteſtant, and died in 1602. A rivulet, called the Moſel, which riſes on Muſwell-Hill, near Highgate, runs through the principal ſtreet of this village. Tottenham and Park, Wilts, by Savernake-Foreſt. Tottenhoe, Bucks, by Whaddon. Totterdown, Somerſetſ. near Briſtol. Totteridge, Herts, near Barnet and Whetſtone. Tottington, Lancaſ. TOUL, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, lately the ſee of a biſhop. It is ſeated on the river Moſelle, 10 miles W. of Nancy, and 167 E. of Paris.

TOULOMBA, a fortreſs of Hindooſtan, in the province of Moultan, on the S. bank of the Rauvee, 50 miles ENE. of Moultan.

TOULON, a celebrated city and ſea-port of France, being the chief town of the dept. of Var. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of a biſhop, and beſides the cathedral, and other pariſhes, contained 9 convents, a ſeminary, and a college. It is divided into the Old Quarter and the New Quarter. The firſt, which is very ill-built, has nothing remarkable in it but the Rue-aux-Arbres, which is a kind of courſe, or mall, and the townhouſe; the gate of this is ſurmounted by a balcony, which is ſupported by two termini, the maſterpieces of the famous Pujet. The New Quarter, which forms, as it were, a ſecond city, contains, beſide the magnificent works conſtructed in the reign of Lewis XIV. many fine houſes, among which that of the late ſeminary is, beyond compariſon, the grandeſt, and a ſpacious, oblong ſquare, lined with trees, and ſerving as a parade. The harbour, reſpecting theſe two quarters, is diſtinguiſhed likewiſe by the names of the Old Port, or the Merchant Port, and the New Port. The Merchants' Haven, along which extends a noble quay, on which ſtands the townhouſe, is protected by two moles, begun by Henry IV. The New Haven was conſtructed by Lewis XIV. after the deſigns of Vauban, as were the fortifications of the city and harbours. In the front of this haven is the ropehouſe, built wholly of freeſtone, 620 feet in length, with three arched walks, in which as many parties of rope-makers may work at the ſame time; and above is a place for the preparation of hemp. The long ſail-room, the dock-yards, the baſins, cannon foundry, armoury, working houſes for blackſmiths, joiners, carpenters, lockſmiths, carvers, &c. are all very extenſive. The galleys, transferred from Marſeilles ſome years ago, occupy at Toulon a ſecond baſin in the New Port. Many of the galley-ſlaves are artiſans, and ſome are merchants. They no longer ſleep on board the gallies, but have been lately provided with accommodations on ſhore, in a vaſt building, newly erected for that purpoſe. The Old and New

New Harbour lie contiguous, and communicate with one another by a canal; they have alſo an outlet into the extenſive outer road, which is ſurrounded by hills, and formed by nature almoſt circular. The entrance on both ſides is defended by a fort with ſtrong batteries. In 1707, the Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene laid ſiege to this city, but without ſucceſs. In 1721, it ſuffered greatly by the plague. The inhabitants were induced to ſurrender this city in truſt to the Engliſh, in September, 1793; but the conſequences were dreadful.—Their new friends, in about three months, were driven out of the place; and the precipitation with which the evacuation was effected, cauſed a great part of the Touloneſe ſhips and property to fall into the hands of the enraged and implacable republicans. Of 31 ſhips of the line, which the Engliſh found at Toulon, 13 were left behind, 9 were burned at Toulon, and 1 at Leghorn; and 4 Lord Hood had previouſly ſent to Breſt and Rochfort with republican ſeamen, whom he was afraid to truſt. The inhabitants are computed at 80,000. Toulon is ſituated on a bay of the Mediterranean, 27 miles SE. of Aix, and 388 SE. of Paris. Lat. 43. 7. N. lon. 5. 47. E.

TOULOUSE, a city in the dept. of Upper Garonne, lately the capital of Languedoc, the ſeat of a parliament, and the ſee of an archbiſhop. It is the largeſt city in France, next to Paris and Lyons, although it's population bears no proportion to it's extent; containing only 60,000 inhabitants. It was the capital of the Tectoſages, who made ſo many conqueſts in Aſia and Greece. It was next a Roman colony, and was ſucceſſively the capital of the Viſigoths (who deſtroyed the ſuperb amphitheatre, of which there are ſtill ſome remains, the capitol, and other Roman monuments) and that of Aquitaine. The ſtreets are moſtly broad, and the walls and houſes are built of brick. The townhouſe, a modern ſtructure, forms a perfect ſquare, 324 feet long, and 66 high. The principal front occupies an entire ſide of the grand ſquare, lately called the Place Royale. Communicating with the ocean on one ſide, and with the Mediterranean on the other, by the canal of Languedoc, which joins the Garonne a little below the town, Toulouſe might have been a very commercial city; but the taſte of the inhabitants has been principally for the ſciences and belles-lettres. Of courſe, here were two colleges, two public libraries, and three academies. The little commerce of Toulouſe conſiſts in Spaniſh wool and carpets, together with ſome ſlight ſilk and woollen ſtuffs. The bridge over the Garonne is at leaſt equal to thoſe of Tours and Orleans: it forms the communication between the ſuburb of St. Cyprian and the city. The quays extend along the banks of the Garonne; and it has been in contemplation to line them with new and uniform houſes. Toulouſe is 125 miles SE. of Bourdeaux, and 356 S. by W. of Paris. Lat. 43. 36. N. lon. 1. 27. E.

TOURAINE, a ci-devant province of France, N. of Berry and Poitou, and divided into Higher and Lower. The river Loire runs through the middle. It is 58 miles in length and 55 in breadth, and is watered by ſeveral rivers, very commodious for trade, and is, in general, ſo pleaſant and fertile a country, that it is called the Garden of France.

TOUR DE-ROUSSILLON, a town in the dept. of the Eaſtern Pyrenees, ſeated near the river Tet, on a ſpot where once ſtood a city, called Ruſcino. It is two miles E. of Perpignan.

TOUR-LA-VILLE, a town in the dept. of the Channel, near Cherburg, with a manufacture of glaſs.

TOURNAY, a conſiderable town of Flanders, and capital of the Tournayſis, has ſeveral fine manufactories, and is particularly famous for good ſtockings. It was taken by the allies in 1709, and ceded to the houſe of Auſtria, by the treaty of Utrecht; though the Dutch put in a garriſon, as being one of the barrier towns. It is ſeated on the river Scheldt, which divides it into two parts, that are united by a bridge, 14 miles S. by E. of Liſle, and 135 N. by E. of Paris.

TOURNON, a town in the dept. of Ardeche, ſeated near the river Rhone, 24 miles SSW. of Privas.

TOURNUS, a town in the dept. of Saone and Loire, ſeated on the river Saone, 13 miles S. of Chalons, and 202 S. by W. of Paris.

TOURS, a conſiderable city, capital of the dept. of Indre and Loire, ſeated on the Loire, and near the Cher. Over the former is one of the fineſt bridges in Europe, conſiſting of 15 elliptical arches, each 75 feet diameter; three of theſe were carried away by the breaking up of ice in 1789. This bridge is terminated, in a line which croſſes the whole city, by a ſtreet 2400 feet long, with foot pavements on each ſide; and lined with fine buildings recently erected. Under the miniſtry of Cardinal Cardinal Richelieu, 27,000 perſons were employed here in the ſilk manufacture; at preſent, the whole number of inhabitants is about 33,000. The red wines made here are much eſteemed. Tours is 127 miles SW. of Paris.

TOUSERA, a town of Africa, in Biledulgerid, ſeated in a country abounding in dates, and dependant on Tunis. Lat. 32. 30. N. lon. 10. 55. E.

TRANSYLVANIA, a country of Europe, formerly annexed to Hungary; bounded on the N. by Hungary, Poland, and Moldavia; on the E. by Moldavia; on the S. by Walachia and the bannat of Temeſwar; and on the W. by Hungary. It is ſurrounded on all parts by high mountains, which, however, are not barren, and the air is healthier than that of Hungary. The inhabitants have a ſufficiency of corn and wine, and there are rich rich mines of gold, silver, lead, copper, quicksilver, and alum. It has undergone various revolutions, but, since 1722, has been rendered hereditary to the house of Austria. The inhabitants are a mixture of Romanists, Lutherans, Calvinists, Socinians, Armenians, Greeks, and Mahometans; to which may be added, Jews and Cingars, who live in tents, and lead a vagabond life like gipsies. It's form is nearly oval; about 400 miles in circumference. The principality is governed in the name of the prince and nobility, by the diet, which meets at Hermanstadt, by summons from the prince; the government being wholly different from that of Hungary.

TREBISOND, or TARABOSAN, a city of Turkey in Asia, with a Greek archbishop's see and a harbour, seated at the foot of a pretty steep hill. The walls are almost square and high embattled, and though they are not of the first ages, they probably stand on the foundations of the ancient inclosure which got this city the name of Trapezium. They are built with the ruins of ancient structures, on which are inscriptions not legible, because they are too high. The town is not populous; for there are more woods and gardens in it than houses, and these but one story high. The harbour is at the east end of the town, and the mole built by the Genoese is almost destroyed. Under the Greek emperors, it was erected into a principality, or empire. Alexis Comenes took possession of it in 1204. In 1462, it was taken by Mahomet II. who carried David Comenes, and all his family, prisoners to Constantinople, where they were mostly put to death. It stands on the Black Sea, 220 miles ENE. of Erivan. Lat. 41. 0. N. lon. 40. 25. E.

TREVES, or TRIERS, a city of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, capital of an archbishoprlc of the same name, whose archbishop is an elector, assumes the title of archchancellor of the empire for the Gauls, and gives the first vote at the election of the emperor. The chapter consists of 40 canons, including 16 capitulars and 24 domicelli. It has 3 colleges, a cathedral, 3 collegiate and 5 parish churches, as also 13 monasteries and nunneries, with a house of the Teutonic Order, and another belonging to that of St. John. Treves has greatly suffered in the wars, and is now neither large nor populous. It is seated on the river Moselle, over which is a stone bridge, in a fertile country, abounding in wine. It is reckoned one of the most ancient cities in Germany, having been formerly a place of note of the Treviri, and the capital of all Gaul, in the time of Constantine the Great. It is 20 miles NE. of Luxemburg.

TREVES, or TRIERS, an electorate of Germany, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, bounded on the N. by the electorate of Cologne; on the E. by the estates of the Elector Palatine and of Nassau; on the S. by France; and on the W. by Luxemburg and Lorrain. It is about 80 miles in length, but the breadth is uncertain. It is full of mountains and forests; but, near the rivers Rhine and Moselle, the soil is fruitful, and the country populous.

TRIPOLI, a city of Africa, in Barbary, capital of a territory of the ſame name. It is pretty large, and has a harbour, the moſt commodious of any along this whole coaſt, except Alexandria. The houſes are low and mean, and the ſtreets narrow, dirty, and irregular. It was formerly very flouriſhing, and has now ſome trade in ſtuffs, ſaffron, corn, oil, wood, dates, oſtrich feathers, ſkins, and particularly Chriſtian ſlaves, whom they take at ſea. At the W. end is a ſtrong caſtle, fortified after the modern manner, and furniſhed with ſome large cannon. In 1685, Tripoli was bombarded by a French ſquadron, under Marſhal d'Etrees, and the government compelled to ſue for peace. It is ſeated on the Mediterranean, in a ſandy ſoil, 275 miles SE. by S. of Tunis. Lat. 32. 34. N. lon. 13. 12. E.

TRIPOLI, a country of Barbary, on the Mediterranean, E. of Tunis and Biledulgerid; and W. of Barca. It is about 600 miles from E. to W. but the breadth is various. Some parts of it are pretty fruitful; but that toward Egypt is a ſandy deſert. It had the title of a kingdom, but is now a ſort of regency, at the head of which is a dey, or bey, who is not merely a titular vaſſal to the Porte, but really under ſubjection and tribute. They have about 7 or 8 corſairs, which, though they are moſtly ſmall gallies, poorly manned and equipped, take a great number of ſhips. Here are a number of villages, very poor, and thinly inhabited; but few cities or towns of conſequence.

TRIPOLI, a town of Syria, on the Mediterranean. The inhabitants are near 60,000, conſiſting of Turks, ſchiſmatic Greeks, Latins, and Jews. All the houſes have fountains belonging to them, with orchards, where the nopal grows ſpontaneouſly. The commerce is wholly in the hands of the French, who have a conſul here, and three commercial houſes within the town. They export coarſe ſilks, ſpunges fiſhed in the road, exchanging them for cloth, cochineal, ſugar, or Weſt-India coffee. The baſhaw farms the government from the Porte, on a leaſe of one year only, at 750 purſes, or about 39,000l. per annum. In the territory about it, are a great number of mulberry-trees, and other fruits. It is 130 miles S. of Scandaroon, and 72 NW. of Damaſcus.

TROY, or ILIUM, an ancient and famous city of Asia, near the Archipelago, at the foot of Mount Ida, and opposite the Isle of Tenedos. It is well known, at least in poetic fiction, for it's ten years siege.

TROYES, a city in the dept. of Aube, before the revolution, the capital of Champagne, and the see of a bishop. As the stone in it's neighbourhood is too tender to be employed in building, almost all the houses are of wood; which, nevertheless, produce an effect pleasing to the eye. Among the objects of curiosity are St. Stephen's, the principal church, the public library of the late Cordeliers; and the castle in which the ancient counts of Champagne resided. It's commerce, once very flourishing, now consists only in some linens, dimities, fustians, flax, hemp, waxchandlery, candles, and wine. It is seated on the river Seine, 30 miles ENE. of Sens, and 90 ESE. of Paris.

TSCHUTSKI, a country situated on the NE. extremity of Asia, near the NW. coast of America, being bounded by the Anadir on the S. The attention of the natives, like that of the wandering Koriacs, is confined chiefly to their deer, with which their country abounds. They are a hardy race of people, and are formidable neighbours to the Koriacs of both nations, who often experience their depredations. The Russians have long endeavoured to bring them under their dominion; and though they have lost a great number of men, in their different expeditions to accomplish this purpose, they have never yet been able to effect it.

TVER, a government of Ruſſia, once an independent ſovereignty, called the Duchy of Tver, and afterwards compriſed in the government of Novogorod. The number of inhabitants in this diſtrict has of late increaſed very much. The country produces plenty of grain, hemp, flax, and vegetables. It's foreſts yield oak, birch, alder, &c. and here are vaſt numbers of wild and tame quadrupeds, with a variety of birds, eagles, falcons, cranes, &c. Beſide the fiſhes common to moſt lakes and rivers, there is a fiſh which is peculiar to the waters of theſe northern regions. It is called the ſterlet, the acipenſer ruthenus, of Linnæus, and is a ſpecies of ſturgeon, highly eſteemed for the flavour and delicacy of it's fleſh, and for it's roe, of which the fineſt caviare is made.

TVER, a conſiderable commercial town of Ruſſia, capital of the government of the ſame name, and ſeated at the confluence of the Tverza and the Volga, along which are conveyed all the goods and merchandiſe ſent by water from Siberia, and the ſouthern provinces toward Peterſburgh. It is divided into the old and new town: the former, ſituated on the oppoſite ſide of the Volga, conſiſts almoſt entirely of wooden cottages: the latter having been deſtroyed by a dreadful conflagration in 1763, has been much improved in being rebuilt. The empreſs ordered a regular and beautiful plan of a new town to be made; enjoining all the houſes to be conſtructed according to this model. At her own expence, ſhe raiſed the governor's houſe, the epiſcopal palace, the courts of juſtice, the exchange, the priſon, and ſome other public edifices; and to every perſon who engaged to build a houſe of brick, ſhe offered a loan of 300l. for a year, without intereſt. The money which ſhe advanced on this occaſion, amounted to 60,000l. and ſhe has ſince remitted one-third of this ſum. The ſtreets, which are broad and long, iſſue in ſtraight lines from an octagon in the centre. The houſes are of brick ſtuccoed white, and make a magnificent appearance. The plan, when completed, was to compriſe two octagons, with ſeveral ſtreets leading from them, and interſecting each other at right angles. Here is an eccleſiaſtical ſeminary, which admits 600 ſtudents. In 1776, the empreſs founded a ſchool for the inſtruction of 200 burghers' children; and, in 1779, an academy was alſo opened in this town, for the education of the young nobility of the province, at the public charge. It admits 120 ſtudents, who are inſtructed in foreign languages, arithmetic, geography, fortifications, tactics, natural philoſophy, muſic, riding, dancing, &c. Tver is 99 miles NNW. of Moſcow.

* TUNBRIDGE, a town of Kent, ſeated on the river Tun, one of the five little ſtreams of the Medway, over each of which is a ſtone bridge. Here is a famous freeſchool, founded by a native of the town, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Tunbridge is 14 miles SSW. of Maidſtone, and 30 SE. by S. of London. Market on Friday.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, a town of Kent, 5 miles S. of Tunbridge, but in the ſame pariſh. It is much reſorted to in ſummer, on account of it's chalybeate waters. It is ſeated at the bottom of three hills, called Mount Sinai, Mount Ephraim, and Mount Pleaſant, on which are ſcattered houſes, orchards, and gardens; and as the country here is naturally wild, the effect of the whole is romantic and picturesque. Here are the buildings requiſite for the accommodation of the viſitants, with a plentiful market, and ſhops noted for their elegant turnery ware. About a mile and a half from the Wells, are ſtupendous rocks, in ſome parts 75 feet high, the mean height being 40; they have the appearance of the hulks of large men of war, ranged cloſe together. Surpriſing cliffs and chaſms are interſperſed, with narrow, gloomy paſſages that lead through the midſt of them. The water is a great deobſtruent and bracer, operates by urine and perſpiration, and is efficacious in cold, chronical diſtempers, weak nerves, and bad digeſtion.

TUNIS, a city of Barbary, called by Diodorus Siculus, Leucon Tuneta, and capital of a kingdom of the ſame name. It is ſeated on the point of the Gulf of Goletta, about 10 miles from the place where the city of Carthage ſtood. It is in the form of an oblong ſquare, and is 3 miles in circumference, including the ſuburbs. Here are five gates, and the houſes are about 12,000. The bey's palace, where the divan aſſemble, the great moſque, with a few others, are the only buildings of note. Here are ſeveral colleges and ſchools, with doctors of the Mahometan law, partly maintained by the public. The janizaries are quartered in barracks. The harbour, which has a very narrow entrance, is defended by a caſtle and the fortreſs of Goletta. In the city they have no water, but what is obtained at a mile's diſtance. Here are Engliſh, French, Dutch, and other European conſuls. Tunis has long been famous for the manufacture of linen and woollen goods, and the inhabitants are more intent on trade than plundering and cruiſing. It is ſeated 10 miles from the ſea, in lat. 36. 42. N. lon. 10. 16. E.

TUNIS, a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the N. and E. by the Mediterranean, and the kingdom of Tripoli; on the S. by ſeveral tribes of the Arabs; and on the W. by the kingdom of Algiers, and the country of Eſab; extending 200 miles from N. to S. and 120 from E. to W. This country was formerly a monarchy; but a difference ariſing between the father and ſon, one of which was for the protection of the Chriſtians, and the other for that of the Turks, in 1574, the inhabitants ſhook off the yoke of both. From this time it became a republic, under the protection of the Turks; and a baſhaw ſtill reſides here, although, in power and influence, he is a mere cypher. The beyſhip is hereditary, and independent both of the porte and the divan, but is ſeldom filled up, when vacant, without violence and bloodſhed. The air, in general, is healthy, but the ſoil in the eaſtern parts is but indifferent, for want of water. Toward the middle, the mountains and vallies abound in fruits; but the northern part is the moſt fertile, pleaſant, and populous, and hath the greateſt number of cities, villages, and dowars. The environs of Tunis are very dry, upon which account corn is generally dear. However, there are plenty of citrons, lemons, oranges, dates, grapes, and other fruits. There are alſo olive-trees, roſes, and odoriferous plants. In the woods and mountains are lions, wild beeves, oſtriches, monkeys, cameleons, roe-bucks, hares, pheaſants, partridges, and other ſorts of birds and beaſts. The moſt remarkable rivers are the Guadilcarbar, Magrida, Magerada, and Cabs. In the city of Tunis alone, are above 3000 clothiers and weavers. They alſo have a trade in horſes, olives, oil, ſoap, and oſtriches eggs and feathers.

Tunis

TURIN, anciently called TAURINI, a city of Italy, the capital of Piedmont, and reſidence of it's ſovereign, the king of Sardinia, with an univerſity. It is charmingly ſeated on a vaſt plain, at the confluence of the rivers Doria and Po. It is one of the handſomeſt places in Italy, but the air is thick and moiſt in autumn and winter, on account of the thick fogs. The approaches to it are magnificent, and the environs beautiful. Moſt of the ſtreets are well-built, uniform, clean, ſtraight, and terminating on ſome agreeable object. No inhabitant can rebuild or repair his houſe but on an uniform plan, laid down by government, for the improvement of the city. The Strada-di-Po, the fineſt and largeſt in the city, leads to the royal palace, and adorned with piazzas that are at once beautiful and convenient. The royal palace conſiſts of two magnificent ſtructures, joined together by a gallery, in which are ſeveral pictures, ſtatues, and antiquities of great value. The furniture is rich and elegant, and the floors are curiouſly inlaid with various kinds of wood, and kept always in a ſtate of ſhining brightneſs. The fortifications of Turin are regular, and kept in excellent repair. The citadel is a regular pentagon, conſiſting of 5 ſtrong baſtions, and is reputed one of the ſtrongeſt in Europe. There are fine walks on the ramparts, which require two hours to paſs round them. There are alſo very fine gardens on the ſide of the river Po; and the houſe called La Charité is remarkable, as there is room for 3000 poor people. The college of the academy is very large and well-built, and has a great number of ancient inſcriptions. The chief trade of the city and country is in thrown ſilk, which is ſent to England and Lyons: ſome of it they manufacture into excellent ſtockings, and ſilk for furniture. Turin is the ſee of an archbiſhop, and contains 110 churches or chapels, ſeveral hoſpitals, and about 65,000 inhabitants. The French beſieged this city, in 1706, for upwards of 3 months, but were totally defeated, and compelled to raiſe the ſiege by Prince Eugene and the Duke of Savoy. Lat. 45. 5. N. lon. 7. 45. E.

TURKESTAN, or TURAN, a country of Aſia, bounded on the N. by deſerts, on the E. by Kalmuck Tartary, on the S. by Bukharia, and on the W. by Charaſm, near 300 miles in length, and not much leſs in breadth. It is divided between two Tartar khans, or chiefs.

TURKEY, a very large empire, extended over part of Europe, Aſia, and Africa. Turkey in Europe contains Beſſarabia, Moldavia, Walachia, Bulgaria, Servia, Boſnia, Romania, Macedonia, Janna, Livadia, Epirus, Albania, part of Dalmatia, the Morea, and the iſlands of the Archipelago. Turkey in Aſia contains the countries of Irac-Arabia, Diarbeck, Curdiſtan, Turcomania, part of Circaſſia, Natolia, and Syria, with Paleſtine. In Africa, the Turks have ſtill a precarious ſovereignty over Egypt and part of Nubia. Conſtantinople is the capital of all Turkey. In general the Turks are moderate in eating, and lovers of reſt and idleneſs; and by their haughtineſs, deſpiſe manufactures, improvements, and traffic. Polygamy is allowed among them; but their wives are no more than four in number. They are charitable towards ſtrangers, let their religion be what it will, and no nation ſuffers adverſity with greater patience than they. The grand ſignior is abſolute maſter of the goods and lives of his ſubjects: he aſſumes the titles of God upon Earth, the Shadow of God, the Brother of the Sun and Moon, the Diſpoſer of Crowns, &c. The grand vizier is the chief next the emperor, with a ſalary of about 600,000 dollars a year, excluſive of perquiſites. Here, however, it may be obſerved, that though the grand ſignior has ſuch prodigious power, he ſeldom extends it to thoſe that live a private life, for theſe may remain as quiet as in any other part of the world. The Turks were originally a Scythian, or Tartar nation, dwelling betwixt the Black and Caſpian Seas, and became firſt known in the 7th century, when Herodius, emperor of the eaſt, took them into his ſervice; after which the Arabian and Saracen caliphs had particular bodies of them for guards, and filled their armies with them. Having gradually got the power into their own hands, ſeveral governors of this nation revolted from the caliphs. In 1214, Schah Soliman, prince of Nera, a town on the Caſpian Sea, paſſed Mount Caucaſus with 50,000 men, making himſelf maſter of ſeveral countries and places in Leſſer Aſia. His grandſon, Othman, called his people after his own name. In 1453, Mahomet II. took Conſtantinople, and reduced the whole Grecian empire under his dominion. The number of the janizaries, who are all infantry, and the flower of the Turkiſh forces, is generally 40,000. The navy is laid up at Conſtantinople, near the arſenal, and conſiſts of about 40 men of war, excluſive of auxiliary and hired ſhips, and galleys of 2, 3, and 4 benches of oars. The Engliſh trade here has for ſome years been greatly on the decline. In the iſlands, the merchants are generally French. The Turks believe in one God, and that his great prophet is Mahomet.

VAISON, a town of France, in the Venaiſſin, ſeated on a mountain, near the ruins of ancient Vaiſon, which was one of the largeſt cities of the Gauls. It is 15 miles NE. of Orange.

VAL. See LAVELD.

VALDAIA, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Novogorod. It contains ſeveral new brick buildings; and even the wooden houſes are more decorated than the generality of Ruſſian cottages. It lies upon an agreeable ſlope, on a lake of the ſame name, and is 72 miles SE. of Novogorod.

VALDAIA HILLS, hills of Ruſſia, in Novogorod, which, though of no conſiderable elevation, are the higheſt in this part of the country.

VALDAIA, LAKE OF, in Novogorod, is about 20 miles in circumference, and is the largeſt in the country round the town of Valdaia. In the middle of it is an iſland containing a convent.

VAL-DI-DEMONA, a province in Sicily, lying to the NE. part of the iſland, about 100 miles long, and 20 broad. It means the Valley of Demons, and is ſo called, becauſe Mount Etna, which is placed therein, throws out flames continually, which occaſioned ſuperſtitious people to believe that it was a chimney of hell. Meſſina is the capital.

VAL-DI-MAZARA, the weſterly diviſion of Sicily, ſo called from a town of the ſame name. This province contains Palermo, the capital of the whole iſland.

VAL-DI-NOTO, a diviſion of Sicily, ſo named from the capital town. It is ſituated to the SE. of the iſland, between Val-di-Mazara, Val-di-Demona, and the ſea.

VALCKOWAR, a town of Sclavonia.

VALE OF WHITE HORSE, a fertile tract in Berkſhire, extending from Farringdon to Abingdon, ſo called from the repreſentation of a horſe, cut on the ſide of a hill, and occupying nearly an acre. The chalky ſoil which is hereby denuded, is a bright white, and is ſo ſtrong a contraſt to the ſurrounding green turf of the hill, that the figure may be ſometimes ſeen to the diſtance of 12 miles. About midſummer every year, the people of the next pariſh go and weed it, in order to keep the horſe in ſhape and colour.

VALENCE, a city in the dept. of Drome, ſeated on the Rhone. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of a biſhop, and capital of a diſtrict, called the Valentinois. Valence is 30 miles N. by E. of Viviers, and 335 S. by E. of Paris.

VALENCE, a town in the dept. of Lot and Garonne, ſituated on the Garonne, 12 miles SSE. of Agen.

VALENCEY, a ſmall town in the dept. of Indre, 21 miles N. of Chateauroux.

VALENCIA, a province of Spain, formerly merly a kingdom; bounded on the E. and SE. by the Mediterranean, on the N. by Catalonia and Arragon, and on the W. and SW. by New Caſtile and Murcia. It is about 220 miles in length, and 54 in it's mean breadth, and is one of the moſt populous and pleaſant countries in Spain. It is watered by 35 rivers, all of which run towards the E. In the mountains are mines of gold, ſilver, iron, alum, and ſinopica, or blood ſtone: there are alſo quarries of marble, jaſper, &c.

VALENCIA, a city of Spain, capital of the province of the ſame name. It is a large place, containing about 12,000 houſes within the walls, beſides thoſe in the ſuburbs, and in the pleaſure gardens round about it, which amount to much the ſame number. It has an univerſity, founded in 1492, and conſiſting of ſeveral colleges. It was taken from the Moors in the 13th century, who were all expelled. The ſtreets are narrow and crooked, and being unpaved, are impaſſable after rain. The cathedral, which has a ſteeple 130 feet high, the palace of the viceroy, that of Ciuta, the monaſtery of St. Jerome, the exchange, and the arſenal are all fine ſtructures. It has ſeveral manufactories of cloth and ſilk, and there are ſeveral remains of antiquity. It is pleaſantly ſeated on the river Guadalaviar, 20 miles from the ſea, and 170 ESE. of Madrid. Lat. 39. 23. N. lon. 0. 10. W.

VALENCIA, NEW, a town of Caraccas, Terra Firma, 6 miles W. of the town of Caraccas.

VALENCIENNES, a city of France, in the dept. of the North, founded by the emperor Valentinian. It contains about 20,000 ſouls. The Scheld, on which are ſome fine ſluices, divides it into two parts. It is a very important place: the citadel, and the other fortifications, are the work of Vauban. Theſe were conſtructed by order of Lewis XIV. who took the town by ſtorm, in 1677, after 17 days open trenches; and it was confirmed to him by the treaty of Nimeguen, in 1678. In 1793, it ſurrendered to the allied army, commanded by the Duke of York, after a ſevere ſiege. The grand ſquare is handſome; but the ſtreets are in general narrow, dark, and crooked. Beſide lace, this place is noted for manufactures of woollen ſtuffs, fine linens, and cambrics. It is 17 miles NE. of Cambray, and 120 NE. by N. of Paris.

VALENTIA, an iſland which forms a fine harbour on the SW. coaſt of Kerry, in Munſter. It is about 5 miles long, half a mile broad, and of a ſufficient depth for veſſels to ſail through at any time of the tide.

VALENTINE, a town in the dept. of Upper Garonne. It is the uſual road into Spain, and is 2 miles SW. of St. Gaudens.

VALENZA, a town of Milan.

VALETTA, a city of Malta, and the capital of that iſland, built in 1566, by the grand maſter, Frederick John de Valetta. It has the happieſt ſituation imaginable, and is wonderfully ſtrong, both by nature and art. It's walls are of large ſquare ſtones, dug out of the rock, and planted with a great number of batteries. It is ſeated upon a peninſula, between two of the fineſt ports in the world, which are defended by almoſt impregnable fortifications. That on the SE. ſide of the city is the largeſt; it runs about 2 miles into the heart of the iſland, and is ſo very deep, and ſurrounded by ſuch high grounds and fortifications, that the largeſt ſhips of war may ride here in the moſt ſtormy weather, almoſt without a cable. This beautiful baſin is divided into five diſtinct harbours, all equally ſafe, each capable of containing a vaſt number of ſhipping. The mouth of the harbour is ſcarcely a quarter of a mile broad, and is commanded, on each ſide, by batteries that would tear the ſtrongeſt ſhip to pieces before ſhe could enter. Beſide this, it is fronted by a quadruple battery, one above the other, the largeſt of which is level with the water edge. The harbour on the N. ſide, though only uſed for fiſhing, and as a place of quarantine, is likewiſe well defended: and in an iſland in the centre of it is a caſtle and a lazaret. The fortifications of Malta are indeed a very ſtupendous work. All the boaſted catacombs of Rome and Naples are trifles, compared to the immenſe excavations that have been made in this little iſland. The ditches, of a vaſt ſize, are all cut out of the ſolid rock, and extend many miles. The Turks beſieged this city in 1656, but after many dreadful aſſaults, were compelled to raiſe the ſiege, with the loſs of 30,000 men. The inhabitants of Valetta are about 2000.

VALETTE, a town in the dept. of Charente, 10 miles S. of Angouleme.

VALLADOLID, a city of Leon, capital of a principality of the ſame name, with an univerſity. It is embelliſhed with handſome buildings, large public ſquares, and fountains, and contains 11,000 houſes, with fine long and broad ſtreets. The market-place, called E. Campo, is 700 paces in circumference, ſurrounded by a great number of convents. There is another other ſquare in the middle of the city, ſurrounded by handſome brick houſes, having under them piazzas, within which are ſhops. All the houſes are the ſame height, being four ſtories; and there are balconies at every window of iron gilt. The town-houſe takes up the entire ſide of a ſquare. The houſe of the inquiſition is an odd ſort of a ſtructure, for there are no windows, but a few holes to let in the light. An academy of the belles lettres was eſtabliſhed here in 1752. It is ſeated near the Douero, 52 miles SW. of Burgos, and 95 N. by W. of Madrid.

VALLAIS, a county of Swiſſerland, called in the middle ages Valeſia, extending from E. to W. about 100 miles, and from N. to S. about 22. It is divided into Upper and Lower Vallais, and is bounded on the N. by the Canton of Bern, and the Lake of Geneva; on the E. by Valmaggia, and Locarno; on the S. by Milan, Piedmont, and Savoy; and on the W. by France and Piedmont. The Upper Vallais is ſovereign of the Lower Vallais, and contains ſeven independent dixains, or commonwealths; namely, Sion, Goms, Brieg, Viſp, Leuk, Raren, and Siders. Of theſe, Sion is ariſtocratical, and the others democratical. They are called dixains, becauſe the Upper Vallais being divided into ſeven, and the Lower into three diſtricts, each diviſion is a dixain, or tenth of the whole. The Lower Vallais is divided into bailiwicks. The Vallais contains about 100,000 inhabitants, who profeſs the Romiſh religion. The biſhop of Sion was formerly abſolute ſovereign over the greateſt part of the Vallais; but his authority is now limited. He has the ſole power of pardoning criminals, and ſigns all the warrants for executions. The money is coined in his name, and with the arms of the republic. In his acts, he ſigns himſelf Biſhop of Sion, prince of the German empire, and count and præfect of the Vallais; and the ſeven dixains form, conjointly with the biſhop, the republic of the Vallais, all the affairs of which are tranſacted in a diet, which conſiſts of nine voices, and meets twice every year in the Majoria houſe, at Sion. At this diet the biſhop preſides. The republic is an ally of the thirteen cantons; having formed a perpetual alliance with Bern in 1475, and with the whole Helvetic body in 1529. The inhabitants of the Upper Vallais are very much ſubject to goiters, or wens, that grow from the throat, and often increaſe to an enormous ſize. Idiocy alſo remarkably abounds among them. A country entirely incloſed within high Alps, and conſiſting of plains, elevated valleys, and lofty mountains, muſt neceſſarily exhibit a great variety of ſituations, climates, and productions. Accordingly, the Vallais preſents to the curious traveller, a quick ſucceſſion of proſpects, as beautiful as they are diverſified: vineyards, rich paſture grounds, covered with cattle, corn, flax, fruit-trees, and foreſts, occaſionally bordered by naked rocks, the ſummits of which are covered by everlaſting ſnow. The ſtriking contraſt between the paſtoral and the ſublime, the cultivated and the wild, naturally affects the mind of an obſerver with the moſt pleaſing emotions. The productions of the Vallais vary alſo, according to the great diverſity of climates, by which this country is peculiarly diſtinguiſhed. It has more than ſufficient wine and corn for interior conſumption; and a conſiderable quantity of both are yearly exported; the ſoil in the midland and lower diſtricts being exceedingly rich and fertile. In the plain, where the heat is collected, and confined between the mountains, the harveſt is generally finiſhed in July; whereas, in the more elevated parts, barley is the only grain that can be cultivated with ſucceſs; and the crop is ſeldom cut before November. About Sion, the fig, the melon, and all the other fruits of Italy, come to perfection. "In conſequence of this ſingular variety of climates," ſays Mr. Coxe, "I taſted, in the ſame day, ſtrawberries, cherries, plums, pears, and grapes, each of them the natural growth of the country." There are no manufactures of any conſequence in the Vallais. The people are accounted both ignorant and indolent; ſo that they may be conſidered, in regard to knowledge and improvements, as much behind the Swiſs, who are certainly an enlightened nation. The peaſants, having few wants, ſeldom endeavour to meliorate their lands, where the ſoil is bad; nor to draw the moſt advantage from thoſe that are fertile.

Near the sea-coast are high mountains, the tops of which are barren; but the valley is fertile, producing plenty of corn, rich pastures, sugar, tobacco, and fruits. There are also plantations of cocoa-nuts, and gold is found in the sands of the rivers. They often have two crops of corn in a year. Maracaibo is the capital.

VENEZUELA, a gulf of S. America, in Terra Firma, communicating with the Lake Maracaibo, by a narrow strait.

VENICE, a city of Italy, one of the most celebrated in the world, and capital of a republic of the same name, in the Dogado, with a university. It stands on 72 little islands, in the Gulf of Venice. The approach to the city is marked by rows of stakes on each side, which direct vessels of a certain burden to avoid the shallows. The lake on which Venice stands, about 5 miles from the main land, is a kind of small inner gulf, separated from the large one by some islands, at a few miles distance. These islands, in a great measure, break the force of the Adriatic storms, before they reach the Lanzuna, or Lake; yet, in very high winds, the navigation of the lake is dangerous to gondolas, and sometimes the gondoleers (as their watermen are called) do not trust themselves even in the canals within the city. This is not so great an inconvenience to the inhabitants as might be imagined; for most of the houses have a door opening upon a canal, and another communicating with the street; by means of which, and of the bridges, a person may go to almost any part of the city by land, as well as by water. The number of the inhabitants is computed to be about 150,000. The houses are built on piles. Venice contains 70 parish churches, besides others; 54 convents of monks; 26 nunneries; 17 rich hospitals; 18 oratories; 40 religious fraternities, with their chapels; 53 squares &c. The streets, in general, are narrow; and so are the canals, except the Grand Canal, which is very broad, and has a serpentine course through the middle of the city. It is said, that there are 500 bridges in Venice; but what

paſs for ſuch are only ſingle paltry arches thrown over the canals. The Rialto conſiſts of a ſingle arch, but a very noble one, and of marble. It is built acroſs the Grand Canal, near the middle, where it is narroweſt, reſting on 12,000 elm piles. This celebrated arch is 90 feet wide on the level of the canal, and 24 feet high. The beauty is impaired by two rows of booths, or ſhops, which divide it's upper ſurface into three narrow ſtreets. The view from the Rialto is equally lively and magnificent; the Grand Canal covered by boats and gondolas, and flanked on each ſide by magnificent palaces, churches, and ſpires. But this fine proſpect is almoſt the only one in Venice; for, except the Grand Canal, and the Canal Regio, all the others are narrow. Some of them have no quays, and the water literally waſhes the houſes. In rowing along theſe wretched canals, there is ſcarcely one agreeable object to cheer the ſight, and the ſtench, which, at certain ſeaſons, exhales from the water, is quite offenſive. The only place where a perſon can walk with eaſe and ſafety is in the Piazzi-di-St.-Marco; a kind of irregular quadrangle, formed by a number of buildings, all ſingular in their kind; namely, the Ducal Palace; the churches of St. Mark and St. Geminiano; the Old and New Procuraties, a fine range of buildings, in which are the Muſeum, the Public Library, and nine large apartments belonging to the procurators of St. Mark. All theſe buildings are of marble. The patriarchal church of St. Mark, though one of the richeſt and moſt expenſive in the world, does not ſtrike the eye very much at firſt. The architecture is of a mixed kind, moſtly Gothic; yet many of the pillars are of the Grecian orders. The outſide is incruſted with marble: the inſide, ceiling, and floor, are all of the fineſt marble, as are the numerous pillars; and the whole is crowned by five domes; but all this labour and expence have been directed by a very moderate ſhare of taſte. The front, which looks to the palace, has five braſs gates, with hiſtorical bas-relievos; over the principal gate are placed the four famous bronze horſes, ſaid to be the workmanſhip of Lycippus; they were given to the emperor Nero by Tiridates, king of Armenia: the fiery ſpirit of their countenances, and their animated attitudes, are perfectly agreeable to their original deſtination of being harneſſed to the chariot of the ſun. Nero placed them on the triumphal arch conſecrated to him: they were removed to Conſtantinople, placed in the Hyppodrome by Conſtantine, and remained there till the taking of Conſtantinople by the French and Venetians, in the beginning of the 13th century, when they were conveyed to Venice. The treaſury of St. Mark is very rich in jewels and relics. The ducal palace is an immenſe building, partly Gothic and partly modern, and moſtly of marble. Beſides the apartments of the doge, there are halls and chambers for the ſenate, and all the different councils and tribunals. The principal entrance is by a ſpacious ſtair, called the Giant's Stair, on account of two coloſſal ſtatues, in white marble, of Mars and Neptune, placed at the top. Under the portico are the gaping mouths of lions, to receive anonymous letters, informations of treaſonable practices, and accuſations of magiſtrates for abuſes in offices. From the palace is a covered bridge of communication to a ſtate priſon, on the other ſide of the canal: priſoners paſs to and from the courts over this bridge, which is named Ponte dei Soſpiri, the Bridge of Sighs. The apartments of the ducal palace, as well as the churches and convents, are ornamented by Titian, Paul Veroneſe, Tintoret, Palma, the Baſſans, &c. with paintings which far ſurpaſſes thoſe of Rome itſelf. Within the palace is a little arſenal, which communicates with the hall of the great council. Here a great number of muſkets are kept, ready charged, with which the nobles may arm themſelves on any ſudden inſurrection. The lower gallery, or piazza, under the palace, is called the Broglio. In this the noble Venetians walk and converſe: it is only here, and at council, that they have opportunities of meeting together; for they ſeldom viſit openly, or in a family way, at each other's houſes; and ſecret meetings would give umbrage to the ſtate inquiſitors; they chuſe, therefore to tranſact their buſineſs on this public walk. People of inferior rank ſeldom remain on the Broglio, for any length of time, when the nobility are there. There is an opening from St. Mark's Place to the ſea, on which ſtand two lofty pillars of granite. Criminals, condemned to ſuffer death privately, are executed between theſe two pillars. The arſenal of Venice is a fortification of between two and three miles in compaſs: it is at once a dock-yard, and a repoſitory for naval and military ſtores. Here the Venetians build their ſhips, caſt their cannons, make their cables, ſails, anchors, &c. The Venetians have a flouriſhing trade in ſilk manufactures, bone lace, all ſorts of glaſſes and mirrors, which make their principal employments.

ployments. The ſons are generally of the ſame buſineſs as the father. The handſome ſtructure, called Il Fontica-di-Tedeſchi, containing 500 rooms, is that where the German merchants lay their commodities. There are two academies of painting, to which belong very ſkilful maſters. Venice is 70 miles E. by N. of Mantua, and 140 E. of Milan. Lat. 45. 26. N. lon. 12. 10. E.

VENICE, a republic of Italy, which comprehends the following provinces; the Dogado, Paduano, Vicentino, Veroneſe, Breſciano, Bergamo, Cremaſco, Poleſino, di-Rovigo, Treviſana, Feltrino, Belluneſe, Cadorino, and great part of Friuli and Iſtria. To theſe may be added a part of Dalmatia, the iſlands of Corfa, Zante, Cephalonia, Paxu, Antipaxu, and ſome others. In the 4th century, when Attila, king of Huns, called the Scourge of God, ravaged the N. part of Italy, many of the inhabitants abandoned their country, and retired into the iſlands of the Adriatic Sea. As theſe iſlands are near each other, they found means to join them together, by driving piles on the ſide of the canals, and on which they built houſes, and thus the ſuperb city of Venice had it's beginning. The government of the republic of Venice is ariſtocratic, for none can have any ſhare in it but the nobles. The doge is elected by a plurality of voices, and keeps his dignity for life, and they make uſe of gold and ſilver balls, which are put in a veſſel, and ſerve for ballotting. Thoſe who draw nine golden balls firſt, elect 40 counſellors, who draw 12 others. Theſe elect 25 other counſellors, who draw 9 golden balls. Theſe 9 elect 40 counſellors, who draw 11. Thoſe that have the 11, chooſe 41 counſellors, who proceed to the election, till 25 votes, or more, fall upon the ſame perſon, who is then declared doge. After this election, they place the ducal cap upon his head, upon which he takes poſſeſſion of the doge's palace. He never uncovers his head to any perſon, becauſe he does not wear the cap in his own name, but in that of the republic. When there are any pompous formalities, a nobleman carries the ſword, which is an emblem of the ſupreme authority; but it is not before the doge, but before the ſenate, to ſhew that the power is lodged in them. The office of the doge is to marry the Adriatic Sea, in the name of the republic, which he does, by dropping a gold ring into it annually; to preſide in all aſſemblies of the ſtate; to have an eye over all the members of the magiſtracy; and to nominate to all the benefices annexed to the church of St. Mark. On the other hand, he is to determine nothing without the conſent of the council; he is not to open any letter addreſſed to the republic, or that comes from the republic; he is not to receive any preſent; he is not to leave the city without permiſſion of the ſtates; he is not to chooſe an aſſiſtant; and he is never to reſign his dignity. In ſhort, he is a priſoner in the city, and out of it he is no more than a private perſon. There are five councils, the firſt of which is compoſed of the doge, and ſix counſellors called the Signiora. The ſecond is the Conſiglio Grand, or Grand Council, in which all the nobles, who are ſaid to be near 2000, have a voice. The third is the Conſiglio-del-Pregadi, which conſiſts of about 250 of the nobility. The fourth is the Conſiglio Proprio, whoſe members are called Savii Grandi, or the Grand Sages, which join to the Signiora, and conſiſt of 28 aſſeſſors. This gives audience to the ambaſſadors. The fifth and laſt is Il Collegio-delli-dieci, and is compoſed of 10 counſellors, who take notice of all criminal matters; and the doge himſelf, when accuſed, is obliged to appear before them. There is no appeal from this council, and it is a dreadful misfortune to be cited before it. The Venetians are Romaniſts, but they tolerate the Greeks and Mahometans. The Proteſtants are not allowed the public exerciſe of their religion; but they are not otherwiſe moleſted. The head of the clergy is the patriarch of Venice, who muſt be a noble Venetian, and is elected by the ſenate. This patriarch, in conſequence of the policy of the ſenate, has ſcarce any power over the prieſts and monks, who are grealy corrupted. There is another patriarch belonging to Venice, whoſe authority extends over Friuli, Iſtria, and moſt of the biſhops on the main land. The tribunal of the inquiſition at Venice is compoſed of the pope's nuncio, the patriarch of Venice, and the father-inquiſitor; but as theſe had need of a bridle, they have added three counſellors to the number, without whoſe conſent they can determine nothing. Their famous carnival begins with the year, and continues till Lent; all which time is employed in ſports and diverſions. Then libertiniſm reigns through the city, and thouſands of foreigners frequent it from all parts of Europe. They all appear in maſks, which no one dares venture to take off, and in this diſguiſe they imitate the ſports of the ancient Bacchanals; and the nearer Aſh-Wedneſday approaches, the more mad they are. The principal ſpot of the maſquerade is St. Mark's place, where there are ſometimes above 15,000 people; and it ſwarms with harlequins, jeſters, mountebanks, rope-dancers, and puppet-ſhows. Even the prieſts and monks enjoy the diverſion of the carnival; but when the diverſions of the carnival are over, nothing is heard from the clergy, who are generally accounted ignorant, but ſermons on repentance. Whatever degree of licentiouſneſs may prevail among the Venetians, jealouſy, poiſon, and the ſtiletto, have been long baniſhed from their gallantry. The poorer people of Venice diſplay ſome qualities very rarely to be found in that ſphere of life, being remarkably ſober, obliging to ſtrangers, and gentle in their intercourſe with each other. The Venetians, in general, are tall and well-made; they have a ruddy brown colour, with dark eyes. The women are of an eaſy addreſs, and have no averſion to cultivate an acquaintance with thoſe ſtrangers who are preſented to them by their relations, or have been properly recommended. The number of inhabitants in the city is eſtimated at 160,000, of the whole ſtate at 2,500,000, and of the annual revenue of the republic at 8,200,000 ducats. By a late remarkable revolution, the ſovereignty of this celebrated republic, which has now continued upwards of 1300 years, in abſolute freedom and independence, is entirely, and for ever ſubverted. The French, without the ſhew of military enterpriſe, ſuddenly made themſelves maſters of the city, while their troops were diffuſing themſelves all over the Venetian territory. Soon after, Dalmatia was taken poſſeſſion of by the emperor, and it is now annexed to his dominions, together with the city of Venice, and part of the late Venetian eſtates in Italy, by the treaty of Udina. The other part has become an acceſſion to the new Ciſpadane Republic.

VENICE, GULF OF, or THE ADRIATIC, a ſea between Greece and Italy, extending from lat. 40 to 45. 55. N. It is the ancient Adriaticum Mare, and is ſtill called the Adriatic.

VENLO, a town of Ruremonde, in Guelderland, formerly in alliance with the Hanſeatic towns. The inhabitants are moſtly Romaniſts. In 1702, this town, with Fort St. Michael on the other ſide of the Maeſe, was taken by the army of the allies, under the Duke of Marlborough. It is ſeated on the river Maeſe, 25 miles NW. of Duſſeldorf.

VENOSA, a town of Baſilicata, Naples, 9 miles NNW. of Acerenga.

Vent, a river in Cumberland, running into the S. Tyne, at Alſton-Moor.

VENTA-DE-CRUZ, a town of Terra Firma, on the Iſthmus of Darien, 20 miles N. of Panama. Here the Spaniards embark their merchandiſe, on the river Chagre, which they ſend from Panama to Porto Bello.

VENTRY-HARBOUR, in Kerry, Munſter, on the N. ſide of Dingle Bay, from which it is divided by a narrow iſthmos.

VERA, a ſea-port of Spain, in Granada, 32 miles SW. of Carthagena.

VERA-CRUZ, a ſea-port of Tlaſcala, Mexico, with a ſecure harbour, on the coaſt of the Gulf of Mexico. Here the flotilla arrive annually from Spain, to receive the produce of the gold and ſilver mines, when this place becomes immenſely rich. They hold a fair here annually, which laſts many weeks, for the rich Eaſt-India goods brought over land from Acapulco, as well as the merchandiſe tranſported from Europe. It is ſurrounded by a wall, and the air is ſo unhealthy here, that when the fair is over, there are few inhabitants, except mulattoes and blacks. There are ſuch crowds of Spaniards from all parts of America, that they erect tents for them while the fair laſts. It is 180 miles ESE. of Mexico. Lat. 19. 12. N. lon. 97. 25. W.

VERA CRUZ, OLD, a ſea-port of Tlaſcala, Mexico, 15 miles NNW. of Vera Cruz. Here Ferdinando Cortez landed with 500 Spaniards, when he undertook the conqueſt of Mexico.

VERAGUA, a province of Mexico, ſo called from a river of the ſame name. It is bounded on the E. by Darien, on the W. by Coſta Rica, on the N. by the Atlantic, and on the S. by the Pacific Ocean. It is a mountainous and barren country, expoſed to the incurſions of the Indians. A good deal of gold and ſilver is obtained here. Conception is the capital.

VERA PAZ, a province of Mexico, bounded in the N. by Yucatan and Chiapa, on the E. by the bay and province of Honduras, on the S. by Guatimala, and on the W. by Soconuſco. It is about 120 miles in length, and 70 in breadth, and abounds with mountains and thick foreſts of cedar, full of wild beaſts, and yet there are many fertile valleys, which feed a great number of horſes and mules. There are alſo many towns and villages of the native Americans. The country is ſubject to earthquakes, thunder, and 9 months rain. The capital is of the ſame name, but it is inconſiderable, and in lat. 15. 10. N. lon. 90. 54. W.

VERBERIE, a town in the department of Oiſe, ſeated on the river Oiſe, 10 miles NE. of Senlis.

Verby, Yorkſhire, N. of Giſborough.

VERCELI, a town of Piedmont, capital of a conſiderable lordſhip. The inhabitants are about 20,000. Here are 2 cathedral churches, 12 others, 2 abbeys, 19 convents of both ſexes, 2 priories, 2 provoſtſhips, 3 poor-houſes, and 5 hoſpitals. It is 10 miles NNW. of Caſal, and 40 NE. of Turin.

VERD, CAPE, a promontory on the W. coaſt of Africa, 45 miles NW. of the mouth of the river Gambia. Lat. 14. 45. N. lon. 17. 28. W.

VERD, CAPE DE, iſlands ſeated on the Atlantic Ocean, about 400 miles W. of the cape of that name, and between the 14th and 18th degrees of N. latitude. Thoſe which are inhabited are 10 in number, lying in a ſemi-circle; their names are St. Antonio, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, St. Nicolas, the Iſle of Sal, Bona-Viſta, Mayo, St. Jago, Fuego, and Bravo. They are, in general, mountainous, and the ſoil is often ſtony and barren; nevertheleſs, many parts produce rice, maize, bananas, lemons, oranges, citrons, pomegranates, figs, and melons; grapes alſo are gathered twice a year. The inhabitants catch and ſalt a great number of turtles, which they ſend to America; they alſo manufacture leather and ſalt. Their number is calculated at 100,000. The uninhabited iſlands are all ſtocked with cows, goats, hogs, aſſes, mules, &c. under their particular lords. They are ſubject to Portugal.

VERDEN, a duchy of Lower Saxony, having Bremen on the N. and W. and Lunenburg on the E. and S. It extends both in length and breadth about 24 miles. It conſiſts chiefly of heaths and high dry lands and foreſts; but there is good marſh land on the rivers Weſer and Aller. In 1712, the Danes wreſted this duchy from Sweden, and, in 1715, ceded it to the king of Great Britain, as elector of Hanover; which ceſſion, in 1718, was confirmed by the Swedes. This duchy has the ſame regency with that of Bremen. The inhabitants are Lutherans.

VERDEN, the capital of the duchy of the ſame name, in Lower Saxony, containing 4 churches, and a Latin ſchool. It is ſeated on the Aller, 40 miles NW. of Hanover.

VERDUN, a town in the department of Meuſe, noted for fine ſweetmeats. It is ſeated on the river Maeſe, which runs through the middle, 33 miles NNW. of Toul, and 150 E. of Paris.

VERDUN, a town in the department of Upper Garonne, ſeated on the river Garonne, 18 miles NNW. of Toulouſe.

Vere, a river in Hertfordſhire. Veres, or Verſe-Wotton, Dorſetſ. W. of Bridport.

VERMAND, a town in the department of Aiſne, 6 miles W. of St. Quintin. Before the revolution, it was capital of a territory called the Vermandois.

VERMANTON, a town in the department of Yonne, 10 miles SE. of Auxerre.

Verminſter, Dorſetſ. NE. of Sturminſter.

VERMONT, one of the United States of N. America, bounded on the N. by Canada; on the E. by the river Connecticut, which divides it from New Hampſhire; on the S. by Maſſachuſets; and on the W. by New York. It is about 155 miles long, and 60 broad, and is divided into ſeven counties. A chain of high mountains, running N. and S. divides this ſtate nearly in the centre, between the river Connecticut and Lake Champlain. The height of land is generally from 20 to 30 miles from the river, and about the ſame diſtance from the New-York line. The natural growth upon this mountain is hemlock, pine, ſpruce, and other evergreens: hence it has always a green appearance, and, on this account, has obtained the deſcriptive name of Vermont, from the French Verd Mont, Green Mountain. On ſome high parts of this mountain, ſnow lies till May, and ſometimes till June. The country is generally hilly, but not rocky. It is finely watered; the ſoil is very fertile, and there is not a better climate in the world. The inhabitants have very lately been eſtimated at 100,000. The bulk of them are emigrants from Connecticut and Maſſachuſets. The principal town is Bennington, but the aſſembly generally hold their ſeſſions at Windſor.

VERNEUIL, a town in the dept. of Eure, ſeated on the river Aure, 22 miles SSW. of Evreux, and 65 W. of Paris.

VERNEUIL, a town in the department of Allier, 15 miles S. of Moulins.

VERNON, a town in the department of Eure, on the Seine, 27 miles SSE. of Rouen, and 42 NW. of Paris.

Vernon, Cheſhire, SW. of Sandbach.

VEROLI, a town in the Campagni-di-Roma, containing 8 churches, and 3 convents; 8 miles S. of Alatri.

VERONA, a city of Italy, in the late territory of Venice, and capital of the Veroneſe, fortified in the ancient manner. The ſtreets are neither clean nor ſtraight, and the houſes are mean; but there is a large, handſome ſquare, called the Piazza-d'Armi, and a good ſtreet called the Corſo. The biſhop and governor have ſuperb palaces, but the moſt magnificent is that of Count Maffei. The town-houſe and the opera-houſe are fine buildings; but the moſt celebrated ſtructure here is the ancient amphitheatre built by the Romans, in which are 44 rows of benches, of white marble, ſtill entire, which will hold, according to Count Maffei, 22,184 ſpectators. Little, however, of this valuable piece of antiquity appears ancient, having been carefully repaired from time to time at the city's expence. In the Academy of the Phil-Harmonics, is a large collection of ancient inſcriptions and monuments, in the Hetrurian, Punic, Egyptian, Greek, and Latin languages. It is ſeated on the river Adige, on which they tranſport linen, ſilks, woollen, ſtuffs, &c. to Venice. Here are 4 ſtone bridges, the principal of which is 348 feet long. The inhabitants amount to near 50,000. It is 62 miles W. of Venice.

VERONESE, a territority of Italy, lately in Venice, about 47 miles in length, and 25 in breadth. It is one of the moſt fertile countries in Italy, abounding in corn, wine fruits, and cattle. The Venetians became maſters of the city and territory, in 1409.

VERNOIS, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Rezzan.

VERREZ, a town of Aoſta, Piedmont.

Verrian, Cornwall, 3 miles from Tregony, and N. of Gwyndrith Bay.

VERSAILLES, a town in the department of Seine and Oiſe, 12 miles SW. of Paris. In the reign of Lewis XIII. it was only a ſmall village. This prince built here a hunting-ſeat in 1630, which Baſſompierre calls "the paltry chateau of Verſailles." Although the ſituation was low, and very unfavourable, Lewis XIV. built a magnificent palace here, which was the uſual reſidence of the kings of France, till the 6th of October, 1789, when the late unhappy Lewis XVI. and his family, were removed from it to the Tuilleries. The buildings and the gardens are adorned with a vaſt number of ſtatues, canals, fountains, &c. and the waterworks are much admired. The great gallery is thought to be as curious a piece of workmanſhip of that kind, as any in the world: and the chapel is no leſs admired for it's fine architecture and ornaments. The gardens, with the park, are 5 miles in circumference, and ſurrounded by walls. There are three fine avenues to Verſailles, one of which is the common road to Paris, the other comes from Seaux, and the third from St. Cloud.

VERTUS, a town in the department of Marne, 17 miles SW. of Chalons, and 78 E. of Paris.

VERUE, or VERRUA, a town of Aſti, Piedmont, ſeated on a hill, near the river Po. It was taken by the French in 1705, after a ſiege of ſix months, when it was reduced to a heap of ruins. It was afterwards reſtored to the duke of Savoy.

VERVIERS, a town of Liege.

VERVINS, a town in the department of Aiſne, noted in hiſtory for a treaty of peace concluded here, in 1598, between Henry IV. king of France, and Philip II. king of Spain. It is 110 miles NNE. of Paris.

VERULAM, the veſtiges of a Roman oppidum or town, in Hertfordſhire, on the Verlam river, oppoſite St. Alban's. In the time of Nero it was a municipium, the inhabitants of which enjoyed the privileges of Roman citizens. By Tacitus it was called Verulamium, and by Ptolemy Urolamium. After the departure of the Romans, it was entirely ruined in the wars between the Britons and Saxons; and nothing remains of it but the ruins of walls, teſſelated pavements, and Roman coins, which are ſtill ſometimes dug up. On the NE. corner is a piece of the wall, 3 yards and a half thick, compoſed of flints, and layers of Roman bricks. The ſite of it has long ago been converted into corn-fields.

Verwood, Dorſetſhire, near Winborn-Abbas.

VESELIZE, a town in the department of Meurthe, 15 miles SSE. of Toul, and 162 SSE. of Paris.

VESLEY, a town in the department of Aiſne, 10 miles E. of Soiſſons.

VESOUL, a town in the department of Upper Saone, 22 miles N. of Beſançon, and 200 SE. of Paris.

VESPRIN, a town and county of Hungary, 32 miles SSE. of Raab.

VESUVIUS, a celebrated volcano of Italy, in Naples. The firſt eruption of this volcano was in the year 79 of the the Chriſtian era, under Titus. It was accompanied by an earthquake, which overturned ſeveral cities, particularly Pompeii and Herculaneum. This eruption proved fatal to Pliny, the naturaliſt. "Great quantities of aſhes and ſulphureous ſmoke," ſays Dion Caſſius, "were carried not only to Rome, but alſo beyond the Mediterranean, into Africa, and even to Egypt. Birds were ſuffocated in the air, and fell down upon the ground; and fiſhes periſhed in the neighbouring waters, which were made hot, and infected by it." Sir W. Hamilton mentions, that the eruption in 1767 was the 27th from the time of Titus, ſince which there have been 9 others; thoſe of 1779 and 1794 being the moſt violent and alarming. In this laſt, 5000 acres of rich vineyards were deſtroyed, and moſt of the houſes in the town of Torre-del-Greco buried, or rendered uninhabitable. Veſuvius is 6 miles E. of Naples.

VEVAY, a town and bailiwick of Bern, Swiſſerland, with a manufacture of hats, and a large trade in cheeſe. Here General Ludlow retired on the reſtoration, and died in 1693. It is ſeated near the head of the Lake of Geneva, 10 miles SSE. of Lauſanne.

VEUDRE, a town in the department of Allier, ſeated on the river Allier, 17 miles NNW. of Moulins.

VEZELAY, a town in the department of Yonne, ſeated on a mountain, 20 miles S. of Auxerre, and 117 S. by E. of Paris.

UFA, one of the 41 governments of Ruſſia, formerly included in the government of Orenburgh. It is divided into the two provinces of Ufa and Orenburgh, UFA, a town of Ruſſia, capital of a government of the ſame name, ſeated a few miles below the mouth of the river Ufa. It is 632 miles ESE. of Moſcow.

Ufcolomb, Devonſ. on the river Columb, 10 miles from Bradninch. Ufcot, Wilts, NW. of Marlborough. Uffay-Park, Cumberland, SE. of Ravenglaſs. Ufferton, Durham, W. of Sunderland. Uffington, Lincolnſhire, near Stamford. Uffington, or Offington, Berks, near Wantage. Uffington, Saropſhire, NE. of Shrewſbury. Ufford, Northamp. near Stamford. Ufford, Suffolk, NE. of Woodbridge. Uffton, Warw. between Itchington and Offchurch. Ugbear, Devonſhire, W. of the Avon, and SW. of Brent. Ugboro, Cornw. near the Tamar, 3 miles from Modbury. Ugbrook, Devonſhire, 2 miles from Chudleigh. Near it is a cave that runs a great way under ground.

UGENTO, a town of Otranto, Naples.

Ugford, Wilts, near Wilton. Uggeſcomb, Dorſetſ. near Portiſham. Ugham, Northumb. near the Lyn, NE. of Morpeth. Ughterſhaw, Yorkſ. N. of Langſtredale Chace. Ugleberb, Yorkſ. S. of Whitby. Ugley, Eſſex, N. of Stanted-Montfichet, and E. of the Stort.

UGONGA, a town of Piedmont.

UGROCZ, a town and caſtle in Hungary.

Ugſhall, Suffolk, W. of Euſton-Neſs. Ugthorp, Yorkſ. near Moulgrave-Caſtle.

VIC, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, 12 miles NE. of Nanci, and 197 E. of Paris.

VIC BIGORRE, a ſmall town in the dept. of the Upper Pyrenees, ſituated on the river Adour, 12 miles N. of Tarbes.

VIC, a town of Catalonia, formerly more conſiderable than at preſent; however, it ſtill contains handſome buildings. It is 30 miles NNE. of Barcelona.

VICEGRAD, a town of Hungary, on the Danube, 9 miles SSE. of Gran.

VICENTINO, a territory of Italy, lately ſubject to the Venetians, about 40 miles in length, and from 10 to 24 in breadth. It is a pleaſant and fertile country, abounding in game, and is called the garden of Venice. The wine is excellent, and the butter and cheeſe very good. Here are alſo great numbers of mulberry-trees, which ſerve to nouriſh ſilkworms; and there are mines of ſilver and iron, and quarries of ſtone, almoſt as fine as marble.

VICENZA, a city of Italy, capital of the Vicentino, with a biſhop's ſee. It is adorned with ſeveral palaces, and has a fine ſquare, with piazzas under the houſes. There are ſeveral other ſquares, and 57 churches, parochial and conventual, with ſeveral good hoſpitals. The great altar of the Dominican church is an auguſt piece of Palladio's architecture. There is an academy for the improvement of the Italian language, whoſe members meet in the Olympic theatre, a maſterpiece of workmanſhip by the ſame ſkilful architect. The ſeats are diſpoſed in the manner of the ancient amphitheatre. It is 31 miles W. of Venice.

VIC-FEZENSAC, a town in the department of Gers, 15 miles NNW. of Auch.

VICHI, a town in the dept. of Allier, ſeated on the river Allier, and famous for the mineral waters near it. It is 3 miles SW. of Cuſſet, and 180 S. by E. of Paris.

VICOVARO, a town of Italy, in the Sabina, 20 miles ENE. of Rome.

VIDDIN, a town of Bulgaria, ſeated on the Danube.

VIENNA, the capital of the circle of Auſtria, in Germany, and of the whole German empire, where the emperor reſides. The city itſelf is not large, and contains about 60,000 inhabitants, being limited by a very ſtrong fortification; but the ſuburbs and town together are ſaid to contain above 300,000. The ſtreets, in general, are narrow, and in part crooked, and the houſes built high. Some of the public buildings are magnificent; but they appear externally to no great advantage, on account of the narrowneſs of the ſtreets. The chief of them are the Imperial Palace, the Library, and the Muſeum: the palaces of the princes Lichtenſtein, Eugene, &c. No houſes without the walls are allowed to be built nearer the glacis than 600 yards; ſo that there is a circular field of that breadth all round the town, which has a beautiful and ſalutary effect. The ſuburbs are not near ſo populous, in proportion to their ſize, as the town; as many houſes in the former have extenſive gardens belonging to them, and many families, who live during the winter within the fortifications, ſpend the ſummer in the ſuburbs. The ſecond floor of all burghers houſes, is allotted for the reception of officers of the imperial court, and the owners can only purchaſe an exemption, by paying a ſum of money for the erection of barracks. Vienna contains 50 churches or chapels, and 21 convents. The cathedral is built of freeſtone, is 114 yards long, and 48 broad, and the ſteeple is 447 feet high. Here is a monument in honour of Prince Eugene of Savoy. Inſtead of a weathercock there is a black ſpread eagle, over which is a gilded croſs. Joining to this church is the archbiſhop's palace, the front of which is very fine. Beſides the univerſity, containing a great number of ſtudents, there is the academy of Lower Auſtria; and the archducal library, which is open every morning 3 or 4 hours to the public, contains 5 or 6000 volumes, printed in the 15th century, with a well-furniſhed and valuable collection of prints and uſeful modern books. The academy of painting is remarkable for the fine pictures it produces. The imperial cabinet is very rich in medals, and ſtill more ſo in natural hiſtory. Proviſions are brought here in great plenty and variety; and wild hogs, ſtags, with cart-loads of hares, pheaſants, and partridges may be ſeen in the game market. Here is a ſort of a harbour on the Danube, where there are magazines of naval ſtores; and ſhips have been fitted out to ſerve on that river againſt the Turks. The manufactures of this city are numerous, and the trade extenſive. Vienna has been twice ineffectually beſieged by the Turks, in 1589 and 1683. At the latter period, the ſiege was raiſed by John Sobieſki, king of Poland, who totally defeated the Turkiſh army before this place. Vienna is ſeated at the place where the river Vien falls into the Danube, near the ſite of the ancient Vindebona. Lat. 48. 13. N. lon. 16. 28. E.

VIENNE, a city in the dept. of Iſere. It is ſeated on the E. bank of the Rhone, over which it had formerly a good bridge, of which only ſome piers remain, that render the navigation dangerous. It's commerce conſiſts in wines, ſilk, and ſword blades, which laſt are highly eſteemed. Near Vienne, on the banks of the Rhone, are produced the excellent wines of Côte-Rotie; and the famous hermitage wines. Before the revolution, it was the ſee of an archbiſhop. In the 5th century it was taken by the Burgundians, whoſe kings made it their place of reſidence. Vienne is 15 miles S. of Lyons.

VIENNE, a department of France, joining on the W. to that of the Two Sevres. Poitiers is the capital. It takes it's name from a river which riſes in the department of Correze, and falls into the Loire 5 miles above Saumur.

VIGEVANO, a town of Piedmont.

VIGNAMONT, a town of Liege.

VIGO, a town of Spain, in Galicia, with a good harbour, ſeated on the Atlantic. It is 12 miles NNW. of Tay, and 260 WNW. of Madrid. Here, in 1702, the Engliſh and Dutch fleets, having broken the boom laid acroſs the mouth of the harbour, defeated a ſquadron of French men of war, with 13 Spaniſh galleons under their convoy. The Engliſh took 4 galleons and 5 men of war, and the Dutch 5 galleons and 1 man of war. Fourteen men of war and 4 galleons were deſtroyed, and a great deal of ſilver was taken. In 1719, it was again taken by the Engliſh, who relinquiſhed it, after raiſing contributions.

VIHIERS, a town in the dept. of Maine and Loire, whoſe inhabitants have a great trade in cattle. It is 20 miles S. of Angers, and 162 SW. of Paris.

VINCENT, CAPE, a promontory of Portugal, 25 miles W. of Lagos. Lat. 37. 2. N. lon. 9. 0. W.

VINCENT, St. an iſland of the W. Indies, 55 miles W. of Barbadoes. It is one of the Caribbee Iſlands, and inhabited by a race of people, of whom Dr. Robertſon gives this account: "There is a great diſtinction in character between the Caribbees and the inhabitants of the larger iſlands. The former appear manifeſtly to be a ſeparate race. Their language is totally different from that of their neighbours in the large iſlands. They themſelves have a tradition that their anceſtors came originally from ſome part of the continent, and having conquered and exterminated the ancient inhabitants, took poſſeſſion of their lands and of their women. Hence they call themſelves Banaree, which ſignifies a man come from beyond ſea. Accordingly, the Caribbees ſtill uſe two diſtinct languages, one peculiar to the men, and the other to the women. The language of the men has nothing common with that ſpoken in the large iſlands. The dialect of the women conſiderably reſembles it. This ſtrongly confirms the tradition which I have mentioned. The Caribbees themſelves imagine that they were a colony from the Galibis, a powerful nation of Guiana, in S. America. But as their fierce manners approach nearer to thoſe of the people in the northern continent, than to thoſe of the natives of S. America; and as their language has likewiſe ſome affinity to that ſpoken in Florida, their origin ſhould be deduced rather from the former than the latter. In their wars, they ſtill preſerve their ancient practice of deſtroying all the males, and preſerving the women either for ſervitude, or for breeding." St. Vincent's was long a neutral iſland; but, at the peace of 1763, the French agreed that the right to it ſhould be veſted in the Engliſh; who, in the ſequel, at the inſtance of ſome rapacious planters, engaged in a war againſt the Caribbees, who inhabited the windward ſide of the iſland, and who were obliged to conſent to a peace, by which they ceded a very large tract of valuable land to the crown. The conſequence of this was, that retaining their reſentment againſt the Engliſh, they aided the French in the reduction of the iſland, in 1779, who however reſtored it by the peace of 1783. St. Vincent's is about 40 miles in length, and 10 in breadth. The country is generally mountainous and rugged: the valleys are, however, extremely fruitful. It contains about 84,000 acres, every where well watered, of which 23,605 acres are poſſeſſed by Britiſh ſubjects; and as much more was lately held by the Caribs. All the reſt of the country has not been yet cleared, but retains it's native woods. The ſoil is a black mould upon a ſtrong loam, the moſt proper for the raiſing of ſugars: and indigo thrives here remarkably well. The number of inhabitants appears, by the laſt official returns, to be 1450 whites, and 11,853 negroes. The governor's ſalary is 2000l. ſterling; one half of which is raiſed within the iſland, and the other half is paid out of the exchequer of Great Britain. Lat. 13. 0. N. lon. 61. 0. W.

VINCENT, St. a town of Beira; and a ſea-port of Aſturia.

VINCENT, St. a town of Braſil, in the government of St. Paul, ſituated on the ſea-coaſt, 150 miles SSW. of St. Sebaſtian.

VINCENT, St. one of the Cape de Verd Iſlands, on the coaſt of Africa, about 30 miles in circumference. On the NW. ſide of it is a harbour, accounted the beſt in all the Cape Verd Iſlands, where ſhips may wood and water, and wild goats may be obtained. It is ſaid, alſo, that more turtle is caught near this iſland, than round all the reſt, and that it abounds with ſaltpetre.

VINCENT'S-ROCKS, St. Glouceſterſhire, E. of the Avon, and a mile and a half NNW. of Briſtol. They are very ſteep and rugged precipices, which continue their courſe about 3 miles, and ſeem to have been almoſt miraculouſly cleft aſunder, to admit a paſſage for the river Frome. The Avon flows between them, and the tide riſes here 42 feet. At the bottom of theſe rocks, near the water-ſide, riſes a medicinal hot ſpring, the taſte of which is ſoft, milky, and grateful to the ſtomach. It is ſucceſsfully preſcribed in inflammations, hectic coughs, immoderate fluxes, and ſcrophulous and cancerous caſes.

Vine, Hants, near Baſingſtoke. Vineyard, near Glouceſter. Vineyard, Glouceſterſhire, near Tewkeſbury. Vineyard-Flory, Somerſetſhire, SW. of Taunton.

VIRGIN ISLANDS, certain iſlands and keys keys in the W. Indies, situated in about lat. 18. 30. N. to the E. of Porto Rico. They were called Las Virgines by the Spaniards, in honour of the 11,000 Virgins of the Legend. They are about 30 in number, mostly desert, barren, and are possessed by the English and Danes. The Spaniards, however, claim those near Porto Rico. In the first division of those possessed by the English, is Tortola, the principal, to which belong Joft Van Dyke's and Little Van Dykes, Guana Isle, with Beef and Thatch Islands. In the second division is Virgin Gorda, or Great Virgin, called also Spanish Town, having two good harbours; to this island belong Anageda, or Drowned Island, Nicker, Prickley Pear, and Moskito Islands, the Cammanoes, Scrub and Dog Islands, the Fallen City (two rocky islets, close together, at a distance resembling ruins) the Round Rock, Ginger, Cooper's, Salt Island, Peter's Island, and the Dead Chest. To the Danes belong St. Thomas's Island, on which Brass, Little Saba, Buck Island, Great and Little St. James, and Bird Island are dependant; with St. John, to which belong Lavango, Cam, and Witch Islands; and they have also the Island of St. Croix.

VIRGINIA, one of the United States of North America, bounded on the S. by North Carolina; on the W. by Kentucky; on the NW. by the Ohio; on the N. by Pennsylvania and Maryland; and on the E. by Maryland, the Chesapeak, and the Atlantic. It is about 320 miles from E. to W. and 180 from N. to S. The principal rivers are James, York, Rappahannoc, Potomac, Roanoke, and Kanhaway, Great and Little, all which are full of convenient and safe harbours. There are also many small rivers, some of which are capable of receiving the largest merchant ships. In general, the land is tolerably good, and capable of producing corn, pulse, cotton, flax, and hemp; and, in the marsh lands, rice has been lately cultivated. The lands toward the mouth of the rivers are generally low, and at present well stocked with many sorts of trees, from 30 to 70 feet high. The land higher up the rivers is generally level, and well watered with springs; but there are here and there some small hills. That near the sea is generally sandy, and without stones, for which reason they seldom shoe their horses. The richest lands lie near the branches of the rivers, and abound with various sorts of timber, surprisingly large. At the heads of the rivers are mountains, valleys, hills, and plains, with different trees; and indeed not many years ago, the whole country seemed to be one continued wood, with plantations here and there, where the roots of the trees had been grubbed up. The principal produce of Virginia are tobacco, wheat, and Indian corn; but the culture of tobacco has much declined of late, in favour of that of wheat. Virginia is divided into 82 counties, and has but few towns of consequence; the principal are Williamsburg, Norfolk, Alexandria, and Richmond. The number of inhabitants, in 1790, amounted to 747,610. The Virginians now manufacture about three-fourths of their clothing, and they have also manufactures of iron and lead; but agriculture is the principal employment.

* VIRGINIA, a town of Cavan, in Ulster, seated on Lough Ramor, in which are several islands, 40 miles from Dublin.

Virginstow, Devonsh. SE. of Luffencote.

VIRTON, a small town of Luxemburg.

VISET, a town of Liege.

VISEU, anciently VISONTIUM, a town of Beira.

VISHNEI-VOLOTCHOK, a town of Russia, in the government of Tver. It is seated on the river Zna, and is one of the imperial villages enfranchised by the late empress. It is remarkable for it's canal, which connects the Tvertza and the Mysta. The inhabitants, raised from the situation of slaves to that of freemen, seem to have shaken off their former indolence, and to be awakened to a sense of their commercial advantages. The town is divided into regular streets. All the buildings are of wood, except the court of justice erected at the charge of the empress, and a few brick houses. It is 60 miles NNW. of Tver. Lat. 57. 23. N. lon. 35. 0. E.

VISIAPOUR, a considerable city of Hindoostan, the capital of a country of the same name. It is now in the hands of the Poonah Mahrattas. It is 136 miles SE. of Poonah, and 234 SE. of Bombay. Lat. 17. 26. N. lon. 75. 19. E.

VISSOGOROD, a town of Masovia.

UIST, N. and S. two islands of the Hebrides, on the W. coast of Scotland. They are each about 20 miles in length, and of considerable breadth. Kelp is the staple commodity of these islands; and they export annually, between them, 800 cows and young oxen. Here is abundance of game and aquatic birds.

VISTULA, the largest river of Poland. It rises in Mount Crapach, on the N. part of Hungary, passes by Cracow, Sandomitz, Warsaw, Thorn, Culm, &c. and falls into the Baltic below Dantzic.

VITERBO, a town of Italy, capital of the the Patrimonio. It contains only 15,000 inhabitants, although the number of churches, convents, and hoſpitals is 69. Near it is a ſpring, ſo hot, that it will boil an egg, and even fiſh. It is 20 miles S. of Orvieto, and 35 N. by W. of Rome.

VITRI-LE-BRULE, a village in the dept. of Marne, 3 miles NE. of Vitri-le-François. It was formerly a conſiderable town, but was taken (and, as it's name imports, burnt) by Thibaut count of Chartres, when many of the inhabitants were burned, and great part of the town deſtroyed. It was alſo burnt, together with 60 villages, in 1422, by the Engliſh and Burgundians.

VITRI-LE FRANÇOIS, a populous town in the dept. of Marne, trading in corn. It is well built, though the houſes are of wood, and there is a fine ſquare. It is ſeated on the river Marne, 15 miles SSE. of Chalons, and 100 E. of Paris.

VITTEAUX, a town in the department of Côte-d'Or, ſeated among mountains, where there are quarries of marble. It is 21 miles W. of Dijon, and 9 SE. of Semur.

VITTORIA, a town of Biſcay, in the province of Alava. It contains 5 pariſhes, 4 convents, 3 hoſpitals, a college, and a ſquare. The large ſtreets are bordered with trees, as a defence againſt the heat of the ſun. The merchants here deal in wool and wines, and particularly in ſword blades and other cutlery, which they make in large quantities. It is ſeated in a pleaſant plain, fertile in corn and grapes, 32 miles SSE. of Bilboa.

VITTORIOSA. See CITTA VITTORIOSA.

VIVERO, a town of Spain, in Galicia, near the river Vivero, or Landrova, whoſe mouth forms a good harbour on the Atlantic. It is 12 miles E. of Cape Ortegal.

VIVIERS, a town in the department of Ardeche, ſeated among rocks, on one of which the cathedral is built. It is ſituated on the river Rhone, 20 miles N. of Orange.

UKRAINE, a large country of Europe, lying on the borders of Turkey in Europe, Poland, Ruſſia, and Little Tartary. It's name properly ſignifies a frontier. But the whole of the Ukraine, on both ſides of the Dnieper, now belongs to Ruſſia, and forms a part of the government of Ekaterinoſlav. The principal town is Kiof. See COSSACKS.

ULADISLAW. See INOWLADISLAW.

ULLSWATER, a lake, partly in Weſtmorland and partly in Cumberland, 10 miles N. of Ambleſide, and 14 SW. of Penrith. It is about 8 miles long, is of a ſufficient depth for breeding char, and abounds with a variety of other fiſh. Trout, upwards of 30 pounds weight, are ſaid to have been taken in it. The navigators of this lake find much amuſement by diſcharging guns, or ſmall cannon, in certain ſtations. The report is reverberated from rock to rock, promontory, cavern, and hill, with every variety of ſound; now dying away upon the ear, and again returning like peals of thunder, and thus re-echoed, is heard ſeven times diſtinctly.

ULM, an imperial city of Suabia, and chief of that order in the circle, where the archieves of the free towns in Suabia and Franconia are depoſited. The inhabitants are Proteſtants. There is a good college in this city; and in the cathedral, which is a very lofty ſtructure, are 63 copper veſſels full of water, ready for the extinguiſhing of fire. It is large and well fortified, and the town-houſe is a handſome edifice. There is a handſome bridge over the Danube, which greatly favours the trade of the inhabitants in linen, fuſtians, hardware, and wool. The elector of Bavaria became maſter of it in 1702, by a ſtratagem; but after the battle of Blenheim, the Bavarians ſurrendered it by capitulation. It is ſeated on the Danube, where it receives the river Iller, 47 miles SSE. of Stutgard, and 275 W. of Vienna. Lat. 48. 25. N. lon. 10. 12. E.

Ulſha, or Ouſſa, Cumberland, in Millum pariſh, parish, on the river Dudden. Ulfeby, Lincolnshire, N. of Spilsby. Ulfeby, Lincolnshire, between Great Limbergh and Barton-on-the-Humber.

ULSTER, a province of Ireland; bounded on the E. by the Irish Sea, on the N. by the Northern Ocean, on the W. by the Western Ocean, on the S. by the province of Leinster, and on the SW. by that of Connaught, being about 116 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. The principal rivers are, the Banne, the Loughfoyle, the Swilly, the Mewry Water, and the Maine. It abounds with large lakes, the soil, in general, is fruitful in corn and grass; and there are plenty of horses, sheep, and beeves. The waters are deep, and yield plenty of fish, particularly salmon. The southern parts of this province are rich, fertile, and well cultivated; but the northern are hilly and mountainous. It includes within itself, by far the greatest part of the linen manufactory; and contains the counties of Donegal, Derry, Antrim, Tyrone, Fermanagh, Cavan, Armagh, Monaghan, and Down.

Underton, Shropf. SW. of Bridgenorth.

UNDERWALDEN, a canton of Switzerland, and the sixth in rank. It is bounded on the N. by the canton of Lucern, and by the lake of the four cantons; on the E. by the canton of Uri; on the S. by the canton of Bern; and on the W. by the cantons of Bern and Lucern. It takes it's name from a large forest of oaks, which is nearly in the middle of the country, and runs from N. to S. It is about 25 miles in length, and 17 in breadth, and is divided into two parts, that above the forest, and that below it; for this reason there are two councils, two justices, and two land ammanies. It has no towns nor bailiwicks; and the chief advantage of the inhabitants arises from cattle, and the fish taken in five small lakes. The people are of the Romish church; and the grand council is composed of 58 members. Sarnen is the principal place of the Upper Vale; and Stantz of the Lower, and of the whole canton. The Underwalders, in conjunction with the states of Uric and Schweitz, shook off the Austrian yoke, in 1308; of all the people of Switzerland, they are the most honoured and loved by the other cantons, for their courage and love of liberty, joined to a strict concord, and amiable simplicity of manners.

UNGWAR, a town of Hungary, 46 miles NNE. of Caschau.

UNITED PROVINCES OF THE NETHERLANDS, a republic of Europe, consisting of seven provinces, and extending from N. to S. not more than 150 miles, and 100 in breadth from E. to W. They are bounded on the W. and N. by the German Ocean, and on the S. and E. by Brabant and Germany. These provinces rank in the following order: 1. Guelderland, subdivided into the districts of Nimeguen, Zutphen, and Arnheim; 2. Holland, subdivided into N. Holland, S. Holland, and W. Friesland; 3. Zealand, subdivided into the part near the E. Scheldt, and the part near the W. Scheldt; 4. Utrecht; 5. Friesland; 6. Overyssel; and 7. Groningen. Besides these provinces, are the lands of the generalty, (including Dutch Brabant, Flanders, and Limburg) in which are the towns of Bois le-Duc, Breda, Bergen-op-Zoom, Maestricht, Venlo, Sluys, Hulst, &c. This republic (which is likewise called by the general name of Holland) affords a striking proof, that unwearied and persevering industry is capable of conquering almost every disadvantage of climate and situation. The air and water in this country are nearly equally bad; the soil produces naturally scarce any thing but turf; and the possession of this very ſoil is diſputed by the ocean, which riſing conſiderably above the level of the land, is prevented from overflowing it, only by ſtrong and expenſive dikes. Yet the labours of the patient Dutchman have rendered this ſmall and ſeemingly inſignificant territory one of the richeſt ſpots in Europe, with reſpect to population and property. In other countries, poſſeſſed of a variety of natural productions, it is not ſurpriſing to find manufacturers employed in augmenting the riches of the ſoil; but to ſee, in a country like Holland, large woollen manufactures, where there are ſcarce any flocks; numberleſs artiſts employed in metals, where there is not a mine; thouſands of ſaw-mills, where there is ſcarce a foreſt; an immenſe quantity of corn, exported from a country where there is not agriculture ſufficient to ſupport one half of it's inhabitants, is what muſt ſtrike every attentive obſerver with admiration. Among the moſt valuable natural productions of the United Netherlands may be reckoned their excellent cattle; and large quantities of madder are exported, chiefly cultivated in Zealand. The moſt conſiderable revenue ariſes from the fiſheries; but theſe are not ſo conſiderable as formerly. The number of veſſels employed in the herring fiſhery, in particular, is reduced from upwards of 2000 to leſs than 200; and yet it maintains, even now, no leſs than 20,000 people. About 100 veſſels are employed in the Greenland fiſhery, and 140 in the cod fiſhery near the Dogger Bank, and near the coaſt of Holland. The Dutch were formerly in poſſeſſion of the coaſting trade and freight of almoſt all other trading nations. They were alſo the bankers for all Europe. But theſe advantages did not continue to be ſo lucrative, when the other European nations began to open their eyes ſo far as to employ their own ſhipping in their trade, and to eſtabliſh banks of their own. Notwithſtanding theſe deductions, the Dutch trade is ſtill immenſe; in conſequence of their vaſt opulence, they ſtill regulate the exchange for all Europe, and their country is, as it were, the univerſal warehouſe of the commodities of every quarter of the globe. Among the monopolies of their E. India Company, the ſpice trade has long been the moſt valuable: it comprehends the articles of cloves, mace, nutmeg, and cinnamon. The Java coffee is the beſt next to that of Mecca; and other great branches of this trade are rice, cotton, pepper, &c. articles of great importance, but not in the excluſive poſſeſſion of the Dutch. They are the only European nation hitherto permitted to trade directly to Japan; but this trade is alſo on the decline. Their W. India Company trades not only to the Weſt Indies, but to the coaſt of Guinea for ſlaves; and, diſtinct from this, they have two companies, which trade to Surinam and Berbice. The foreign poſſeſſions of the Dutch, in Aſia, previouſly to the commencement of the preſent war, were the coaſts of the Iſland of Java, the capital of which is Batavia, the ſeat of the governor-general of all their Eaſt-India ſettlements; ſome ſettlements on the coaſts of Sumatra, Malabar, and Coromandel; the greateſt part of the Moluccas or Spice-Iſlands; ſettlements, or factories, in the Iſland of Celebes, at Surat and Petra, and in the Gulf of Perſia; with Colombo, Trincomale, &c. on the Iſland of Ceylon. In Africa they had the Cape of Good Hope, with George-de-la Mina, and other fortreſſes and factories in Guinea. In the Weſt Indies they had the Iſlands of St. Euſtatia, Saba, and Curaçoa; and in S. America, the colonies of Iſſequibo, Demerary, Surinam, and Berbice, in the country of Guiana. In Holland, the inland trade is greatly facilitated by the numerous canals, which croſs the country in every direction. The number of manufactures eſtabliſhed in the United Provinces is aſtoniſhing. Saardam, a village in N. Holland, contains, for inſtance, about 900 windmills, partly cornmills, partly ſaw and paper-mills, and mills for the making of whitelead, &c. In former times, the Dutch were the excluſive poſſeſſors of ſeveral ingenious manufactures and arts; as the refining of camphor and borax, the cutting and poliſhing of diamonds, the refining of ſugar, &c. but, at preſent, theſe myſteries, few of them excepted, are in the hands of many other nations, to whoſe commercial ignorance and want of induſtry the Dutch were once indebted for immenſe profits, which have decreaſed with the cauſes; among the reſt, the woollen manufactory has prodigiouſly decreaſed. In a word, the Dutch trade is no longer in it's ancient flouriſhing ſtate, to which, even if the frugality and induſtry of the nation had not been diminiſhed by too great riches, the rivalſhip of other nations, and the commercial knowledge of the age, would never permit it to riſe again. All ſects are tolerated in Holland; but, till lately, none but Calviniſts could hold employments of truſt or profit. Since the great confederation of Utrecht, in 1579, (See NETHERLANDS) the Seven United Provinces have been conſidered as one political body, united for the preſervation of the whole. In 1581, the Hague was appointed the place of meeting for the States General, an assembly invested with the supreme power of the confederation, and composed of deputies chosen out of the provincial states. This power related to the making war and peace, levying taxes, &c. in their joint capacity; but as to internal government, each province was independent, not only of the other provinces, but even of the supreme power of the republic. In the present disputes on the French revolution, the Dutch, at first, appeared hostile to the new republic, but never heartily co-operated with the allies. The stadtholder was probably influenced by the courts of Prussia and England, but a party more powerful than his own were his enemies, and, on the invasion of Holland by the French, in the beginning of 1795, he thought proper, with his family, to take refuge in England. Since then their form of government has been modelled upon that of France, and they now form a republic one and indivisible.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, a republic of N. America, consisting originally of thirteen provinces subject to Great Britain, but which, on the 4th of July, 1776, by their representatives in congress assembled, made a solemn declaration of independence, and were afterwards acknowledged free and independent states by the treaty of Paris, in 1783. They are Massachusets, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, N. and S. Carolina, and Georgia. Only eleven of these states acceded, at first, to the new federal constitution, but they were afterward joined by N. Carolina and Rhode Island; and Kentucky and Vermont having since been added to them. The present number of the states that form this great American republic is fifteen. See AMERICA.

UNNA, a river of Croatia.

UNST, the most remote of the Shetland Islands, extending beyond lat. 61. o. N. It is 8 miles long and 4 broad, and contains about 300 houses, and 1688 inhabitants. Fishing is an important branch of business among the islanders, 80 tons being taken on an average yearly. Rats, mice, frogs, toads, and adders, are unknown here.

Unsted, Surry, S. of Godalmin. Unston, Derbys. in Scarsdale.

UNTERSEEN. See UNDERSWEN.

Unthank, Cumberl. NE. of Kirk-Oswald, in Dacre parish. Unthank, Durham, on the Wear, opposite to Stanhope. Unthank, SW. of Durham. Uny, Cornwall, near Lalant, N. of Market-Jew. Uny, Cornwall, near Redruth.

UNZA, a province of Russia, the largest division of the government of Kostrom.

VOERDEN, a town of Paderborn; also a town of Osnaburgh.

VOGHERA, a town of Pavia.

VOGLABRUCK, a town of Austria.

VOID, a town in the dept. of Meurthe, 10 miles W. of Toul.

VOIGTLAND, a territory of Upper Saxony, mostly subject to the elector. Vogt was anciently a title in the empire, which was discontinued towards the middle of the 14th century. The learned are not agreed as to what the name and dignity imported.

VOLANO, a sea-port in the Ferrarese, at the southern mouth of the Po.

VOLCANELLO, a small volcanic island, between Lipari and Volcano.

VOLCANO, one of the Lipari Islands, in the Mediterranean, lying to the S. of the Island of Lipari. It is 12 miles in circumference, and is a volcano, in the form of a broken cone, but now emits smoke only. Volcano, as well as all the rest of these islands, is supposed to have been produced by an eruption from subterranean fire. The production of this island, in particular, happened in the early time of the Roman republic, and is recorded by Eusebius, Pliny, and others.

VOLGA, the largest river in Europe, which has it's source in two small lakes, in the government of Tver, in Russia. It begins to be navigable a few miles above that town. It is considerably augmented here by the junction of the Tverza, which is a broader, deeper, and more rapid river. By means of the Tverza, a communication is made between the Volga and the Neva, or, in other words, between the Caspian and the Baltic. This great river waters some of the finest provinces in the Russian empire, passes by Yaroslaf, Kostroma, Nishnei-Novogorod, Casan, Simbirsk, and Saratof; entering the Caspian Sea, by several mouths, below Astracan.

VOLHINIA, a palatinate of Poland, W. of that of Kiov, about 180 miles in length, and from 80 to 120 in breadth. It consists chiefly of well-watered plains, producing a great surplus of corn. Rosemary, asparagus, &c. grow wild in the woods, and can hardly be distinguished from those cultivated in the gardens. Lucko is the capital.

VOLKENMARCK,

VOLKENMARCK, in Carinthia.

VOLLENHOVEN, a town and district of Overyssel, near the Zuyder Zee.

VOLO, a sea-port of Janna, or Thessaly, 38 miles SE. of Larissa.

VOLODIMIR, or VLADIMIR, a government of the Russian empire, formerly a province of Moscow. The soil is extremely fertile, and in the forests are innumerable swarms of bees.

VOLODIMIR, or VLADIMIR, a town of Russia, capital of the government of the same name, and seated on the river Kliasma. It was once the metropolis of the empire, and is 100 miles E. by N. of Moscow.

VOLOGDA, formerly the largest of all the Russian European governments, as it contained the provinces of Vologda, Archangel, and Veliki Ustiug. It is now divided into the two provinces of Vologda and Veliki-Ustiug, and is a marshy country, full of forests, lakes, and rivers, and noted for it's fine wool.

VOLOGDA, a town of Russia, in the government and province of the same name. The inhabitants trade in hemp, matting, leather, and tallow. It is seated on the river Vologda, 308 miles S. by E. of Petersburgh.

VOLTA, a river of Guinea, which falls into the Atlantic, 24 miles E. of Acra.

VOLTERRA, a town of Tuscany, containing 25 churches, chapels, or oratories, and 20 religious houses. It is a lonely, mean place, and entire villages in the neighbourhood lie in ruins. It is noted for it's medicinal waters, and is seated on a mountain, 32 miles SE. of Pisa.

VOLTURNO, a river of Naples, which falls into the Gulf of Gaieta.

VOLTURARA, a town of Capitanata; also a town of Principato Ultra.

VOLVIC, a town in the dept. of Puy-de-Dome, two miles SW. of Riom. Here are immense quarries, formed by a current of prodigious lavas, which furnish materials for buildings, and for the sculptor.

VOORN, an island of S. Holland, between the mouths of the river Maese. Brill is the capital. This island, with that of Goree and Overflackee, which are near it, make the territory called Voornland, which was anciently part of Zealand.

VOORN, an island and fort between the rivers Waal and Meuse, 9 miles NNE. of Bois-le-Duc.

VORONETZ, a government of Russia, the capital of which, of the same name, is seated on the river Voronetz, near it's junction with the Don, 256 miles S. of Moscow.

VOSGES, a department of France, including the S. part of Lorrain, which was lately a province of the same name. It is so called, from a large chain of mountains, covered with wood, that separate this department from the departments of Upper Saone and Upper Rhine. Epinal is the capital.

Votherfield, Hants, S. of Alton.

VOUILLE, a village in the department of Vienne, 10 miles NW. of Poitiers. Here Clovis gained, in 507, a battle against Alaric, king of Visigoths, (whom he slew with his own hand) which extended the dominions of the Franks from the Loire to the Pyrenees.

Vowelscomb, Devonf. NE. of Modbury. Upberry, Bedfordf. in Pullox-Hill parish. Upberry, Kent, a manor of Gillingham. Upburn-Denicot, Bucks, near Beaconsfield. Upcerne, Dorsetf. a mile and a half NW. of Cerne-Abbas. Upchurch, Kent, 3 miles and a half NW. of Milton, and 5 from Chatham. Upcote, Devonf. in Cheriton parish. Uphall, Essex, near Great Ilford. Uphall, Herts, between Puckeridge and Albury. Upham, Hants, NW. of Bishop's-Waltham. Up-Hatherley, Glouces. a hamlet to Shurdington. Uphaven, Wiltshire, 10 miles by W. of Marlborough. Uphill, Somerf. near the passage to Wales, across the Bristol Channel. Upholland, Linc.

UPLAND, a province of Sweden, bounded on the N. and W. by Westmania and Gestricia; on the NE. by the Baltic; and on the S. by the Malar Lake. It is about 70 miles in length, and 55 in it's greatest breadth, is very populous, and fertile in corn, and has mines of iron and lead. Stockholm is the capital.

Upleadon, Glouceſterſ. on the Leden, 3 miles E. of Newent. Upleatham, Yorkſ. N. of Gisborough. Up Lyme, or Nether Lyme, Dorsetshire, near Lyme Regis. Up Loman, Devonſ. NE. of Tiverton. Upminster, Essex, 15 miles E. by N. of London. Upnor-Castle, Kent, near Frendsbury, almost opposite Chatham-Dock, was built by Queen Elizabeth, for defence of the Medway. It's platform carries 37 guns, that command two reaches of the river, and defend all the ships that ride between them and Rochester bridge. Upper Ottery; see Mount Ottery. Up Park, Sussex, in Harting parish. Upperleigh, Glouceſ. in Westbury parish.

*UPPINGHAM, a well-built town of Rutland, with a good free-school, and an hospital. It is 6 miles S. of Oakham, and 90 N. by W. of London. Market on Wednesday.

Uppingham,

Uppington, Shropſ. NW. of Wrekin-Hill. Uprightly, Cumberl. near Carliſle.

UPSALA, a town of Sweden, in Upland, anciently the reſidence of the ſovereigns, and where the Heathen prieſts, in the times of paganiſm, offered the greateſt ſacrifices. It contains, excluſive of the ſtudents, about 3000 inhabitants. The groundplot is extremely regular. It is divided into two almoſt equal parts by the ſmall river Sala; and the ſtreets are drawn at right angles from a central kind of ſquare. A few of the houſes are built of brick, and ſtuccoed; but the generality are conſtructed of trunks, ſmoothed into the ſhape of planks, and painted red. The roofs are covered in with turf; and each houſe has it's ſmall court-yard, or garden. Upſala was formerly the metropolis of Sweden, and the royal reſidence. The ancient palace was a magnificent building, until great part of it was conſumed by fire in 1702. The cathedral, which is a large Gothic ſtructure of brick, has been ſeveral times greatly damaged by fire, and as often repaired. The univerſity is the moſt ancient in Sweden, and is the firſt ſeminary in the North for academical education. It's library contains many valuable books, and near a thouſand manuſcripts. Among theſe is the Codex Argenteus, ſuppoſed to be Uphila's Gothic tranſlation of the Four Evangeliſts; but it ſeems rather to be written in the language of the ancient Franks. The Royal Society here is likewiſe the oldeſt literary academy in the North. Here is a botanical garden, of which the celebrated Linné was ſuperintendant. The Swediſh geographers compute their longitude from Upſal. Upſala is 35 miles NNW. of Stockholm.

Upſall and Caſtle, Yorkſ. N. of Thirſk. Upſetlington, Northumberl. near Berwick. Upſhire, Eſſex, near Waltham-Abbey. Upſidling, Dorſetſ. W. of Cerne-Abbey. Upſtreet, Kent, in Chiſlet pariſh, W. of Thanet Iſle.

UPTON, a well-built town of Worceſterſhire, ſeated on the river Severn. It is 11 miles S. of Worceſter, and 109 WNW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Upton, Berks, between Abingdon and Eaſt Iſley. Upton, Bucks, near Datchet and Eaton. Upton, N. of Cheſter, between the Dee and Merſey. Upton, Cheſhire, near Overchurch and Woodchurch. Upton, Dorſetſ. near Oſminton. Upton, Dorſetſ. near Bridport. Upton, Dorſetſ. 2 miles from Hamworthy. Upton, Eſſex, in Weſt Ham pariſh. Upton, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Hawkeſbury. Upton, Glouceſ. in Tetbury pariſh. Upton, Glouceſ. near Badminton. Upton, Hants, N. of Andover. Upton, Hereſordſ. NE. of Roſs. Upton, Huntingd. SE. of the Giddings. Upton, Leiceſterſ. in Sibſton pariſh, SW. of Boſworth. Upton, Lincolnſ. SE. of Gainſborough. Upton, Norfolk, N. of Accle. Upton, Northamptonſ. NW. of Peterborough. Upton, W. of Northampton. Upton, Nottingh. in Headon pariſh. Upton, Nottingh. E. of Southwell. Upton, SE. of Shrewſbury. Upton, Somerſetſ. NE. of Dulverton. Upton, Warwickſ. near Ratley. Upton, Warwickſ. E. of Alceſter. Upton, Yorkſ. NE. of Barneſley. Upton-Biſhops, Herefordſhire, NE. of Roſs. Upton-Chenay, Glouceſterſ. near Bitton. Upton Creſſet, or Little, Shropſ. SW. of Bridgnorth. Upton-Dring, Yorkſ. in Holderneſs, NW. of Hornſey. Upton-Grey, Hants, SW. of Odiam. Upton-Helion, Devonſ. N. of Crediton. Upton, Higher, Devonſhire, in Columpton pariſh. Upton, St. Leonard's, 3 miles SE. of Glouceſter. Upton-Lovel, Wilts, SE. of Hareſbury. Upton Nolle, Somerſetſ. between Frome and Bruton. Upton-Pine, Devonſ. N. of Exeter. Upton Scudamore, Wilts, N. of Warminſter. Upton Snodeſbury, NE. of Worceſter. Upton Warin, Worceſterſhire, between Droitwich and Bromſgrove. Upware, Cambridgeſ. W. of Soham. Upway, near Dorcheſter. Upwell, Cambridgeſhire, near Wiſbeach. Upwood, Huntingdonſ. W. of Ramſey.

URABA, a province of Terra Firma, on a gulf of the ſame name, in the government of Carthagena, E. of the province of Darien.

URAL, a river of the Ruſſian empire, in Aſia, which riſes in Mount Caucaſus, and watering Uraiſk, in the province of Orenburg, falls into the Caſpian Sea, by three mouths, below Gurief.

URALIAN COSSACS, a people that inhabit the Ruſſian province of Orenburg, in Aſia, on the S. ſide of the river Ural. Theſe Coſſacs are deſcended from thoſe of the Don: they profeſs the Greek religion; but there are a kind of diſſenters from the eſtabliſhed religion, whom the Ruſſians called Roſkolniki, or Separatiſts, and who ſtyle themſelves Staroverki, or Old Believers: they conſider the ſervice of the eſtabliſhed church as profane and ſacrilegious, and have their own prieſts and ceremonies. The Uralian Coſſacs are all enthuſiaſts for the ancient ritual, and ſeem to prize their beards more than their lives. The river Yaik however, is now called Ural; the Yaik Coſſacs are denominated Uralian Coſſacs; and the town of Yaitſk, Uralſk.

Uralsk. The Uralian Coſſacs enjoy the right of fiſhing on the coaſt of the Caſpian Sea, for 47 miles on each ſide of the river Ural. Their principal fiſhery is for ſturgeons and beluga, whoſe roe ſupplies large quantities of caviare; and the fiſh, which are chiefly ſalted and dried, afford a conſiderable article of conſumption in the Ruſſian empire. In conſequence of theſe fiſheries, theſe Coſſacs are very rich.

Uralsk, a town of Ruſſia, in the government of Caucaſus, ſeated on the river Ural, 328 miles NNE. of Aſtracan. Till the year 1774, it was called Yaitſk. See the preceding article.

Uranienburgh, was formerly a magnificent caſtle of Denmark, in the little Iſland of Huen, in the Sound. It was built for Tycho Brahe, who called it Uranienburgh, or the Caſtle of the Heavens, and who here made his obſervations; but it is now in ruins.

Urbanea, a town of Urbino.

Urbino, the capital of the duchy of Urbino. The houſes are well built, and great quantities of fine earthen ware are made here. It is 18 miles S. of Rimini, and 120 NE. of Rome.

Urbino, a duchy of Italy, in the pope's territory, on the Gulf of Venice. It is about 55 miles in length, and 45 in breadth. Here is great plenty of fiſh and game; but the air is not very wholeſome, nor is the ſoil fertile. Urbino is the capital.

Urchfont, Wilts, NE. of Eaſt Lavington. Urchingfield, SW. of Hereford. Urcote, Glouceſ. S. of Thornbury.

Urgantz, a town of Aſia, in the country of Charaſm, on a river which runs into the Lake of Aral. It was formerly a very conſiderable place, having been four miles in circumference; but it is now greatly reduced. Lat. 42. 55. N. lon. 59. 25. E.

Urgel, a town of Catalonia, ſeated on the river Sagra, 60 miles W. of Perpignan, and 78 N. by W. of Barcelona.

Uri, the moſt ſouthern canton of Swiſſerland, and the fourth in rank. It is bounded on the N. by the canton of Schweitz, and the Lake of the Four Cantons; on the E. by the Griſons, and the canton of Glarus; on the S. by the bailiwicks of Italy; and on the W. by the canton of Underwalden and part of Bern. It is about 60 miles in length and 28 in breadth. Altorff is the capital. The people are Roman Catholics, and were formerly free, under the juriſdiction of the empire. Albert I. however, aiming at their entire ſubjection, placed a ſevere vogt over them, whoſe name was Geszler, who, among other irritating procedures, ſet up a hat on a pole, at Altorff, with orders that the ſame tokens of regard ſhould be paid to it as to his own perſon. William Tell openly refuſed to comply with this mark of ſlavery, and ſoon after, viz. in 1308, effected an union between the three cantons of Uri, Schweitz, and Underwalden, for ſhaking off the Auſtrian yoke, which, in 1315, was improved into a perpetual alliance.

Uri, Lake of, in Swiſſerland. See Waldstatter-See.

Urlingford, in Kilkenny, Leinſter.

Urmſton, Lancaſ. SW. of Mancheſter.

Urpeth, Durham, NW. of Lumley-Caſtle.

Urſwick, Lancaſ. S. of Ulverſton.

Usbec Tartary, a country of Weſtern Tartary, S. of the country of the Kalmucs. Theſe Tartars are divided into ſeveral tribes, governed by their reſpective khans; but formerly they were under one ſovereign, and were accounted the moſt powerful of all the Tartarian nations. Their principal khans pride themſelves in being deſcended from Tamerlane, whoſe birthplace was the ancient city of Samarcand. The Uſbecs, in their perſons, are ſaid to have fairer complexions and neater features than the Kalmucs. Their religious profeſſion is Mahometaniſm; and they differ, in general, very little from the people of the northern provinces of Hindooſtan. That country is ſupplied hence with the moſt ſerviceable horſes, camels, and other cattle.

Uſborn, Great and Little, Yorkſ. near the Ouſe, SE. of Boroughbridge.

Usedom, an iſland of Pomerania, ſeated at the mouth of the river Oder, on the Baltic, 30 miles in length, and irregular in breadth. It is ſubject to Pruſſia, and has a town of the ſame name, ſituated on the SW. coaſt.

Userche, a town in the dept. of Correze, 16 miles NNW. of Tulle, and 217 S. of Paris.

Ushant, an iſland of France, on the coaſt of Finiſterre, about 12 miles from the continent. It is 10 miles in circumference, and contains ſeveral hamlets, a caſtle, a ſmall port, and about 700 inhabitants.

*Usk, a town of Monmouthſhire, ſeated on the river Uſk. It is a large place, with well-built ſtone houſes, 141 miles W. of London. Market on Monday.

Usk, a river of S. Wales, which riſes on the W. ſide of Brecknockſhire, and watering the towns of Brecon, Crickhowel, Abergavenny, Abergavenny, Usk, and Caerleon, enters the Briſtol Channel below Newport.

Uſk, in Kildare, Leinſter.

Uſkelt, Yorkſ. near the river Wharfe, NE. of Sherborn. Uſlett, Yorkſ. by the Ouſe, NW. of Burton-upon-Trent.

USNEACH, a mountain in Weſt Meath, Leinſter, on which fires were kindled by the Druids, in honour of Beal, or the Sun. It was the grand Bealtinne of the northern parts of Leinſter, where the ſtates aſſembled, and held judgment on criminals, when ſuch as were accounted worthy of death, were burnt between two fires of Beal. This ſeems to have given riſe to the account of the Druids offering up human victims as ſacrifices. Children, alſo, and cattle, were made to paſs between theſe fires by way of purification.

USSEL, a town in the dept. of Correze, 30 miles NE. of Tulle.

Uſſelby, Linc. NW. of Market-Raiſin. Uſſhaw, W. of Durham.

USTIANO, a town in the Mantuan.

Uſtings, Bucks, between Winſlow and Ayleſbury.

USTIUG, a town of Vologda.

Uſton, Berks, on the Kennet, between Silham and Aldermaſton. Uſway, a river in Northumberland, which runs into the Cocket, below Whitſide. Uſworth, Durham, W. of Hilton-Caſtle. Utkinton, Cheſhire, a mile from Torperley.

UTRECHT, a large and celebrated city of the United Provinces, capital of a province of the ſame name. It is of a ſquare form, and about 3 miles in circumference, without it's four ſuburbs, which are conſiderable. The ſteeple of the cathedral is very lofty, and the handſomeſt in the United Provinces. There is a great number of churches and hoſpitals. The ſtudents of the univerſity, which is very famous, wear their ordinary dreſs, and board in private houſes in the town, as there are ſcarcely any endowed colleges in Holland. All the avenues to this city are handſome, and the environs are full of gardens, walks, and groves, which, added to the purity of the air, render Utrecht one of the moſt agreeable places for reſidence in theſe parts, and accordingly a great many opulent families reſort hither. In July, 1672, the French made themſelves maſters of it, when Louis XIV. entered the city in ſtate, accompanied by the Duke of Orleans and the Duke of Monmouth; but on the 13th of November, the Duke of Luxemburg, who had been appointed governor, abandoned the city and the whole province, after having compelled them to pay 450,000 livres. This town is famous for the treaty of union, ſigned in 1579, between the Seven Provinces, which laid the foundation of the republic; as likewiſe for the treaty of peace concluded here, in 1713, between the allies and France. It is ſeated on the ancient channel of the Rhine, 18 miles SSE. of Amſterdam, and 27 NE. of Rotterdam. Lat. 52. 7. N. lon. 5. 8. E.

UTRECHT, one of the Dutch United Provinces, ſurrounded on all ſides by Holland and Guelderland, excepting one ſmall ſtrip of land to the northward, and bordering on the Zuyder Zee. The air is very healthy here; nor are there any inundations to fear, as in other provinces; the ſoil is moſtly rich meadow, though, in many parts, full of turf grounds, and the country is pleaſant. The length of it is not above 30 miles, and the breadth is no more than 20, although it contains 70 towns and villages. The number of Calviniſt miniſters is 79, who hold a ſynod once a year at Utrecht. The Roman Catholics have above 30 churches. There are but few Lutherans, Remonſtrants, and Anabapriſts.

Utterby, Lincolnſ. 3 miles from Louth.

*UTTOXETER, a large town of Staffordſhire, with a bridge over the river Dove, that leads into Derbyſhire. Here is a great number of iron-forges, and it's market is the greateſt in this part of England, for corn, cattle, hogs, ſheep, butter, and cheeſe. By the late inland navigations, it communicates with all the midland counties. It is ſeated among excellent paſtures for breeding and fattening cattle, 13 miles NE. of Stafford, and 136 NW. of London. Market on Wedneſday. Fairs on May 6th, and July 31ſt.

UTZNACH, a town of Zurich, which belongs, however, to the cantons of Glarus and Schweitz, who appoint a bailiff alternately.

Vurnavey, a river of Montgomeryſhire, which runs into the Severn near Melverly.

*UXBRIDGE, a town of Middleſex, which, though it is a hamlet to Great Hillingdon, is governed independently by two bailiffs, two conſtables, and four headboroughs. The Coln runs through it, in two ſtreams, and over the main ſtream is a ſtone bridge, that leads into Buckinghamſhire. Near it is a navigable canal, which communicates with the Thames at Brentford. A treaty was carried on here between Charles I. and the parliament, in 1645; but it was broken off. The houſe in which the plenipotentiaries met, at the lower end of the town, is ſtill called the Treaty-Houſe. Near this town are the remains of a camp, ſuppoſed to be Britiſh.

Uxbridge is 15 miles W. by N. of London. Market on Thurſday.

Uxenden, Middleſex, E. of Harrow-on-the-Hill. Uxmore, Oxfordſ. NW. of Henley-upon-Thames.

UZEDA, a town of New Caſtile, 30 miles N. of Madrid.

UZEL, a town in the dept. of the North Coaſt, with a conſiderable trade. It is 17 miles S. of St. Brieux.

UZES, a town in the dept. of Gard, ſeated in a country abounding in corn, oil, ſilk, cattle, and good wine, 12 miles N. of Niſmes.

WAD

WAADBRIDGE, or WADEBRIDGE. See WAREBRIDGE.

WAAG, or VAG, a river of Hungary, which riſes in the Carpathian mountains, paſſes by Leopoldſtadt, and falls into the Danube, oppoſite the Iſland of Schut.

WAAL, or WAHAL, a river of the United Provinces, one of the outlets of the Rhine, which branches off from that river at Schencken Schans. It runs from E. to W. through Guelderland, paſſes by Nimeguen, Tiel, Bommel, and Gorcum; and joining the Maeſe, paſſes by Dort, and falls into the German Ocean below Briel. After both rivers have formed one ſtream, (near Gorcum) it is ſometimes called Merwe, and ſometimes Meuſe.

WADSTENA, a town of E. Gothland, on the Lake Wetter, 20 miles SS. of Linkioping.

Wadſworth, Yorkſ. NW. of Halifax. Wadworth, Yorkſhire, SW. of Doncaſter.

WAES, a territory in Flanders, extending from Ghent to Yſendick, along the river Scheldt. There are fine meadows, and good paſtures, with plenty of corn and flax, beſide horſes that are in high eſteem. St. Nicholas and Rupelmond are the principal places.

Wagen, Yorkſhire, N. of Hull.

WAGENINGEN, a town of Guelderland, on the Lech, 7 miles W. of Arnheim.

WAGRIA, a territory in the NE. part of Holſtein, between the Baltic and the Trave. It is about 20 miles in length and 15 in breadth.

WAIGATZ, ſtraits between Nova Zembla and the continent of Ruſſia.

Waight Court, Iſle of Wight, in Weſt Medina.

WAINFLEET, a town of Lincolnſhire, ſeated on a creek near the ſea, with ſeveral trading veſſels belonging to it, and an excellent freeſchool. It is 14 miles NNE. of Boſton, and 130 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

Waithy, Weſtmorl. near Kirby-Steven. Waitwith, Yorkſhire, near Richmond. Wakebridge-Hall, Derbyſ. NE. of Wirkſworth.

WAKEFIELD, a large, well-built town, in the W. Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated on the river Calder, which has been made navigable hither from Caſtleforth, and from hence to Eland and Halifax. The principal trade is in white cloths and tammies. It conſiſts chiefly of three ſpacious ſtreets, and is 28 miles SW. of York, and 184 NNW. of London. Markets on Thurſday Thurſday and Friday; the latter for woollen cloth.

Wakehurſt, and it's Park, Suſſex, E. of Worth-Foreſt. Wakering, Magna and Parva, Eſſex, near Shobury. Wakerton, or Wakely, Herts, SW. of Buntingford, and half a mile S. of Berkſden. Wakerley, Northamp. by the river Welland, N. of Rockingham-Foreſt. Wake's, or Elton's Tower, Somerſetſ. in Briſtol Channel, near Clevedon. Waketon, Great and Little, Norfolk, near Long Stratton, between Schole and Norwich. Wakthwaite, Cumberland, N. of Keſwick.

WALACHIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Moldavia and Tranſylvania; on the E. by Beſſarabia and the river Danube; on the S. by Bulgaria; and on the W. by Tranſylvania, the bannat of Temeſwar, and the Danube. It is 280 miles in length, and 150 in it's greateſt breadth. It abounds in excellent horſes and cattle, and there are mines of ſeveral kinds. The ſoil is very fertile; and there are good paſtures, with wine, oil, and all manner of European fruits. The inhabitants, who are chiefly of the Greek church, are wretchedly ignorant; and the higheſt attainments of the eccleſiaſtics ſeldom go beyond reading and ſinging well, and knowing the ceremonies of the church. Walachia is governed by a prince, often elected by the people, and ſtiled waywode, deſpot, or hoſpodar. He is a vaſſal of the Ottoman Porte; his yearly tribute generally amounting to about 60,000 ducats.

Walberton, Suſſex, SW. of Arundel. Walberry, Eſſex, near Hallingbury. Walbottle, Northumb. in Thraſterton manor. Walbridge, Somerſetſ. over the Frome, leads into Wilts.

WALCHEREN, an iſland of the United Provinces, the principal of Zealand. It is ſeparated from the iſlands of N. and S. Beveland, by the E. Scheldt, and from Dutch Flanders by the W. Scheldt; being ſurrounded on the other ſides by the German Ocean. It is about 13 miles in length and 8 in breadth, and, lying very low, is ſubject to inundations, but is pretty fruitful, and has good arable and paſture lands. The capital of this iſland, and of the whole province, is Middleburg.

Walcot, a village in Lincolnſhire, on the borders of the fens, within one mile of Folkingham. It has a chalybeate ſpring, formerly much frequented. Walcot, Worceſ. 2 miles NE. of Perſhore. Walcote, Leiceſterſ. E. of Lutterworth. Walcote, Lincolnſ. SW. of Tatterſhal. Walcote, Lincolnſ. near the Trent, N. of Burton. Walcote, Norfolk, near Happiſburgh. Walcote, Norfolk, near Diſs and Burſton. Walcote, Oxfordſ. near Charlbury. Walcote, Shropſ. near Chirbury. Walcote, Shropſhire, SE. of Biſhop's-Caſtle. Walcote, Shropſ. W. of Wellington. Walcote, Somerſetſ. at the entrance of Bath from Wilts. Walcote, Warwickſhire, in Haſelar. Walcote, Warwickſ. a hamlet of Granborough.

WALCOURT, a town of Namur, ſeated on the river Heure, between the Maeſe and Sambre. In 1689, Mareſchal d'Humieres, deſirous of celebrating the feaſt of St. Louis by a victory, attacked the allies, under Prince Waldeck and the Earl of Marlborough, near this place; but after a fight of about two hours, was obliged to retire with great loſs. It is 9 miles S. of Charleroy.

WALDBURG, a caſtle and county of Suabia.

WALDECK, a town in the circle of Upper Rhine, capital of a county of the ſame name. It is 18 miles WSW. of Caſſel.

WALDECK, a county in the circle of Upper Rhine, S. of the biſhopric of Paderborn, about 24 miles in length and 20 in breadth. The country abounds in cattle and grain, though it is ſomewhat mountainous and woody; and there are mines of iron, copper, quickſilver, and alum. It contains 13 towns and a market village, and is ſuppoſed to bring in above 100,000 rix dollars to the prince.

* WALDEN, SAFFRON, a town in Eſſex, ſeated among fields of ſaffron, which is here cultivated, though not ſo much of late as formerly. Dr. Stukely, deſcribing this town, ſays, it is the moſt beautiful ſituation he ever met with. It is 27 miles NW. by N. of Chelmsford, and 42 N. by E. of London. Market on Saturday.

Walden, Yorkſ. W. of North Cave. Walden, King's and St. Paul's, Herts, near Hitchin.

WALDENBURG, the name of ſeveral towns in Germany.

Walder, Suſſex, W. of Warbleton. Walderſhare, Kent, 4 miles and a half S. of Sandwich. Walderſwick, Suffolk, near Southwold. Walderton, Suſſex, near the Merdens. Waldingfield, Magna and Parva, Suffolk, between Sudbury and Billeſton. Waldinwells, Yorkſhire, SE. of Rotheram. Waldiſh, Dorſetſ. near Bridport. Walditch, Dorſetſ. a mile N. of Baunton.

WALDKIRCH, a town in Auſtrian Suabia, in the Briſgau.

Caſtle. Waldridge, Bucks, in Dynton pariſh. Waldringfield, Suffolk, on the Deben, S. of Woodbridge.

WALDSCHUT, a town of Suabia, one of the four Foreſt Towns, and ſubject to Auſtria.

WALDSTÆTTER SEE, or LAKE OF THE FOUR CANTONS, one of the fineſt lakes in Switzerland, with reſpect both to it's extent, being 20 miles in length, as to the ſublimity and variety of the ſcenery it exhibits. It conſiſts of three principal branches, called the Lakes of Lucern, Schweitz, and Uri. The upper branch, or Lake of Lucern, is in the form of a croſs, and is bounded towards the town by cultivated hills ſloping gradually from the water, contraſted on the oppoſite ſide by a maſs of barren and craggy rocks. Mount Pilate, one of the higheſt mountains in Switzerland, riſes boldly from this lake. Towards the E. of this branch, the lake contracts into a narrow creek, ſcarcely a mile acroſs. Soon after, it again widens, and we enter the ſecond branch, or Lake of Schweitz; with the canton of Underwalden on one ſide, and that of Schweitz on the other. Here the mountains are more lofty, and infinitely varied; ſome covered to the very ſummits with the moſt lively verdure, others perpendicular and craggy; here forming amphitheatres of wood; there jutting into the water in bold promontories. Near Brumen is the third branch, or Lake of Uri, which takes a SE. direction; the ſcenery the moſt ſublime imaginable. It is a deep and narrow lake, about 9 miles long, bordered on both ſides by rocks uncommonly wild and romantic, and, for the moſt part, perpendicular, with foreſts of beech and pine growing down their ſides to the very edge of the water.

WALES, a principality in the W. of the Iſland of Great Britain, comprehending 12 counties; namely, Angleſey, Carnarvonſhire, Denbighſhire, Flintſhire, Merionethſhire, and Montgomeryſhire, in North Wales; Brecknockſhire, Cardiganſhire, Carmarthenſhire, Glamorganſhire, Pembrokeſhire, and Radnorſhire, in South Wales. This country is, for the moſt part, mountainous, but it's produce ſufficient for the maintenance of the inhabitants. It is the country to which the ancient Britons fled, when this iſland was invaded by the victorious Saxons. They are now called Welſh, and continue to preſerve their ancient language. The weſtern part is bounded by St. George's Channel and the Iriſh Sea; the ſouthern by the Briſtol Channel; the northern by the Iriſh Sea; and the eaſtern by the counties of Cheſter, Salop, Hereford, and Monmouth. It contains 751 pariſhes, and 58 market-towns. The air is clear and ſharp, the cattle ſmall, and proviſions, in general, good and cheap. Wales is particularly remarkable for goats, which naturally delight in hilly countries; for fuel, they uſe wood, coal, and turfs. It is watered by many rivers, the principal of which are noted in the different counties. Wales was long governed by independent kings, till their laſt prince, Llewellyn, being vanquiſhed and ſlain, in 1283, Edward I. reduced the whole country under the Engliſh dominion. He alſo inveſted the principality in his ſecond ſon, Edward, who afterwards becoming heir of the Engliſh monarchy, the eldeſt ſon of the kings of England have ever ſince been created Prince of Wales. In the reign of Henry VIII. the government and juriſprudence of Wales were modelled according to the Engliſh form, and the inhabitants admitted to the enjoyment of all the Engliſh rights and liberties, particularly that of ſending members to parliament, a knight for every ſhire, and a burgeſs for every ſhire-town, except Merioneth.

WALES, NEW NORTH, a country of N. America, W. of Hudſon's Bay.

WALES, NEW SOUTH, a country of N. America, extending 150 leagues along the SW. coaſt of Hudſon's-Bay, and ſubject to Great Britain. See HUDSON'S-BAY, and LABRADOR.

WALES, NEW SOUTH, the eaſtern coaſt of New Holland, extending from lat. 42. 49. to 10. 37. S. being the NE. and SE. extremities of that vaſt iſland. This coaſt was firſt explored by Captain Cook, in 1770; and a deſign was formed, in conſequence of his recommendation, to ſettle a colony of convicts at Botany-Bay, in lat. 34. 0. S. Captain Arthur Phillip being appointed governor of the intended ſettlement, as well as commodore on the voyage, ſailed from Portſmouth, 1787, on board the Sirius frigate, accompanied by the Supply tender, three ſtoreſhips, and ſix tranſports, which had on board a detachment of marines, and 778 convicts, of which 220 were women. He arrived at Botany-Bay on the 18th of January, 1788; but finding this bay very ineligible, in many reſpects, for a colony, on farther exploring the coaſt, he fixed upon Port Jackſon, about three leagues and a half N. of Cape Banks; and here the ſettlement was begun, to which he gave the name of Sydney Cove. With reſpect to the country, a vaſt chain of lofty mountains runs nearly in a N. and S. direction, farther than the eye can reach, about 60 miles inland. The general face of the country is pleasing, diversified with gentle risings and small winding valleys, covered, for the most part, with large spreading trees, affording a succession of leaves in all seasons. A variety of flowering shrubs, almost entirely new to an European, and of exquisite fragrance, abound in those places which are free from trees; and, among these, a tall shrub, bearing an elegant flower, which smells like English may, is peculiarly delightful, and perfumes the air to a great distance. The trees, according to Captain Tench and others, are of so bad a grain, that they can scarcely be used for any purpose. This, however, has been ascribed, in Governor Phillip's voyage, to their being used in an unseasoned state. They yield vast quantities of red gum, which was found a cure for the dysentery. It is of an acrid quality, and therefore requires to be given along with opiates. The tree which yields it is of a very considerable size, and grows to a great height before it puts out any branches. The gum itself is usually compared to sanguis draconis, but differs from it in being soluble in water, which the sanguis draconis is not. It may be extracted from the wood by tapping, or taken out of the veins when dry. There is likewise a yellow gum, which has the same medicinal qualities, but in an inferior degree. It is properly a resin, being entirely insoluble in water. It greatly resembles gamboge, but has not the property of staining, and is produced by a low, small plant, with long grassy leaves. The stem is strong and light, and is used by the natives for making their spears. The resin is generally dug up from the soil under the tree, not collected from it, and may perhaps be the same which Tasman calls gum lac of the ground. It has been tried by Dr. Blane, physician to St. Thomas's Hospital, in London, who found it very efficacious in the cure of old fluxes. Many of the plants of this country have been imported into Britain, and are now flourishing in perfection, not only in the royal botanical garden at Kew, but in many private collections. Of the few esculent plants, are a kind of bean resembling the coccos of the W. Indies, a sort of parsley and purslain; two sorts of yam, the cabbage-tree, and a palm-tree, whose nuts are very good food for hogs; with a species of cherry-tree, a wild fig, and another tree, whose fruit is not unlike a pine-apple in appearance. With respect to the climate of this country, it appears not to be disagreeable: the heat has never been excessive in summer, nor is the cold intolerable in winter. Storms of thunder and lightning are frequent; but these are common to all warm countries. The quadrupeds hitherto discovered are principally of the opossum kind, of which the most remarkable is the kangaroo. There is also a species of dogs, very different from those known in Europe. They are extremely fierce, and cannot be brought to the same degree of familiarity with those we are acquainted with. Some of them have been brought to England, but still retain their native ferocity. These dogs, which are the only domestic animal they have, resemble the fox-dog of England. In their language, these animals are called dinge; but all other quadrupeds, without exception, they name kanguroo. There are many beautiful birds of various kinds; among which, the principal are a black swan, it's wings edged with white, it's bill tinged with red; and the ostrich, or cassowary, which frequently reaches the height of seven feet, or more. Besides these, there are various kinds of sea and water fowl, soland geese, pelicans of an enormous size, gulls, shaggs, &c. with pigeons, quails, herons, cranes, hawks, eagles, bats, and many other land birds. Several kinds of serpents, both harmless and noxious, large spiders, centipedes, scolopendras, and lizards, have likewise been met with; together with a few insects, the principal of which are the mosquito and three or four species of ants, some as green as a leaf, which build their nests upon trees in a very singular manner. They bend down several of the leaves, each of which is as broad as a man's hand, and glue the points of them together, so as to form a purse; the viscus, used for this purpose, is an animal juice, which nature has enabled them to elaborate. Their sting is scarcely less painful than that of a bee. There are likewise many fishes, which are not known in Europe; and on the shoals and reefs are incredible numbers of the finest green turtles, gigantic cockles, lobsters, oysters, and crabs of various kinds. Some very large sharks have been seen in Port Jackson, and two smaller species, one named the Port Jackson shark, the other Watts's shark. The latter, notwithstanding it's diminutive size (the mouth scarcely exceeding an inch in breadth) is excessively voracious. One of them having been taken in, and flung down upon the deck, lay there quiet for two hours; after which, Mr. Watts's dog happening to pass by, the fish sprung upon it with all the ferocity imaginable, and ſeized it by the leg in ſuch a manner, that the animal could not diſengage itſelf without aſſiſtance. The inhabitants of New S. Wales go entirely naked; and though pleaſed at firſt with ſome ornaments that were given them, they ſoon threw them away as uſeleſs. It does not appear, however, that they are inſenſible of the benefits of clothing, or of ſome of the conveniences of which their new neighbours are in poſſeſſion. Some of them, whom the coloniſts partly clothed, ſeemed to be pleaſed with the comfortable warmth they derived from it; and they all expreſs a great deſire for the iron tools which they ſee their neighbours make uſe of. Their colour is rather a deep chocolate than a full black; but the filth with which their ſkins are uniformly covered, prevents it's true colour from appearing. At ſome of their interviews with the coloniſts, ſeveral droll inſtances happened of their miſtaking the negroes amongſt the coloniſts for their own countrymen. Notwithſtanding their diſregard for European finery, they are fond of adorning, or rather deforming their bodies with ſcars, which have an uncommon, or rather hideous appearance. Sometimes the fleſh is raiſed ſeveral inches from the ſkin, and appears as if filled with wind; and all theſe ſeem to be reckoned marks of honour among them. Some of them perforate the cartilage of the noſe, and thruſt through it a bone as thick as a man's finger, and five or ſix inches long. This hideous kind of ornament, humorouſly called by the ſailors their ſprit-ſail-yard, ſo effectually ſtops up both noſtrils, that they are forced to keep their mouths wide open for breath, and ſnuffle ſo when they ſpeak, that they are ſcarcely intelligible even to one another. Their hair is generally ſo much clotted with the red gum already mentioned, that they reſemble a mop. They paint themſelves with various colours, and ornament themſelves with beads and ſhells, but make no uſe of the beautiful feathers procured from the birds of the country. Moſt of the men want one of the foreteeth in the upper-jaw, which alſo appears to be a badge of honour among them. It is very common among the women to cut off two joints of the little finger; which, conſidering the clumſineſs of the amputating inſtruments they poſſeſs, muſt be a very painful operation. The New Hollanders appear extremely deficient in the uſeful arts. Of the cultivation of the ground they have no notion, nor can they be prevailed upon to eat bread or dreſſed meat. Hence they depend entirely for ſubſiſtence on the fruits and roots they can gather, and the fiſh they catch. They frequently ſet fire to the graſs, in order to drive out the opoſſums, and other animals, from their retreats; and they have been obſerved to ſet decoys for quails. They ſometimes contrive to kill the kanguroo, and even birds of various kinds. As all theſe reſources however, muſt be at beſt precarious, it is no wonder that they are frequently diſtreſſed for proviſions. Thus, in ſummer, they would eat neither the ſhark nor the ſting-ray; but, in winter any thing was acceptable. A young whale being driven on ſhore, was quickly cut in pieces and carried off. They broiled it only long enough to ſcorch the outſide; and in this raw ſtate they eat all their fiſh. They broil alſo the fern root, and another, the ſpecies of which is unknown. They bake their proviſions, moreover, by the help of hot ſtones, like the inhabitants of the iſlands in the Southern Ocean. Their chief ſubſiſtence, however, is fiſh; and when theſe happened to be ſcarce, they were wont to watch the firſt opportunity when the coloniſts hauled the ſeine, and often ſeized the whole, though a part had formerly been offered or given them. They ſometimes ſtrike the fiſh from the canoes with their ſpears, ſometimes catch them with hooks, and alſo make uſe of nets, which are generally made of the fibres of the flax plants, with very little preparation, and are ſtrong and heavy; the lines of which they are compoſed being twiſted like whipcord. Some of them, however, appear to be made of the fur of an animal, and others of cotton. The meſhes of their nets are made of very large loops artificially inſerted into each other, but without any knots. Their hooks are made of the inſide of a ſhell very much reſembling mother-of-pearl. Their canoes are nothing more than large pieces of bark tied up at both ends with vines; and conſidering the ſlight texture of theſe veſſels, we cannot but admire the dexterity with which they are managed, and the boldneſs with which they venture out to ſea in them. They generally carry fire along with them in theſe canoes, to dreſs their fiſh when caught. When fiſhing with the hook, if the fiſh appears too ſtrong to be drawn aſhore by the line, the canoe is paddled to the ſhore; and while one man gently draws the fiſh along, another ſtands ready to ſtrike it with a ſpear, in which he generally ſucceeds. There is no good reaſon for ſuppoſing them to be cannibals; and they never eat animal ſubſtances, ſtances but raw, or next to it. Some of their vegetables are poiſonous when raw, but deprived of this property when boiled. A convict unhappily experienced this by eating them in an unprepared ſtate; in conſequence of which he died in 24 hours. If bread be given to them, they chew and ſpit it out again, ſeldom chuſing to ſwallow it. They like ſalt beef and pork rather better; but they could never be brought to taſte ſpirits a ſecond time. Their huts are formed in a very rude and barbarous manner. They conſiſt only of pieces of bark laid out together in the form of an oven, open at one end, and very low, though long enough for a man to lie at full length. They alſo take ſhelter in the caverns with which the rocks abound, and in the trunks of large trees, which they excavate by means of fire. The cuſtom of going naked does not inure them ſo to the climate as to make them inſenſible of the injuries of the weather. The coloniſts had repeated opportunities of obſerving this, by ſeeing them ſhivering with cold in the winter time, or huddling together in heaps in their huts, or in caverns, till a fire could be kindled to warm them. It ſeems probable, however, that ſome knowledge of the arts will ſoon be introduced among them, as ſome have been ſeen attentively conſidering the utenſils and conveniences of the Europeans, with a view, ſeemingly of making ſimilar improvements of their own. It has alſo been obſerved, that in ſome things they poſſeſs a very great power of imitation. They can imitate the ſongs and language of the Europeans almoſt inſtantaneouſly, much better than the latter can imitate theirs by long practices. Their talent for imitation is diſcernible alſo in their ſculptures, repreſenting men and other animals, every where met with on the rocks; which, though rude, are very ſurpriſing for people who have not the knowledge even of conſtructing habitations in the leaſt degree comfortable for themſelves, or even clothes to preſerve them from the cold. In their perſons, they are active, vigorous, and ſtout, though generally lean. They have a quick and piercing ſight, and their ſenſe of ſmelling is very acute. One of them having touched a piece of pork, held out his finger for his companion to ſmell, with ſtrong marks of diſguſt. The only kind of food they eagerly accept of is fiſh. Few of the women, comparatively ſpeaking, have been ſeen; and ſuch of the females as have been ſeen, have ſoft and pleaſing voices; and ſeem to be very chaſte; and notwithſtanding their barbariſm, ſeem not to be entirely deſtitute of modeſty. The men generally diſplay great perſonal courage on the appearance of any danger. No encounters between parties of the natives themſelves have been obſerved, though, from ſome circumſtances, it appears that wars are carried on among them. They have more than once been ſeen aſſembled, as if bent on ſome expedition. An officer, one day, met 14 of them marching along in a regular Indian file through the woods, each man having a ſpear in one hand, and a ſtone in the other. A chief appeared at their head, who was diſtinguiſhed from the reſt by being painted. They paſſed on peaceably, though greatly ſuperior in numbers to the Engliſh. On another occaſion, they offered no hoſtilities, when aſſembled to the number of 200 or 300, and meeting the governor attended only by a ſmall party. With all their courage, however, they are much afraid of a muſket, and almoſt equally ſo of a red coat, which they know to be the martial dreſs of the Europeans. The miſchief which they have hitherto done has been exerciſed only on ſome of the ſtraggling convicts, moſt of whom, probably, have been the agreſſors. Though they allow their beards to grow to a conſiderable length, it does not appear that they conſider them as any ornament, but rather the contrary. Some young gentlemen belonging to the Sirius, one day met an old man in the woods with a beard of conſiderable length, which they let him know they could rid him of, ſtroaking their chins, and thus intimating the ſmoothneſs of them. At length he conſented; and one of them taking a penknife from his pocket, and making the beſt ſubſtitute for lather he could, performed the operation with ſuch ſucceſs, that he ſeemed highly delighted. In a few days he paddled along ſide of the Sirius, pointing to his beard; but he could not by any means be prevailed upon to enter the ſhip. On this a barber went down to him, who again freed him from his beard, at which he expreſſed the utmoſt ſatisfaction. They certainly burn their dead; which, perhaps, has given riſe to the ſtory of their being cannibals. Governor Phillip obſerving the ground to be raiſed in ſeveral places, cauſed one of theſe tumuli to be opened, in which were found a jawbone half conſumed, and ſome aſhes. From the manner in which the aſhes are depoſited, it appears that the body has been laid at length, raiſed from the ground a little ſpace, and conſumed in that poſture, being afterward lightly covered with mould.

They are so honest among themselves, that they leave their spears, and other implements on the open beach, in perfect security of their remaining untouched. They are very expert at throwing their javelins, and will hit a mark with great certainty at a considerable distance. To produce fire, they take two pieces of dry, soft wood; one a stick about nine inches long, the other flat. The stick they shape into an obtuse point at one end; and pressing it upon the other, turn it out nimbly, by holding it between both their hands, as we do a chocolate mill; often shifting their hands up, and then moving them down upon it, to increase the pressure as much as possible. By this method, they get fire in less than two minutes, and from the smallest spark they increase it with great speed and dexterity. These people are more numerous than was at first imagined; though still the number of inhabitants must be accounted few in comparison to the extent of the country; and there is great reason to believe that the interior parts are uninhabited; as from their great use of fish, it seems necessary for them to live principally on the coasts. The jurisdiction of the governor of New South Wales, extends from 43. 49. to 10. 37. S. lat. From the sea-coast it extends westward as far as lon. 135. E. and thence proceeding in an easterly direction, includes all the islands in the Pacific Ocean, within the above-mentioned latitudes. See BOTANY BAY, HOLLAND NEW, PORT JACKSON, and SYDNEY COVE.

WALLENSTADT, a town of Switzerland, incorporated into the bailiwick of Sargans, but enjoying many distinct privileges. It derives it's importance from the passage of the merchandise transported from Germany, through the Grisons, to Italy. It is seated at the E. end of a lake of the same name, 15 miles NW. of Coira.

WALLENSTADT, a lake of Switzerland, about 9 miles in length, and two in breadth. It is bounded by high mountains, except to the E. and W. the scenery of which is uncommonly wild and picturesque. On the side of the canton of Glarus, the mountains which form it's borders are cultivated; enriched with wood or fine meadows; and studded with churches, cottages, and small villages; the Alps of Glarus rising behind, their tops covered with snow. On the other side, for the most part, the rocks are grotesque, craggy, inaccessible, and perpendicular; but here and there a few cultivated necks of land are formed at the edge of the lake, and at the bottom of these rocks, exhibiting a beautiful contrast to the barrenness above and round them. Numberless waterfalls, occasioned by the melting of the snows, fall down the sides of the mountains from a considerable height, and with an almost inconceivable variety. This lake is exceedingly clear, deep, and cold.

WARSAW, a large city of Poland, the capital of that country, and of the province of Maſovia. It is ſurrounded by a moat and double wall, and conſiſts of the Old and New Town; and two ſuburbs, Kraka and Praga. The general diets, provincial aſſembly, and court of judicature, were held here. This city and it's ſuburbs occupy a vaſt extent of ground, and are ſuppoſed to contain between 60 and 70,000 inhabitants, among whom are a great number of foreigners. The whole has a melancholy appearance, exhibiting the ſtrong contraſt of wealth and poverty, luxury and diſtreſs, which pervades every part of this unhappy country. The ſtreets are ſpacious, but ill paved; the churches and public buildings are large and magnificent; the palaces of the nobility are numerous and ſplendid; but the greateſt part of the houſes, particularly in the ſuburbs, are mean and ill-conſtructed wooden hovels. In it's laſt ſiege by the Ruſſians, in 1794, it is computed that 30,000 Poles periſhed either by the ſword, or in the flames; the ſuburb of Praga having been ſet on fire, and nearly the whole of it reduced to aſhes by the mercileſs Ruſſians, ten hours after all reſiſtance had ceaſed. It is now ſubject to Pruſſia, and is ſituated on the Viſtula, which is as broad here as the Thames at Weſtminſter, but very ſhallow in ſummer. Lat. 52. 14. N. lon. 21. 6. E.

Here is a caſtle, formerly the ſeat of the earls of Warwick, which ſtands on a rock, 40 feet higher than the Avon, but even with the town on the N. ſide. It is an ancient and neat town, ſituated upon a rocky eminence, near the river Avon. The houſes are well-built, and the ſtreets, which are ſpacious and regular, all meet in the centre of the town. At each end of the principal one is an ancient gate. It is adorned with a good free-school and a market-house, and is 93 miles NW. of London. Lat. 52. 20. N. lon. 1. 36 W. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

WARWICKSHIRE, a county of England, bounded at it's northern extremity by a point of Derbyshire, on the NW. by Staffordshire, on the NE. by Leicestershire, on the W. by Worcestershire, on the E by Northamptonshire, and on the S. by Gloucestershire and Oxfordshire. It's extent from N. to S. is about 47 miles, and about 35 from E. to W. where widest. It is the most central county in the kingdom, and somewhat of an oval form, is divided into 4 hundreds and 1 liberty, and contains 1 city, 13 market towns, 158 parishes, and 380 villages. The air is mild, pleasant, and healthy, and the more so, since the woodlands have been thinned by the great consumption of wood in the iron-works; the woodlands being now converted to tillage and pasture. The northern part of the county, called the Woodlands, is divided from the S. called the Feldon, by the river Avon; but the soil of both is rich. This county produces corn, malt, wood, wool, cheese, coal, and limestone. The principal rivers are the Avon, Tame, and Arrow. The canals that pass through this county are, one from the Wednesbury and Dudley coal and lime works, to Birmingham, and from thence to Fazeley and Fradley Heath, to join the Staffordshire Grand Trunk, extending from Fazeley to Atherstone, Bedworth, and Coventry; one reaching from that at Longford to Braunston and Oxford; one from Birmingham to Worcester; one branching out of the Worcester, one way to Dudley, &c. and the other to Stratford-upon-Avon; and one from Birmingham to Warwick. Warwick is the county town.

WASHINGTON, the name of several counties in the United States of N. America; namely, in Rhode Island; in New York, of which Salem is the capital; in the SW. corner of Pennsylvania, the capital of the same name; in Maryland; in Virginia; in N. Carolina; in S. Carolina; in the district of Charleston; and in Georgia, the capital of which is Golphinton; also a town in Kentucky, on the Ohio.

WASHINGTON, a town of N. Carolina, formerly called Bath; it is seated on the river Tar.

WASHINGTON, a town of N. America, in Georgia, and county of Wilkes. Near it is a medicinal spring, which rises from a hollow tree, the inside of which is covered with a coat of nitre, an inch thick; and the leaves around the spring are incrusted with a substance as white as snow. The waters have been found beneficial in rheumatic cases, and are said to be so in all disorders arising from humours in the blood.

WASHINGTON, a city of N. America, now building for the metropolis of the United States. It is seated at the junction of the rivers Potomac and the Eastern Branch, extending about 4 miles up each, including a tract of territory scarcely to be exceeded, in point of convenience, salubrity, and beauty, by any in the world. This territory, which is called Columbia, lies partly in the state of Virginia, and partly in that of Maryland, and was ceded by those two states to the United States of America, and by them established to be the seat of government, after the year 1800. The plan combines not only convenience, regularity, elegance of prospect, and a free circulation of air, but every thing grand and beautiful that can be introduced into a city. It is divided into squares or grand divisions, by streets running due N. and S. and E. and W. which form the groundwork of the plan. However, from the capitol, the president's house, and some of the important areas in the city, run diagonal streets, from one material object to another, which not only produce a variety of fine prospects, but remove the insipid sameness which renders some other great cities unpleasing. They were devised to connect the separate and

moſt diſtant objects with the principal, and to preſerve through the whole a reciprocity of ſight. Theſe great leading ſtreets are all 160 feet wide, including a pavement of 10 feet, and a gravel walk of 30 feet planted with trees on each ſide, which will leave 80 feet of paved ſtreet for carriages. The reſt of the ſtreets are, in general, 110 feet wide, with a few only 90 feet, except North, South, and Eaſt Capitol Streets, which are 160 feet. The diagonal ſtreets are named after the reſpective ſtates compoſing the Union, while thoſe running N. and S. are, from the capitol eaſtward, named, Eaſt Firſt Street, Eaſt Second Street, &c. and thoſe W. of it are, in the ſame manner, called Weſt Firſt Street, Weſt Second Street, &c. Thoſe running E. and W. are from the capitol northward named, North A Street, North B. Street, &c. and thoſe S. of it are called South A Street, South B Street, &c. The ſquares, or diviſions of the city, amount to 1150. The rectangular ſquares generally contain from 3 to 6 acres, and are divided into lots of from 40 to 80 feet in front, and their depth, from about 110 to 300 feet, according to the ſize of the ſquare. The irregular diviſions produced by the diagonal ſtreets are ſome of them ſmall, but generally in valuable ſituations. Their acute points are all to be cut off at 40 feet, ſo that no houſe in the city will have an acure corner. All the houſes muſt be of brick or ſtone. The area for the capitol (or houſe for the legiſlative bodies) is ſituated upon the moſt beautiful eminence in the city, about a mile from the Eaſtern Branch, and not much more from the Potomac, commanding a full view of the city, as well as a conſiderable extent of the country around. The preſident's houſe will ſtand upon a riſing ground, not far from the banks of the Potomac, affording a fine water proſpect, with a commanding view of the capitol, and ſome other material parts of the city. Due S. from the preſident's houſe, and due W. from the capitol, run two great pleaſure parks, or malls, which interſect and terminate upon the banks of the Potomac, and are to be ornamented at the ſides by a variety of elegant buildings, houſes for foreign miniſters, &c. Interſperſed through the city, where the moſt material ſtreets croſs each other, are a variety of open areas, formed in various regular figures, which in great cities are extremely uſeful and ornamental. Fifteen of the beſt of theſe areas are to be appropriated to the different ſtates compoſing the Union; not only to bear their reſpective names, but as proper places for them to erect ſtatues, obeliſks, or columns, to the memory of their favourite eminent men. Upon a ſmall eminence, where a line due W. from the capitol, and due S. from the preſident's houſe, would interſect, is to be erected an equeſtrian ſtatue of General Waſhington, late preſident of the United States. At the junction of the rivers, a fort is to be erected, to include an arſenal and magazines. Places are marked out for other public buildings; as a marine hoſpital, with it's gardens; a general exchange, and it's public walks; a city hall, churches, colleges, market-houſes, theatres, &c. The preſident of the United States, in locating the ſeat of the city, prevailed upon the proprietors of the ſoil to cede a certain portion of the lots in every ſituation, to be ſold by his direction, and the proceeds to be ſolely applied to the public buildings, and other works of public utility within the city. This grant will produce about 15,000 lots, and will be ſufficient, not only to erect the public buildings, but to dig a canal, conduct water through the city, and to pave and light the ſtreets, which will ſave a heavy tax that ariſes in other cities, and conſequently render the lots conſiderably more valuable. The Eaſtern Branch of the Potomac is one of the ſafeſt and moſt commodious harbours in America, being ſufficiently deep for the largeſt ſhips, for about 4 miles above it's junction with the Potomac, while the channel lies cloſe along the edge of the city, and is abundantly capacious. This river contains 30 and 35 feet to near the upper end of the city, where it is 18 and 20 feet deep. The city, being ſituated upon the great poſt road, exactly equidiſtant from the northern and ſouthern extremities of the Union, and nearly ſo from the Atlantic Ocean to the river Ohio, upon the beſt navigation, and in the midſt of the richeſt commercial territory in America, commanding the moſt extenſive internal reſources, is by far the moſt eligible ſituation for the reſidence of congreſs; and it is now preſſing forward, by the public-ſpirited enterpriſe, not only of the people of the United States, but alſo of foreigners. The inland navigation of the Potomac is ſo far advanced, that craft loaded with produce now come down that river and it's ſeveral branches; from upward of 180 miles to the great falls, which are within 14 miles of the city. The canals at the great and little falls, with their locks, are now completed; the navigation is entirely opened between tide water and the head branches of the Potomac, tomac, which will produce a communication by water between the city of Washington and the interior parts of Virginia and Maryland, by means of the Potomac, the Shannandoah, the South Branch, Opecan, Cape Capon, Patterſon's Creek, Conoochegue, and Monacſy, for upward of 200 miles, through one of the moſt healthy, pleaſant, and fertile regions in America, producing, in vaſt abundance, tobacco of ſuperior quality, hemp, Indian corn, wheat, and other ſmall grain, with fruit and vegetables peculiar to America, in vaſt abundance. The lands upon the Potomac, above the city of Waſhington, all around it, and for 60 miles below, are high and dry, abounding with innumerable ſprings of excellent water, and well covered with large timber of various kinds. A few miles below the city, upon the banks of the Potomac, are inexhauſtible mountains of excellent freeſtone, of the white and red Portland kinds, of which the public edifices in the city are now building. Above the city alſo, upon the banks of the river, are immenſe quantities of excellent coal, limeſtone, and marble, with blue ſlate of the beſt quality. The Tyber, which is the principal ſtream that paſſes through the city, is to be collected in a grand reſervoir, beſide the capitol, whence it will be carried in pipes to different parts of the city; while it's ſurplus water will fall down in beautiful caſcades, through the public gardens weſt of the capitol, into a canal. The plan of this city was formed by Major L'Enfant. Moſt of the ſtreets were marked out, and the ſquares divided into lots, in 1792, ſince which time, ſome thouſands of workmen have been conſtantly employed. It is 100 miles SW. of Philadelphia. WESTMORLAND, a county of England, bounded on the NW. and N. by Cumberland; on the E. and SE. by Yorkſhire; and on the S. and SW. by Lancaſhire. It's extent from NE. to S. is 40 miles, and it's breadth about 24. It is generally divided into four wards, which contain 11 market towns, 32 pariſhes, and about 70,000 houſes. The air is clear, ſharp, and ſalubrious. The ſoil is various; that on the mountains is very barren, while the Lowlands, called the Barony, or Bottom of Weſtmorland, are fertile, producing good corn and graſs, eſpecially in the meadows near the rivers. In the hilly parts, on the weſtern borders, it is generally believed there are vaſt quantities of copper ore, and veins of gold;

ſome mines of copper are worked, but moſt of the ore lies ſo deep, that it will not anſwer the expence. This county yields the fineſt ſlate, and abundance of excellent hams are cured here. The principal rivers are the Eden, the Lone, and the Ken. It has alſo ſeveral fine lakes, the principal of which is Winander-Mere, the bottom of which is one continued rock. In the Foreſt of Martindale, to the S. of Ulls-Water, the breed of red deer ſtill exiſts in a wild ſtate. The earl of Thanet is hereditary ſheriff. Appleby is the county-town, but Kendal is the moſt conſiderable one, for ſize, trade, and population.

WHIDAH, a kingdom of Guinea, on the Slave Coast, extending about 10 miles along the sea, and 7 miles within land. It is a very populous country, well furnished with large villages; and there are so many small ones, that they are not above a musquet-shot distant from each other. Some are the king's, some the viceroy's villages, and others are built and peopled by particular lords, and become hereditary in their families. The houses are small, round at the top, and encompassed with mud walls, or hedges. The trees are tall, straight, and disposed in regular order, presenting to the eye fine long groves and avenues, clear of brushwood and weeds. All the Europeans, who have been here, speak of the country with rapture, and extol it as a perfect paradise. The fields are always verdant, and being planted with beans, potatoes, fruits, and roots, and covered with a multitude of houses, form one of the finest prospects in the world. The natives sow again the very next day after they have reaped. The women brew the beer, dress the victuals, and sell all sorts of commodities at the market. Those that are rich employ their wives and slaves in tilling the land, and they carry on a considerable trade with the product, as well as in slaves. The natives exceed all other negroes in civilization, industry, and vigilance, and employ themselves in several kinds of manufactures. They spin cotton yarn, weave fine fine cotton cloth, make calabaſſes, wooden veſſels, plates, diſhes, &c. and do ſmith's work in greater perfection than any other people on the coaſt. The rite of circumciſion is uſed here, but they are not able to tell whence it is derived. Their principal idols are ſnakes, and particularly the fetiche, a ſnake with a large, round, beautiful head, a ſhort, pointed tongue, reſembling a dart, and a ſharp, ſhort tail; it is adorned with beautiful colours, on a light, grey ground. It is ſlow and ſolemn in it's pace, except when it ſeizes on it's prey, when it is quick and rapid. They have a mortal antipathy to venomous ſerpents, attacking them wherever they find them. They are amazingly tame and familiar, the natives and Europeans handling and playing with them, without dread or apprehenſion of danger. When the Engliſh firſt ſettled in Whidah, a ſailor, juſt arrived, found a ſnake in the magazine belonging to the factory, and killing it, without ſcruple, threw it on the bank. The negroes, who ſoon diſcovered the ſacrilege, and had it confirmed by the acknowledgment of the Engliſh, aſſembled all the inhabitants of the province, and maſſacred the factors to a man; conſuming their bodies and goods in the fire they had ſet to their warehouſe. They have oxen, cows, goats, ſheep, hogs, turkeys, ducks, and hens, which laſt are extremely plentiful. There are many elephants, buffaloes, tigers, ſeveral kinds of deer, and a ſort of hares. The fruits are citrons, lemons, oranges, bananas, tamarinds, &c. and they have vaſt numbers of palm-trees, from which they obtain wine. The king of Whidah, who is only their chief, reſides at Sabi, or Xabier, in the province of the ſame name. Their trade conſiſts of elephants' teeth, wax, honey, and the perſons of men. The Engliſh factory is 200 miles NE. of Cape Coaſt Caſtle, within land.

*WHITBY, a ſea-port in the N. Riding of Yorkſhire, commodiouſly ſeated near the mouth of the river Eſk. It is a conſiderable town, building many ſhips for the coal-trade, and employing many others in the export of coals, canvas, butter, tallow, hams, bacon, and fiſh. It is a tide-haven, almoſt dry at low water, neither has it any river communication with the inland country. It is much frequented by colliers, and has at leaſt 100 veſſels belonging to it, of 100 tons, or more, burden. Several ſhips are ſent hence to the Greenland fiſhery. On December 24, 1787, at midnight, an alarming event took place here. By the ſhrinking of ſome of the high ground, or cliff, an eſplanade, 300 yards long and 80 in breadth, on which a regular ſtreet had been built, ſince the year 1761, was overturned and overwhelmed. The buildings were 80 feet above the margin of the ſea, founded on a ſtrong, new-built quay. One hundred and ninety-ſix families became deſtitute of houſe, fire, or food; but the doors of the humane were thrown open, and every comfort adminiſtered. One perſon, whoſe rental amounted to 100l. annually, could no more find the place where his property ſtood. In the neighbourhood are large alum works. It is 50 miles NE. by E. of York, and 243 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

* WHITEHAVEN, a large, populous, and improving town of Cumberland, with a good artificial harbour, defended by a long pier. It has it's name from the white cliffs near it, both to the N. and S. which ſhelter the harbour from tempeſts. It contains about 16,000 inhabitants, and employs near 300 ſhips. Ship-building, and the accompanying manufactures of ropes, ſail-cloth, &c. are carried on here very extenſively, and there are alſo copperas works, which yield conſiderable profit; but the working of the coal-mines forms the principal buſineſs of the place. Theſe are ſunk to the depth of 130 fathoms, and carried to a vaſt diſtance under the ſea, where veſſels of large burthen ride at anchor. From theſe a great part of Ireland, and other places, are ſupplied with coal, from which the proprietor, Lord Lonſdale, derives a revenue of about 16,000l. a year. A good deal of buſineſs is alſo done in the foreign and coaſting trade from this port. In 1566, it had but ſix houſes, and one fiſhing-boat; and, in 1582, it had only 12 ſmall veſſels. Whitehaven is ſeated chiefly in a valley, between two ſteep hills, and is 13 miles SW. of Cockermouth, and 305 NW. of London. Market on Thurſday.

WHITE-MOUNTAINS, the higheſt part of a ridge of mountains in the ſtate of New Hampſhire, in N. America. They extend NE. and SW. to a length not yet aſcertained. The height of theſe mountains, above the adjacent meadow, is reckoned, from obſervations made in 1784, to be 5,500 feet; and the meadow is 3,500 feet above the level of the ſea. The ſnow and ice cover them nine or ten months in the year, during which time they exhibit that bright appearance from which they are denominated the White Mountains. From their ſummit, in clear weather, is a grand view, extending 60 or 70 miles in every direction. Although they are 70 miles within land, they are ſeen many leagues off at ſea, and appear like an exceedingly bright cloud in the horizon. Their higheſt ſummit is in lat. 44. deg. N.

WIBURG, a government of Ruſſia, being the province lately called Ruſſian Finland, which was compriſed in Carelia. It has Finland on the W. and the Lake Ladoga and the government of Olonetz on the E. Beſides paſtures, the country produces rye, oats, and barley, but not ſufficient for the inhabitants. It formerly belonged to the Swedes, and was ceded to the the Ruſſians, partly by the peace of Nyſtadt in 1721, and partly by the treaty of Abo in 1743. This province retains moſt of it's ancient privileges, with ſome occaſional modifications, which have been neceſſarily introduced under the new government. In the governor's court, buſineſs is tranſacted in the Swediſh, German, and Ruſſian tongues. The peaſants talk only the Finiſh dialect; but the inhabitants of the towns underſtand Swediſh alſo, and many of them German. Lutheraniſm is the eſtabliſhed religion; but the Greek worſhip has lately been introduced by the Ruſſians.

It extends 4 miles from Cockermouth, nearly in a direct line towards Keſwick. The lofty Skiddaw, and the beautiful Vale of Baſſingthwaite, on one ſide, and it's lake with the diſtant hills of Borrowdale on the other, falling off to the horizon, form, from the heights of Withop, a moſt grand and beautiful proſpect.

WIELICSKA, a village of Cracow, Poland, now compriſed within the Auſtrian kingdom of Lodomeria. It is celebrated for it's ſalt mines, which lie 8 miles SE. of Cracow. In theſe inexhauſtible mines, are ſeveral ſmall chapels excavated in the ſalt, in which maſs is ſaid in certain days of the year. One of theſe chapels is above 30 feet long, and 25 broad: an altar, a crucifix, with various ornaments and ſtatues, are all carved out of the ſalt. The immenſe ſize of the different excavations or chambers, with the ſpacious paſſages or galleries, the chapels above-mentioned, and a few ſheds built for the horſes, which are foddered below, have given riſe to the exaggerated accounts of travellers, that theſe mines contain ſeveral villages, inhabited by colonies of miners, who never ſee the light. There is certainly room for ſuch purpoſes, the mines being of ſtupendous extent and depth, and dry as a room, without the leaſt damp or moiſture. There is, however, one ſmall ſpring of freſh water, which runs through the mine; but the miners have no ſubterranean dwellings, and do not remain below more than 8 hours at a time, when they are relieved by others. Theſe mines have been worked above 600 years. Before the partition of Poland, in 1772, they furniſhed a conſiderable part of the revenue of the king of Poland, who drew from them an average profit of about 3,500,000 Poliſh florins, or 97,222l. 4s. 6d. ſterling.

WIELUN, a town of Poland, in Siradia.

* WIGAN, a large and well built town of Lancaſhire, ſeated on the river Douglas, with manufactures of cotton, rugs, blankets, linen, and with pit-coal and iron works. That elegant ſpecies of coal, called Cannel, is found in plenty and great perfection in it's neighbourhood. The Douglas is made navigable to the Ribble; and it is joined by a canal from Liverpool. Wigan is 30 miles S. of Lancaſter, and 196 NNW. of London. Markets on Monday and Friday.

Wighill, Yorkſhire, on the banks of the Wharfe, E. of Wetherby.

WIGHT, an iſland on the S. coaſt of Hampſhire, from which it is ſeparated by a channel, two or three hours ſail from Portſmouth, though only about a mile over from Hurſt Caſtle. It was called by the Britons Guith, and by the Romans Vectis, or Vecta. It is about 21 miles in length, and 13 in breadth, containing 5 towns, 30 pariſhes, and about 22,000 inhabitants. It is nearly divided into equal parts by the river Mede or Medina, which riſes near the ſouth coaſt, and falls into the Channel near Cowes. Acroſs the iſland, from E. to W. runs a ridge of hills, forming a tract of fine downs, with a chalky or marly ſoil, which feed a great number of fine fleeced ſheep. Rabbits, hares, partridges, wild and tame fowl, &c. are alſo very plentiful here. In the N. parts the land is chiefly paſture; in the S. chiefly arable, producing, it is thought, as much corn in one year, as is equal to the conſumption of eight. The variety of proſpects which this iſland affords, it's mild air, and the neat manner in which the fields are laid out, render it a very delightful ſpot. It is devoted almoſt ſolely to huſbandry, having no manufactory but that of ſalt, and a great reſource of the London market for malted barley. Among it's exports are a pure white tobacco-pipe clay, and a fine white cryſtalline ſand, uſed in the manufacture of glaſs. The ſea is continually incroaching on it on the S. parts, and abandoning it on the NE. ſides. Newport is the principal town.

WIGTONSHIRE, a county of Scotland, ſometimes called UPPER, or WEST GALLOWAY. It is bounded on the N. by Ayrſhire, on the E. by Kirkcudbrightſhire, and on the S. and W. by the Iriſh Sea. It's greateſt extent, in any direction, does not exceed 27 miles. The N. part, called the Moors, is naked and mountainous. Great numbers of ſheep and black cattle are raiſed here; and they have a ſmall breed of horſes peculiar to this diſtrict, called galloways, which are very ſtrong and gentle. It is well watered with lakes and ſtreams, and has ſeveral commodious creeks and harbours.

WILTSHIRE, a county of England, ſo called from the town of Wilton, once it's capital. It is bounded on the E. by Berkſhire and Hampſhire, on the W. by Somerſet and Glouceſter, on the S. by Dorſet and part of Hants, and on the NW. and N. by Glouceſterſhire. It's length from N. to S. is near 54 miles, it's greateſt breadth from E. to W. 34. The air is healthy, and though ſomething ſharp on the hills in winter, it is mild during that ſeaſon in the vales. The land in the northern part is generally hilly and woody, but very fertile; here being made that kind of cheeſe which is much eſteemed, and known as North Wiltſhire. In the ſouthern it is rich and fertile. In the middle it chiefly conſiſts of downs, that afford the beſt paſture for ſheep; and in the valleys, which divide the downs, are abundance of corn-fields and rich meadows. In ſome places is found knot-graſs, near 20 feet in length, with which hogs are fed, eſpecially about Market Lavington. It's chief commodities are ſheep, wool, wood, and ſtone; of this laſt there are excellent quarries at Chilmark, where ſome ſtones are 20 yards in length, and 4 in thickneſs, without a flaw. The chief manufactures are conſiderable; few towns being without one, moſt generally in the clothing-trade. The principal rivers in Wiltſhire are the Upper and Lower Avon, the Nadder, Willy, Bourne, and Kennet. This county contains one city, 24 market-towns, and 304 pariſhes, and is divided into 29 hundreds.

Wilverton, SE. of Worceſter. Wily, Wiltſhire, W. of Stapleford. Wimbiſh, Eſſex, SE. of Walden. Wimbledon, Surry, on a fine heath, 7 miles SW. of London. WINCHCOMB, a town in Glouceſterſhire, 16 miles NE. of Glouceſter, and 93 WNW. of London. Market on Saturday.

WINCHELSEA, a town in Suſſex, one of the Cinque Ports. It was built in the reign of Edward I. when a more ancient town of the ſame name, which had 18 pariſh churches, and was diſtant about 3 miles, was ſwallowed up by the ſea, in a terrible tempeſt. The new town being ſacked by the French and Spaniards, and deſerted by the ſea, ſoon fell into decay, and is now dwindled to an inconſiderable place, having but about 70 houſes. Three of the gates are ſtill ſtanding, but much decayed: they are 3 miles aſunder. Winchelſea is 2 miles SSW. of Rye, and 67 SW. of London. Market diſuſed.

* WINCHESTER, a very ancient city of Hampſhire, called by the Britons, Caer Gwent, and by Ptolemy and Antoninus, Venta Belgarum. It is about one mile and a half in circumference round the walls, through which there are 6 gates, and ſuburbs leading to every one of them: it is a town of little trade or manufacture. It contained formerly 32 pariſh churches, but at preſent only ſix, beſide the cathedral, which is a large and beautiful ſtructure. In it were interred 13 Saxon kings or queens, whoſe bones were collected by Biſhop Fox, and put into 6 little gilded coffins, in a wall on the S. ſide of the choir. Theſe, however, in the civil wars, were diſperſed and tumbled out of the cheſts, and reſtored, without diſtinction, after the reſtoration. On a fine eminence, overlooking the city and adjacent country, is the ſhell of a palace, built by Sir Chriſtopher Wren for king Charles II. It was never finiſhed, but in the late wars was fitted up for the reception of priſoners of war, and is now converted into barracks. Near this place is St. Mary's College, founded by William of Wickham, for a warden, 70 ſcholars, 10 fellows, 3 chaplains, 3 clerks, a ſchoolmaſter, uſher, organiſts, and 16 choriſters; the ſcholars are educated for New College, Oxford. The epiſcopal ſee is ſo rich, that when Edward III. would have preferred it's biſhop, Edenden, his favourite, to the ſee of Canterbury, he refuſed it, ſaying, that though Canterbury was the higher rack, Wincheſter was the better manger. A county infirmary has been eſtabliſhed here, ſupported by voluntary contribution. In the road to Southampton, is the the hoſpital of St. Croſs, founded by a biſhop of this ſee, for a maſter, nine poor brethren, and four out-penſioners. All travellers, who call at this hoſpital, have a right to demand ſome bread and beer, which is always brought to them. The maſter is generally a dignitary of the church, the appointment being very lucrative. It conſiſts of about 500 houſes, has one pretty broad ſtreet, but the reſt are moſtly narrow; the houſes are indifferently built, and it's wall of flint is greatly decayed. It is ſeated on the river Itching, 16 miles E. of Saliſbury, and 63 SW. of London. Lat. 51. 5. N. lon. 1. 21. W. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

Winchester, Old, Northumb. 7 miles W. of Newcaſtle. Winchet Hill, Kent, in Goudhurſt pariſh. Winckfield Hants, NE. of Odiam. Winchington, Upper and Lower, Bucks, W. of Ayleſbury. Winchmore-Hill, Middleſex, near Edmonton. Winckley, Devonſ. 2 miles from Tawton. Winckton, Hampſhire, near Chriſtchurch. Winko Bank, Yorkſ. W. Riding, N. of the Don, oppoſite Templeborough. Wincot, Glouceſ. a hamlet to Clifford Chambers. Wincot, Glouceſ. in Queinton pariſh. Windall, Norfolk, near Gillingham.

WINDAW, a ſea-port of Courland, at the mouth of the river Wetaw, on the on the Baltic, 70 miles NW. of Mittaw.

Windegap, in Waterford, Munſter.

Winder, Lancaſhire, by the Kent Sands.

WINDERMERE-WATER, or WINANDER MERE, the moſt extenſive lake in England, lying between Weſtmorland and Lancaſhire, and exhibiting a very great variety of beautiful proſpects. It is about 15 miles in length from N. to S. but in no part broader than a mile. Oppoſite Ecclefrig-Crag, it is 222 feet deep. It is famous for it's fine char, and abounds alſo with trout, perch, pike, and eels. This lake is frequently intercected by promontories, which render it's ſhores very winding, and it is ſpotted with iſlands. Among theſe, the Holme, or Great Iſland, on an oblong tract of 30 acres, with a good houſe on it, croſſes the lake in an oblique line, surrounded by a number of inferior isles, finely formed and wooded. They make together a kind of Archipelago. In navigating it upward, from the Great Island, the extremity appears singularly grand, it's parts neat and picturesque; and the view of the surrounding scenery, from Cove to Kirkston, is astonishingly sublime and beautiful.

WINDSHEIM, an imperial town of Franconia.

Windsor, Cornwall, SW. of Columb.

* WINDSOR, NEW, a town of Berkshire, situated on the side of a hill, near the Thames. It consists of several streets, and is well paved and lighted. The town hall is a brick structure, with arcades of Portland stone, erected in 1686. Windsor is celebrated for it's magnificent castle, built originally by William the Conqueror, rebuilt by Edward III. and enlarged by succeeding monarchs. It is seated on a hill, which rises on a gentle ascent. On the N. side of the castle is a fine terrace, made by Queen Elizabeth, and enlarged by Charles II. who carried it round the E. and S. sides. It is faced with a rampart of freestone, and is the noblest walk in Europe with respect to strength, grandeur, and it's beautiful prospects. The palaces in France and Italy have nothing to be compared with it; the terrace next the sea, in the outer court of the seraglio at Constantinople comes the nearest to it. From the Round Tower, which is much more elevated than the rest, is an extensive view to London, and into the counties of Berks, Middlesex, Essex, Herts, Bucks, Oxford, Wilts, Hants, Surry, Sussex, Kent, and Bedford. The royal apartments are adorned with many valuable paintings, particularly with the celebrated cartoons of Raphael, which were formerly at Hampton Court. Here is the royal college of St. George, consisting of a dean, 12 canons, 7 minor-canons, and 18 alms or poor knights. St. George's Chapel, erected by Edward III. in 1377, in honour of the order of the garter, is a beautiful structure, in the purest style of Gothic architecture. Opposite to the SE. side of the castle, is a neat modern-built mansion, called the Queen's Lodge, which is the royal residence in summer; and below this, is the Lower Lodge, for the accommodation of the younger branches of the royal family. Adjoining the Queen's Lodge is the Little Park, which extends round the N. and E. sides of the castle, and forms a beautiful lawn, about 3 miles in circumference. But on the S. side of the town is a much larger park, called the Great Park, which is said to be 20 miles in circumference. Windsor is 22 miles S. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

*YARMOUTH, GREAT, a conſiderable ſea-port of Norfolk, ſeated on the river Yare, by means of which, it has the export and import trade of Norwich, and various places in Norfolk and Suffolk. It's harbour will not admit ſhips of large burden; but it is extremely convenient for buſineſs, the veſſels lying in the river, along a very extenſive and commodious quay, planted with trees. It's foreign trade is chiefly to the Baltic, Holland, Portugal, and the Mediterranean. It alſo ſends ſhips to the Greenland fiſhery. The home fiſhing is carried on at two ſeaſons; that for mackarel in May and June, and that for herrings in October and November. Of theſe laſt, 50,000 barrels are generally taken and cured in one year; about 150 veſſels, of forty or fifty tons burden, being annually employed in the fiſhery. The herrings are chiefly cured here by ſalting, and then drying them in wood ſmoke; when, under the name of red herrings, they are either conſumed at home, or exported to Spain, Italy, and other ſouthern countries. Yarmouth is much frequented in the ſeaſon as a place for ſea-bathing. The town conſiſts of about 1500 houſes, and there are a few pretty wide ſtreets, and a ſpacious market-place; but they are chiefly very narrow, are called rows, and are juſt wide enough for their little carriages to paſs through. Theſe carriages are a kind of ſledge, or very ſmall cart, drawn by one horſe, and calculated entirely for theſe narrow ſtreets. A lofty ſteeple here ſerves as a landmark for thoſe at ſea; but which ever way it is viewed, it appears crooked. Off the mouth of the harbour is a bar, which prevents the entry of ſhips of large burden; and the roads, E. of the town, within the dangerous ſands and banks of the offing, are much frequented, though noted for frequent ſhipwrecks. Yarmouth is 22 miles E. of Norwich, and 123 NE. of London. Markets on Wedneſday and Saturday.

YARMOUTH, a borough of the Iſle of Wight, in Hampſhire, ſeated on the north-weſtern part of the iſland, on the ſea ſhore. It is 8 miles NNW. of Newport, and 99 SW. of London. Market on Friday.

YONNE, a department of France, N. of the dept. of Nievre. It is so called from a river that rises in the dept. of Nievre, passes by Chateau-Chinon, Auxerre, and Sens, below which last it falls into the Seine. Auxerre is the capital.

*YORK, an ancient city of Yorkshire, of which it is the capital. It has also been considered as the capital of the North, and, in point of rank, as the second city in the kingdom; but it is now surpassed in wealth and populousness by many of the more modern trading towns. The minster is reckoned the most elegant and magnificent Gothic structure in the kingdom, Lincoln perhaps excepted. From it's top is seen a vast extent of country, particularly the open Wolds to the E. stretching almost to the sea. It is divided by the river Ouse into two parts, which are united by a stately stone bridge of five arches. The castle, built by William the Conqueror, is now a county prison for debtors and felons. Among the charitable foundations is an asylum for lunatics, by much the finest and pleasantest in England. The river Ouse is navigable to this city for vessels of 70 tons burden, although it is 60 miles from the sea. The title of lord was first annexed to the office of mayor by Richard II. This city has jurisdiction over 36 villages and hamlets, W. of the Ouse, called the Liberty of Dusty. It's members claim a seat in the House of Commons, next to the citizens of London, upon what is called the privy-counsellor's bench. York is 197 miles N. by W. of London. Lat. 53. 59. N. lon. 1. 1. W. Markets on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

YORKSHIRE, the largest county in England, bounded on the N. by Westmorland, and the bishopric of Durham; on the E. by the German Ocean; on the S. by Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, and Derbyshire; on the SW. by a small part of Cheshire; on the W. by Lancashire; and on the NW. by Westmorland. It extends 90 miles from N. to S. and 115 from E. to W. This county is divided into three Ridings; the N. Riding containing 12 wapentakes; the E. 7; and the W. 12. It contains 1 city, 60 market-towns, 563 parishes, and 2330 villages.

lages. The air and ſoil of this extenſive country vary extremely; the E. Riding, on account of it's neighbourhood to the German Ocean, is more inclined to humidity than the other ridings; but this inconvenience decreaſes in proportion as the country recedes from the ſea. However, where the air is moſt indifferent, the ſoil is moſt fruitful; for on the hilly parts of this riding, eſpecially in what is called the York Wolds, the ſoil is generally barren, dry, and ſandy; great numbers of lean ſheep are therefore ſold hence, and ſent into other counties to be fattened for the market. The W. Riding enjoys a ſharp, but healthy air, and the land, on the weſtern ſide, is hilly, ſtony, and not very fruitful; but the intermediate valleys conſiſt of much good meadow-ground, and alſo paſture for the largeſt cattle. Much flax is grown here, and large plantations of licorice, about Pontefract. On the ſide next the river Ouſe, the ſoil is rich, producing wheat and barley; and, in it's worſt parts, very good oats. It's other commodities are iron, coal, jet, alum, horſes, and goats. Here the clothing manufactures principally flouriſh. The N. Riding, in general, exceeds the other two in the ſalubrity and coldneſs of the air. The worſt parts breed lean cattle; but on the ſides of the hills, in the valleys, and plains, it produces good corn, and rich paſtures for large cattle: in the diſtrict of Pickering, which forms the NE. corner of Yorkſhire, and conſiſts of a very extenſive, ſecluded, and fertile vale, is a foſſile marl, produced by a petrifying ſpring, very beneficial for improving land. Rape and potatoes are grown here in great quantities. Richmondſhire, on the NW. of this riding, was formerly a county of itſelf; here many lead-mines are worked to great advantage. In Yorkſhire, likewiſe, are the diſtricts of Cleveland, Holderneſs, and Craven. The principal rivers of Yorkſhire are the Northern Ouſe, and thoſe which fall into it, as the Don, the Derwent, the Calder, the Aire, the Wharfe, the Nyde, and the Youre, all which terminate in the Humber, which falls into the German Ocean, between Yorkſhire and Lincolnſhire. Here are likewiſe the Tees and the Hull.

YORK, NEW, one of the United States of America, bounded on the SE. by the Atlantic Ocean; on the E. by Connecticut, Maſſachuſets, and Vermont; on the N. by the 45th deg. of lat. which divides it from Canada; on the NW. by the river St. Lawrence, and the Lakes Ontario and Erie; and on the SW. and S. by Pennſylvania and New Jerſey. It is about 350 miles long, and 300 broad, and is divided into 13 counties. New York, in general, is interſected by ridges of mountains running in a NE. and SW. direction. Beyond the Allegany Mountains, however, the country is pretty level, of a fine rich ſoil, covered, in it's natural ſtate, with various kinds of trees. Eaſt of theſe mountains it is broken into hills, with rich intervening valleys. The hills are thickly clothed with timber, and, when cleared, afford fine paſture. The valleys, when cultivated, produce wheat, hemp, flax, peas, graſs, oats, and Indian corn. Of the commodities produced from culture, wheat is the ſtaple, of which immenſe quantities are raiſed and exported. The beſt lands in this province, which lie along the Mohawks River, and W. of the Allegany Mountains, are yet in a ſtate of nature, or are juſt beginning to be ſettled. This ſtate abounds with ſeveral fine rivers and lakes. The number of inhabitants, in 1771, was 148,124 whites, and 19,883 blacks; total 168,007. The capital is of the ſame name.

YORK, NEW, a city of N. America, capital of the ſtate of the ſame name. It is ſituated at the SW. point of an iſland, at the confluence of Hudſon and Eaſt Rivers, and is about four miles in circumference. The ſituation is both healthy and pleaſant. Surrounded on all ſides by water, it is refreſhed by cool breezes in ſummer, and the air in winter is more temperate than in other places under the ſame parallel. York-Iſland is fifteen miles in length, and hardly one in breadth. It is joined to the main by a bridge, called King's-Bridge. The channels between Long and Staten Iſlands, and between Long and York Iſlands, are ſo narrow as to occaſion an unuſual rapidity of the tides, which is increaſed by the confluence of the waters of Hudſon and Eaſt Rivers. This rapidity, in general, prevents the obſtruction of the channel by ice. There is no baſin or bay for the reception of ſhips, but the road where they lie in Eaſt River is defended from the violence of the ſea by the iſlands which interlock with each other, ſo that, except that of Rhode-Iſland, the harbour of New York, which admits ſhips of any burden, is the beſt of the United States. A few houſes here are built after the old Dutch manner, but the Engliſh taſte has prevailed almoſt a century. In time of peace, more commercial buſineſs is done here than in any other port in the United States. The number of inhabitants, in 1786, was 23,614. Lat. 40. 43. N. lon. 74. 5. W.

YORK-TOWN, a ſmall town of Virginia, ſituated on the S. ſide of York River, 13 miles E. of Williamſburgh.

*YOUGHALL, a conſiderable town of Ireland, in the county of Cork. It has a very commodious harbour, and a fine, well-defended quay. It is ſeated at the mouth of the river Blackwater, 25 miles N. by E. of Cork.

Youle, a village in the E. Riding of Yorkſhire, 12 miles below York, at the conflux of the Don and Humber. Here is a remarkable dike, called Youle Dike, 10 miles long. Here are a ſort of perſons called Triers, becauſe, with a long piece of iron, they ſearch into the ſoft, boggy ground, for ſubterraneous trees, which they ſometimes meet with of the fir kind. They often meet with trees large enough to furniſh timber for building, and the ſmaller trees they ſplit into laths, or cut into chips or ſplinters.

Youlſton, Devonſ. in Sherwell pariſh.

Young's Manor, Kent, by Chilham.

YOURE, a river in Yorkſhire, which being joined by the Swale, below Boroughbridge, both theſe rivers conſtitute what is called the Ouſe. On this river is the magnificent cataract, called Ayſgard-Force, the water falling nearly half a mile upon a ſurface of ſtone, worn into infinite irregular cavities, and incloſed by bold and ſhrubby cliffs. According to Dr. Pococke, who viſited Egypt, it exceeds the Cataract of the Nile.

Yoxford, Suffolk, between Saxmundham and Hadeſworth.

Yoxhall, Staffordſh. 4 miles N. of Lichfield; had formerly a market.

YPRES, a town of Flanders, with a conſiderable manufactory in linen, of an excellent fabric, and every year, in Lent, there is a well-frequented fair. In 1242, the number of inhabitants, for the moſt part weavers, amounted to 200,000. By the ſeverity of the Duke of Alva, the principal manufacturers were driven to England, from which time, that branch of trade has declined. The chatelany of Ypres contained about 30 villages, and ſent deputies to the ſtates of Flanders. By the treaty of Utrecht, it became a Dutch barrier town, and though taken by the French in 1744, was reſtored at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. It is ſeated on the river Yprelee, 15 miles NNW. of Liſle, and 138 N. of Paris.

YUMETOS, a cluſter of ſmall iſlands among the Bahamas, about 20 miles W. or SW. of Yuma.

YUN NAN, a province of China, S. of Setchuen and Thibet. It contains 21 cities of the firſt rank, and 55 in the ſecond and third, and is well watered with rivers and lakes, which render it very fruitful. Gold is very often found in the ſands of the rivers, and probably there are mines of the ſame metal in the mountains of the eaſtern part. There are alſo copper-mines, ſeveral ſorts of precious ſtones, beſide muſk, benjamin, lapis lazuli, and very fine marble, ſome of which is painted of divers colours. They have alſo excellent horſes, which are ſtrong and vigorous, but low; as alſo very ſmall deer, which are kept for their amuſement.

ZAMOSKI, a town of Belez, Poland.

ZANFARA, a town of Negroland, capital of a country, 170 miles ENE. of Wangara.

ZANGUEBAR, a country of Africa, little known, ſituated on the eaſtern coaſt, between lat. 2. 0. N. and 18. 0. S. in which the Portugueſe have various ſettlements. The inhabitants are partly of the Romiſh faith, and Mahometans, but moſtly Pagans. The Bedouin Arabs breed cattle, and live on the fleſh and milk, while the Zanges, or negroes, feed on wild beaſts and fowl, which ſwarm all over theſe parts. Throughout the whole country, are mines of gold, eaſily got, by the help of which the indolent natives purchaſe neceſſaries from other parts; but, on this very account, they are extremely jealous of letting ſtrangers penetrate into the inland country. The principal territories are Melinda, Mongala, Moſambique, Jubo, and ſome others. The Portugueſe trade with the natives for ſlaves, ivory, gold, oſtrich-feathers, furs, wax, and drugs.

ZANHAGA, a diſtrict of Zahara, in Africa, bordering on the Atlantic.

ZANTE, an iſland of the Mediterranean, near the coaſt of the Morea, 17 miles SE. of the Iſland of Cephalonia. It is about 12 miles in length, and 6 in breadth; it's principal riches conſiſt in currants, with which it abounds. Here are alſo fine peaches, weighing eight or ten ounces, cucumbers, figs, and oil. The houſes are low, on account of the frequent earthquakes, for ſcarce a year paſſes without one; but they do no great damage. The grapes are called currants, becauſe they were chiefly cultivated about Corinth. This iſland lately belonged to the Venetians, and in it there are about 50 villages, but no other large towns than Zante, which is ſeated on the eaſtern ſide of the iſland, and has a good harbour. The Engliſh and Dutch have each a factory and conſul here. Lat. 37. 53. N. lon. 21. 3. E.

ZANZIBAR, an iſland of the eaſtern coaſt of Africa, near the coaſt of Zanguebar. Lat. 6. 0. S.

ZARA, a city of the late Venetian Dalmatia, capital of a county of the ſame name, with a ſafe, capacious harbour. It is ſeated on a ſmall peninſula, joined to the continent by an iſthmus only 25 paces in breadth. On the ſide of the citadel the fortifications are conſidered as almoſt impregnable, being defended by very deep ditches hewn out of the rock. Near the church, which the Greeks call St. Helia, are two handſome fluted columns, of the Corinthian order, ſuppoſed to have been part of an ancient temple of Juno. The circumference of the walls extends two miles, and the number of the inhabitants is about 6000. In the caſtle the proveditor, or governor of Dalmatia, reſided. Lat. 44. 22. N.

ZARNATA, a town in the Morea, 10 miles SW. of Miſitra.

ZARNAW, a town of Sandomirz, Poland.

ZASLAW, a town of Volhinia.

ZATMAR,

ZATMAR, a town of Hungary, 56 miles NNW. of Colofvar.

ZATOR, a town of Cracovia.

ZBOROW, a town of Poland, in Galicia, 63 miles E. of Lemburg.

ZEALAND, an iſland of Denmark, in the Baltic, almoſt of a round form, and about 700 miles in circumference. It is bounded on the N. by the Schaggerack; on the E. principally by the Sound; on the S. by the Baltic; and on the W. by the Great Belt. The coaſt is much interſected by large bays; and within the country are ſeveral lakes, which, together with the rivers, abound in fiſh. In moſt parts is plenty of wood, except towards the centre of the iſland, where turf is generally uſed for fuel. It is the largeſt of the iſles of Denmark, and exceedingly fertile; producing grain of all ſorts, and in great plenty; and abounding with excellent paſture. It is particularly famous for it's breed of horſes. Copenhagen is the capital.

ZEALAND, one of the Seven United Provinces of the Netherlands, ſeparated by the ſea on the N. from the iſles of S. Holland; by the Scheldt on the E. from Brabant; by the Hont from Flanders; and on the W. it is bounded by the German Ocean. It comprehends 8 iſlands, 3 of which are pretty large. Their names are Walcheren, Schowen, S. Beveland, N. Beveland, Tolen, Doveland, Wolferdike, and St. Philip. There are likewiſe 6 or 7 others, of little importance. The inhabitants defend themſelves from the encroachments of the ſea by their dikes, which, at the bottom, are generally 25 German ells in breadth, and are ſo wide at top, that two carriages may paſs abreaſt. In high tides and ſtormy weather, the waves, however, often force a paſſage, and even flow over them. The inhabitants, in general, are extremely wealthy, being maintained by their plentiful fiſheries, and trade with foreign nations. The ſoil is fruitful in theſe iſlands, but the air unhealthy for ſtrangers, though not for the natives. The river Scheldt, having paſſed by Antwerp, divides it into two, and holds, as it were, the iſles of Zealand between it's arms. One of theſe runs eaſtward, and the other weſtward, which laſt the fiſhermen call Stont, or Hont.

ZEALAND, NEW, in the South Pacific Ocean, was firſt diſcovered by Taſman, in 1642. He traverſed the eaſtern coaſt from lat. 34. 0. to 43. 0. S. and entered a ſtrait; but being attacked by the natives, ſoon after he came to an anchor, in the place to which he gave the name of Murderer's-Bay, he did not go on ſhore. He called the country Staten Land, in honour of the States General, though it has been generally diſtinguiſhed in our maps and charts by the name of New Zealand. From the time of Taſman, the whole country, except that part of the coaſt which was ſeen by him, remained altogether unknown, till the year 1770, when it was circumnavigated by Captain Cook, who found it to conſiſt of two large iſlands, ſeparated by the ſtrait above-mentioned, which is 4 or 5 leagues broad, and to which he gave his own name. Theſe iſlands lie between lat. 34. 0. and 48. 0. S. and lon. 166. 0. and 180. 0. E. Along the coaſt many ſmall iſlands are formed, and it is indented by deep bays, affording excellent ſhelter for ſhipping, and abundant ſupplies of wood and water. There are alſo ſeveral rivers capable of receiving large veſſels, in which the ſpring-tide riſes near ten feet perpendicularly. Of the two iſland, the ſouthernmoſt is for the moſt part mountainous and barren. As far inland as the eye can reach, nothing appears but mountains of ſtupendous height, conſiſting of rocks that are totally naked, except where they are covered with ſnow; but the land bordering on the ſea-coaſt is clothed thick with wood, almoſt down to the water's edge. The northernmoſt iſland has a much better appearance: it is, indeed, not only hilly, but mountainous: yet even the hills and mountains are covered with wood, and every valley has a rivulet of excellent water. The ſoil of theſe valleys, and the plains, of which there are many overgrown with wood, is, in general, light, but fertile; and it is ſuppoſed, that every kind of European grain, plants, and fruits, would flouriſh here with the utmoſt luxuriance. The winters are milder than in England, and the ſummers not hotter, though more equally warm. There are foreſts of vaſt extent, full of the ſtraighteſt and largeſt timber, fit for buildings of any kind. The trees are chiefly of two ſorts; one as large as an oak, diſtinguiſhed by a ſcarlet flower, the wood of which is hard and heavy; another remarkably tall and ſtraight, of which, probably, very fine maſts might be made. Among other trees, is a ſpecies of philadelphus, which grows on the eminences that jut out into the ſea, the leaves of which may be uſed as tea, and might be an excellent ſubſtitute for that oriental plant. Wild celery, and a kind of creſſes, grow plentifully in almoſt every cove. Yams, ſweet potatoes, and cocoas, are alſo raiſed by cultivation.

Captain Cook, in 1773, planted ſeveral ſpots of ground with European garden-ſeeds; and, in 1777, in ſeveral of theſe ſpots, although totally neglected, and overrun by weeds, were found cabbages, onions, leeks, purſlain, radiſhes, muſtard, &c. and a few fine potatoes, greatly improved by change of ſoil. The only quadrupeds are dogs and rats: the former are domeſtic, and for food; and the latter, though not numerous, ſeem alſo to be eaten. The birds, like the vegetable productions, are almoſt entirely peculiar to the country; and though it is difficult to follow them in the woods, on account of the underwood and climbing plants, yet a perſon, by remaining in one place, may ſhoot as many in a day as will ſerve for ſix or eight others. Captain Cook introduced European poultry, and, on his laſt viſit, had the ſatisfaction to find them increaſed, both in a wild and domeſtic ſtate, beyond all danger of being exterminated. Their creeks ſwarm with fiſh, which are not only wholeſome, but equally delicious with thoſe of Europe. Captain Cook ſeldom came to an anchor, but his men caught enough, with hook and line only, to ſupply the whole ſhip's crew, and when they fiſhed with nets, every meſs in the ſhip ſalted as much as ſupplied them when at ſea ſome time after. The rocks are furniſhed with great quantities of excellent muſcles, one ſort of which meaſures above a foot in length, and with great variety of other ſhelfiſh. The men are ſtout and fleſhy: but none of them corpulent, like the indolent and luxurious inhabitants of Otaheite and the Society Iſles; and they are alſo exceedingly vigorous and active. The women, in general, are ſmaller than the men, poſſeſſing few peculiar graces of form or perſon; and chiefly diſtinguiſhed by the ſoftneſs of their voices. The bodies of both ſexes are marked with black ſtains, called amoco, which is the ſame as tattowing at Otaheite. Their dreſs is alſo the ſame; it conſiſts of an oblong garment, about five feet long and four broad. They bring two corners of this garment over their ſhoulders, and faſten it on the breaſt with the other parts, which covers the body; and about the belly it is again tied with a girdle of mat. They ornament their heads with feathers, pearl ſhells, bones, &c. The women, ſometimes, wear necklaces of ſharks teeth, or bunches of long beads made of bones or ſhells. Their houſes are miſerable lodging places, and their only furniture is a few ſmall baſkets, in which they put their fiſhing-hooks and other trifles. Their food conſiſts chiefly of fiſh, with which, inſtead of bread, they eat the root of a kind of fern, which they ſcorch over the fire, and then beat with a ſtick till the bark, or dry outſide, falls off. Beſide their dogs, they alſo contrive to kill birds; and in moſt parts of the northern iſlands, they have ſweet potatoes, cocoas, and yams; but, in the ſouthern, nothing is raiſed by cultivation. Their cookery conſiſts wholly in roaſting and baking, which latter is performed in the ſame manner as at Otaheite. The women eat in common with the men, and but little ſubordination, or diſtinction of rank, is obſerved among them. From Cape Kidnappers, in lat. 39. 43. S. for upwards of 80 leagues to the northward, the people acknowledge one ſovereign, called Teratu, and under him ſeveral ſubordinate chiefs, who probably adminiſter juſtice, and to whom great reſpect is paid; but whether his authority be hereditary or delegated, is uncertain. This part of the coaſt is much the moſt populous; tillage, weaving, and the other arts of peace, being here beſt known, and moſt practiſed. The canoes are more decorated, the plantations more numerous, and the clothes and carving finer, than any where elſe. In other parts, they are ſcattered along the coaſt, in ſingle families, or in larger tribes, and each in a ſtate of perpetual hoſtility with all the reſt. From their ſcanty ſtock of vegetables, if their fiſhing ſhould fail, they have no reſource againſt abſolute famine. Upon the whole, there is little room to doubt that theſe people are cannibals.

ZEBID, a city of Yemen, Arabia.

ZEGZEG, a kingdom of Africa, ſituated to the W. of Zanfara.

ZEITON, a town of Theſſaly, 50 miles SSE. of Lariſſa.

ZEITZ, a town of Naumburg, Upper Saxony, with a college.

ZELL, a town of Lower Saxony, and capital of a duchy of the ſame name, which devolved to the houſe of Hanover, by marriage with the heireſs, the male line failing, in 1705. It is ſurrounded by ditches and ramparts, on which are planted cheſnut and lime-trees, and is a ſmall town, with a few artificers and manufacturers, particularly in gold and ſilver. The houſes are old, and of a mean appearance; but the high courts of appeal for all the territories of the electoral houſe of Brunſwick Lunenburg are held here. Here alſo is the provincial houſe for the diets of the principality. The other public edifices are the Guildhall, the Riding-Houſe, the Mews, and the Armory.

The

The caſtle, which is ſituated near the town, and is walled and moated in, was formerly the reſidence of the dukes, and was repaired by order of the king of Great Britain, for the reſidence of his unfortunate ſiſter, the queen of Denmark, who died here. It is ſeated on the river Aller, 40 miles S. of Lunenburg.

ZELL, a town of Salzburg, Bavaria, ſeated on the Zeller See; and a town of Hammerſbach, Suabia.

ZEMBLA, NOVA, a large iſland, lying in the Northern Ocean, to the N. of Ruſſia, from which it is ſeparated by the Strait of Waigate, about 500 miles in length, and from 100 to 200 in breadth. It was firſt diſcovered by the Engliſh in 1553. It's inhabitants, are chiefly wild beaſts, particularly white foxes, bears, elks, reindeer, and rabbits; yet a few human beings have been ſeen here at times. The country produces nothing but moſs, and a few arctic plants. Sea-cows abound on the coaſt, and ſea-fowl flock there to lay their eggs. In 1596, a Dutch veſſel was caſt away on the coaſt, and the ſhip's company were obliged to winter here; they did not ſee the ſun from the 4th of November, to the beginning of February, and had great difficulty to keep themſelves from being frozen to death. Lat. 71. to 78. deg. N. lon. 53. 45. W. to 72. 49. E.

Zennen, Cornwall, near St. Burien's.

ZENTA, a town of Hungary, on the river Theiſſe, where Prince Eugene, in 1697, obtained a ſignal victory over the Turks, commanded by the emperor, Muſtapha II. in perſon. Twenty thouſand Turks were killed, 10,000 wounded, and 3000 taken priſoners. It is 52 miles N. of Belgrade.

ZERBST, a town of Anhalt Zerbſt, Upper Saxony, with a caſtle, where the princes commonly reſide, and a college. It is famous for brewing good beer; and here are manufactures of gold and ſilver. It is 44 miles SSW. of Potſdam.

ZEREA, a town of Farſiſtan, Perſia, 18 miles NNE. of Schiras.

ZIA, an iſland of the Archipelago, anciently called Ceos and Hydraſſa, SW. of Andros, and 12 miles E. of Cape Colonni. It is 15 miles in length, and 8 in breadth; is well cultivated, and abounds in moſt of the neceſſaries of life. They have here a ſort of oak, whoſe fruit, called velani, is the beſt trading commodity of the iſland, being exported for the uſe of dyers and tanners. The principal town, of the ſame name, reſembles an amphitheatre, and contains about 2500 houſes, all flat at the top. Moſt of the inhabitants are Greeks, and have a biſhop.

ZIRIC-ZEE, a town of the United Provinces, in Zealand, and capital of the Iſle of Schowen. It was the ancient reſidence of the counts of Zealand, and formerly a place of conſiderable conſequence. The harbour is now filled up with ſand; it is, however, large and populous, and is 18 miles SSW. of Briel.

ZITTAU, a town of Luſatia, ſubject to the elector of Saxony. The principal buſineſs of the inhabitants is brewing beer; but there are above 100 clothiers, and in the neighbouring villages above 1000 weavers. The merchants of Zittau trade with thoſe of Prague and Leipſick, and extend their commerce as far as Holland. Here is a library, the fineſt in all Luſatia, which is open twice a week; and at a ſmall diſtance from it, is the orphan-houſe. It is ſeated on the river Neiſs, 17 miles S. of Gorlitz.

ZNAIM, a town of Moravia, 58 miles SW. of Olmutz.

ZOARA, an iſland of Barbary, with a good harbour, 60 miles NNW. of Tripoli.

ZOBLITZ, a town of Erzgeburg, Upper Saxony.

ZOFFINGEN, a town of Berne, Swiſſerland, the principal place of a bailiwick, 24 miles NNW. of Lucerne.

ZOLLERN, a caſtle of Suabia, which gives name to the principality of Hohen-Zollern, which is 37 miles in length, and 17 in breadth, and is a very fertile country. The prince is hereditary chamberlain of the empire. It is 10 miles S. of Tubingen.

ZOLNOK, a town of Hungary, on the Theiſſe, 48 miles SW. of Debreczin.

ZONS, a town of Cologne.

ZOQUES, a diſtrict of Mexico, in Chiapa, bordering on Tabaſco. It produces plenty of ſilk and cochineal.

ZORNDORFF, a village in the New Marche, Brandenburg, near Coſtrin.

ZOUT PAN, a curious ſalt lake in the country of the Hottentots, ſituated a few miles N. of Point Padron. It is a plain, much above the level of the ſea, and between three and four miles in circumference. At ſome ſeaſons of the year, it is formed into an entire maſs of fine white ſalt, with a hard cruſt, exactly reſembling ice, which, at a diſtance, has a very ſtriking appearance.

ZUEELA, a town of Africa, in Fezzan, ſituated in a fertile diſtrict, in which the remnants of ancient buildings, fountains, ciſterns, ciſterns, and vaulted caves, exhibit ſuch veſtiges of ancient ſplendour, as will probably attract, and highly reward, the attention of future travellers. It is 60 miles E. of Mourzouk.

ZUG, a town of Swiſſerland, capital of a canton of the ſame name; ſeated on a beautiful lake, in a fertile valley. It contains two churches, a convent, a townhouſe, arſenal, corn magazine, college, hoſpital, &c. Oſwald, a Saxon king of Northumberland, in the 7th century, is the tutelar ſaint of this place. Zug is 12 miles NNE. of Lucern.

ZUG, one of the cantons of Swiſſerland, bounded on the E. and N. by Zurich; on the W. by Lucern; and on the S. by Schweitz; about 10 miles long, and nearly as much in breadth. The government reſides in a council, which meets annually in the town of Zug, where every male of 16 years of age is poſſeſſed of a vote, and where all public poſts are conferred. The inhabitants are Romaniſts.

ZUG, a lake of Swiſſerland, 8 miles long and 2 wide, named from the town on it's coaſt.

ZULLICHAW, a town in the New Marche, Brandenburg, with a woollen manufacture. It is 37 miles SE. of Frankfort on the Oder.

ZULPHA, a town of Perſia, a ſort of ſuburb to Iſpahan. It contains about 4000 houſes, and is peopled with a colony of Armenians, who were brought into Perſia by Shah Abbas, from an ancient town on the Aras. It is an archbiſhop's ſee, and contains ſeveral churches and monaſteries.

ZULPICH, a town of Cologne.

ZURICH, a city of Swiſſerland, capital of a canton of the ſame name, ſituated at the northern extremity of the lake of Zurich. It is one of the beſt-built cities in this country, but the ſtreets are narrow, and the houſes high. Zurich was the firſt town in Swiſſerland, that ſeparated from the church of Rome, being induced thereto by the arguments of Zuinglius. Among the charitable foundations in this town are an orphan-houſe; an hoſpital for incurables; that for the ſick of all nations, which uſually contains between 6 and 700 patients; and the Allmoſen-Amt, or foundation for the poor, which puts out children as apprentices, and diſtributes money, clothes, and books to poor perſons, not of the town only, but of the canton, to the amount of upward of 5000l. a year. The arſenal is well ſupplied with cannon, arms, and ammunition, and contains a reſerve of muſkets for 30,000 men. They have manufactures of muſlins, cottons, linens, ſilk handkerchiefs, &c. The inhabitants, in 1780, amounted to 10,559. It is 40 miles SE. of Baſle. Lat. 47. 20. N. lon. 8. 30. E.

ZURICH, one of the 13 cantons of Swiſſerland, about 50 miles in length and 30 in breadth. It is bounded on the N. by Schaffhauſen and a part of Suabia; on the S. by Schweitz and Zug; on the E. by Thurgaw and the county of Tockenburg; and on the W. by the county of Baden. The civil war between the magiſtrates and people of Zurich, in 1335, nearly reduced that city to ruins; but the former being baniſhed, the citizens, in 1337, eſtabliſhed a new form of government. The exiles, after ſeveral fruitleſs attempts, were readmitted: but, engaging in a conſpiracy againſt the citizens, were diſcovered and put to death. In conſequence of this, the nobles in the neighbourhood took up arms, and Zurich, for protection, formed an alliance with Lucern, Uri, Schweitz, and Underwalden, and was admitted a member of their confederacy in 1351. The four cantons yielded the pre-eminence to Zurich, a privilege it ſtill enjoys, being the firſt canton in rank, and the moſt conſiderable in extent, both of territory and power, next to that of Bern. This canton abounds in corn, wine, and excellent paſture; but as there is not a ſufficient ſupply of corn for interior conſumption, the deficiency is chiefly ſupplied from Suabia. There is alſo a granary maintained at the public expence, where, in ſeaſons of ſcarcity, corn is ſold conſiderably cheaper than the market-price. In 1784, it contained 174,572 inhabitants, including thoſe in the capital. The people are divided into thirteen tribes; and the legiſlative authority is veſted in a council of 200, or rather of 212 members drawn from theſe tribes. This council compriſes the ſenate, or little council (compoſed of 50 members) which has a juriſdiction in all civil and criminal cauſes.

ZURICH, a lake of Swiſſerland, in the canton of the ſame name, near 10 leagues in length and one in breadth. It is of an oblong form, and the borders are ſtudded thickly with villages and towns. The adjacent country is finely cultivated and well peopled; and the S. part of the lake appears bounded by the ſtupendous high mountains of Schweitz and Glarus; the ſcenery is picturesque, lively, and diverſified.

ZURITA, a town of New Caſtile.

ZUTPHEN, a conſiderable town of the United Provinces, capital of a county of the ſame name. It was taken by the French French in 1672, under Philip, Duke of Orleans, only brother of Louis XIV. and abandoned by them in 1674, after having previouſly deſtroyed the fortifications. It is ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Berkel and Yſſel, 9 miles S. by E. of Deventer, and 55 E. by S. of Amſterdam. Lat. 52. 10. N. lon. 6. 22. E.

ZUTPHEN, a county of the United Provinces, ſeparated by the Yſſel from Guelderland. Otho I. of Naſſau, acquired this county in the 11th century, by marrying the heireſs of Gerlach, Count of Zutphen; ſince which time it has ever been annexed to Guelderland.

ZUYDER-ZEE, a great bay of the German Ocean, which extends from S. to N. in the United Provinces, between Frieſland, Overyſſel, Guelderland, and North Holland. It is ſo called from it's ſituation toward the S.

Zwallock, or Swallock, Cornwall, SW. of Camelford.

ZWAMMERDAM, a town of Holland, on the Rhine, 10 miles ESE. of Leyden.

ZWICKAU, a town of Erzgeburg, Upper Saxony, ſeated on the river Muldaw.

ZWINGENBURG, a town of Heſſe-Darmſtadt, circle of Upper Rhine, 20 miles N. of Manheim.

ZWOLL, a town of the United Provinces, in Overyſſel, and in the diſtrict of Zallant. It is large and rich, and a canal begins near this place, which extends to the river Yſſel. Here was formerly an Auguſtine convent, in which Thomas à Kempis, otherwiſe called Hamerken, lived 71 years, and died in 1471, at the age of 91. It was formerly an imperial and hanſeatic town, and is ſeated on the river Aa, between the Yſſel and the Vecht, 15 miles N. of Deventer.

ZWORNICK, a town of Boſnia.

ZYTOMIERZ, a town of Volhinia, 70 miles NNW. of Kiof.
